Although this city may be justly called one of Satan's chief seats, where sin and crime of every shape and shade exist, yet here, as in Sodom, God has a people, made so by his choice and the power of his gospel. They are being preserved by him in the midst of the deepest corruption and the wiles of the devil. They will be taken out before the destruction, as was Lot, and not one of them will perish in the great conflagration to which this place, with others, is doomed.

There has been a great change here since I left nearly three years ago; but it has not been for the better, but much for the worse—politically, morally, and religiously. The restraining power of the Holy Spirit, the fear of God, the love of truth and righteousness, is far less felt and seen than when I left here. Sin of every kind has more abounded, and an unbridled license to do evil is seen everywhere and among all classes. Among the poorer class it is more apparent, but there is a corresponding increase of corruption and wickedness among the richer and higher class also. The word of God is certainly fulfilling here in this respect—"Wicked men and seducers shall wax worse and worse." Seduction of every kind is practised here. Theft, robbery and murder are the common things of the day and night. But much of this is covered up and does not come to the light, or does not go beyond the city limits. No christian can live here and not pray, "Thy kingdom come," provided he knows the meaning of those words. But there are many here who know not the import of that language, and never will. There is great ignorance here of all kinds, but I am satisfied that there is more in regard to what true religion is, and concerning the doctrine of Christ, than in respect to every other kind of knowledge. So little is known of the Bible and its teachings, that it is painful for one who has learned it and is acquainted with its teachings, to listen to the so called preaching from any desk or pulpit found here. The prophet has truly pictured the state of things here: "Darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people."

But the shining day is near. Zion's Light will soon come. He will scatter the darkness, and the scales will drop from every eye. The world will see how it has been deceived. The truth, as revealed in the God-given Book to man, will appear, and confusion will cover all faces, except those that are radiant with the light of heaven. The eyes that have peered into that book to find the promises of God, will beam with delight in that day; and the hearts that have prayed to understand and obey it, will then bound with joy, and cry—"This is our own God, WE HAVE WAITED FOR HIM" according to his word. May we all be able to say this.

Memphis, Tenn., May 7th, 1872.

From Bro. P. S. Converse.

BRO. GRANT:—Three or four of us had for some time been trying to hold up before the people of this prairie the gospel hope—eternal life through Christ, the coming of the Lord to raise the dead, judge the world, and restore the kingdom. We had met with opposition, even by those who profess to love the Lord. The good Lord opened the way, and Bro. P. S. W. Deyo came to proclaim the word of the Lord. A cry was raised against it, yet the meeting increased in numbers and interest. Our able brother held forth the doctrine of sound words, and testified the truth. Men and women were pricked to the heart; backsliders were reclaimed, and one after another of the candid, thoughtful men and women moved forward into the service of the Lord. Old difficulties were settled; men came face to face, hand to hand, loving God with all their hearts. Six obeyed the Lord in baptism. Thus the work went on, till it reached the number of thirty-five.

The last evening, while we partook of the bread and wine, in remembrance of the Lord, we felt that the Bride was making herself ready for the wedding.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. ENOCH MORRILL, So. Deerfield, N. H., writes, May 13th:—"The Lord has blessed me abundantly within a few months. Praise to his name. The past winter has been the richest and best that I ever experienced. The Lord has been with me in all of my labors. At Hampton, N. H., April 28th, we had a blessed, refreshing, and heavenly season. Nine were buried with Christ in baptism, varying in age from fourteen to sixty-five years. The Lord is blessing at Hampton. The new chapel which they built and dedicated to the Lord last fall, has been the spot where many have found Jesus to be precious, and received that communion with God the Father that the world knows not of. Sunday, May 5th, we met with the friends of Jesus at the new hall over the post-office, in Haverhill, Mass. The Lord has some live working servants there, who have given all for Jesus. In the evening two men, strangers to Christ, manifested a desire to seek and serve the Lord. Yesterday (May 12th) at Suncook, N. H., we had a good season. Two were buried with Christ in baptism, making seventeen that have been baptized in Suncook within a few months, and all of them are holding on, with one or two exceptions, and rejoicing in salvation. Praise the Lord. I love the way better and better, and my determination is stronger than ever, to dwell with Jesus and all his saints on the new earth."

Sister A. M. Corbit, Bethlehem, Iowa, writes:—"Having never seen anything in your paper from this part of the country, and thinking that some of your readers might be glad to hear from this (southern) part of Iowa, I concluded to write. We in this vicinity had never seen one of your faith (or 'soul-sleepers,' as they are generally called here), until about a year ago, when Bro. Samuel Baldwin came into our neighborhood, and began to preach. My husband, who was then a wicked and profane man, and almost an infidel, seldom went to religious meetings, but thought he would go and hear the new and strange doctrine preached. He attended several meetings, and became considerably interested. I was then a member of a church, to which I had belonged twelve years. I was then, as a great many others are, unwilling to go to the meetings. I was much prejudiced against their soul-destroying doctrine, as I then thought it was; though I did not oppose my husband in going, for I thought it would be a glorious thing if he should become a christian. Thanks be to God, my heart's greatest desire has been gratified. We now both belong to a little church, which was organized here about a year since. We are few in number, there being but ten of us; but we hope, if we live faithful, to grow in grace and in numbers. There are two other churches in our little village, a Methodist and a Baptist; both have houses of worship. We hold our meetings in the M. E. house. Bro. Baldwin preaches to us once in three weeks. There is but one ordained Advent minister (Bro. S. K. Gibson) within fifty miles or more. If any of our eastern preachers should be coming this way, we would be glad to have them tarry awhile and preach for us; as we believe if good seed could be sown plentifully over this western field, a great harvest of souls could be gathered ready for the coming King. We become more attached to the Crisis every week. We feel as though we cannot do without it."

A Baptist Minister writes:—"I am pastor of the Baptist church. Four years ago, I read a book written by Bro. Grant that caused me to awake as from a deep sleep. Since that time, I have been smothering and fighting against convictions, but am now compelled to yield to the study of man's immortality, for God's wo is upon me, if I preach not the gospel in its true character. God helping me, and giving me more light, I will take up my cross and follow him. I feel at times that it will be very hard for me to sacrifice the communion of my church, and the loved friends, with whom I have so long associated; but my better feelings cry, Do it for Jesus' sake. Again, I sometimes feel that I am drifting into an unknown sea. Pray for me, that the Master may be my pilot, and own me at his coming; or, if it should be his will, in the morning of the resurrection, and that the converts that he has given me may be my crowns of rejoicing at his appearing."

[Take a bold stand, Bro., for Jesus and his word, and the arm of the Almighty will be your shield. The full friendship of the Savior is of more value than that of all earthly friends.—Ed.

Bro. H. Beach, Pleasant Valley, Conn., writes:—"Dear Brn. and sisters in the Lord, I am able to walk, but not able to labor. I have the asthma and catarrh. I am sick, feel gloomy, low spirited, and almost discouraged at times. I ask the prayers of the church, that God would give me his Holy Spirit, and that he would supply my wants. My sufferings are so great at times, it seems as if I could not live hardly a moment. There is power in prayer."

Obituaries.

Patterson. Fell asleep in Jesus, on the morning of the 18th of April, 1872, John Richard Patterson, son of Richard and Mary Patterson, of Utica, Minn., aged nineteen years, nine months, and three days.

His last sickness was very trying, being attended with severe pain, which he bore with christian patience and fortitude. He spoke calmly of his death, and divided his little property among his friends for mementoes of him when his voice should be hushed in silence. Within a few days of his death, after suffering excruciating pain, as soon as a little easy, he commenced singing "Rock of ages." After mortification set in, he told them Jesus was his friend, and he should come forth in the morning of the resurrection. When thus struck with death, he sang the beautiful and appropriate hymn—

"Shall we meet beyond the river,
Where the surges cease to roll?
Where in all that glad forever,
Sorrow ne'er shall pierce the soul?"

A large number of neighbors and friends assembled at his parents' home, where we offered a short prayer, and then went to the place of worship, in Utica village, where a discourse was delivered by the writer to a large congregation, from Job 19: 26; after which we followed to the grave the precious dust, there to await the glorious time when the Redeemer shall again stand upon the earth, and speak the life-giving word to the buried dead, when this lamb of the flock shall be gathered into the fold of the great Shepherd, and be led by him to living fountains of water that will never run dry, where we shall meet our loved and buried dead in Christ beyond the river, where the surges cease to roll.

Ruth M. Rowell.

Cowles. Died suddenly, of scarlet fever, in Springfield, Mass., April 3d, 1872, Jennie Cowles, aged twenty-one years.

That death loves a shining mark, has been so often observed as to become a proverb; but perhaps its truthfulness was seldom more apparent than in the subject of this notice. She was known but to be beloved. Said her room-mate—"Hers was a perfect christian character." Her employer remarked—"She was always a peacemaker, a go-between among the girls in the shop; and I never saw her the least ruffled." She had for some time professed faith in Christ, and was baptized last August at Springfield campmeeting. Though death came suddenly, she was prepared.

"Oh for the death of those who Slumber in the Lord!
Oh! be like theirs my last repose,
Like theirs my last reward."

Her funeral was attended at the Methodist church in Belchertown, where her grandparents reside. May God bless and sustain them.

E. Owen.

Priest. Died of consumption, at Lisbon, N. H., March 10th, Bro. Jonathan K. Priest, aged forty-nine years.

His faith in God and his word was such, that he had the most perfect victory and peace in his mind. He said—"I shall sleep but a little while." The text he selected was from Rev. 21: 4.

N. W.

Cutts. Died in Kennebunk, Me., May 4th, 1872, Mary E. Cutts, wife of Augustus Cutts, of Saco, Me., and daughter of Theodore Gooch, Jr., of Kennebunk, aged twenty-four years, four months, and four days.

In this instance death has entered a happy home circle, and removed a loving and faithful wife and an affectionate daughter, sister, and friend. The deceased professed faith in Christ and his speedy coming at an early age, and the hope of the gospel sustained her in her sufferings, and made her death triumphant. Sleep on, loved one, "until the day break, and the shadows flee away," when, through grace, we will meet thee in the deathless land. The funeral services were held in the Advent chapel, in Kennebunk, and words of comfort were spoken by Eld. W. H. Mitchell, to a large company of relatives and friends. A. W. C.

Berry. Died in Portsmouth, May 6th, of consumption, Annie G., only daughter of our late Bro. Robinson F. and Sr. M. A. Berry, aged nineteen years and eleven months.

Sr. Annie professed faith in Christ and was baptized about six years ago, and has lived a consistent christian. She met her early death with calmness and christian resignation; and her only regret seemed that of leaving her widowed mother alone. But she rests in hope, and our afflicted sister is comforted with the sweet assurance of soon meeting her with the rest of her sleeping loved ones on the immortal shore. At the funeral words of consolation were spoken from Ps. 16: 9.

Joseph W. White.

Andrews. Died in Wallingford, Ct., April 16th, Mrs. Julia Andrews (mother of Bro. Ali Andrews, of Bridgeport, Conn.), aged eighty-four years, one month, and eleven days.

She united with the Baptist church over sixty-two years ago, and has always made a good profession, and been a good mother in Israel. For several years she has been a subscriber to the Crisis, in which she took so great an interest that she would frequently read every word in the paper. She rejoiced in the coming of the Lord to give eternal life, yet she was willing to sleep, her last words being that she would walk through the dark valley and fear no evil, for Jesus would support her. She died in peace, as the christian dieth, in the full hope of the gospel of the resurrection of the dead.

Spear. Died in Greenfield, Mass., April 24th, 1872, Daniel W. Spear, Jr., aged thirty-four years and six months.

Rest on, thy labor is done,
Thy frail form is wearied no more;
Soon, bright angels will say come,
Come, come to the evergreen shore.
Kind hands have laid thee to rest,
Kind hands have wreathed thee sweet flowers;
Kind hearts have breathed the "God bless,"
Sad hearts have returned to their bowers.
Daniel, thy prayer has been heard,
The truth at thy funeral proclaimed;
Thy sleep will be undisturbed,
Till the "trumpet" bring thee again.

H. Pratt.

Bolles. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Ashford, Ct., March 29th, 1872, Addie M. Bolles, daughter of John and Harriet N. Bolles, aged fourteen years.

During her distressing sickness (cancer), she was very cheerful and patient. In her death she was triumphant. So bright and happy was her face, that it seemed as though she was in the presence of her Savior. She was an example of christian patience and resignation.

The sermon at her funeral was from the following text, selected by herself—"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

M. W. Arnold.

Houlette. Fell asleep in Jesus, on the evening of the 28th of April, 1872, in the city of Buffalo, N. Y., Sister Teresa, wife of Bro. Sylvester Houlette, aged fifty-eight years, eight months.

Sr. H. professed faith in Christ when young. In 1844, in Auburn, N. Y., she became interested in the coming of Christ. Her hope was strong in the Lord, and the resurrection of the dead. We were privileged with giving words of comfort to the remaining portion of the family, and the friends of the deceased, from the words of Job 14: 15—"Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee."

John T. Ongley.

Thomson. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Arena, Wis., May 13th, 1872, after a short illness, Mary Ann, wife of Eld. Geo. Thomson, aged forty years, one month, and six days.

She embraced the "blessed hope" of immortality only through Christ under the labors of Bro. Grant, at Montreal, amid those trying times when it cost much to espouse the despised doctrine. She was a staunch advocate for the truth, and loved the appearing of Jesus. Cheering words of comfort were spoken by Eld. Wm. Sheldon, from 2 Cor. 5: 4. 5. T.

Alta. Fell on sleep, in Fall River, Mass., Jan. 21st, 1872, Sr. Hannah M. Alta, wife of Wm. Alta, and daughter of Kempton and Rosina Sherman, of North Westport, Mass.

The beloved wife and mother is laid down to rest until the morning of joy shall come, when sleeping ones shall rise to reign with Christ forevermore. Bro. J. W. Thomas preached a discourse well adapted to the occasion, from 1 Cor. 15, showing the necessity of a resurrection in order to have eternal life, according to the divine plan.

DOMESTIC.

San Francisco, May 15. A fire in Yeddo during a severe gale destroyed habitations covering a space of two or three miles. The fire originated in one of the Prince's late palaces, occupied by troops. The flames leaped over whole blocks of buildings, and set fire to places a mile distant. An immense amount of property was destroyed. Where the wounded and lame were unable to escape, the officials slashed right and left with swords, thus saving many persons from the more awful fate of burning. Thirty thousand persons are houseless. The Government opened their rice store-houses and fed all who applied.

The occurrence of this fire has led the Government to permit foreigners to lease land in Yeddo, the owners being compelled to make monthly reports. This act will cause foreign money to be invested there to improve the city. A new plan of the burnt district is to be made, and wide streets and substantial buildings only will be allowed.

The Internationals in Denmark.—The trial of the President and Treasurer of the Society of the Internationalists in Denmark, who were recently arrested, is about to take place in Copenhagen, and the people of that good city are greatly exercised on the subject. So strong is the feeling against the government because of the arrest, that the military powers in and around the city have been largely added to and all the public buildings strongly guarded. The crime with which the prisoners are charged is high treason, the next highest offence to murder in Danish law. Should they be convicted their lives would be forfeited to the State. King Christian, though a humane and just ruler, is yet a believer in the divine right of kings, and regards the offence of which these men have been guilty as one of the most heinous of all sins. There would be little hope of kingly clemency should the court bring in a verdict of guilty. As a matter of course the Internationalists not only of Denmark, but of other European countries, are waiting the result with interest.

In Brief.

—— Some idea of the vastness of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, is had in the fact that no fewer than fourteen thousand persons were under its roof on the occasion of the royal thanksgiving. ——Asiatic cholera is said to have broken out in Kamioneck, in Poland, and twenty-one deaths from the epidemic took place in nine days.——Strikes are becoming very numerous just now in England. Not only are the day laborers striking, but the domestic servants are beginning a similar movement.——There were brought into San Francisco on one day recently 26,500 pounds of strawberries, which sold at 12½ cents a pound. Cherries and gooseberries are also plenty.——Forty-seven thousand persons die annually of consumption in Great Britain; a disease which the London Telegraph calls "a scourge, compared to which cholera is a jest and war a diversion."——The shower of ashes from Mount Vesuvius has been accompanied in several localities by stones. In some places the ashes cover the ground two inches deep.——The personal property of the Queen of England is estimated at about fifty million dollars, "and yet she is not happy."——It is stated that all the Carlist bands have priests either for their commanders or lieutenants.——Contracts to the amount of nearly half a million dollars have been made for buildings to be erected in Salt Lake during the next six months.

Conference.—The fourth quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held, the Lord will, with the church at Sugar Hill, Lisbon, commencing Thursday, June 6th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., to hold over the Sabbath. Bro. Couch and others of God's servants are expected to preach the word. Let there be a general rally from Northern New Hampshire to this meeting, of both preachers and people. An invitation is extended to all.

T. W. Piper.
J. G. Smith.
C. H. Fletcher.

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.—The committee having decided to enlarge the ground and stable, and build a boarding tent, hereby request the brethren interested in this meeting to meet on the camp-ground the second Tuesday in June, to aid in doing this work. To hire the work done will be quite expensive. Come in the name of the Lord, and his blessing will attend your efforts. A few axes, bush-scythes and rakes will be needed, and those who can do carpenter's work will please bring such tools as will be wanted. Should the time appointed be stormy, come the first fair day in the week till Friday; after that the Monday following. Come prepared to stay two days, if necessary.

R. R. York, Chairman,
Jesse Gay, Sec., of Campmeeting Committee.

P. S.—Those wishing tent ground, can select lots at this time.

New York A. C. Conference.—If the Lord will, this conference will hold its next annual meeting in the new Chapel, in Springwater, about thirty miles south of Rochester, on the Geneseo Valley R. R., commencing Thursday evening, June 13th, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Good homes and ample accommodations will be provided for all who come, and all are invited. It is expected that all the churches desiring to further the general interests of the cause will be represented at this annual gathering. Delinquent and new churches are earnestly urged to co-operate with the body, and they are hereby cordially invited to seats (by delegate) in the convention. For their information, it should be stated here that each church belonging to the conference association, is required by the constitution to report either by delegate or by letter, at least at each annual session; and are also requested to send in quarterly such donations as they may be able to collect for the general mission fund. This is an important meeting, and should be remembered in the earnest prayers of the church.

D. Cogswell, President.
Wm. E. Brown, Secretary.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 13th, and continuing until June 23d. The invitation is to all. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is better than last year for having a good meeting. Our grounds will be better fitted up. There will be wood, hay, straw, and lumber for tent frames found on the ground. There will also be a grocery upon the ground, where all things necessary for the comfort of the people can be bought at reasonable rates. The profits accruing will go to bear the expenses of the meeting. We are hoping to secure the labors of ministers from abroad. Particulars hereafter. Elds. C. C. Ramsay and R. M. Thomas will be present, with many others, to preach the word.

Alonzo Raymond, President.

The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its sixteenth annual session at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 18th. This meeting will be held in connection with the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting. (See notice above.) Let the churches send delegates to this meeting, and all the ministers who are interested in the soon coming of our blessed Lord, make a sacrifice and be at this gathering. You are wanted to help in this cause. Ministers who are members of this conference are required by the Constitution to report by letter, if not present. All are cordially invited to this meeting. Alonzo Raymond, Secretary.

Job Gildersleve, President.

Minnesota State Campmeeting.—In accordance with a vote of our State Conference, a campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove, called "Cheatham's Grove," in the town of Utica, in Winona county, commencing on Thursday P. M., June 27th, holding over Sunday, and as much longer as the interest will seem to warrant. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with a permanent preacher's stand, good seats, and a good well of water, and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground. Brn. and Srs. of the Advent faith, throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles, and work for God. Come from every quarter. Come with hearts filled with God's love, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs declare the soon coming of Jesus, and shall we not improve this annual blessing as the Lord requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and to the salvation of others? Come, Christians, of every name, and unite in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove. Brn. and Srs. in the ministry, from far and near, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon coming Jesus, whose reward is with him. Come embued with power from on high, a holy unction from the throne, that many sinners may be saved as the result of our meeting.

N. B. Arrangements will be made with the various R. R. companies for half fare tickets from those points where the brethren will notify me this month that they wish them. Those who come to tarry on the ground, should come prepared (with tents if possible), and with bedding and provisions. Probably many can have shelter on the ground in a building erected by others who have used the ground. Come one, come all, and may the Lord give a time long to be remembered on account of his presence.

S. C. Wellcome, Sec. State Conference.

Wisconsin Campmeeting.—Our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held on the old ground, at Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis., beginning June 1st, and holding over two Sundays. We shall make an effort to have Bro. Grant with us, and hope to succeed. Let us rally from every point, for we expect a good meeting. Accommodations similar to other years, with some improvements. Those coming on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. (Prairie du chien branch) will stop at Mazomanie, where daily they will find a stage at five P. M. for Prairie du Sac, ten miles. Those coming on the North Western via. Madison, from the east, will stop at Lodi, and take stage at five P. M. for Prairie du Sac, eleven miles. Those coming from the west on the same road, by the way of Baraboo, will stop at Merrimack, and take stage at two P. M. for Prairie du Sac, ten miles. Those coming from the direction of Lacrosse, can stop at Portage city, and take the river boat, or stage, to Prairie du Sac. Now let us have such a rally as never before; and let all come with a mind to work for God, and come early.

The little band at N. Rutland, Ms., have chosen Bro. H. V. Moulton for their corresponding committee for preaching. They are poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith. MY BIBLE.

S. E. CHRISTMAN.

How dear to my heart, while a pilgrim and stranger,
I wander 'mid storms, in the enemy's land,
Unmoved by its terrors, undaunted by danger,
Is my blessed old Bible, that lies on the stand.

When the tempter assails us, in moments of weakness,
And seeks to destroy with a sweep of his hand;
'Tis there we can gather such strength in our meekness,
In God's precious record, that lies on the stand.

When adversity comes, like the chill blast of winter,
So cold and relentless, its ceaseless demands;
'Tis then we remember our treasure in heaven,
And turn to our Bible that lies on the stand.

When death, that great foe of humanity, stealing
Unwelcomed and dreaded among our home band;
With faith, we at once search our Bible for promise
Of certain release from the enemy's land.

Ah! yes, though our earthly hopes here that we cherish,
Are fleeting, and false, and unstable as sand;
Yet we know that the promise of God cannot perish,
In that precious old Bible, that lies on the stand.

Though friends may desert, and foes may assail me,
And the foes of Satan I'm called to withstand;
There is one mighty friend, that will ever avail me,
I yet have my Bible, that lies on the stand.

CALIFORNIA.

O. R. FASSETT.

I have just finished a tour of four weeks up in the mountains of Lake Co., a distance of about one hundred and fifty miles north of San Francisco. Eld. D. D. Reed and wife accompanied me by request, and Eld. Wilson came on and spent a week with us, visiting from house to house, and conversing with the people, distributing publications, and helping us in our meetings as his health would permit.

DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY.

This is a most beautiful and romantic region. In the vicinity of Clear Lake, where our labors have been bestowed, there is seen in the distance, all around the horizon, high mountain ranges, while in the more immediate region of the Lake there are fertile vallies, and a thousand rolling hills, upon which are seen herds of cattle and horses. At this season of the year the scenery is picturesque and enchanting in a clear day. The cultivated fields are covered with growing grain, the hills and vallies with green grass, and flowers of every hue interspersed, spreading over the earth a carpet more gorgeous than was ever manufactured for the parlors of the rich. Clear Lake is a beautiful sheet of water, lying at the foot of the mountains and the hills, and in a calm and clear day looks like "a sea of glass," in which is mirrored the surrounding landscape. It is twenty-five miles in length and twelve in width, and fourteen hundred feet above the level of the sea. The lake and streams flowing into it abound in fish, and we had the pleasure of seeing them in their frolics, and felt somewhat sad in witnessing some of them caught in the snare, and speared, to gratify our taste, and afford us amusement, as well as to supply the market, by the fishermen. One of these fishermen was converted to the Lord, and I had the pleasure of baptizing him; and another with his wife joined together with him, and formed our newly organized church at Pleasant Grove.

This section of the State is noted for its many medicinal and mineral springs, which are becoming of world-wide celebrity, and are visited by thousands each season; and the locality is becoming the hospital of the State for invalids. The mountain scenery can hardly be rivaled in any country. At the north is seen Snow Mountain, covered with snow, towering above the rest with its white-crested summit. At the east, Uncle Sam stands over the lake, isolated and alone, "the monarch of all he surveys." The Indian name for this mountain is Conktei, or Chief Mountain (Conk, hill; tei, chief). The Indian name should have been preserved as the most appropriate and significant. This mountain is ever in sight after you once reach this section. For a time you will lose sight of it by the windings of the road, or nearer hills, as you descend some valley, but then again he heaves in sight to show you some new view of his elephantine sides and proportions. It is worth a journey to Lake Co. to see this mountain and its ever varying and changing scenery, as you travel the western side of the lake. Some skillful artist should picture upon canvas some of the landscapes of this remarkable region. I would recommend one from a point between Pleasant Grove and Head of the Lake, fronting Sulphur Springs, which takes in Pyramid Mountain (a new name I give it) far in the distance, at the left of Uncle Sam, and beyond the lake. The Black Hills at the south, and other views of this region, drawn upon canvas, would exceed in beauty and variety of scenery any I have ever witnessed.

MEETINGS.

We first held meetings in Lake Port, in the Southern Methodist Chapel, an unfinished building. Religious interest in this village is dead. Some came out to hear us, and were benefited. The season was unfavorable for our meetings in so open a place of worship. Next we visited Pleasant Grove, where we have organized a church of sixteen members, and baptized eight souls. Others will soon join us, we think. Most are convinced we have the truth, and skeptics have been led to believe that the Scriptures are the words of God, and study the Bible with interest. From thence we went to the "Head of the Lake," where I preached a few times, and have left Bro. and Sr. Reed to prosecute the good-begun work, which bids fair to be effectual to the convincing of many, and the conversion of some to the Lord. We have thus traversed the whole distance of the western side of Clear Lake, "preaching the gospel of the kingdom." The theological systems, founded in the traditions and errors of the times, have been disturbed and upheaved, and are toppling to their fall. There is a rally of their defenders to prop them up, but, to the glory of God and the power of his truth, all their puny efforts will avail nothing. They can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

MINISTERS.

There are more professed ministers of the gospel in this region, than in any section of the same extent I ever visited. Most of them, however, follow some secular employment, rather than devote their time to study and the preaching of the word. These ministers are of the denominations of Northern and Southern Methodists, Presbyterians, Calvinistic Baptists, Campbellites, United Brethren, etc. Almost universally they are hostile to the faith we preach, and used their influence to deter the people from hearing us, while they regarded and denounced us as "the false prophets and false teachers of the last days." The doctrine we preached they decried as "heresy," but refused us a candid hearing, or to meet us in discussion; but kept out of the way, as far as possible, of the bright shining of the light, in the darkness of error and superstition. The people begin to see, and contrast and mark the difference between truth and error, and light and darkness; and between the boldness of those who "walk in the light," and those who stumble in the darkness at noonday. The people are weighing in the balances of an enlightened judgment truth and error, while the ministers refuse to do this. They say "We see," and will not investigate, therefore they remain "blind and leaders of the blind"! We hope there will yet be in this region some of these ministers who will yet investigate and read upon the subjects which have agitated their neighborhood. If they do, they will come into the light out of the surrounding darkness which in this day envelopes the churches.

A clergyman of the Presbyterian denomination, who is teaching a large school at the Head of the Lake, when requested to give out notice of our meetings did so, but at the same time (I was informed) advised the scholars not to attend, or their parents; "for," said he, "these men preach that men have no souls." Such ignorance at this late day does not become a man of his position or profession. We bear him no ill will, but love and pity, for we were once as ignorant and hostile as he to the faith we now preach. The son of another clergyman, old enough to have a family, and whose father would not deign to hear us, said that our "by-laws declared that men had no souls." The gentleman to whom he said this wished to see them, and was handed Eld. Grant's tract on "What is Man?" This gentleman, however, failed to discover what he saw. This is the first knowledge we have had that Bro. Grant had given "By-laws" to the Adventists. It is generally believed that he has "commanded" them "to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe the truth," and therefore fulfills the scripture, "Now the spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." 1 Tim. 4: 1–4.

ALARMED.

The people in Lakeport Co. were alarmed at our coming, and some dared not to see us, and wanted to know of those who had seen us "How we looked and appeared?" Once over their fright, and becoming acquainted, they felt to enjoy our presence.

THE INDIANS.

There are in the vicinity of the lake the remnant of an almost extinct race—the Digger Indians. Some white men have married among them, and others live with squaws unmarried. These Indians are harmless and peaceable, and are employed as help on farms, and often in the houses of the whites, while they herd in huts after the habits of their ancestors. They live on acorns ground and made into bread, fish, and whatever is given them for their labor. They dress mostly like the whites. These Indians began to gather for a festival of some kind just after our arrival, until several hundreds assembled. How the report was started is not known, but it was said, and circulated throughout the country, that we had told them that the Lord would come in August; and they becoming alarmed had come down from the mountains and had assembled on the borders of this lake, so as to plunge into it when the world was on fire. Exhibiting some evidences of disturbance, the whites became alarmed, and supposed they threatened violence or mischief of some kind; so the sheriff with a posse went down and disarmed them. We had to bear this scandalous charge against us, started by the devil, and circulated by his agents.

PREJUDICE.

Ignorance and prejudice go together, and never in any community have I seen greater prejudice than in this Lake county against the truths and doctrines the Adventists advocate; and all because the people and priests were wholly ignorant of them. But, thank the Lord, darkness is being dispelled, and the true light is shining amid the surrounding obscurity and superstition. Henceforth, the preachers will have to mind how they misrepresent Adventists, or pervert and misinterpret the Scriptures, for the people are in advance of them, having heard us, and are reading "the Scriptures daily to see if these things are so."

Bro. and Sr. Reed remain, as I return home to San Francisco to resume my labors there, and in Vallejo, for a while. There are men and women raised up who will, and are fully capable of defending the faith against all the assaults of the adversaries. They are those well-informed, and understand whereof they affirm.

BAPTISM.

Our season of baptism occurred the last day of April, Tuesday, at noon. It was a charming day; not a cloud in the heavens to be seen. The lake was calm, and at rest, to open its bosom to receive the disciples of Jesus in the emblem of death, and they were raised in the likeness of the Redeemer's resurrection, and that of his people "at the last day." These are "the first fruits" of Advent believers in Lake county, Cal. They were happy in the profession of their faith in this ordinance, while the administrator felt honored from above, yet most unworthy to administer it to these waiting ones, so far from the home of his youth. Oh! how beautiful the day, the occasion, the season. Bro. and Sister Reed were by, aiding, and singing the praises of God, as one by one of the candidates put on the Lord Jesus by baptism. Among the candidates was an elderly christian gentleman, seventy-nine years of age whose name and denominational connection must be withheld from the public, to save the feelings of those who regard his baptism "a sacrilege," after professing and holding his relations with the Pedo-Baptists for fifty years. He addressed the multitude, standing by the water-side, informing them of his change of views, and assigning the reason for the step he took, and that he meant no harm to the church with which he had stood connected for so many years. Arriving at his home, he said in the language of Paul, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand."

REFLECTIONS.

I have greatly enjoyed this journey into the regions beyond"—yes, "regions beyond." It is glorious to be engaged in this work of preparing and making ready a people for the Lord; to be engaged in this warfare and conflict between truth and error of the times in which we live, and to know that we are on the right side, and ever victorious. We become more and more valiant, more and more confident of success, and of final and everlasting victory. God and the Bible are with us, and the Lord is our salvation. I am happy in the Rock of Ages. Amen.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

L. A. PEASE.

Dear brethren and sisters looking for the coming of the Lord: Having thought much upon this subject; and having felt its great importance, and noticed its great neglect among us as a people, I felt constrained to express my thoughts through this organ as it reaches most of our little band. I know full well, that most of our churches are small, and that it requires a great effort to sustain preaching, and many of them think they could not bear the additional expense of a Sabbath school. But it seems to me that if all felt the vast importance of the Sunday school as I do, that some effort would be put forth that would result in great good in this direction. A Sunday school can be organized and carried on without a great expense, and in such a manner as to do a great deal of good, and help build up the church. As far as a Sunday school would interfere with preaching, it would do so only for good.

Many of our people listen to three long sermons every Sabbath, and it is often the case that they get them so mixed together, that they remember but little of them, or forget them entirely. Now would it not be well to let either the morning or afternoon sermon give place to a Sunday school? If one of them should, the preacher would not have so much to do; he could deliver two sermons that would contain richer food for the hearers; the hearers would have less words to remember, and could therefore think more upon what they did hear, and it would do them more good.

While I think of the situation our children are in, I am grieved that there is not more done for them. Children are children, and we cannot make old people of them until they are grown up. And as they are almost wholly neglected, I feel that duty requires something should be done for them. A child cannot listen to a sermon and understand its import as an older person can. Children must be approached with the same subjects in a different manner from people whose minds are more mature. Children love and will have childish things. If we do not provide for them in the right way, they will seek enjoyment otherwheres. And in the present sinful condition of the world, ninety-nine will find the objects of their search in the broad path of death, where one will find and learn to love those that lead in the narrow way to life. We need to gather them together, and tell them of the bright future in such a manner as we can by no other means than the Sabbath school. Children will have society and association, and if we do not provide for them where the influence of the heavenly is around them, they will almost invariably seek them in circles whose influence tends only down to death.

O, dear brethren and sisters, take this matter into consideration, and see if something cannot be done for the children of our people. Let us not pass it by any longer. Time is getting short; the Lord is coming, and we all want our children prepared to meet Him, for surely we want them with us on the new earth. All can see plainly that a Sunday school will give us an opportunity to bring before the children these blessed subjects we so much love. And it will throw around them that heavenly influence, that will help them to prepare for the great future. There are Sunday schools connected with some of the churches, and where they are, and are properly managed, they have a blessed effect. The Sunday school has often well been called the nursery of the church. It is there the child learns the first duties that involves upon a christian in society and the world around. But I need not try to enumerate the blessings to be derived, for they are innumerable. Let us think of this matter and talk it over, and may God give us wisdom to act upon it properly.

"THEY BOUGHT, THEY SOLD."

D. N. SMITH.

We are apt to think that when the Lord comes there will be some demonstration to herald his advent—a breaking up of society; but we infer from the above quotation that the world will be going on its usual course. Imagine the scene. The merchant will be at his desk, the mechanic in his shop, the farmer in his field, the mariner on the ocean, the traveler on his journey, when, suddenly, there will be a light in the heavens, such as has never before been seen. The merchant will drop his pen, the mechanic his tools; the farmer will leave his plow; the mariner will stand and gaze, and perhaps never reach the harbor; the train will stop, and those who are on their way to see their loved ones will be doomed to disappointment; all must stop and attend to the summons—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh." Then there will be wailing and mourning. Brethren and sisters will part; husbands and wives will part; parents and children will part to meet no more. This is no fancy sketch, but will soon be a reality. Are we doing all we can to save our fellow mortals? May the Lord arouse his church to new life in his cause, that when he comes he will say, "Well done."

THE WORD AND THE SPIRIT.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

The great work of all ages, since the beginning of the creation, is the deliverance of the human family from the dominion and power of sin. We believe that it is this especial work to which Jesus refers, when he said, "my Father worketh hitherto, and I work." John 5: 17. But the results of this work were not manifested in any great degree, that is, they were not seen and understood among men, until the Lord was risen from the dead, and ascended to the Father. When the day of Pentecost had fully come, and the power of the Holy Spirit was felt in such degree, and measure, and extent, as it had never been felt before, and thousands were turned from the power of Satan, and made free from sin, then for the first time since the fall, was the work of God made manifest. Before this, there was upon all nature a thick veil of darkness, a riddle that could not be found out, an enigma that could not be solved. No manifestation of power in nature, no tendency of the race toward purity and holiness, or aught else either in the heart, or in the world outside, could show the "mystery which was kept secret since the world began." Rom. 16: 25. There is, even now, an earnest longing on the part of many who "know the joyful sound," and who are rejoicing in hope, to speak such words as may move multitudes to turn from the error of their ways. The language of their heart is, "O for wisdom and power from on high! O for such a gift of utterance as has never heretofore been bestowed on man!" For what? It is that we may persuade men to be reconciled to God. Who would not rejoice to witness a gracious answer to that prayer? yet let us remember that it is not with "wisdom of words," that the great work is to be performed. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Zech. 4: 6.

What avail are all the combinations of words, without the power of the Spirit of God to accompany them? But both the word and the Spirit are at hand to every true believer. O my brother, have you now put on the whole armor of God? Are you constantly praying in the Spirit, and for the Spirit? Should not this be the burden of every prayer, "O fill us with thy Spirit." Let thy people be fully armed for the last great conflict. Let the praying hosts move against the enemy with a spirit and power that nothing can gainsay or resist.

MOTHER'S WORK.

We find the following touching verses credited to the New England Farmer, and give them a welcome in our columns:—

"She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.—PROV. 31: 27.

Early in the morning
Up as soon as light,
Overseeing breakfast,
Putting things to right;
Dressing little children,
Hearing lessons said,
Washing baby faces,
Toasting husband's bread.

After breakfast reading,
Holding babe at prayers;
Putting up the dinners,
Mending little tears;
Good-bye kissing children,
Sending off to school,
With a prayer and blessing,
Mother's heart is full.

Washing up the dishes,
Sweeping carpets clean,
Doing up the chamber work,
Sewing on machine;
Baby lies a crying—
Rubbing little eyes;
Mother leaves her sewing,
Singing lullabies.

Cutting little garments,
Trimming little hats,
Writing for the papers,
Stealing cosy chats;
Hearing little footsteps
Running through the hall;
Telling school is over,
Mamma's name they call.

Talking with the children
All about their school,
Soothing little troubles,
Teaching grammar rule;
Seeing about supper,
Lighting up the rooms,
Making home look cheerful
When the husband comes.

So, with all her headaches,
Keeping to herself,
Always looking cheerful,
Other lives to help.
Good-night, little children—
Mamma hears their prayers,
Giving all a sweet kiss,
Tripping down the stairs.

Back into the parlor;
Sitting down to rest,
Reading in the Bible
How the good are blessed;
Taking all her sorrows,
All her cares to One,
Bless this darling mother—
She her work has done.

BIBLE CLASS.—No. 3.

GEO. THOMSON.

Lesson—Matt. 4: 1–11.

Q. What is the subject of this lesson?

A. The Savior's temptation by the Devil.

Q. By what Spirit was the Savior led into the wilderness?

A. By the Spirit of God.

Q. How do you determine that?

A. When "Spirit" is qualified alone by the definite article, it usually refers to God's Spirit.

Q. Was it necessary that our Lord should be tempted?

A. So it appears, from Heb. 2: 10, that he was to be "made perfect through sufferings."

Q. Is there any other reason why it was necessary for him to be tempted?

A. In Heb. 4: 15 we read—"For we have not an high priest that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

Q. Why did the Savior fast forty days and forty nights?

A. Evidently to prepare him for his work.

Q. Can you suppose it possible for the Son of God to fall through those temptations?

A. Yes, otherwise the temptations would have been a mere farce.

Q. Who else fasted forty days and nights?

A. Moses and Elijah.

Q. Can you surmise why these three personages alone fasted for that specified period?

A. I suppose it was because they were representative characters.

Q. How do you get that idea?

A. From the fact that those three were associated together in vision on the mount of transfiguration.

Q. What did they represent in that vision?

A. The future kingdom of the Savior.

Q. How did they represent that?

A. (1) Christ, though not yet king, was transfigured, and enveloped in glory, as he will be in reality when he ascends his throne. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. 25: 31. (2) Moses, being dead, represented the righteous dead who shall be resurrected when Christ comes. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4: 16. (3) Elijah, who never saw death, but was translated, represented those saints who shall be alive when the Savior comes. "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep [die], but we shall all be changed [made immortal] in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52. Those two classes will constitute the subjects of Christ's coming kingdom.

Q. How did the Savior meet the temptations of the Devil?

A. By referring him to Scripture, or, what was "written."

Q. What lesson do we learn from that?

A. Always to appeal to the word of God.

Q. How did Satan prove himself to be a great tactician?

A. By quoting Scripture also.

Q. What do we learn therefrom?

A. That the enemies of truth will not hesitate to misapply scripture for the purpose of carrying their point.

Q. How did the Savior meet this strategy of the enemy?

A. By still referring him to what was "written," and giving it the true application.

Q. What do we learn from the eighth and ninth verses?

A. That the kingdoms of this world are under the control of Satan.

Q. Is that real, or only apparent, Satan being considered a liar?

A. Evidently real, observation confirming the following scripture: "And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness." 1 John 5: 19. The original is still stronger—"lieth in the EVIL ONE." And the Savior, in John 14: 30, calls Satan "the prince of this world."

Q. Is Satan then the legitimate sovereign of this world?

A. No, he is a usurper.

Q. Who, then, is the legitimate ruler of this world?

A. The Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, of the seed of David. "And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. 11: 15.

Q. What did the Devil do when he failed in his efforts?

A. He left the Savior.

Q. Did he leave him permanently?

A. Luke says, "He departed from him for a season."

Q. Have we a promise of a like result, if we be true?

A. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Jas. 4: 7.

Q. What took place then?

A. "Angels came and ministered unto him."

Q. Dare we hope that they will minister unto us under similar circumstances?

A. "Are they [the angels] not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation?" Heb. 1: 14.

Q. Is there any intimation that the Devil returned to the Savior subsequently?

A. I think so in John 14: 30—"Hereafter I will not talk much with you, for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me."

Q. What does this teach us?

A. It teaches us that however successful we may be in resisting the temptations of the enemy, it is no security against future attacks. "Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour; whom resist, steadfast in the faith." 1 Pet. 5: 8, 9. "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." Matt. 26: 41.

LIVING BY THE MOMENT.

This is a subject of much practical consequence to those who aim to live continually with God. . . . . The whole rule of conduct to a soul which is wholly devoted to God, is the order of divine providence. God's providence is his agency in events made known in time. Consequently every successive moment has something which tends to indicate his will. If the soul faithfully gives itself up to the will of God, as thus made known in his providential order, it will be likely to do all things right and well. And if, while it thus gives itself up to God's will, it fully believes in God's promise, that he will protect those who confide in him, it will have every thing it wants, and at the same time be free from care. This is the true life; because, then being in harmony with his will, we live with God; and receiving, every thing from him, in the exercise of faith, we live on him. God loves what is of his own will and his own order.

Few are the souls that give themselves up faithfully to God, in the order of his providence, as it is developed moment by moment. They have too much of a will of their own, their desires run out too strongly in various directions, to accept readily and fully that "daily bread," whatever it may be, which God's providence now presents. Sometimes persons get out of the position of the present moment, which I may properly call the divine moment, by their too earnest desires to do good. We are not at liberty to do good except that good which is appropriate to the present moment. That good, which is good in itself considered, becomes evil by being placed in a wrong position; because it is good done inappropriately, and in violation of God's arrangements, and therefore at the expense of the highest good, namely, conformity to the divine will.

It is here that we find the occasion of so many falls by christians. They do not live by the moment; they do not make soul and body appropriate to God's time, which is the present time; and going out of the present moment, they may be said in a certain sense to go out of God, whose habitation, considered relatively to the human perception, is not in the past, which is gone; nor in the future, which does not exist; but in the divine now. Around this heaven-constructed centre all commands, and all promises, and all effusions of grace, and all the helping visits of unseen angels cluster together. He who does not correctly estimate the present moment, in the calmness of inward recollection, fall into sin. Through a false estimate in one direction, his desires and purposes may fall below the line of duty; and by a false estimate in another direction, taking into view relations and interests which are not appropriate to the present time, the same desires and purposes may become so intense, so exaggerated, so wayward, that sin there also "lies at the door." But when, with a heart wholly given to God, and in the exercise of faith, we live in the present moment, considered in itself alone, and in its necessary and just relations, all goes right and well.

This appears to me very clear. As a dislocated bone, out of the place in which the economy of divine wisdom had fixed it, gives continual pain till it is restored to its proper order, so the many troubles of life come from the soul's not abiding in its place, and not being content with the order of God, and with what is afforded in that order from moment to moment. If men rightly knew and appreciated this secret harmonizing with whatever is, viewed in its divine relations, no voice of murmur would be heard in the heart, and no cloud of rebellion would darken on their brow. But, alas, instead of being content with what they have, they are ever wishing for what they have not; and are thus unhappy under a yoke which would otherwise be easy to them, while the soul which enters into the present moment, viewed as God's moment, and estimated therefore in the divine light, is already in the sweet peace of paradise.

Whence comes it, that we often find persons, who are poor and suffering, experiencing, nevertheless, greater contentment; while princes and potentates, who abound to profusion, are often wretched and unhappy? It is because the man who is not satisfied with the dispensations of the present moment, and consequently, is not content with what he now has, will never be without craving desires; can never be content, can never be happy. . .

Souls in the natural life, and even those which are partially sanctified, have various strong and ardent desires, running in various directions; but the desires of souls, which are truly sanctified, are consummated in the divine moment. Some persons have desires which are very good in themselves, such as the desire to suffer martyrdom for God; others have strong desire for the salvation of particular individuals among their neighbors; and others again have a strong desire to see God revealed in his glory.

All this is excellent; but he who, without having any one of these desires, nevertheless desires what God would have him desire at the present moment, is infinitely more content, and glorifies God more. God is as inflexible in subjecting good desires to his own order, and in requiring their development in his own way, as he is in repressing evil desires. A man is far from experiencing the full grace of God, who desires martyrdom, but is restless under the yoke of divine providence, which places martyrdom beyond his reach, and requires him to glorify God in the humblest and most retired avocations of life. The true desire, the right desire, is that which comes in the divine order; and the divine order can never be known and appreciated except in connection with a knowledge of the developments of the present moment. At one time, the apostle Paul made tents in God's order; at another time, he preached eloquently on Mars Hill, at Athens, in the same divine order, but in both cases he glorified God equally. If we are right in motive, and right in place, exercising all the requisite faith in God at the same time, all will be well.—An extrac from the "Life and religious experience of Madame Guyon," by G. THE STRANGE PRAYER.

The worst man in the village was Jack Ranney. He had a comfortable home; it was not a happy one. As soon as the big gate opened, his two children, Milly and Bob, ran into the house exclaiming, "Father is coming," and into a corner they crouched, and there they stayed until they were ordered to bed. There was no clapping of hands, no ruby lips turned up to receive father's evening kiss in Jack's house. No, his children stood in terror of him; for often after his day's work was over did he go home drunk, and then he was cross, and would strike the first one who came in his way.

One day Jack was driving his cart when the harness broke, and the horses backed until his new cart was pushed into a deep gutter and broken. Jack sprang from his seat and began to beat the horses most unmercifully with his whip-handle, while oath after oath rolled from his tongue, calling on God to "damn his soul."

A little boy had been rolling his hoop up and down the pavement, but when he heard the awful words he caught his hoop in his hand and stopped. Stepping up to Jack, while his beautiful eyes were full of tears, he said in a trembling voice:

"O, sir, is that the way you pray?"

Jack turned in perfect astonishment, but said nothing.

"O," continued the little fellow, "lowering his voice to a whisper, "didn't you ask God to damn your soul? O, sir, hadn't you better take it back before God hears it?"

An impatient exclamation was the only reply, and the little boy walked away. There was a strange tenderness about Jack's heart that he had scarcely ever felt before, and as he looked down the street he saw that the little fellow walked slowly along, forgetting to roll his hoop, and then a strange mistiness crept over his eyes.

Ah! the few kind words of that little boy set Jack to thinking, and made him feel his sinfulness as he had never felt it before. They brought him to repentance, and made him a changed man.

It was not long before people on every side were asking in astonishment, "What on earth is the matter with Jack Ranney?"

Ah! little reader, a bright star will shine in that little boy's crown in the kingdom of heaven, for his words were blessed to the saving of the precious soul of the worst man in the village. Jack Ranney was a christian!—Good Words.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

Self-control and presence of mind are doubtless, in some measure, natural gifts; but they may be greatly strengthened and increased by culture. Young folks may learn a valuable lesson from the heroic conduct of little Annie Lamb, a girl of twelve years. She had taken passage with her mother on the propeller "Fountain City," from Chicago to Buffalo.

The day after the departure of the boat, the little girl, going into the kitchen, remarked that the stove smoked, to which the cook replied she was mistaken. The child had heard her mother often say that she dreaded going on a boat for fear of fire. With this in her mind, and taking another look at the place where the smoke seemed to come from, she saw that it did not issue from the stove. Going on deck she discovered the wood-work around the smoke-stack on fire, and the flames just eating their way into the cabin. Without giving any general alarm, she went to the steward and told him the boat was on fire. He informed the mate, who called the deck hands aft, and they extinguished the fire without one of the passengers being aware that anything of the kind had occurred. There were twenty-two ladies sitting on deck in the bow of the boat, among them the mother of Annie, when this was going on.

After the work had been done Annie went to her mother, and says, "Don't be frightened, mother; the boat has been on fire but it is all over now."

The captain was so greatly pleased with the cool, calm, and quiet manner in which the child performed her part, that he refunded the passage money of both, and offered to take them back to Chicago free of charge. Had little Annie screamed, "Fire!" as most children and the majority of grown people would have done, a panic would doubtless have occurred among the passengers, and disastrous consequences ensued.

LET ME PRAY FIRST.—A little girl was passing quietly through the streets, a short time since, when she came to the spot where several idle boys were amusing themselves by the dangerous habit of throwing stones. Not observing her, one of the boys by accident, threw a stone, which struck her in the eye.

She was carried home in great agony. The surgeon was sent for, and a very painful operation was declared necessary. When the time came, and the surgeon had taken out his instruments, she lay in her father's arms and he asked if she was ready.

"No, father, not yet," she replied.

"What do you wish to wait for, my child?"

"I want to kneel and pray to Jesus first," she answered. She prayed a few minutes, and afterwards submitted to the operation with the patience of a woman.

TALKS ABOUT HEALTH.

Dio Lewis is probably the best doctor in the country for advising people how not to get sick and need other doctors. This is his conclusion as to food:

For breakfast—Oatmeal porridge, with milk and sugar or Graham mush, with a little good syrup, or cracked wheat with milk and sugar, or baked potatoes with bread and butter, or beefsteak or mutton chop with baked potatoes and bread and butter.

If you are thin and need fat, use the first three; if you are too fat, use the last named two.

Drink cold water or a little weak coffee.

Dinner—Beef or mutton, roasted or stewed, with any vegetables you may like (though tomatoes should be used very sparingly), good bread and butter, and close the meal with a glass of weak lemonade. Eat no desert, unless it be a little fruit, and eat nothing more until the next morning.

There is no rule in regard to diet, about which I am all fixed in my convictions, as that nothing should be eaten after dinner, and I think that the dinner should be taken early in the day, not later, if it can be so managed, than two o'clock. In regard to the precise hour for the dinner, I am not so clear, though for myself one o'clock is the best hour; but in reference to the omission of the third meal, I have, after long observation, no doubt whatever.

Hundreds of persons have come to me with indigestion in some of its many forms, and have experienced such relief in a single week from omitting the supper, that I have for a number of years depended upon this point in the diet as the best item in my prescriptions for indigestion. I have never met one person suffering from indigestion who was not greatly relieved at once by omitting the third meal.

Eat nothing between meals, not even an apple or peach. If you eat fruit, let it be with the breakfast and dinner.

Cooked fruit is best for persons of weak digestion. I have met hundreds of people who could digest a large beefsteak without a pang, but could not manage a single uncooked apple.

I think certain dietetic reformers have somewhat overrated the value of fruit.

Avoid cake, pie, all sweetmeats, nuts, raisins, and candies.

Manage your stomach as above, and at the end of ten years you will look back upon these table habits as the source of great advantages and happiness.

For thirty years I have been a constant and careful observer (I have no hobbies about diet), and in the light of my own experience and these long observations, I assure you the table habits I advise are vital to health and happiness.—New York Republican.

TWO MEALS A DAY AND HARD WORK.—If you could see my husband you would hardly believe him to be the same man who came to "Our Home" a year ago last July. He is and has been engaged for some time in threshing clover seed. He is out driving the horse-power and attending to his teams from sun up to sun down. He has been out all day some of the coldest weather we have had this winter. He eats breakfast at six o'clock and dinner at twelve and no supper. He has not eaten any kind of meat, except beef once in a while. He takes his Graham gems with him if he is to stay away from home any length of time. He can freeze out half a dozen men that eat their pork and white bread and drink strong coffee. His weight now is one hundred and seventy-five pounds, within five pounds of what you said he ought to weigh. He says he expects to weigh that before long. His cure beats any that I ever read of in the boasting almanacs, without even the smell of medicine. Nature has done the work, with your help. Would that the truth you proclaim might be followed in every household, making them as happy as it has ours.—Mrs. H. A. Elder.

NOT STARVED YET.—Although a stranger to you, I wish to speak one word for the good cause in which you are engaged, for I feel that it is a good cause when we are trying to direct our fellow mortals in the right way. As for myself I lived for thirty-eight years like other people, eating and drinking what is called hearty food. I was always sickly and less than a year ago I was brought near death's door by taking medicine prescribed by a doctor, who claims to heal sick people with drugs. About eight months ago I first saw the "Laws of Life," and read and began to practice its teachings. I met with a great deal of opposition from my friends. They said I was going to starve myself, but on the contrary I began to improve, and have improved steadily ever since. Now my friends meet me and say "How well you do look. I never saw saw you look better, etc." I tell them that comes of living on what they thought I was going to starve on. I do not believe I would return to the old style of living for any price, I feel so much better than I used to.—Mrs. A. Pearl.—Laws of Life.

BATHING.—A daily bath for the whole body is not too much. Health may not absolutely require this, but there are few persons who would not be benefited by a complete washing of the skin, from head to foot, at least once every day. The feet need washing as much as the head, as perspiration upon them is very abundant. Feet that are cased in wool and leather are not excepted from this necessity of cleansing. Digestion is freer when water is applied above the organs of digestion; and the washing of the chest helps one to breathe more freely. Bathing makes the limbs supple, and it opens the muscles to breathe from, if such an unscientific statement may be permitted. All will agree that in the second month of summer a daily bath is a luxury not to be omitted.—Cor. Herald of Health.

STAND LIKE AN ANVIL.

"Stand like an anvil!" when the strokes
Of stalwart strength fall thick and fast;
Storms but more deeply root the oaks,
Whose brawny arms embrace the blast.

"Stand like an anvil!" when the sparks
Fly far and wide, a fiery shower;
Virtue and truth must still be marks
Where malice proves its want of power.

"Stand like an anvil!" when the bar
Lies red and glowing on its breast;
Duty shall be life's leading star,
And conscious innocence its rest.

"Stand like an anvil!" when the sound
Of ponderous hammers pains the ear;
Thine but the still and stern rebound
Of the great heart that cannot fear.

"Stand like an anvil!" noise and heat
Are born of earth, and die with time;
The soul, like God, its source and seat
Is solemn, still, serene, sublime.

THE COMING STRUGGLE,

BETWEEN THE CHURCH AND THE POWERS OF DARKNESS, SHOWING A CONFEDERACY OF SPIRITUALISTS, CATHOLICS, ETC., AT HAND, WITH THE FALSE CHRIST AT THEIR HEAD, AND A PERSECUTION ATTENDING.

I. K. LOMBARD.

NUMBER THREE.

The Spiritualist movement is both a monster and a miracle, such as no former age could develop. With a worship that knows no God, a morality that knows no shame, and a general looseness that knows no restraint, its philosophy is gradually undermining the religion and morals of society, while toward them, as to a common centre, the masses are silently but surely tending. The course of things at present is toward assimilation, but such a tendency, and so general too, must soon be followed by co-operation. This result must follow from the nature of things, as well as from the certainty of divine prophecy. The progress of Spiritualism, in whatever light we may view it, is a wonder. With all her miracles, she cannot boast a greater than the wonderful accumulation of her millions of votaries in less than twenty-five years! With her rapidly increasing millions, and a character of the "Jim Fisk" type,—bold, daring, and unscrupulous,—we may expect soon to see it usurping all authority and power, and by alliance, craft, and intimidation, bringing all under its sway who are not settled and grounded in God and his truth.

I have shown, in considering the three unclean spirits, and the gathering of the nations to the battle of the great day, that the Catholics were destined to embrace Spiritualism and act in alliance with them, in getting control of the world, and in enforcing a false worship on all. I will now proceed to consider the two-horned beast, which is the instrument destined to effect this alliance, and bring up the confederacy of nations, or "the image of the beast."

THE TWO-HORNED BEAST.

In Rev. 13: 11, we are introduced to a power as "another power coming up out of the earth, having two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon." We want first to settle the question of what power is here referred to. It has been very generally applied to the papacy, in some period of her past history. We will endeavor to show that this view is not consistent with the facts in the case, and then offer what we think a better theory, in some impending new government, or new development in an old one, with a popular revolutionary leader as a sovereign, who, as a prominent Spiritualist miracle-worker, seeks to revive the papal power, and effects an alliance between Catholics and Spiritualists, which is soon followed by the confederacy of nations under them.

All Protestant interpreters agree that the "leopard beast" of this chapter and the "scarlet colored beast" of the seventeenth chapter represent the papacy. But the former of these comes "out of the sea," the latter "out of the bottomless pit," while this two-horned beast comes "out of the earth," making its development distinct from the others; and since "it exerciseth all the power of the first beast," it would mark a third supremacy of the papacy, if it is strictly a papal development. But I think I have shown that there are two seasons of supremacy marked in the prophetic history of the papacy, and only two; hence this must be, not "the beast," but "another beast," as John calls it, distinct from the papal beast in some respects, yet acting "in the presence of the beast," and co-operating with it. There are certain points in reference to this two-horned beast and his work deserving of particular attention.

1. Being a beast, it must represent a government, according to a well known rule in the Bible use of prophetic symbols.

2. Having "two horns," it must represent two nations under one government, like the ancient Medo-Persian empire; or perhaps two distinct governments under one head, like the "Czar of all the Russias, and king of Poland."

3. As the person at the head of this double government is noted as a great wonder worker, he must be a Spiritualist; for, though the Catholics have claimed miraculous power, the Bible has nowhere attributed it to them, except just before the end, when acting with the Spiritualists. And his subjects, whatever may be their religious complexion at first, will finally fall in with him, for we read that "he deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast."

4. As he is said to act "in the sight of the beast," "in the presence of the beast," and "before the beast," as various passages have it, and all translations agree; and as all that he does seems accomplished by his miracles and other efforts in the service of the beast, he must evidently be hailed by both Catholics and Spiritualists as their champion, and will thus finally unite both parties in a confederacy.

Another proof that the person at the head of the two-horned beast government must be a Spiritualist, is found in the statement that "he spake as a dragon." To speak as a dragon, John must mean in plain language to teach "the doctrines of devils," as will appear from the instances of the use of the term dragon in this version. We find that Pagan Rome is called the dragon in the twelfth chapter, and called also the devil and Satan. We learn also, from the sixteenth chapter, that the dragon is one of the parties that sends forth the spirits of devils to gather the nations to the battle; and at the battle we find the dragon is explained to be the devil and Satan, and as such is shut up in the bottomless pit, "that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled." And, if we inquire why pagan Rome was called the devil and Satan, the answer is found in Paul's declaration (I Cor. 10: 20), "The things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils." Hence all the ancient martyrs refused to offer sacrifice to the gods of Rome, on the ground that they were demons, and they would thus be sacrificing to devils. In harmony with this is the statement of Gibbon—"It was the universal sentiment, both of the church and of heretics, that the demons were the authors, the patrons, and the objects of idolatry." Vol. 2, p. 77. Since, then, Spiritualism is the doctrine of demons, and the paganism of Rome, called the dragon, was the doctrine of demons also; it is virtually saying that he spake as a Spiritualist, to say that he spake as a dragon, in our day.

The first work attributed to the two-horned beast is to cause "the earth, and them that dwell therein, to worship the first beast whose deadly wound was healed." Verse 12. He could not be said to cause the earth, etc., to worship the first beast at a time when they were already doing it. Hence the only proper time to expect him to accomplish such a work in the service of the papacy is when she has lost the reverence and respect of the world, which she had during her forty-two months supremacy. We find her in this state to-day, shorn of her strength, and pleading for help, but without sympathy or respect from the world. Once, the will of the pope was the law of Christendom, and all Europe trembled and cowered at the thunders of the Vatican. Then "all worshiped him whose names were not written in the book of life." But how different the feelings of the masses to-day toward this power? Yet it is now in just the condition needful in order for the two-horned beast to "cause the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast," as declared in this prophecy. And since the present humiliating condition of the papacy may be necessary, in order to humble her arrogance enough to accept of a secondary, or at best an equal chance under a confederacy with Spiritualists, to carry out her ardent desire to get control of the world again; may we not conclude that an invisible hand has been lately removing the props on which she has been wont to lean for national support, and hence leave her to a degree of self-despair as to accomplishing the work alone? And since her present humiliation has been hurried on with remarkable haste during the last year or two, may we not hope that we have come to the time when the Lord will finish this work and cut it short in righteousness, and thus bring about an early accomplishment of these prophecies?

It seems that in connection with their alliance with Spiritualists, the Catholics will embrace Spiritualism. Thus far they have paid but little attention to the movement, and hence the body of Spiritualists is mostly made up from the ranks of Protestants, each one acting for himself, in becoming a Spiritualist; and so it will be, as additions are made from the Protestants; but with Catholics, the case will be quite otherwise. The mass of Catholics expect the heads of the church to decide for them what they shall believe, and what they shall do, in religion. Hence if the Catholics enter the Spiritualist ranks, it will be in a body, instead of one by one, and then, as a matter of policy, by arrangement of the leaders. As both Catholics and Spiritualists desire to rule the world, and the latter have the advantage of abundant miracles and constant communications from the invisible world, the Catholics will find it to their advantage to accept of Spiritualism, and yet will feel inclined to continue their organization, retaining most of their forms and ceremonies, no doubt.

Such a union of Catholics and Spiritualists would make, in a sense, two parties under the confederacy. But the various allusions to the false worship required by the confederacy justifies, and we may say, requires this. The common phraseology of the Scripture is "the worship of the beast and his image." The image, I take it, denotes the confederacy, and the worship of the image will be Spiritualism, about as we now have it, while "the worship of the beast" will be the Catholic service, more or less modified by Spiritualism. Thus the two parties under the confederacy will answer very nearly to the Catholics and Protestants as they now stand, with views somewhat modified and differences reconciled by Spiritualism. Since all endorse Spiritualism and support the confederacy, they will mutually respect each other's choice of the two modes of worship. This arrangement will conciliate the two parties in society—the liberals and conservatives—and will offer to each his preference of the two forms under the confederacy, while he respects and defends the other, for those who prefer it. Such a plan will be found a source of strength to the union, and will tend to harmonize elements otherwise discordant.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Behold a king shall reign in righteousness."—Isa. 32: 1.

This prophecy has not yet been fulfilled. It is still future. Jesus has not taken his throne, nor established his kingdom. When he came the first time, it was not to reign, but to suffer and die. He offered himself as a spotless lamb on Calvary's cross. He was laid in Joseph's tomb, but came forth a victorious conqueror over death, and ascended on high. Over eighteen hundred years have rolled away, and still he has not established his kingdom. He is yet in heaven. By faith, I see him yonder before the thone, lifting up with ceaseless love his intercession in my behalf. How beautiful he is. That brow, once crowned with the piercing thorns is now crowned with glory and honor. Those hands, once torn with the rugged nails are now waving the palm of triumph. Those fair features, once marred and disfigured, are now clothed with celestial brightness. Those feet, once treading the path of sorrow, are now pressing the golden streets. That Son, once a homeless wanderer, is now safe and happy in his Father's house. How blessed it is to think of Jesus in that home of light, where angels bow in reverence to him, but he is not yet king. He is our High Priest. "We have not," says Paul, "an High Priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." What a privilege is this. Weak, helpless, unworthy, discouraged and sorrowful, we can come to the throne of grace, and find grace to help in every time of need.

But Jesus will not always remain in heaven. He is coming again. Thus he said:—"If I go away, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." Blessed hope. He is coming to renew the earth, to cleanse it of all its filthiness, to fill it with his glory, to gather his saints, and to set up his everlasting kingdom under the whole heaven. Jesus will then be king. The Lord God will then "give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." The earth will be his territory, the saints of every age and clime, his subjects, the new Jerusalem his city and the place of his throne, and the law of that kingdom will be love. All will be righteous. He is the Lord, the righteous Judge. He will reign in righteousness. His subjects will be righteous, for it is only the "righteous" that shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Numerous are the Scriptures which speak of the glory of that kingdom. Who can describe its blessedness or delineate its grandeur? There will be no more curse, no death, no pain, no sorrow, no grief, no tears, no fraud, no deceit, no injustice, no hatred, no storms, no gloom, no disappointments, no disturbance, and nothing to hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain. But there will be joy, and light, and peace, and love, and unity, and justice, and righteousness, and purity, and honor, and glory, and salvation, and immortality, and eternal life, and harps, and crowns, and robes, and songs, and shouts, and raptures, and flowers, and fruits, and trees, and rivers, and groves, and hills, and vales, and evergreen fields, and the glory of God filling the earth as the waves do the sea. "Thy kingdom come."

PUT TO SILENCE.

WM. HOBBS.

Who were put to silence? The Sadducees. When? Eighteen hundred years ago. How were they put to silence? By an argument founded on what God said to Moses. Who was the author of the argument? The meek and lowly Nazarene. Why did it require argument to silence their objections to the teachings of Christ? Because they did not believe in Christ, nor in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. What was the nature of his argument by which they were silenced? There are different opinions regarding it. Stated as we find it in Luke 20: 37–38, it reads as follows:—"Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him."

The proposition to be proved against the Sadducees was "That the dead are raised;" not the dead are not dead. If this had been the proposition, the Sadducees could have replied, that in that case he would be God of the dead, contrary to what Christ affirmed. Such an argument as that could not have put them to silence. The proof of this proposition, includes Abraham, Isaac and Jacob among the dead, who are to be raised; hence, when he said, "God is not the God of the dead," it is affirmation concerning them in their dead condition. If this were not so, the Sadducees could have objected that his declaration was a self-contradiction. For no fallacious argument could have silenced them; it required better logic than that to do it. It required to be founded on promises which they could not object to; or some facts which they recognized as facts.

But, says one interpreter,—God is not the God of the dead, as you Sadducees make him to be. The objection to this interpretation is that it is a silly addition to the words of him, who spake as never man spake. The Sadducees could have refused to accept such a declaration, as contrary to their own judgment, and resting on his own ipse dixit, and so no proof to them. Besides, they could have retorted, that if the dead were not dead, it would be idle to argue in favor of the resurrection of the dead. They were not unreasoning men to be put to silence by a self-evident fallacy. If they were put to silence, some truth was affirmed, which they recognized, and which demonstrated the question in dispute, and which formed the turning point of the argument. What that was is indicated in the reason assigned—"For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him."

What was there in this reason which the Sadducees agreed with? Was it that all the dead were both dead and alive, at one and the same time? We have no evidence that they held to any such strange contradiction as that. Rather, they held that the dead were utterly dead, beyond the hope of any life, even by a resurrection. What followed from this view of a total cessation of life in death? Why this,—that God could not be the God of the dead, because they could not, being dead, take any cognizance of Deity, you might as well have talked to them about God being the God of nonentities. They could have said, God is not the God of the dead, because the dead are unconscious. And he could only silence them by an affirmation of that sort; for anything short of that would fail to have proved a resurrection of the dead. And the fact that Christ made an affirmation in agreement with their view of death, proves that in this they were correct; for Christ could not indorse a false view to convince any one; for he was a truist, instead of a sophist.

But how did this argument prove that there would be a resurrection of the dead? On this principle—Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were dead, when God said this to Moses, and since it could not relate to their dead condition, as this would make him a God of the dead; it was spoken with reference to their future revival, and thus the resurrection was proved on the Sadducees own premises. But the premises must be valid, else the conclusion would have been invalid, and so unworthy of endorsement by him who is the way, the truth, and the life. If, therefore, we accept his teaching, we must accept his statement,—"God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." Then it will follow that the dead are unconscious; for if they were conscious, God would be their God. Instead, then, of believing that all the dead are alive, we should believe that all will be made alive.

"FULFILL HER WEEK."

ELDER GRANT:—Under this head, in the Crisis of May 15th, you have copied a criticism from the Advent Herald, by R. H., on a statement which I made in the Crisis. I sent a reply to R. H., which was published in the Herald of April 17th. As you have published the criticism of Bro. Hutchinson, I wish you to publish my reply as you find it in the Herald.

J. S. WHITE.

"FULFILL HER WEEK."—GEN. 29: 27.

Under this head in the Herald of March 20th, R. H. has taken exceptions to a statement of mine in the Crisis—"The first time the 'week' is used in the Bible it represents seven years." He says: "This is evidently a mistaken view of the passage. The meaning is that Jacob was to fulfil Leah's week of marriage festivity, at or near the close of which he was to receive Rachel in marriage and subsequently serve seven years for her."

Bro. H. has referred to Bagster and Dr. Kitto, who take this view. Whether there are as many eminent authors who take the opposite view as endorse the above I am not able to say. I refer to Mr. Wintle in his work on the prophecy of Daniel. He says: "That the word week is also understood for a period of seven years, may be learnt from Gen. 29: 27, where 'to fulfil her week' is explained by performing another seven years' service for Rachel."

Bro. H. says: "It was customary on such occasions to have a feast which continued a week." That it was customary in that age of the world, I very much doubt. He has referred us to the marriage of Sampson (Judges 14: 10–17), at which time the feast lasted seven days. Sampson's marriage was about six hundred years after Jacob's, and about four hundred after the feast of seven days was instituted by Moses.

There are three places in the Bible where a feast is noticed, before the time of Jacob (Gen. 19: 3; 21: 8; 26: 30). In these places it is evident, not only, that the feast was for one day, but that it consisted of one meal. So I think it was in the case of Laban. When Jacob had served seven years for Rachel, Laban made a feast, and in the evening he brought Leah to him. From the account, it is evident that at evening the feast was over, it being of one day, or one sitting. In the morning Jacob found that he had been deceived and began to talk to Laban about Rachel. "Laban said, Fulfill her week, and we will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet other seven years."

"Her" in this connection refers to Rachel. Jacob had already fulfilled Leah's week, or one which he supposed was for Rachel. Jacob wants Rachel, and Laban says, You may have her too, if you will fulfill her week—that is, serve me other seven years. Bro. H. seems to write as if he supposed that I or some one else thought Jacob did not receive Rachel to wife until he had served "her week," or "other seven years." The record is too plain for any one to suppose any such thing. But suppose we had, it would have nothing to do with the point in dispute. If it were the practice to have a feast of seven days when one was married, as Leah and Rachel were married about the same time, Laban must have had a feast for each of them of seven days, or else he departed from the custom. In the absence of any proof that such was the custom in Laban's time, and in the absence of any evidence from the record of Jacob's marriage that the feast was more than one day; and in the absence of any grammatical evidence that the word "her" in v. 27 refers to Leah, I do fully endorse Mr. Wintle's statement,—"To fulfill her week is explained by performing another seven year's service for Rachel." I have no desire to have it thus on account of any view I have of a week of years. I am willing it should be either way. I only add that if I am so dull of understanding this record of Jacob as to be altogether in a mistake, I have a little consolation in knowing that I am in honorable company—though Bro. H. might say the same.

BACKSLIDING, OR LOSING OUR FIRST LOVE.

Alas, how frequent! "I've lost it," says one. Lost what? "My first love, the sweets of heavenly grace, the ecstatic joys of the newly born soul!" What a fearful loss! What could be greater, save the loss of life itself? What necessity for departing from the fountain of living waters, and hewing to ourselves broken cisterns that hold no water? "My grace," saith the Lord, "is sufficient for thee."

The Lord is faithful to those who serve him with a perfect heart, delight in the law of the Lord, after the inner man, do justice, love mercy, walk humbly, keep a conscience void of offence toward God and man.

"God is light and in him is no darkness at all. "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 7. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staid on thee; because he trusteth in thee." Isa. 26: 3. "They go from strength to strength." Young disciples, instead of passing through a night of gloom or despondency, should increase more and more daily in redeeming, sanctifying grace, rise higher and higher, in the love of God, mount up as on eagles' wings, "run and not be weary, walk and not faint," go on their way rejoicing evermore, rising higher and shining brighter and brighter, even unto the perfect day. Temptations arise and will arise; but temptation, when resisted, is not sin. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation." "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations." "Rejoice ever more; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."

"Be hopeful; cheerful faith will bring
A living joy to thee,
And make thy life a hymn of praise,
From doubt and murmurs free;
Whilst, like the sunbeam, thou wilt bless,
And bring to others happiness."

What loss can be compared to the loss of the first love, the loss of life excepted? But how did you lose this early love, this holy zest, the outflowing hungerings after righteousness, the tongue of fire, the well of water spinging up into everlasting life—how did you lose this gift unspeakable? By reading novels, tampering with sugar-coated poisons, literary serpents that sting like adders? Was it by conforming to the world in personal adornments, fashions and follies? in attending pleasure parties, the gay dance, or the opera house; the fancy fair?

"No man can serve two masters." "The friendship of the world is enmity with God." Jas. 4: 4.

Or did you lose this first love by a man-fearing spirit, by listening to the popular voice, by not opening your mouth wide for Jesus everywhere, by withholding any part of God's message? Multitudes, both of ministers and people, are groping in midnight darkness by receiving honor from men and not that which cometh from God only. Is this the rock on which you split, beloved reader? or was this terrible, unspeakable loss of your first love brought about by neglecting closet duties, secret prayer, meditation, self-examination, the Book of books? There is no hope of retaining the love of a newly born soul save by the word, and the testimony, the law of life, eternal life.

Very many grieve the Holy Spirit by intemperance, the gratification of a vicious appetite. A ministerial brother rose recently, in a large assembly, and testified that God had sanctified his soul, to the great joy of the friends of truth. Only a few weeks after, this same brother was seen puffing the cigar on the camp-ground at Sing Sing, in the presence of thousands. But his lips were closed; while others around him were testifying to a full salvation, he was dumb. He had returned to the gratification of his sensual appetite, like "the dog to his vomit." Tobacco and the Holy Spirit are opposites. What agreement hath the temple of God with idols." "What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Sdirit which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." 1 Cor. 6: 19.

How many tobacco chewers and smokers have lost the blessing, the witness of the Spirit, by yielding to this "accursed lust!" How very many also, are deterred from entering into this blessed gospel fulness, by holding on to this vile narcotic. Cases of this kind come before us almost daily.

"Yes, I've lost it," said a sister. Once I enjoyed God's smiles. The sun shone brightly, the heavens beamed glory! My pathway was strewed with flowers—I mounted on eagles' wings. Once I could say, 'My soul doth magnify the Lord,' I enjoyed the fullness of gospel salvation, 'holiness to the Lord, was written upon the walls—on the frontlets. But I've lost it! The heavens are brass over me, the earth under me iron—O I've lost it, I've lost it!' How is this, sister? 'In an unguarded hour, over-persuaded by friends (ah false friends), I gave my hands in wedlock's holy bands to an ungodly man. From that hour the Holy Spirit was grieved. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." I knew my duty and did it not. Sixteen years of darkness have rolled their annual rounds and darkness, midnight still prevails. One wrong step, even one, did the fatal deed."

You, dear reader, may have lost your first love by not following on to know the Lord, by not forgetting the things behind and reaching forth to the things before, pressing towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus; by not receiving Christ as a full Savior, able to save to the uttermost; a Savior from all sin? Is this so? How then could you expect to retain your first love while living in open neglect of plain and positive duty? God says to you, "it is his will, even your sanctification." "Be holy, for I am holy." "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

There is no safety short of this entire consecratedness, unreserved. Time, talents, gold, silver, houses, lands, etiquette, love of reputation, friends, husbands, wives, children, fathers, mothers,—all—even life itself, must be laid upon the altar, Christ Jesus. By neglecting to obey God in thus coming out from the world, the harps of millions are on the willows; millions on millions are in a miserable, wretched, backslidden state. If we expect to retain our justification, we must obey God, "abstain from all appearance of evil," take Jesus as a Savior from all sin, live momentarily by faith on the Son of God. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Matt. 24: 24.

"Take up thy cross, the Savior said,
If thou would'st my disciple be;
Deny thyself, the world forsake,
And humbly follow after me.

Take up thy cross, let not its weight
Fill thy weak spirit with alarm;
His strength shall bear thy spirit up,
And brace thy heart, and nerve thine arm.

Take up thy cross then in his strength,
And calmly every danger brave,
'Twill guide thee to a better home,
And lead to victory o'er the grave."

"BEHOLD THE BRIDEGROOM COMETH."

B. KNEPPER.

Here the second advent of Christ is proclaimed, which is to be at midnight, the close of one day and beginning of another; hence, at the close of the day of grace, or probation, and the beginning of the day of reward. Now the virgins, who had a time of preparation, the foolish, as well as the wise, but fell asleep in death long before the Bridegroom came, will all arise from the sleep of death, and have their lamp of life trimmed in the resurrection. Paul says there is a resurrection "both of the just and unjust." But now in regard to the lamps of life going out, or continuing to burn, it depends on what was done by the virgins before they slept, took oil, the oil of faith, which secures eternal life, and this keeps the lamp of life now burning, after they rise from the sleep of death in the resurrection. The foolish took no oil before they slept; and now, though raised from death, yet their lamps are going out, for,—"The lamp of the wicked shall be put out." Pro. 13: 9. By faith, eternal life is received, but unbelief is "a sin unto death." 1 John 5: 16. But who is to raise the cry: Behold the Bridegroom cometh? Paul makes that plain, when he says:—"We which are alive and remain unto the coming of our Lord," for, "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed."

One question might be asked here. Does the parable teach that the cry: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," is to be made when some of the waiting ones think that the Bridegroom is soon coming, or will it not be made until He is actually seen coming? Might not some now crying: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," after all be among the sleeping ones in death, when the Bridegroom actually does come?

ROBBERY.

RUTH M. ROWELL.

"Will a man rob God?"—MAL. 3: 8.

"Ye have said it is vain to serve God, and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinances, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts?"—MAL. 3: 14.

STATE OF SOCIETY WHEN SPOKEN. A general declension of religious feeling pervaded the community. Men had grown cold and indifferent, as it regarded their love and adoration of the Supreme Being; cold and indifferent in regard to the training and educating of their children in their religious feelings, obligations, and associations; cold and indifferent as to inspiring and helping their partner for life and mother of their children to "a closer walk with God," holier conversation, and more earnest and extended efforts for the spiritual welfare of their sons and daughters; cold and indifferent as to family worship, cold and indifferent as to saying to their neighbors and friends, Come, let us go up to the house of the Lord, and let him teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths; cold and indifferent as to attending the place of worship, or observing the ordinances of God, or speaking one to another of those that feared the Lord, and encouraging one the other to endure hardness as good soldiers. As "iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."

Men rob God. It is a great sin to rob men; but it is a much greater one to rob God. Yet men did become so depraved as to rob God; so abandoned as to neglect his ordinances. Do any of the readers of this paper rob God? Are there any of them who neglect his ordinance? I do not inquire if any of you are scoffers, or despisers, or unbelievers in Christ's holy religion. The all important question I would ask you is, do you neglect God's ordinances? By this very negligence you rob God, and, as a consequence, you rob your own souls here, and debar yourselves of eternal life hereafter. In the words of Paul, "how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"

At the time these words were spoken by Malachi, men robbed God, and queried as to what profit might accrue to them from keeping his ordinances, and walking mournfully, or reverentially, before the Lord of hosts; and while thus querying immersed themselves in earthly, and sensual things.

"VAIN TO SERVE GOD." "What profit is it that we have kept his ordinances?" This great question of profit and loss might almost be said to be the one great question with American people. It is no doubt a fact, that they put too high an estimate on profit, for they sometimes sacrifice their honor at its shrine. Wealth is altogether too much a governing element in these United States. In England, and other ancient governments of Europe, where wealth is often hereditary from father to son, it usually carries with it a measure of refinement and polish, as well as cultivation of intellect. Sons and daughters of lords and other high dignitaries usually receive great care in their education, both of mind and manners. Hence, in a measure, wealth and refinement go together, and become the aristocracy. But in this country wealth too often makes the aristocracy. It is a tryant that permeates our society, and effects it socially and politically, as well as morally. To mingle in good society the question too often is not are they good, but are they rich? How often do we see refined, educated, and virtuous men and women debarred from what is termed good society because of indigence, while men and women of little or no education, and perhaps deficient in morals, moving in what they call the higher circles with eclat. These things ought not so to be. A man should be loved and respected for what he really is, and not for the fineness of texture of the coat upon his back, or the number of bank checks in his pocket.

"The gold is but the guinea stamp,
The man is a man for a that."

This low-minded aristocracy sometimes creeps into the church. Oh if there is one place where all mankind should meet without distinction of caste or color, poverty or riches, or any outside influence, it is when they come to the house of worship to appear before our God, who has no "respect of persons"; but who, nevertheless, will show in the great day of assize an all-important respect for characters. The apostle James speaks of the wrong influence of wealth, too often found in the church: "My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons. For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel; and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment; and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool; are ye not then partial in yourselves and are become judges of evil thoughts? Hearken, my beloved brethren; hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him? But ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment seat? Do they not blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called? If ye fulfill the royal law, according to the Scriptures, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well; but if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin." James 2: 1–9. God has no respect for persons.

"One flaunts in rags, one flutters in brocade."

God has no respect to the rags, or the brocade; it is the man he weighs, judges, and estimates, reaching even to the thoughts and intents of the heart.

But this deference paid to wealth has caused much cruelty, bitterness and crime in our loved America; not only among the world's people, but in the professed church of God. Christ dwelt upon this question once, when discoursing concerning that man which he styled "Thou fool" (Luke 12: 20), that rich man, whose grounds "brought forth plentifully," and who had "much goods laid up for many years," and said to his soul, "Soul, thou hast much goods, ... take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry"; and who was about to proceed to pull down his barns and build greater, that he might have where to bestow his goods, but "was not rich toward God"; and when his soul was required of him that night, could carry none of these things with him, nor yet barter any of them for a ransom for his soul.

I would like for you all to work out a very important problem: "What shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul," or life?

The prophet Malachi, after speaking of this robbery of God, by those whose highest wish should be to serve him, and the strange query they put as to the profit of keeping his ordinances, and their calling the proud happy, passes on to speak of another class, who feared the Lord, and observed his ordinances, and then points with the finger of inspiration down the stream of time to that awfully sublime and momentous epoch of time, when Christ shall come in all his grandeur and glory, and summon before his august bar all of the great family of humanity, to receive the verdict of their future destiny, from which there is no appeal; when he in whose hands shall be vested life and death shall distribute untold honors, crowns and glory, shall spare those who have not robbed God, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him, and in the presence of the unnumbered angels of light and glory shall confess them in the august presence of his holy Father. "Then," says the prophet, "shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not."

DISCUSSION IN THE CARS.

We arrived in Ogden Wednesday morning, April 24th, in due time, and changed cars for Omaha. After we were fairly under way, a large, intelligent, sharp-eyed gentleman, by the name of John Stinson, who sells knife-sharpeners, commenced talking very loudly against the Bible, the God of the Bible, and all things that a christian holds sacred, claiming that he believed in the God of Nature. We had just begun to eat our hygienic breakfast, when he began to talk. When done with our meal, we said to him, we would have a talk about the matters of which he had been speaking. He appeared to be quite joyful at the prospect. With a view to get light in relation to his God of nature, we began by asking him the following questions: "Can there be intelligence without senses?" After considerable talk, Mr. Stinson finally admitted that where there was no senses, there could be no intelligence. We next inquired if there could be any senses without a personal organism? He seemed very fearful that he should admit something that would upset what he had said; but after much effort to evade an answer to the question, he assented to the fact that senses could not exist without a personal organism. We then inquired if there could be any life or consciousness without a personal organism? He tried all ways to avoid an answer to this question, and to introduce other points, but at last admitted there could not be life and consciousness without a personal organism.

Having settled these points, we asked him to tell us what he meant by the God of nature, which he professed to worship, while he spoke so bitterly against the God of the Bible? He replied that all heavenly bodies, including the earth and all connected with it, together with all space; in short, the whole universe, constituted the God of nature, thus asserting that every thing, is a part of his God. We then inquired if the planets, sun and moon, fixed stars, the earth, etc., which he claimed were parts of his God, had any senses? Mr. Stinson became very nervous and excited, talked exceedingly loud and earnest, as though he would swallow us up by his torrent of sharp words. By this time the passengers became quite dissatisfied with his course, and requested that he should give us a chance to finish a sentence without interruption; but he would listen to no advice from any one. When we got an opportunity we said to him that his God of nature did not know anything, according to his own admissions. This statement aroused him tremendously. We pressed the point that inasmuch as his God had no senses, he could not be intelligent, therefore could hold no communication with the human family, or any other intelligent beings. Mr. Stinson then requested us to give our views of the God of the Bible, whom we believe to be also the true God of nature. We stated in brief that according to the Bible, he is a personal being, who is in heaven, in company with our Savior and the holy angels; and that he made man in his own image. By this time our opponent became so boisterous, and so determined to brow-beat us down, and worry us so that we should give up to him, that the passengers proposed a chairman and an equal division of time. We were very glad to adopt this plan for fair play.

As we had made one reference to the Bible, to show that man was made "in the image of God," Mr. Stinson insisted that we should prove the Bible to be true before we went any further; accordingly, we agreed to take up that subject; the chairman was appointed, and we opened the discussion, by taking up the prophetic Scriptures relating to the first advent of our Savior, showing that they were all literally fulfilled. We then called attention to the prophecies relating to the Jews, as recorded in the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy, also to 1 Tim. 4: 1–2, which so clearly refers to Spiritualism. When he came to reply, it was evident he was not prepared to meet the issue on prophecy, and tried to draw us away from the further investigation of that subject. Great interest was manifested in the debate by the passengers. We continued our talk, including the debate for over two hours, and adjourned till the next day.

In the meantime, we learned that Mr. Stinson had been a preacher, and that he was sent to England by the American government, in the time of the war, to make speeches, and debate political questions for the purpose of quieting the spirit of hostility that was being awakened on account of a misunderstanding of the true condition of things in this country. It is said he received considerable respect from the English people. He is a man of uncommon energy of character, and of unyielding perseverance in pressing his case to a successful conclusion.

Thursday morning, after breakfast, the passengers were anxious to hear a further discussion of the subject, but as we were about to appoint a chairman for the debate, it was ascertained that Gov. Campbell and wife were present, and that any extra noise or excitement would be disagreeable to Mrs. C., who was suffering from headache, we concluded to defer the continuance of the discussion. Mr. Stinson came and sat down by our side, saying, "I wish to talk with you privately." We found he desired to know our views more fully. After telling him what we believed in relation to the nature of man, he looked up with amazement, and said, "I never heard a man talk like you before." We think he saw new light, and have hope that he will turn to the Lord. Another spirit seemed to take possession of him. He appeared like a lion tamed. We felt assured we had found the door into his heart. Just at this most interesting part of our interview, we arrived at Cheyenne, where we had to part. We both regretted it, as did also the passengers, who had become very much interested in the subject on which we were conversing. Evidently they were seeing the doctrine of the Bible in a new and clearer light than ever before. When we parted with Mr. S. we urged him to become a christian, and we are praying that his steps may be turned into the narrow way that leads to eternal life.

After his departure, when we came to talk with other passengers, we found a very happy result had been produced by the discussion, and subsequent conversation. A gentleman from Omaha, who had not made a profession of religion, was earnestly inquiring after the way of life, and was anxious to have us visit Omaha and hold meetings; assuring us he would do what he could to secure a large audience. Two christian men also became very much interested in the truths presented. We gave them tracts on the "Soul," "What is Man?" and "Spiritualism Unveiled," which were just what they desired. We trust much good fruit will spring from this seed sown.

Bishop Ward, the Methodist Bishop of the colored churches in California, was with us, on his way to their General Conference, in Nashville, Tenn. We formed a pleasant acquaintance with him. He is a large man, with a very heavy voice. He sent for us to preach for one of his churches in San Francisco, which we did, and was urged to come again. We learn their conference numbers over two hundred ministers, and six other bishops, besides Bishop Ward. It will continue in session some four months.

RUTLAND.—We spent Sabbath, May 19th, with the church in Rutland, Vt., and had a refreshing season from the Lord. We found a healthy state of feeling. Bro. A. Hoyt, of Cabot, Vt., has been preaching there of late, and has accepted a call to become their pastor, beginning May 26th. His labors have been blest, and the prospect is encouraging. Most of the young women who were converted there two years ago have been remarkably faithful. They have kept out of the spirit of the world, and instead of going to fairs, festivals, and other scenes of amusement, they may be found actively engaged in the prayer-meetings. They find a comfort in Christ not found in the pleasures of the world. He is to them a satisfying portion. There are some true christians in the Rutland church, whose example exerts a holy influence upon the young disciples. We found the truth was spreading in other churches. They begin to see that much that is taught in the creeds is only human tradition and fables, unsustained by the Holy Scriptures.

We spent one evening with the church in Castleton, and found it in a prosperous condition. Bro. Mathewson's faithful labors have been much blest to those who have had the privilege of listening to his presentation of sound doctrine, and the pointed, practical precepts of the Bible. The people are very much attached to him. We always have a pleasant visit at Bro. and Sister Mathewson's. They are drinking at the heavenly fountain, and longingly waiting for the coming of Jesus.

NATICK.—We spent last Sabbath (May 26th) in Natick, Mass., and had a good day in Christ. We found some faithful souls, who were ready to work in the vineyard of the Lord. At noon three were buried with Christ in baptism, and were blest. Others are persuaded to improve the next opportunity for baptism. In the evening several requested prayers that they might be ready to meet Jesus at his coming.

PEACE CONGRESS.

A new peace movement is now on foot, called "An International Peace Congress." The time and place are not yet named, but the event is talked of with much interest, giving good evidence that such a congress will be held. Men on both continents are agitating the subject. It is thought that such a congress could form a platform that would make "an end of wars," and adopt "a plan that would render wars impossible." Those who write thus will find that they have taken a very wrong view of human nature. Never, probably, has there been a period in the history of this world when the hope of universal peace was less probable than now. Men were never more uneasy and weary of all restraint than at the present time. It looks as absurd to talk of a plan to "render wars impossible," as of converting the world by the influence of a cold, backslidden church. The opposite is declared by the holy prophets, who wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. Instead of looking for universal peace, we may expect universal war—"the battle of that great day of God Almighty." We see preparations for fighting that are ominous of dark scenes. The war clouds are forming rapidly. Men may cry "Peace, peace, but, there is no peace." It is true we read on the prophetic page, "When they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them"; but we find no intimation in the Bible that the closing days of this dispensation are to be characterized by a reign of peace among the nations. On the contrary, just before the harvest of the world, "the mighty men" and "all the men of war" are waked up for a terrible conflict.

The passions of the human breast are being aroused to a high pitch. We see a little of the working of this spirit in the "strikes" which are becoming so general on both continents. We think those who now cry "Peace and safety" cannot be familiar with the prophetic scriptures, and must give a very strange interpretation to "the signs of the times." The logic of events may open the eyes of some who have been looking in vain for universal peace, and the conversion of the world. In the language of the prophet, who was describing the state of things just before the end, we are warranted in saying, "The harvest is ripe, ... the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near."

QUOTE CORRECTLY.—After spending an extra hour in hunting up misquoted passages of Scripture in an article, we often come to the conclusion, that if those who quote scripture from memory knew how much extra work they make us by not quoting accurately, they would not require us to bear this burden, but would turn to the passages themselves, and give them word for word as found in the Bible. And the same should be done when quotations are made from any other book. It does not seem right to misquote passages of Scripture. We would request all our contributors to be specially careful in relation to this matter. Every student of the Scriptures, and every writer, needs a Concordance.

WORLD'S PEACE JUBILEE and International Musical Festival, at Boston.—"The World's Peace Jubilee," announced to commence in Boston, June 17th, and continue till July 4th, is expected to be the most magnificent musical entertainment ever witnessed since the world began. The chorus is to consist of TWENTY THOUSAND VOICES, and the orchestra of two thousand performers. The organ to be used on the occasion is said to be the most powerful ever built. Many of the most noted American and European bands and artists, including Johann Straus and his famous Austrian band, of fifty-six performers, are expected to be present. The following is part of the announcement of the executive committee:

"SEASON TICKETS, transferable, admitting to all the Concerts from June 17th to July 4th, inclusive, fifty dollars each, including reserved seats, now ready; and tickets for single admission to each entertainment, during the first week, five dollars, with reserved seats, will be ready for sale on and after June 1st, and may be had upon application, personally or by letter, to A. P. Peck, Music Hall, Boston. Diagrams of seats in the Coliseum for sale at Music Hall."

"SEARCH AFTER GOD."—In the "Religio-Philosophical Journal," of Chicago, eighty-six articles have been written by the editor, entitled, "A Search after God." In the last issue (May 18th), after saying—"What is true of man must be of God," thus making both one, he goes on to say:—"Admitting, then, that an intelligent God exists, he is not a particle better than his children; not any better than the midnight assassin; not any superior to him who is bloated with whiskey; possesses no more virtue than the convicts in our penitentiary; is no more moral than a Booth or a Brutus."

Spiritualism is beginning to show its true colors. Its devilish nature stands out in bold relief in its sayings, and bitter opposition to whatever a christian holds sacred. "Worse and worse" should be its motto. The whole thing is perdition-bound, and some of its votaries begin to see their danger.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.—In the New York Republican, April 13th, we find an interesting and striking article, headed, "Words of import to all men." While many professed ministers of Christ dare not say a word about the signs of the times, or express a belief that they indicate that we are near the end of the present dispensation, lest they lose their popularity and salary; worldly men, who conduct secular papers, and are not supposed to feel any special interest in religious matters, are astonished at the remarkable signs of the times. The following is a sample of the thoughts that are working in many candid minds, and should be published everywhere:

"WORDS OF IMPORT TO ALL MEN.—'Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward.' These words suggest more than they seem to mean. We are living in a day of movement. Men and men's works move with untiring activity. The stir of enterprise, the bustle of business, the agitation of politics, the march of mind, the commotion of earth and air, and the movement of waters, are all unusual and irregular. We read of violent quakings of the land, and strange convulsions of the sea. We hear of wars and of rumors of wars. We are admonished by signs in the heavens. We are advised of persecutions inflicted on the Jews. We are are warned by many indications throughout the physical world that great changes are progressing in various lands and waters on the face of continents and islands. We can recall the words of Christ to his disciples, as recorded in the thirteenth chapter of Mark: 'For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles; these are the beginnings of sorrows.'

We need not recall to our readers the famines in Persia and India, the wars of Napoleon III. and King William, the earthquakes in various countries, the slaying of Jews in their very synagogues, in Roumania, the rebellion in our own land, the insurrection in France—'these are the beginnings of sorrows.' 'But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. . . Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.'

In the plain and literal meaning of the warnings here quoted, we may discover more than we can find in Targums or Annotations since the days of the apostles. God does not deal in subtleties, like mortal schoolmen. When Jesus spoke those words, he plainly pointed to the present day, and there is not a prophecy in the Scriptures, old or new, that will not be fulfilled within the present century. We repeat what we said above, that there is a suggestion of more value than it seems to carry, in the sentence with which we began this paper. 'Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward.'

We are no panic-mongers. We print political paper, and write for practical people. But there is nothing theoretical in the word of God, and it is no proof of superior wisdom to reject or disdain to investigate such solemn warnings as are contained in the Scriptures concerning the latter days. We proclaim it as our belief that the 'latter days' are now nigh, according to the words of Christ. Need we apologize for printing the faith that we entertain? We do not write for madmen or lunatics. We speak to our fellow-men, whether they be republicans or democrats, when we say 'Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.'"

CORRECTION.—We find, on examination, that our discussion with Eld. I. R. Gates, in Boston, was but seven evenings, instead of ten.

NEW TRACT.
Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged,
OF
"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR," Or, The Commune.
BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

For sale at this office. Price, by mail, single copy, 7 cts.; five copies, 30 cts.; ten copies, 50 cts.; fifty copies, $2.00; one hundred copies, by express, $3.50. AG'T.

FALL OF BABYLON.

Some years since, John Cox, of England, published his views of the prophecies relating to the fall of mystic Babylon, and the setting up of the kingdom of Christ. He says:—

"Great and beneficial changes are generally introduced by great and dreadful commotions. This chiefly arises from the opposition made by the old state-of-things about to be superseded. An eminent writer observes, "In every new development of his plan of mercy and salvation to the human race, it has hitherto pleased God that mercy and judgment should as it were go hand in hand. . . .

The characteristics of Christianity are knowledge, holiness, and love; it is most simple, most beneficial, most beneficent; but the characteristics of popery are ignorance, sin, and cruelty; it is a religion of pomp, of darkness, and of blood. . . .

The professing church was Judaized, and philosophized, before the time of Constantine, but then it became paganized, and shortly after satanized. This mystery of iniquity worked in the apostle's days, and during the second and third centuries every kind of heresy was promulgated, ceremonies and forms were introduced, and spirituality displaced by superstition. The materials for popery were thus prepared, and by the union of the church with the Roman state, its foundation was openly laid, and the building rapidly carried on. An orator at Constantinople, in the reign of Julian, fifty years after the accession of Constantine to the Roman purple, says, 'In the recent changes (he is adverting to Julian the apostate) both religious, pagan, and Christian, have been alternately disgraced by the seeming acquisition of worthless proselytes of those votaries of the reigning purple, who could pass without a reason and without a blush from the church to the temple, and from the altars of Jupiter to the sacred table of the Christians.' . . .

There is one consideration connected with this subject which claims our most serious attention. How wide, how searching will those judgments be by which Babylon shall be destroyed! Where is the church that hath not been contaminated by her poisonous breath, that doth not manifest somewhat of her spirit and conduct? Persecution, pharisaism, heresy, formality, outward show, crying up of the creature, are but too manifest among professors;—in some, one anti-christian feature is exhibited; and in some another—but are any wholly free? Instead, then, of one sect quarrelling with one another—had we not better be found praying, both for ourselves and them, that God would give us all humility to unlearn what is wrong, and honesty to avow it? Surely all classes of religious professors need much purification."

IS BAPTISM A SAVING ORDINANCE?

There are many who would be glad to place baptism in the catalogue of nonessentials, by insisting that it is not a saving ordinance. While it is true, that baptism will not save men independent of any thing else, it is just as really true that baptism has its place in the gospel plan of salvation, faith, or hope; and it is just as true that we are said to be saved by baptism as by grace, or hope, as the following texts prove:—"By grace are ye saved" (Eph. 2: 5); We are saved by hope" (Rom. 8: 24); "Even baptism doth also now save us." 1 Pet. 3: 21. While it is true that we are not saved by baptism alone, it is equally true that we are not saved by grace alone, or by hope alone; but baptism is just as really pronounced a saving appendage as any other feature of the gospel system. It is an act of obedience, which God requires, and we have no more right to stop and query whether it will cleanse us, before obeying, than Naaman had to query whether there was more virtue in the waters of Jordan, than in the waters of the rivers of Samaria, before he would consent to wash seven times in the Jordan. Really there was no more medical property in the water of Jordan, than in the water of Samaria; but the coveted blessing could be found only in this stipulated act of obedience. Neither is there any virtue in the baptismal waters, but obedience to God is thereby exhibited; nor is this form of obedience a meaningless one, but is a striking figure of the resurrection.

This relying on faith alone for salvation is just as much an error as the old Jewish theory of salvation by works alone:—"What shall it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him? . . . Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect? . . . Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only." James 1: 14, 21, 22, 24. The works of the gospel are not to be repudiated. Though works alone cannot save a man, neither can faith alone save him. A faith that is strong enough to obey God, even though called to go through fire, is requisite. A faith that will shut its eyes, and refuse to look around for fear it will see something to do that God has planned, is too feeble to save men. It is not the "faith that works by love." Baptism, being one of the acts of obedience required of believers, is saving in the sense that men cannot be saved by disobedience, but by obeying, as one means. W. S.

TRICKS OF SPIRITUALISTS.

It was my privilege recently to witness a public exposure of the tricks of Spiritualism, such as the playing on instruments of music, while the medium was bound, the showing of spirit-hands, the tying and untying of ropes, etc., after the fashion of the Davenport Bros. All this illustrated the principle on which many tricks are palmed off upon the people for the work of disembodied spirits. And while this system of trickery is thus being exposed, some are ready to conclude that the whole system is trickery.

But this effort to furnish a solution of the mystery, though it can expose trickery, fails to be availing when intelligence is exhibited that the medium is ignorant of, and the questioner likewise. As for instance, a man from England, on a visit to America, inquires after the health of the family left behind, and is told that at such a time, such a member of the family died. The medium and the interrogator were alike ignorant of what turns out to be a fact. This proves the existence of intellect above human trickery. Demons were to make their displays in the "latter times;" and they are now doing their work in disguise. W. S.

PREACHING AWAY HEAVEN AND HELL.—It is sometimes said that we preach heaven and hell away from the people. The charge was recently made against one of our Wisconsin ministers, who had been holding meetings in a new place,—"The first time he came, he preached hell away from us; and the second time he came, he preached heaven away from us." Well, the man that preaches away a hell and heaven of shadows, and substitutes a hell for literal men after the judgment, and a kingdom of resurrected saints, is doing a noble work. It is making war on tradition, to the honor of revealed truth.

A hell for shades, whether located underground, or above ground, is not taught in the Bible. It is simply a world of imagination, having no more real existence than the purgatory of Catholicism. Nor has the heaven of modern theology—a heaven for immaterial men—any foundation in the Bible, but is simply a feature of Paganism, after the fourth revision, under a new name. The Bible teaches a hell for resurrected sinners, and a kingdom for resurrected saints; but never presents a hell or heaven of unjudged ghosts. W. S.

VALLEJO, CAL., May 12th.—Five were baptized, and eight received into the church. Among the number was one of the editors of the city, who has charge of two local papers printed in the city. The Lord is still signally blessing the church in Vallejo.

O. R. FASSETT.

FROM BRO. BOWMAN TO BRO. MUNGER.

DEAR BRO. MUNGER:—The brethren and friends here are anxious that I should go North this summer, and try to get some funds to assist us in putting up two or three plain houses in which to worship our heavenly Father. We number sixty-nine members, living in different localities; but, like every body else in this country, we have no money. If I could only get money enough to pay for the building material, we can do the most of the work ourselves. The doctrines we preach have permeated this entire section, and I am satisfied, if we only had houses to worship in, that scores, if not hundreds, would unite with us. And inasmuch as we have so short a time to work in, don't you think I could get the brethren and friends at the North to assist us in our destitution and persecution? I might, as you suggested, make a tour among some of the churches, before the National Campmeeting, and then make an effort there, where I could also get some prominent men to recommend me to the business men of Boston and New York, where I might operate privately for a while before returning home. If you think these suggestions plausible, and will make a string of appointments for me, say beginning with the second Sunday in July, at your home, writing me how to get there from New York city, and my heavenly Father sparing me, I will be there at that time.

There seems to be a world-wide expectation at this time that the Son of God is about to visit this outlying province of his dominions the second time, and so I believe. But O, for what a different purpose to that which brought him here before. Every eye shall see him when he comes, and they that pierced him, shall look upon him. O what weeping and lamentation, what shrieks and groans, what universal consternation and woe, among the millions who have neglected his great salvation. May a holy God wake up a dead world and sleeping church to these coming wonders, which are just upon us. May you and I, my dear Bro., be ready to meet the Lord in the air, and there remain until earth's last calamities are over forevermore. Amen. Write me soon. Yours in the blessed hope.

PEYTON G. BOWMAN.

BRO. MUNGER'S RESPONSE.

Bro. Bowman:—I will suggest the following appointments, as the most economical, instead of coming from New York to my place first. The churches, no doubt, will all receive you, and be glad to hear your experience in the South, and will do something towards helping your mission. I think, as you land in New York first, you had better call on Bro. H. A. King, 14 Murray Street, at the Bible Banner office; he will arrange for you one Sabbath; say July 14th.

West Troy, N. Y., Wednesday evening, July 17th. Call on James Douglas, 61 Broad Street.

Saratoga, Thursday. Call on Sr. Durand.

Sandy Hill, N. Y. Call on Eld. Sibley, who will arrange for Friday and Sabbath, July 21st, and till Friday following, July 26th.

Castleton, Vt., Friday. Call on Bro. S. G. Mathewson. He will see to you for one week, in that vicinity, from July 26th to August 2nd.

Rutland, Friday, August 2nd, over the Sabbath, to August 4th.

Keene, N. H., Tuesday evening. Call on Dr. Darling. Perhaps stay two evenings.

South Vernon, Vt., Thursday evening. Call on Moses Merrill and Eld. Cook.

Athol, Mass., Saturday, August 10th, and over the Sabbath. Call on Eld. Hemenway.

Springfield camp-ground, Thursday, August 15th, where you will find me. Other arrangements from there.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. G. Bowman.

BRO. GRANT:—I am truly glad to see that you have returned home in good health. I hope and pray your labors on the Pacific coast may produce an abundant harvest, so that, in the closing scenes of this economy, you may have many bright stars in the crown of your rejoicing, from that far-off country. I hope definite arrangements will be made at the National Campmeeting to send the glad tidings of the soon coming King throughout the entire South. This, in my judgment, is now the most inviting field spread out before us. Wherever they have the opportunity and inclination to examine the doctrine, they almost invariably embrace it. The nature of man, a literal resurrection from the dead, the coming glory and kingdom of Christ, are, I may say, almost obsolete doctrines in the pulpit throughout the entire South. I verily believe Plato is preached every Sunday more than St. Paul, particularly in regard to the nature of man. Immortal-soulism is the order of the day. If the Scriptures say the Lord God alone hath immortality, is it right for me to say that mortal man possesses this divine attribute? Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Wesley, and Mr. Watson, all taught the procreation of man's soul. All the Methodist preachers of my acquaintance subscribe to the same views.

Now, will you, or some one else, tell me how it is possible to reconcile these two views? That man should receive his soul from his paternal parent, through his mother, and yet that soul possess a divine attribute? A very ancient, and very learned preacher, who perhaps preached the most successful sermon ever listened to in this world, took for his text, "Ye shall not surely die; for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." Gen. 3: 4, 5. Here is immortality offered to our first parents by the Father of lies, and instead of seeking and finding it (as thy would have done) by obeying their Maker, they sought it in a shorter way, by embracing the doctrine of the devil; for doing which, they were remanded back to their original elements, where they would have lain to all eternity, without life or being of any kind; but the great Father of love made other arrangements, by providing another Adam, who is the Lord from heaven, and also the seed of the woman. Now, by loving and serving him with all our powers; now, by patient continuance in well doing, if we seek for glory and honor, we shall be crowned with immortality and eternal life at the resurrection of the just. May the Lord help us to "hold fast the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end," that when the Lord shall appear, we may also appear with him in glory. PEYTON G. BOWMAN.

P. S.—I take this opportunity, through the Crisis, to tender my heartfelt thanks to Geo. S. Harwood for his donation of $10 to send the Crisis to ten persons six months gratis. I do hope at the close of six months they will become regular paying subscribers. P. G. B.

Lydia, Darlington Co., S. C., May 16th.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I was called upon to attend the funeral of Bro. J. Osgood's aged mother, out at Boston Highlands, May 11th. After speaking words of comfort to them, deduced from the promise of a resurrection of the dead, when a crown of righteousness will be given to all that sleep in Jesus, I came to the Providence depot, where my wife met me; when we took cars for Westerly, R. I., where I was to spend Sunday the 12th. The day was pleasant, and we had a good season in preaching the good tidings of great joy to those who are ready to deny themselves for Christ, and his coming kingdom. One thing is comforting: while some find fault and scold, others are made glad and rejoice. By this we find relationship. All the dear friends of Jesus love to have him spoken well of and praised, and his coming will interest and delight them. I enjoyed our meeting. Sunday and Monday we made new and happy acquaintance with the lovers of our coming One. The meetings were cheering. They were ready to respond heartily, and exhort with earnestness. God bless them.

From Westerly, R. I., I took cars for Philadelphia, and came through a delightful country, specially as the fruit trees were all in full bloom. The scenery was splendid. Stonington, New London, and New Haven, Conn., where we stopped two days, and were pleased to see old friends. They need some help in the region to keep alive, and get new recruits by proclaiming the gospel and soon coming of Jesus to consummate "the blessed hope." The beautiful scenery of blooming trees, indicating fruit in the harvest, led me to look forward and anticipate the day when Eden will be restored, and paradise will be in full bloom. The saints will all be there, and eat of the fruit of all the trees of the garden. No prohibition. Eat, O beloved. Nothing will hurt you. None will be sick here. Nurses that have rendered faithful service in taking care and watching over their wasting, suffering, dying companions, will here be out of employment of this kind. Here is the exaltation of the righteous. Here are Christ's. Here are all of the seed of Abraham. This is "the better country." It is the "heavenly." And we will be there in a little while. Glory, honor, immortality, and long life, will be found here. O, who would not like to emigrate? Come, ye lovers of life, land, fruit, flowers, and everything else desirable, secure the admission fee, with a through ticket, and go through the gates. Enter with us the golden streets, and find your way to the field of glory.

From New Haven we passed through New York and New Jersey, and found ourselves in the Quaker City. Here I am assuming a little oversight over the flock of God, under the pastoral care of Bro. F. H. Burbank, while he may visit other flocks, and feed them by the aid of the Holy Spirit. Have preached one Sunday. Had a refreshing season, and a good congregation, which seemed to feast on the simple word of life, and the doctrine of the soon coming of the Savior. I have also preached in Camden, N. J., and I find the seed of Abraham scattered here. They love the wholesome words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and seem ready for every good word and work. I am having good times. O Lord, revive thy work, and make thy people one who are looking for thee. In hope,

Philadelphia, May 23d. L. BOUTELL.

From Sr. M. A. Tibbets.

BRO. GRANT:—Several years have passed since my humble name appeared in your excellent columns, and yet while my feeble pen has been silent here, I trust it has been profitably employed in other departments of labor, connected with the Master's vineyard dear to us all. For months past, I have been greatly interested in your travels, and abundant labors, broadcast over the land, and have been made to rejoice that you will at the reckoning time come home with many sheaves, the happy fruit and glorious result of all your toils, and willing service in the cause of Christ.

It will perhaps afford you pleasure to read, as it does me to write, some of the blessings bestowed upon my mental vision in regard to the great and blessed truths of the Bible, which render us a distinct people from other professed christians, who have not as yet come into this "liberty of the Sons of God." In the first touch of the divine impress in its light upon the sacred page, the personal coming of the Lord was made known in contradistinction to the spiritual reign in which I had been taught, and which now so greatly prevails in the so-called "Orthodox" teachings of the present day. But as years passed away, the light more clearly dawned, and another touch of the divine hand made me "see all things clearly." Then, O how I rejoiced, as one suddenly awakening out of sleep, to behold the bright sunshine resting upon all the works of the great Creator. I now saw Jesus as the Life-giver, instead of Adam; the grave a resting place for the dead, instead of some ethereal or sky-heaven, brought forth by the doctrines of men; the judgment, a reality to take place upon the "day appointed" (Acts 19: 31); that then the righteous and the wicked would receive their reward, "every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22: 12); that the righteous, those who "come forth to the resurrection of life," will inherit the new earth, brought back to more than its Eden beauty, when the curse will be removed and the tabernacle of God will be with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people; that the wicked, who come forth to the resurrection of condemnation, will "be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power"; that then one universal song of praise to God and the Lamb will break forth from all the redeemed forever and ever Rev. 5: 13.

I can scarcely tell you in words my abounding joy, as I now read the Bible as a book of literal, as well as spiritual facts, which I may believe and understand for myself, untrammeled by the traditions and opinions which once held me fast in their unintelligible mysteries. I now believe the truth, and the truth has made me free. John 8: 32. A few of us, of "like precious faith," have been constituted into an Advent Christian church, having the Bible as our only creed, of which you have doubtless read at length of our humble doings in the Advent Times, so highly regarded among us for the comfort and instruction it imparts.

I have sent you this brief notice of the happy change in my views, for the sake and with the hope of encouraging others to search the Scriptures, for they do contain the record of eternal life—by whom given, and how obtained. With others here, I am trying to work in the vineyard of the Master, scattering abroad many tracts and papers, that will lead men and women to a greater study of the Bible, to see if these things are so. I am happy in the work, waiting and watching for the coming of my blessed Lord to make up his jewels, hoping to be among them. Yours for the kingdom,

Volga, Ind., May 16th, 1872.

From Bro. Geo. Thomson.

BRO. GRANT:—I am stricken. I am sad. Death has robbed me of my dear companion. O cruel, cruel death. Her illness was very brief; less than six days. She is shut up in death's prison for a little while; but thank God, Jesus has the keys, and I believe that he will soon liberate the captives. O, how I long for his coming. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for me, and my seven little ones. I have been sustained in my affliction by the "blessed hope," and by the kindness and sympathy of dear christian friends. O, the value of christian sympathy! Such kindness, such affection, such heartfelt sympathy, as has been shown to me and mine, I can never forget. God will surely reward my dear brethren and sisters.

[May the Lord richly bless and comfort our dear Bro. Thomson in his deep affliction. —ED.

From Bro. R. H. Scott.

BRO. GRANT:—We are still striving to preach the coming and kingdom of our blessed Master, and by his help stand firm at our posts, pressing the battle for eternal life. The doctrine of the Bible is spreading through our country; bless God's holy name. I buried six precious souls with their dear Lord on last Sabbath, and we expect others soon. Our little church in this place has waked up to duty, and been made to rejoice in the blessed prospects before us, believing the coming of our dear Lord is upon us, and that peace can never be found on the earth until it is brought by the Prince of peace. We oftimes feel weary of this world, but the thought of his soon coming fills our hearts with gladness: We are to exercise patience and forbearance in these times of diversity; but blessed be God, a new order of things is hastening. Floods, fires, earthquakes and tornadoes have scarred the visage of mother earth; and over her wide-spread surface the king of terrors holds his undisputed sway, and will until our blessed King shall come in his beauty, and shall wipe out the serpent's trail; then eternal splendor, light, life, beauty, glory, and blessedness, shall be the inheritance of the blood-bought ones. Pray for us, that we may all be there, and enter the glorious city. Amen.

Scottsville, Ind., May 11th, 1872.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. D. E. Adams writes from Barnard, Vt., May 15th:—"About eight months ago I wrote to the Crisis in regard to the seed that was being sown here in this place, and that I anticipated there would spring up fruits ripe for the harvest; and bless God, I think I did not over-estimate it; for it has already began to take root. Elds. Z. T. Wood and Geo. A. Cole have labored here with us occasionally during the past year. Praise God, I believe they have not labored in vain. Last November, we had the unspeakable joy of seeing three express to the world their faith and love of Jesus, by following him down into the water, and being buried with him in baptism. We organized a church the 27th of Dec., numbering ten; and since then four more have been added to our number. Last Sabbath two more went down into the water, and, like the Eunuch, went on their way rejoicing. We do not expect it will stop here, but are willing to keep trusting and praying that God will add many more, such as shall be saved. We are looking ahead a little from this, to the time when all the redeemed of the Lord will come to Zion, with songs and everlasting praise, shouting victory over death and the grave. My prayer is, Lord Jesus, come, and come quickly."

Bro. C. H. Glidden writes from Effingham, N. H., May 19th:—"The new church in West Parsonsfield, Me., is now about ready for dedicatory services, and will be dedicated to the Lord in June. Bro. Mark Stevens preaches there one half of the time. Although he has had severe trials and afflictions of late, yet the Lord seems to be with him. Last Sabbath, the 12th, was a refreshing season to many. The Spirit of the Lord seemed to rest upon him while dispensing the word of life to the people. After the sermon twelve arose and witnessed to the Spirit of the Lord being in the meeting. Bro. S. has baptized eight since he has been laboring in the place, who are now living witnesses of the truth, while others are waiting for a convenient opportunity to follow their Lord and Master in the likeness of his resurrection; and others are under deep conviction for their sins. They have organized a Sabbath school, to commence next Sabbath. All things are in a prosperous condition."

Our Conference.—We are expecting a large gathering at our annual conference at Springwater Valley, N. Y., June 13th. Let us all come to worship God, and not to visit and feast. We shall not expect but two meals a day. Let the friends in the vicinity of the meeting bring in a basket of provisions, so that if any one wants a lunch at noon, they can get it at the church, and by so doing ease up a little on the friends in the Valley. Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. Let every church be well represented by delegates, and do not forget the quarter collection. D. Cogswell.

Wilson—Cotton. In Portsmouth, N. H., May 20th, 1872, by Eld. E. Owen, Mr. Henry J. Wilson, of Kittery Point, Me., and Miss Susie M. Cotton, of Tuftonborough, N. H.

Obituaries.

Dockham. Died in Worcester, Mass., Cora Lavina, only daughter of Thomas F. and Josephine S. Dockham, aged nine years and eighteen days.

Our hearts are sad and our home is lonely, but we do not sorrow as those that have no hope, for we firmly believe that dear little Cora sleeps in Jesus, and will be remembered in the great gathering day, when the saints of all ages shall awake to life and immortality, and be gathered into the everlasting kingdom of God, where such scenes as this will never be witnessed. Words of comfort were given from the Scriptures of truth by Elder Samuel Ayres, at the Second Advent Chapel.

Charles W. Dockham.

Smith. Died in Portsmouth, N. H., May 12th, 1872, Sr. Elma H. Smith, aged twenty-five years.

Seldom does the arrow of death strike a more thoroughly ripened object than the subject of this notice. Converted and baptized several years since, she maintained her integrity to the very last. She was a consistent, devoted, conscientious follower of Jesus, and fully in sympathy with the sentiment of his soon coming to reign. Her sufferings were very intense, painfully so at the last, when consumption was finishing its fatal work; but grace signally triumphed over bodily pain. A beloved husband and two darling children survive her. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." E. Owen.

Brown. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Barnstead, N. H., Bro. Nathaniel G. Brown, aged forty-five years and nine months.

Our Bro. embraced the great truth of Jesus' soon coming four years ago, and it was his comfort and support through all his trials and sickness, until he was taken away by death, to await the resurrection of the just. Words of comfort were spoken to the afflicted family by the writer, from Job 14: 16.

Little. Died at Sugar Hill, March 25th, Betsy, wife of Bro. Wm. Little, aged thirty-nine years. They sorrow, but not without hope. Text, Ps. 39: 4. N. Wheeler.

Bates. Died in Cambridgeport, Mass., May 19th, 1872, Mary Ann Bates, wife of the late Edward Bates, Sen., aged seventy-four years and four months.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Paris, Tuesday, May 21. In the Assembly to-day, M. Rouher delivered a speech of three hours' duration, in which he warmly defended the army from the charges which had been made against it. He compared the present Republican administration of affairs with that under the empire, and, in a powerful and brilliant effort, essayed the vindication of the latter from the charges and accusations of its enemies. His speech caused great excitement among the deputies. Gambetta being called on to reply, refused to do so.

DOMESTIC.

Strikes.

Tuesday, May 21. The strike epidemic which usually makes its appearance this time of year, has come this season with a vengeance. New York knew nothing from previous experience of the virulence of this disease. The mild forms in which it appeared in isolated cases, gave no idea of the latent fire which has now run along the entire line of labor in this city, and which has transformed twenty thousand industrious men into so many savage champions of a principle which can be attained, perhaps, only over the gaunt body of starvation. The obstinacy that troubles the farmers of England, and which keeps Chicago still sitting in her ashes, is mild, sensible reason when compared with the wild folly of the men who have inaugurated in New-York, the most unprofitable, and disastrous of all warfares. The masons, plumbers, carpenters, cabinet-makers, upholsterers and wood-carvers to the number of ten thousand are roaming the city to-day, striking terror into the hearts of the non-society men whom good sense or necessity induces to continue to work. The bricklayers have swelled the ranks of the disaffected by a reinforcement of 2500.

This last move was the unwisest one of all, for if the bricklayers had continued their work, and kept faith with their employers, with whom they agreed to work until July 1st, they would have made a quantity of work for the carpenters, they would have necessitated the employment of laborers, teamsters, farmers, iron men, etc., and they could all have contributed to the support of the men already in the field. Now the eight-hour phantom seems to have carried away their reason as well as their discretion. The strike of the bricklayers throws fully thirty thousand men out of the means of supporting themselves and their families. It needs no prophetic foresight to see that this thing must be of short duration. Either the employers must concede the demands of the strikers, or the strikers must succumb to the employers, or the threatening bands that patrol the streets must be stopped by the police, and the differences of capital and labor be settled without annoying the public. Mr. Mathews, one of the leaders of the Bricklayers' Union, who has been compelled to join the strike, says that he considers the movement ill-advised; that the strike of his organization cannot fail to be disastrous to the other trades, and he adds that 'if they don't get what they want within a week, there will be a row, "sure." He says: "I believe in getting what we want, and if it's necessary to resort to other than peaceful means, I am in favor of doing it."

The man who makes this declaration of intentions, no doubt speaks for himself, still he is a representative man of the body to which he belongs and one of the most peaceable of them all, and when he does not hesitate to give such a statement to the public press, it is not difficult to see the spirit which actuates this movement, or what it might lead to if not checked. However, notwithstanding Mr. Mathews' opinion to the contrary, there will be no trouble here from this cause at least, except what may arise to the immediate combatants. The peace of New York will be preserved whatever may become of the eight hour system. It is probable that the strikers will be victorious this time; but for the rash act of the bricklayers they would beyond a doubt be successful, for the time was well chosen, they were well organized, and the season was fighting for them more effectually than any thing else. Contracts have to be carried out, and men must be employed for that purpose. Thus if the strikers are victorious, the victory will confessedly be extracted from the urgent necessity of the employers, and the consequent peace can have no lasting moral obligation.—Boston Globe.

THE EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT.

New York, May 24. The committee of workingmen from the New York Post Office were told to-day by the assistant secretary of the treasury, that the men discharged for sympathy with the eight-hour movement would be reinstated, and that the claims of all the men for extra two hours work since the Eight Hour law went into effect should have early consideration.

The Pattern Makers, League held a meeting to-night, which was largely attended, and adopted a resolution that on Monday next they demand that eight hours per day shall constitute a day's work at the standard wages heretofore paid.

The brown-stone polishers have also resolved to strike on Monday. The ship joiners, eight hundred in number, are organizing a strike. The varnishers and polishers, German house painters, show case and desk makers, cabinet makers, wood carvers and upholsterers have all gained eight hours except in a few shops.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

The labor strikes are extending. On Monday afternoon a mass meeting of all the trades engaged in the strike will be held at the City Hall park, New York, and in the evening the Eight-Hour League will hold a meeting. The corporation laborers also hold a meeting in Union square the same night to devise means for securing an increase of wages from $2 to 2.50. The cabinet makers and upholsterers on a strike here received a telegram from Pittsburg, Penn., to-day, announcing a strike there, and they resolved to send on a delegation to encourage their fellow-workmen. The upholsterers also resolved to appoint a delegate to visit Boston in company with the cabinet-makers' commitee, and co-operate with the workmen there in the strike. The employers here have shown more opposition to the cabinet-makers than any other trade, and the strike will undoubtedly be a long one. The wheelwrights and blacksmiths, it is announced, will strike June 1st. The big pipe men will also probably strike soon. They will hold a mass meeting Monday, and demand an advance of wages. Their present pay is two dollars. To-morrow evening the corporation laborers will hold a mass meeting in Union square to demand that the commissioners of parks and public works pay the standard wages ordered by the Common Council. The laborers have formed a union, which now numbers seven thousand men.

The Methodist Conference.—A New York paper says truly that the scene in the Methodist Conference, during the wrangle on Monday, over the Book Concern scandal, would have disgraced a political convention. Ministers of the gospel abused each other like very drabs, yet the presiding bishop let the thing run on, as if it was all right. That is not religion. It is not even the spirit which should animate brethren who expect to dwell together in unity. If the ghost of John Wesley could rise from its grave and witness such scenes, we dare say it would, if it could, move, for very shame's sake, that the conference adjourn sine die, to prevent a recurrence of them.—Boston Daily Globe.

Chicago, May 24. Last evening a terrific tornado passed over several counties on the Mississippi river in the central portions of eastern Iowa and Western Illinois. It appears to have moved in a southeastwardly direction.

Accounts from Des Moines County, Iowa, and Adams County, Illinois, state that every movable thing in its track was swept away. Trees were uprooted, fences scattered, telegraph poles and lines demolished, and many barns and houses unroofed and blown down. So far as heard there was no loss of life. The destruction of property was very great. No details yet.

More News from the Eruption. The Milan (Italy) Courier of April 28th has the following: "The most distinguishing characteristic of the last eruption was noticed during the evening of the 25th. While a number of curiosity seekers were regarding the course of the lava, the earth suddenly opened and engulfed them. Information brought to Minister Lanza places the number of victims as high as two hundred. During the forenoon of the 26th a new crater opened near the Observatory—that is to say, at one of the points heretofore reputed the safest. The population of Naples was overwhelmed with consternation. The people demanded a procession in honor of Saint Janvier. During the last century, under the reign of Ferdinand First, the Neapolitans, fearing the consequences of the Vesuvian eruption, sent the statue of Saint Janvier in the direction of the volcano, and the lava was suddenly arrested in its flow. The Neapolitans begin to fear that the prophecy of Saint Francois de Paule, 'One day it will be said: "Here was Naples," will be fulfilled.'"

Conference.—The fourth quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held, the Lord will, with the church at Sugar Hill, Lisbon, commencing Thursday, June 6th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., to hold over the Sabbath. Bro. Couch and others of God's servants are expected to preach the word. Let there be a general rally from Northern New Hampshire to this meeting, of both preachers and people. An invitation is extended to all. T. W. Piper. J. G. Smith. C. H. Fletcher.

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.—The committee having decided to enlarge the ground and stable, and build a boarding tent, hereby request the brethren interested in this meeting to meet on the camp-ground the second Tuesday in June, to aid in doing this work. To hire the work done will be quite expensive. Come in the name of the Lord, and his blessing will attend your efforts. A few axes, bush-scythes and rakes will be needed, and those who can do carpenter's work will please bring such tools as will be wanted. Should the time appointed be stormy, come the first fair day in the week till Friday; after that the Monday following. Come prepared to stay two days, if necessary. R. R. York, Chairman.

Jesse Gay, Sec., of Campmeeting Committee.

P. S.—Those wishing tent ground, can select lots at this time.

Vermont Tent and Conference.—The next Quarterly Vermont Conference will be held under the canvas in connection with a Tent meeting at Post Mills, Thetford, Vt., commencing Tuesday P. M., June 18th, 1872. June 18th, 19th, and 20th, will be conference days, and the meeting will continue as long as it seems duty. We hope there will be a general effort on the part of preachers and churches to be there. Let every church send delegates, or write a letter to be read at the conference. Let us have one more rich feast in the Lord. I am expecting to be there. Others, I understand, are engaged, whose names will be mentioned hereafter. H. F. C.

New York A. C. Conference.—If the Lord will, this conference will hold its next annual meeting in the new Chapel, in Springwater, about thirty miles south of Rochester, on the Genesee Valley R. R., commencing Thursday evening, June 13th, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Good homes and ample accommodations will be provided for all who come, and all are invited. It is expected that all the churches desiring to further the general interests of the cause will be represented at this annual gathering. Delinquent and new churches are earnestly urged to co-operate with the body, and they are hereby cordially invited to seats (by delegate) in the convention. For their information, it should be stated here that each church belonging to the conference association, is required by the constitution to report either by delegate or by letter, at least at each annual session; and are also requested to send in quarterly such donations as they may be able to collect for the general mission fund. This is an important meeting, and should be remembered in the earnest prayers of the church.

D. Cogswell, President.
Wm. E. Brown, Secretary.

Special Notice.—Persons going from or through Rochester to the annual meeting of the New York State Conference, at Springwater, can procure R. R. tickets at reduced rates, by applying at the Erie Railway Office, State Street, opposite Powers' Block. These tickets will be good for five days, viz., from the 13th to the 17th June inclusive. J. H. Whitmore.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 13th, and continuing until June 23d. The invitation is to all. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is better than last year for having a good meeting. Our grounds will be better fitted up. There will be wood, hay, straw, and lumber for tent frames found on the ground. There will also be a grocery upon the ground, where all things necessary for the comfort of the people can be bought at reasonable rates. The profits accruing will go to bear the expenses of the meeting. We are hoping to secure the labors of ministers from abroad. Particulars hereafter. Elds. C. C. Ramsay and R. M. Thomas will be present, with many others, to preach the word.

Alonzo Raymond, President.

The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its sixteenth annual session at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 18th. This meeting will be held in connection with the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting. (See notice above.) Let the churches send delegates to this meeting, and all the ministers who are interested in the soon coming of our blessed Lord, make a sacrifice and be at this gathering. You are wanted to help in this cause. Ministers who are members of this conference are required by the Constitution to report by letter, if not present. All are cordially invited to this meeting. Alonzo Raymond, Secretary.

Job Gildersleeve, President.

Minnesota State Campmeeting.—In accordance with a vote of our State Conference, a campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove, called "Cheatham's Grove," in the town of Utica, in Winona county, commencing on Thursday P. M., June 27th, holding over Sunday, and as much longer as the interest will seem to warrant. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with a permanent preacher's stand, good seats, and a good well of water, and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground. Brn. and Srs. of the Advent faith, throughout Minnessota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles, and work for God. Come from every quarter. Come with hearts filled with God's love, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs declare the soon coming of Jesus, and shall we not improve this annual blessing as the Lord requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and to the salvation of others? Come, Christians, of every name, and unite in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove. Brn. and Srs. in the ministry, from far and near, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon coming Jesus, whose reward is with him. Come embued with power from on high, a holy unction from the throne, that many sinners may be saved as the result of our meeting.

N. B. Arrangements will be made with the various R. R. companies for half fare tickets from those points where the brethren will notify me this month that they wish them. Those who come to tarry on the ground, should come prepared (with tents if possible), and with bedding and provisions. Probably many can have shelter on the ground in a building erected by others who have used the ground. Come one, come all, and may the Lord give a time long to be remembered on account of his presence.

S. C. Wellcome, Sec. State Conference.

Wisconsin Campmeeting.—Our Wisconsin campmeeting will be held on the old ground, at Prairie du Sac, Sauk Co., Wis., beginning June 1st, and holding over two Sundays. We shall make an effort to have Bro. Grant with us, and hope to succeed. Let us rally from every point, for we expect a good meeting. Accommodations similar to other years, with some improvements. Those coming on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. (Prairie du chien branch) will stop at Mazomanie, where daily they will find a stage at five P. M. for Prairie du Sac, ten miles. Those coming on the North Western via. Madison, from the east, will stop at Lodi, and take stage at five P. M. for Prairie du Sac, eleven miles. Those coming from the west on the same road, by the way of Baraboo, will stop at Merrimack, and take stage at two P. M. for Prairie du Sac, ten miles. Those coming from the direction of Lacrosse, can stop at Portage city, and take the river boat, or stage, to Prairie du Sac. Now let us have such a rally as never before; and let all come with a mind to work for God, and come early.

P. S. The Annual Wis. Conference will meet at the same place, on the 5th of June. Let delegates be sent by all the churches.

Wm. Sheldon, Sec.

The little band at N. Rutland, Ms., have chosen Bro. H. V. Moulton for their corresponding committee for preaching. They are poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith. Some have been baptized, others are waiting. They would like any of God's humble, true children to give them a call, and a helping hand. The first Sunday in each month is supplied. Geo. A. Streeter.

Ministerial Bible School.—We are invited to hold our next session with the church in Lewiston, Me., and will convene Tuesday, at two o'clock P. M., June 4th. Let there be a general rally to this school, as we consider it a great profit to the ministers. Wm. H. Mitchell, Teacher.

J. Albert Libby, Secretary.

Barn Meeting.—There will be a barn meeting in West Groton, Vt., commencing Saturday, June 8th, at four o'clock P. M., in Bro. Scott's barn, to hold over the 16th. Brn. Geo. H. Wallace, Geo. E. Brown, H. C. Willoughby, John H. Evans, and C. W. Nelson are expected to attend.

A Word to Colporteurs or Missionaries.—Beloved brethren in the work of Christ, you that feel an interest in spreading abroad a knowledge of the immediate coming of Christ to judgment, and feel a love for the perishing in your heart, and desire to warn them of their danger, and would judiciously scatter my tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending," you can send to the Crisis office for such quantities as you think you can dispose of, to that class of readers that would appreciate them. My plan is for you to sell them to such persons as would be willing to purchase, at eight cents per copy, and give them to the poor, and to such as would read them with candor, that might not feel disposed to purchase; and the money coming from the sale of those purchased to be used in paying your expenses in traveling, or sent to the Crisis office, to help pay the expense of publishing more tracts. Those who are known at the Crisis office as brethren of faithfulness and integrity, will have no difficulty in obtaining said tracts; while others who are not known at said office, can obtain a recommendation from a source that will be approved and accepted. The second edition of said tract is now published and ready. What is done, must be done quickly. Amen.

L. T. Cunningham.

Hoosick Valley Tent.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. Sibley, S. G. Mathewson, H. K. Flagg, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

We have secured the old campmeeting grove, at Belfast, where our meeting was held last year. All who wish to put up tents, please inform what size, and what kind, in season, that all may be done in time. We shall meet on the 5th of June to enlarge and prepare the ground. Let as many come as can to prepare the ground. Bring your tools, spade, crowbar, picks, and hoes.

I. Damman, Jos. R. Hamilton, Lewis Pendleton, } Committee.

THE SAVIOR.

S. C. NICHOLS.

The Savior, O how sweet the sound
Around a dying bed;
And when we gaze upon the mound
Which hides our precious dead,

By faith our dying Lord we see
Rise conqueror from the grave;
Our Jesus doth possess the key,
He now hath power to save.

He bids us hope again to see
The friends we loved so well;
That where they are we too may be,
And with them ever dwell.

No death will ever enter there,
Where Jesus doth abide—
I go thy mansion to prepare,
The loving Savior said.

I go, but I will come again,
The sleeping ones to raise;
Then all my chosen ones shall reign,
And ever sing my praise.

THE TRUTH DISCUSSED.

O. R. FASSETT.

"The Methodist District Ministerial Association" was held at Vallejo, commencing May 7th, 1872, and continued its sessions for three days. In the programme of subjects for "essays" to be criticized and discussed, were the following:—"State of the righteous dead before the resurrection." "State of the unrighteous dead before the resurrection." "State of the unrighteous after the resurrection." "Identity of the resurrection body."

Inasmuch as these subjects were those in which the Adventists were specially interested, I felt it a duty and a privilege to attend and hear the "essays," and what would be said on the occasion, as the meetings were to be open to the public. A motion was made at the first meeting that "Eld. Hatch (the Baptist minister of the city present) have the privilege of participating in the exercises of the Association." This motion was amended to include "all the pastors of the several christian churches in the city." This granted the same privilege to myself as was extended to other ministers of other denominations. My name was, therefore, called in its order after the reading of each essay, and I was permitted to make any criticisms or remarks I deemed best. Each speaker was allowed three minutes for criticisms, the respondent five minutes, and ten minutes were permitted afterward for general discussion. It will be perceived that the limits of the time, according to this rule, excluded argument upon any essay or question discussed.

Being alone, as the only opponent of the views entertained by the body of the ministers present, and of those advocated in the essays above noticed, the Moderator (the Presiding Elder of the district) generously allowed me to exceed my time allotted by the general rule to each, and extended my time to six and eight minutes, before calling me to time; at which some of the members demurred. Being engaged myself in presenting my criticisms and remarks, and trusting to the Moderator, I knew not that I was transcending my limits of time, of course. I have no reason to complain of any unfair or unchristian treatment from any one during the whole of our controversy, or of the three days I was permitted to sit with them and take part in the exercises of the session. The widest liberty was granted me to express my views, being trammeled only in the limited time granted each under the general rule. All the members of the Association present, as we became more acquainted, treated me in all christian kindness and charity, and I expressed to them my warmest gratitude and thanks for the liberty they gave me to express my opinions.

I would remark that the essays, criticisms, and discussions, revealed the fact that the members of this body are reading and examining Advent publications, or works of their own faith and order, treating upon the subject of future life. Some think themselves already "posted" who have read only on "one side," and need to be better informed upon the "other side," and read carefully Advent works, as well as study and search the Scriptures more critically on the themes now agitating the religious world.

The ministry of this body differ considerably among themselves, and that in proportion to the time, care and study they have bestowed on the subjects above referred to. Some are more advanced in knowledge than others, and I remarked to them during the discussion that the very diversity of opinions among them, and which exists throughout Christendom, was proof for the demand of a reconstruction of theories in respect to the future life. Some maintained that "souls went immediately to heaven or hell at death." This view was endeavored to be sustained in the essay by the Presiding Elder. Others regarded that "souls went to a separate place at death, and not directly into heaven and hell; but where that separate place was they could not determine." To others, "the intermediate state was involved in such mystery, that the subject at present was something like dissolving views before their minds, and they had not assumed definite form and shape so as to be settled in any opinion." And one, at least, took no part in defending a conscious intermediate state between death and the resurrection; but in a sermon on Job 19:23-27 gave us the ablest discourse on the resurrection of the identical body, at the last day, I have heard preached by any one for a long while. And he maintained that "the second coming of the Lord, and the resurrection of the dead, constituted the hope of the church." He said also—"I believe in the second personal appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ. He must make another journey to earth. We may expect the second coming of our Lord. This is my hope, and the hope of every christian." No apologies were made for preaching the second advent and the resurrection; no intermediate state was alluded to; and the earnestness and boldness with which the discourse was delivered was a decisive proof of his faith in the doctrines he advocated.

A discussion of the subject of the "state of the unrighteous after the resurrection" was not fully reached, though the essay was criticized by myself. The old theological monstrosity of "a hell of endless misery" for lost human beings was endeavored to be sustained by the essayist. This dogma belonging to "the dark ages" is about exploded. May the true light shine, and christian charity with earnest zeal, knowledge, and fidelity, more and more abound in all the churches of our coming Lord and Redeemer.

— To expect impossibilities is madness. It is impossible for ill men not to do ill things. Expect, therefore, to meet ill men, and receive from them ill things, and then be prepared to receive all with a sweet, mild spirit, else you will be even worse than he who provokes you by his untowardness.

STRANGE THINGS.

To Editor Crisis, Boston, Mass.:—My Brother,—I need not say to you that, as the Editor of a religious journal, you are bringing many strange and new doctrines to light; doctrines to thousands of christians as new as they are strange. But are they really new doctrines? or are they the true and legitimate doctrines of the New Testament, when that blessed book is properly read and properly understood? That is the question; a question full of interest, full of importance, and a question that, in an eminent degree, claims the attention of the religious public at this time.

Will the blessed Jesus, the greatly exalted Redeemer, the glorious King of saints, who ascended up into heaven from Mt. Olivet in the presence of his wondering and adoring disciples, return again to our earth in like manner as he was seen to go into heaven on that extraordinary occasion? My faith declares he will. And of this faith I am not ashamed. But I mourn to see many, very many of God's people, who by their conduct and their faith are virtually asking—"Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were."

I am no Advent Christian by profession; and, excepting a young man who visited my house two or three summers ago, I never saw an Adventist. I am a member of a regular Orthodox church. I love my church; I love my brethren; and I love my privileges in Christ, as a member of a branch of his visible church; and I greatly esteem those privileges, trying earnestly and daily, by reading his word, by watching and praying, by withdrawing from sin, and by bearing the cross, to improve my privileges in Christ, to the glory of God and the salvation of my soul.

But I do greatly rejoice, yea, and I will rejoice, that Jesus and the resurrection are presented in the New Testament as the believer's hope of eternal life. And I rejoice, too, that while God's word declares that "the wages of sin is death," the same blessed and infallible authority assures us that "the gift of God is eternal life." Death to the former, life to the latter; "for so the word of God declares."

But will the King immortal, "who only hath immortality," come again to destroy his own works, or the works of the devil? Most certainly the latter. Then, if Christ is the only being who has a scriptural claim to immortality, will he, when he comes to reward every man according to his works, grant eternal life alike to his friends and his foes? or will he save his own people from the wrath to come, granting unto them, and them only, the boon of immortality, or eternal life, that they may be like him; and permit his enemies to "perish in their own corruption"?

"The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works." Man is a portion of God's works. By the term "man" we mean every man, woman and child that lives, has lived, or will live. Now, if a part of the human family unfit themselves for usefulness, disqualifying themselves to love, obey and serve God, and rendering themselves obnoxious to his wrath and sore displeasure by voluntarily serving the devil—God's greatest enemy, will the "goodness" and "tender mercies" of God lead him to bestow eternal life (either eternal life in heaven, eternal life on this earth, or eternal life in hell—for life is life, and cannot be anything but life, wherever enjoyed or possessed; and, by a parity of reasoning, death is death, and cannot be anything but death) on those enemies? or will he in mercy destroy both soul and body, by casting them into the lake that burns with fire and brimstone, which is the second death?

This earth is a portion of God's works. It is now polluted with sin. But who is responsible for this? Surely not God, who is the author of all good, and who cannot sin. The devil is the author of sin and rebellion against God; and, through his influence over the minds of men, this earth, once pure, once lovely, once holy, and once a suitable habitation for sinless and holy beings, has become what it now is. Now, will God destroy his works because the devil has marred earth's beauty with his rebellious and hellish influences? God's word answers—No. By destroying this earth, we mean annihilation. God will destroy this earth, so far as sin, deformity, grossness, and want of adaptation to the future condition of the righteous, are concerned. These hateful appendages to our present earth will be destroyed, consumed, taken away. Our earth will then become the lovely abode of lovely and holy beings; those who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Glory in the highest! Hallelujah to God and the Lamb! My soul is on the mountain top, and rejoices in the blessed hope of eternal life.

But there is another thought abundantly full of comfort and consolation. It is this: If we are truly changed in heart, and under the influence of divine grace, and have been taught God's way of saving sinners, as laid down in the New Testament, we are willing to wait patiently till the Master comes. And while we are taught to pray daily for his kingdom to come, and his will to be done on earth as in heaven (which fully implies his appearing the second time without sin unto salvation), we are willing, if it is his blessed will, like the venerable Idumean patriarch, the sweet singer of Israel, and the noble apostle to the Gentile world, to slumber in our graves till his appearing at that day. Blessed sleep. It is the rest of hope; the paradise to the weary pilgrim. O what a blessed morning that will be! Joyful, joyful, joyful! My soul is full of immortality and eternal life. Amidst our unworthiness and shortcomings, the peace of Christ which passeth understanding sometimes burthens our souls, and we are ready to exclaim—"It is enough; my cup is full." What a glorious scene is before us, and most likely very near at hand. The trump of the mighty angel will soon be sounded—"Awake, ye slumbering dead, and come to judgment." The graves of the righteous will open first, and the saints arise. But how do they arise, and with what body do they appear? Glorious sight!—let their coming beauty answer the question—"Sown in weakness," "raised in power"; "sown in corruption," "raised in incorruption"; "sown a natural body," "raised a spiritual body." Countless millions of saints, as they fly through the air after their long sleep of death to meet the King in his beauty, their countenances beaming with joy and radiant with the glory of the new life they are just entering upon, are shouting his praise with new strains; angels are rejoicing, for their joy too is greatly increased at this amazing exhibition of God's love to those who were once sinners; and all heaven is smiling. Transporting thought! O shall I, who have sinned so much, backslidden so often, wandered from God times without number,—shall I, the least of all his saints, who am not meet to be called a saint, be counted worthy a part in the first resurrection? If I did not read in his precious word that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin, I would despair of eternal life. But glorious hope! I feel the assurance that he bore my sins on the tree, and that by his stripes I am healed.

All hail, mighty conqueror—glorious Redeemer!
"Who undertook for sinful man,
"And brought salvation through thy name,
"That we with thee may ever reign
"In endless day."

The saints stand before their Lord, who is surrounded with thousands of mighty angels, clad in the garments of heaven, and whose faces beam with the glory of the eternal world. The arms of the Judge are extended, while his hands and his feet are in view of all around. Ah, what mean those wounds in his hands and feet? Then, and not till then, will every saint that ever lived fully comprehend what is meant by "riches of grace in Christ Jesus." And the loudest shout that ever angels heard will then fill the air, as a great multitude which no man can number will exclaim, as with the voice of one man—Hallelujah to our God, and to the Lamb, who hath washed us in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God.

But hearken; the trump sounds the second time. O horror! horror! what do I see? Behold the millions who are involuntarily rising to meet the Judge of all the earth, who will do right. What horror, what dismay, what fear, what guilt, what shame, fills every countenance! Ah, what gloom, and blackness, and amazement, is all around. But, ah! what groans, what shrieks, what wailings, do I hear. It is the wailings of countless millions of wretches who are forced into the presence of an angry Judge, to hear their doom—"Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." For as the people of Sodom and Gomorrah were burned up, thus "suffering the vengeance of eternal fire"; and as they were examples to those who should after live ungodly, it follows that every impenitent sinner will be burned up, when the Judge gives his command that they be cast into that same eternal fire which devoured the cities of the plain.

Dear sinner, would you escape the wrath to come? then fly to Jesus, the great Physician of souls. Delay not. "Procrastination is the thief of time," and may prove the destruction of your life—body and soul—in that dreadful lake which is to consume all his enemies. May God in mercy grant you the grace of repentance. Remember, there is no repentance in the grave; no preparation for heaven and eternal life after death. "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." Knowing the terror of the Lord, "we pray you, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Amen.

Yours in love, A Believer.

THE TIME OF TROUBLE.

D. N. SMITH.

Daniel says—"There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book." We learn from this that Daniel's people are to be delivered when there is an unprecedented time of trouble. As this time of trouble is yet in the future, we need not look for deliverance at present. But let us inquire about this time of trouble.

There are some who think they see in the development of Spiritualism, and Communism, and a host of other isms, the cause of this trouble; but I think this will not be the main cause. These will operate politically, but when that time of trouble commences, it will bring into requisition more powerful forces. The armies of the nations will be engaged in it; and when the four angels, holding the four winds, loose their hold, and diplomacy ceases, then we may expect to see such a time of trouble as we have never seen; then the church will cry day and night for deliverance, and deliverance will come at the appointed time. The Lord help us to stand upon the watch tower, looking for the dawn of the morning.

A REMARKABLE DREAM.

A. S. WAUGH.

Bro. Grant:—I send you an account of a remarkable dream I was permitted to have concerning the judgment-day, which you can publish or not, as you see fit. I had been a believer in Spiritualism for quite a time, and had been developed as a medium, but I had been convicted that it was wrong, and had given up our seances. I prayed earnestly that God would show me whether the judgment was a reality or not.

It seemed that I was at an Advent meeting in the evening. It was very cloudy; a terrible darkness seemed to be spread over the whole earth, when from the southwest suddenly appeared a bright light, so much brighter and more dazzling than the sun, it illumined the whole earth. The heavens parted and rolled away as a scroll. A terrible fear fell on all those that were not prepared. The angel of God sounded his trumpet, which echoed, and re-echoed through the whole earth, and said—"Time was, time is, but time shall be no more." Immediately the throne, with God, and Christ seated thereon, came forth to view, surrounded by an innumerable company of angels, that no man could number. And O, what music came from that heavenly throng! Such sweetness! such harmony! the whole host praising God, and singing glory to him and the Lamb that hath redeemed the children of men; and as the strain burst forth it filled the whole earth with the glory of God. O can I ever forget it? Never while I have life. Those heavenly strains so heavenly, so delightful to the good. But O the Savior's face as he appeared, seated by his Father! A light surrounded him, so bright that none but the blessed of earth could behold it. His countenance beamed with love divine on the good. All were held entranced for a few moments. A shout rose from the earth—"Glory to God! Glory to God!" O what joy to the saints!

But there was another picture. On the other hand was another company clothed with darkness; to whose eyes the Savior was a terror. They were rushing in the opposite direction toward the darkness. Some were praying; some were groaning and calling for rocks and mountains to fall on them, to hide them from the presence of God; and when they knew that it was forever too late, such a shriek arose from the lost throng as no mortal ear ever heard. Sighs and groans, and tears, but it was too late. Probation was ended; their doom sealed forever.

But what joy had the children of God. Their cup ran over with gladness. There were a few especially whose faces shone with a light divine, as the shouts of joy rang out of their lips. Hallelujahs rent the air as they beheld the Savior's lovely face, lovely beyond description. And it was no wonder. He had come to redeem his people. The graves were opened; the dead came forth to meet the Lord in the air, and all were caught up together, there to be kept till the indignation was past. O will it not be a joyous time when this really comes?

I need not say this vision thoroughly convinced me that the Bible is true, and led me to seek for pardon before that day does come. I write this, hoping that others will be led out of the devil's snare before it is everlastingly too late; before that great and awful day dawns. And I hope if this fall before the eyes of any who believe in Spiritualism, they may seek to know the truth, accept of God's word, and be saved before it is too late, is my prayer.

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

Thy neighbor? It is he whom thou
Hast power to aid and bless—
Whose aching heart or burning brow
Thy soothing hand may press.

Thy neighbor? 'tis the fainting poor,
Whose eye with want is dim,
Whom hunger sends from door to door—
Go thou and succor him

Thy neighbor? 'tis that weary man
Whose years are at their brim,
Bent low with sickness, cares, and pain—
Go thou and comfort him.

Thy neighbor? 'tis the heart bereft
Of every earthly gem—
Widow and orphan, helpless left—
Go thou and shelter them.

Thy neighbor? yonder toiling slave,
Fettered in thought and limb,
Whose hopes are all beyond the grave—
Go thou and ransom him.

Whene'er thou meet'st a human form
Less favored than thine own,
Remember 'tis thy neighbor-worm,
Thy brother, or thy son.

Oh! pass not, pass not heedless by—
Perhaps thou canst redeem
This break hearting from misery—
Go, share thy lot with him."

JUDGING.

H. S. STAPLES.

Is it right to judge? If it is, why did Jesus say, "Judge not." If the words of Jesus mean anything, they mean what they say. Jesus says,—"Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again. And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?" We are living in a time when we ought to examine our own hearts, instead of our neighbor's, when we should pull the beam out of our own eye, instead of trying to get the mote out of our brother's eye; when we should strive to make our calling sure, and encourage others in the good way; instead of drawing the dividing line, and saying who we think are christians, and who are not.

The Master will soon come to judge the world in righteousness. Are ye ready for the great event? We are soon to hear the "well done," or "depart." We must soon give an account for ourselves, and not for another. Then let us overcome all evil, and fight the good fight of faith, and we shall be saved with an everlasting salvation.

Raymond, Me.

THE TIME QUESTION.

It is greatly to be lamented that so much is being written and said about definite time, while the New Testament Scriptures teach so positively that the position of the church is one of watching and expectancy, knowing not the day or hour, but that Christ's coming is nigh, even at the door. "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

What generations? "Ye who see these things." [signs.]

Is not this near enough to serve all practical purposes, and lead every faithful soul to labor unceasingly with all diligence till called from labor to reward? Past experience ought to have enforced lessons of wisdom, and the cause of Christ not suffer again from the indiscreet pushing of a definite point of time, when there are other strong points of chronological data that extend to the longest limitations of the generations referred to, by the Savior.

It is twenty-nine years this spring since bidding adieu to family and friends, with simple carpet-bag in hand, I joined my husband in the mission-field, believing that a few months would terminate our pilgrimage, and close all mission labor—if chronology was as reliable as inspiration. The months passed away, but not the heavens. Jesus did not come. Many upbraided us for not now giving up our hope; but they did not understand what our hope was, or upon what it was based. The prophetic word, and teachings of Christ and his apostles, was anchorage so secure that our frail barks were not stranded. Thank God! And while to-day events are culminating that must soon bring the realization of our "blessed hope," the resurrection of the dead, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ," let us heed the admonition of the Master, "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." While 1873, or '75, or even '80 are points of deep interest to the Bible student, yet do not wisdom, prudence and discretion admonish, pointing to the past, where lies wrecked much that might have been saved had there been less urging of definite time.—L. E. Fassett, in Vallejo, Cal. —Times.

THE MORALS MARKET.

There has been a good demand for sharpness and acuteness. We notice some call for roguery and rascality. Selfishness is steady. Prudence; the stock small, but the demand inconsiderable. Gross flattery active with a rising tendency. Adroit lying at a premium. Not much demand for truth, except in small quantities; holders firm. Candor unchanged. Uprightness has a downward tendency. Zeal for the right dull and quiet. Modesty has declined. Light demand for justice; not much offered. Cunning more active than usual. A good business done in pocket-picking; would be better for the police. Something done in suicide. Housebreaking rather active just now. Popularity; many and lively bids at first and second call. Love of goodness and of good men rather quiet. Charity of the first quality, little offered; lower grades are in good demand, especially if they promise quick returns. Sincerity rather scarce and moderate. Hypocrisy, some stir; we may say active; a little doing in stabbing. Drunkenness, much offered and a good deal taken. Recklessness in demand. Foolishness much in the market and considerable quantities taken at prices. Something done in overtrading. Promises not intended to be kept, plenty. Honesty firm but at low prices. Usury rather flat. Extortion flat also. Covetousness more fatal than cholera.

CHRIST OUR SUBSTITUTE.

The atonement—O its precious fruit,
Lo! I behold my Substitute.
My sin the Lord doth not impute,
For Jesus is my Substitute.
Security without dispute,
Christ standing as my Substitute.
So high in heavenly repute,
I suit the Lord to bring my suit.
His Son became my Substitute,
Who can this truth, this grace refute?
And who the glory shall compute,— Emmanuel, our Substitute!

FAULTS OF CHILDREN.

It may be well to drop a hint against the folly and impropriety of making the faults of your children the subject of conversation with other people. Nothing can be more unkind or injudicious. If you wish your children to reform, you must throw a shield around their character. However foolishly they may have acted, let them see that you are anxious to keep open the way for their return to propriety and respectability. Many a youth has been driven to reckless despair by being upbraided before strangers for misconduct which never ought to have been known beyond his own family. On the other hand, many a wanderer has been encouraged to return by observing in those most injured by his follies, a readiness to reinstate him in their favor, and to shield his reputation from the reproach of others.

It is not wise for a mother to boast of the excellencies, or to publish the faults of her children, but rather to ponder them in her heart, to mention them only at the throne of grace, there to return thanks for what is right, to ask for guidance to correct what is wrong, and, in all things, to make plain before her face her present duty in regard to them.

PRAY FOR THE EDITOR.

He occupies an important position. He speaks through the paper every week to many thousand persons, old and young. He is, to a great extent, the educator of the rising generation. What he writes is read, criticised, sifted, judged, praised or condemned, by many critics. He must stand firm against popular sins. He must declare the whole counsel of God. He needs a single eye for the glory of God, and must let the Lord take care of his reputation. He must be able to take calmly the blows and insults aimed at him, and never answer them unless it be necessary for public reasons and the general good. In short, he almost ought to be a compound of an angel and a perfect man. "Who is sufficient for these things?" Reader, pray for your editor. He can write much better when he feels that hundreds are thus helping him bear his burden. Pray for the editor.—Selected by F. C.

QUESTIONS FOR THE CLERGY.

1. Is the soul a part of God or a part of man?

2. If it is a part of God, can it sin?

3. If it is a part of man, is it not mortal and subject to death?

4. Is there an intimation in the Bible that God put a soul (mortal or immortal) into Adam at his creation? but as he was made of dust, is it not said that this man of dust became a living soul?"

5. If men can exist without bodies, why were Enoch and Elijah taken out of the world bodily?

6. If the body is a prison-house for the soul, are not these good prophets (Enoch and Elijah) still in prison?

7. If the body is a prison-house, why was Adam's soul put into it before it sinned?

8. When the soul—the prisoner—becomes guilty, why is the prison—the body—destroyed to let it out?

9. Did not Christ suffer the penalty due to Adam's transgression in making the atonement?

10. Then if that penalty was moral or spiritual death, did not Christ suffer it?

11. If in Adam all die a spiritual death, and if as the clergy say—this same all that died in Adam will be made alive—then will not all be made spiritually alive in Christ?

12. If the soul is an immortal or spiritual thing, must it not, if it dies, die a spiritual death?

13. As nothing can die except what is mortal, if the soul dies a spiritual death, must it not be spiritually mortal?

14. If the soul is a spiritual thing and immortal, how then can it die a spiritual death?

15. If literal death destroys a literal thing, must not spiritual death destroy a spiritual thing?—Ex.

He does not murmur against commands.

He is always unsatisfied with his own conduct, resolutions and counsels.

He is a great lover of good men, a praiser of wise men, and a censurer of no man.

He is modest in his speech, and reserved in his laughter.

He fears, when he hears himself commended, lest God make another judgment concerning his actions than men do.

He is ingenious, free, and open, in his actions and discourses.

He mends his fault, and gives thanks when he is admonished.

He is ready to do good offices to the murderers of his fame, to his slanderers, backbiters, and detractors.

He gives no pert or saucy answers when he is reproved, whether justly or unjustly.

He does not pertinaciously pursue the choice of his own will, but in all things lets God choose for him, and his superiors, in those things which concern them.

He is not inquisitive into the reasonableness of indifferent and innocent commands, but believes their commands to be reason enough in such cases to exact his obedience.—Jeremy Taylor.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY.

A few days ago a youth of about sixteen came from the country to Boston, to fill a subordinate situation in one of our first mercantile houses. The head of the firm received the youth in the most kindly manner, and caused his son to take the stranger around town, and show him the principal places during the afternoon of his arrival.

While amusing themselves in this way, the stranger youth told his companion that, in coming along in the train that morning, he had given a boy a bright cent for a pond-lily, and that the coin having been mistaken for a five-cent, the vender of lillies had paid him four cents back as change.

The merchant's son questioned the honesty of the transaction, but the young man from the country defended it on the score of its smartness. Shocked at the absence of principle in his companion, the merchant's boy told his father of the transaction, who next morning interrogated the young man from the country concerning it, and found that he was somewhat inclined to pride himself on account of the act.

"Was the cheating of a poor boy, who, perhaps, had a sick mother to provide for by his industry not cruel, let alone its injustice?" queried the good merchant.

"It was his look out," the boy replied.

"Was your conduct not dishonest?" asked the merchant.

"I don't know that it was. He ought to have been smart enough not to give me the money."

"Young man," said the merchant, "I call your share in the matter stealing; and if the four cents had been so taken by me, I believe they would have burned a hole in my pocket."

The youth boldly replied, "They have not burned a hole in mine, sir."

Disgusted at discovering such moral obliquity in the young man, the merchant told him it was impossible that he could employ one who exhibited such dishonest notions concerning a small thing, for in matters of great importance the possessor of such loose ideas of honesty would most likely give way.

With much good advice the youth was sent home to his father, with a letter from the merchant relating the affair stated above, and expressing regret that the circumstance had completely shut the boy out from his confidence. So the young man lost an excellent chance of succeeding in life; and it is hoped that the lesson may teach him hereafter that "honesty is the best policy."—Boston Journal.

LITTLE CONTRARY.

There was a little girl I knew,
Who often disobeyed,
And when her mother said, "To work,"
She almost always played.

When she was told to go one way,
She'd surely go the other;
If asked her sister to amuse,
She'd entertain her brother.

Or when mamma said, "Come, do this,"
She'd cry, "Can't I do that?"
And when upon an errand sent,
She'd play with dog or cat.

Instead of doing what she should,
She did just what she shouldn't;
And if her mother wished she would,
She always said she couldn't.

And now if there are any more
Such children here to-day,
I hope they'll think it very wrong,
And try the better way.

Like this young girl I've told you of,
Determine to repent,
And as you older grow each day,
Grow more obedient.

PRAY BEFOREHAND.

"If I ever get at that boy's sled, I will let him know how good it feels to have his best things destroyed," said Jamie Pearl, as he rushed into his mother's room, his face crimson with excitement, and burst into tears.

Mrs. Pearl sat silent for some minutes, her heart throbbing with pain. She loved Jamie very dearly, and she had been hoping for the last few months that he had overcome his hasty temper. She had hoped too, with trembling, that he was trying to follow the example of the meek and lowly Jesus, and that in the last great day he would be counted as one of his lambs.

As Jamie sat there, his anger melted away before his mother's sorrowful look, and he was able to tell the cause of this new outburst.

"I can never be a christian," he added afterward. "God will be tired of forgiving me so many times, and I am ashamed to ask."

"When you feel the anger first rising in your heart, do you pray to God to keep you from the sin?"

"No, mother; I do not love to pray then; but afterward I feel very unhappy, and cannot help praying."

"You do right to pray; God is more willing to forgive than you are to ask. But be afraid of grieving the Heavenly Dove for ever from your heart. Pray before you are angry. Be sure of help from on high if you seek it. —Child at Home."

Facts about the Bible.—A prisoner condemned to solitary confinement, obtained a copy of the Bible, and, by three years' careful study, obtained the following facts:—

The Bible contains 3,586,489 letters, 773,692 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 66 books. The word and occurs 46,277 times. The word Lord occurs 1,855 times. The word Reverend occurs but once, which is in the ninth verse of the 111th Psalm. The middle verse is the eighth verse of the 118th Psalm. The 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra contains all the letters in the alphabet except the letter J. The finest chapter to read is the 26th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. The 19th chapter of 2 Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike. The longest verse is the ninth verse of the eighth chapter of Esther. The shortest verse is the 35th verse of the 11th chapter of St. John. The 8th, 15th, 21st and 31st verses of the 107th Psalm are alike. Each verse of the 136th Psalm end alike. There are no words or names of more than six syllables.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HYGIENIC TEETH.

HINTS ON THEIR USE AND CARE.

The teeth were intended to masticate food, and if this is not done properly, two evils result. The food cannot be well digested and assimilated, and the teeth will decay. The teeth are intended for hard work—hard in quality rather than in quantity. There is a maxim extant that many persons "dig their graves with their teeth," meaning that they eat too much. The reverse is true; they do not eat enough; they may indeed swallow enough or too much, but swallowing is not eating, or there would be no drinking. Bolting unmasticated food into the stomach is no more eating than swallowing teeth would be dentistry.

The whale swallowed Jonah, but did he eat him? Eating means mastication, and the object of mastication is insalivation. Every particle of food must be mingled with a particle of saliva, or bad digestion will surely be the penalty. Even the nursing infant chews its food, for which purpose it takes it slowly, drop by drop. If the careless nurse or mistaken mother compels it to drink its milk, it soon becomes dyspeptic.

The teeth are the hardest structure in the body. They are much more compact and substantial than ordinary bone, which is composed principally of carbonate of lime. The teeth are mainly phosphate of lime, and are protected and finished externally, on their cutting and grinding surfaces, by a coating of enamel of exceeding firmness and density. This means something.

If you take soup, broth, pudding, mush, or any other unmasticable food, always take something with it that you can masticate—hard bread, cracker, a green apple, or something similar. One of the reasons that an ordinary loaf bread is so much more wholesome when stale than when fresh, is because it is firmer, and insures more mastication. It is a mistake to put the bread or crackers into soups, stews, etc.

Some persons eat so little solid food, or eat it so fast, that their teeth and gums are continually tender and liable to ache at any moment. These morbid conditions can always be overcome by proper mastication, and in no other way. I have known many persons whose gums were so tender that biting an apple would cause them to bleed, recover in a few weeks on a dietary of hard bread and uncooked fruit.

Not the least of the arguments in favor of sound teeth is the pleasure of eating. The simplest food thoroughly masticated, has gustatory properties never known to the person who bolts his food. Insalivation develops the flavor of food, as much as steaming in its own fluid does the flavor of a potato, or as roasting does the flavor of coffee. Those who do not masticate their food sufficiently, are always inclined to excessive condiments and seasonings, thus adding another cause of dyspeptic stomachs and decaying teeth.—Dr. Trall, in Philadelphia Star.

The Corset.—Whoever heard of a woman being guilty of lacing tightly? Interrogate one and she will say, "I wear a corset, of course, but then it is not tight at all;" and to convince you she at once asks you to pass your hand beneath it, she being careful to exhale the air from the lungs at the same time.

In my practice as a physician I come in daily contact with this enemy to woman's health. The mischievous effect on the organism of wearing corsets is sufficient to enlist the sympathies of every worker in the health reform movement. It is folly in the extreme to hold out hopes to a woman suffering from weakness in the abdominal organs, while they are being pressed upon continually by steels and whalebones. There is hardly a disease peculiar to woman which may not be produced by tight lacing. How often it is said to me, "O, I could not keep about the house were it not for wearing corsets; when they are off I feel as though I should fall to pieces." It is then evident that there is something wrong in your conditions, for what architect would plan a building and leave out the main supports? Would you derogate from the ability of the great Master Builder of our bodies by such reflections? Shame on the physician who advises supporters and pessaries, and at the same time allows a heavy pressure from above.

O, my sisters, educate yourselves! study nature's laws; live healthfully and therefore righteously, and become teachers and helpers to those who are in bonds.—Mrs. A. R. P. Pratt, in Laws of Life.

Why is It?—From forty years of age to sixty, I have been a healthier man than I was from twenty to forty. And why is it? I leave the reader to judge after hearing my very short story: When I was about forty I left off the use of tobacco, tea, coffee, pepper, ginger, spice, and swine's flesh.

Reader, "go thou and do likewise," if need be, and reap the same rewards. But let me give you a hint: If you find the task a hard one, consider that he who loves us, and gave himself for us, dwells within us, and gives us strength,—amounting even to omnipotence, so far as duty is concerned.—J. R. Haggard, in Laws of Life.

Lack of Appetite in Children.—The Boston Journal of Chemistry says that children must have an abundance of out-door exercise. Make them regular in their habits, and feed them only upon plain, nourishing food, and they will seldom, if ever, complain of a lack of appetite. But keep them overtasked at school, confined in the house the rest of the time, frowning down every attempt at play; feed them upon rich or high-seasoned food, candies, nuts, etc.; allow them to eat between meals, and late in the evening, and you cannot expect them to have good appetites.

TIME TO BE KNOWN.

WHEN, AND BY WHOM?

J. H. BROWN.

Can we know anything about the time of the coming of Christ? Are there not many passages of Scripture that show that no one will know when that coming will be? What is the Lord's plan? Let us notice a few instances in the word, where time is mentioned.

The disciples, on one occasion, asked the Master—"Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Did Jesus tell them the time of the "restitution?" Was it for them to know? What saith the Master? "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power." It was best they should not know. Their hearts were joyful in anticipation of the soon coming kingdom, as they supposed. "Begotten . . . . again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." Jesus is kind, not willing to give his disciples unnecessary trials and sorrows. Does he disappoint their expectant hearts by telling them he is not coming back for eighteen hundred years? Ah, no. He kindly says, "it is not for you to know." Yet he does not leave his people in the dark. To the Thessalonian brethren, who expected to see the Lord in their day, the apostle Paul says—"Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed." The exact time they knew not.

The good old prophet Daniel, who set his heart to understand, and chastened himself before God, although he was made "skillful of understanding," yet even to him the word of the Lord came—"But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book even to the time of the end. . . . . . And I heard, but I understood not; then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said—"Go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end." Although the words were closed up and sealed, and Daniel was told to go his way, yet the Lord did not leave it there, for then the vision would be of no account; but what does he say? At "the time of the end," "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased; . . . . . the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand." Then definite time is given, and the blessing of the Lord added to him that waiteth. "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."

Behold the wisdom of the plan. God, to keep his people ever watching and waiting, holds a veil before his people's eyes, hiding from them the too distant future, till the "time of the end" comes, and the very people are on the earth who will see the coming of the Son of man, and then he will withdraw the veil.

To the disciples was given the order of events till Christ's coming, and the signs which should precede it; yet the rod to measure the length of those events was not given till the very generation which is to see his "coming in the clouds of heaven" comes on the stage. What then? Is the time longer hidden? "Learn a parable of the fig tree; when his branch is yet tender and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors." Yes, Savior, but how near? "This generation shall not pass." What generation? This genera- I am talking about, that shall "see all these things." What things? The sun darkened, the moon not giving her light, the stars falling from heaven, the powers of the heavens shaken; "this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

Thus we see, when the generation that is to witness the coming of Christ comes on the stage, the signs which declare when that coming is to be, are seen; and to the church living at the time, and who see all the signs, he says, I am coming back to earth again, before this generation is all dead; but notwithstanding you may know this, yet "of that day and hour knoweth no man."

Now observe, the Savior does not say, no man shall ever know the day, or hour, but at the point of time when men have seen the signs, and know that persons then living shall witness the coming of Christ, then, at that point, no one yet knows the day; and I apprehend that if any one ever does, before it comes, that it will be as it was in the days of Noah, but seven days, and then it will be too late for those out of Christ to be saved, even as it was at the deluge.

After saying no man yet knows the day, but when they know the generation, right at this point of time, he cautions his disciples to watch, and to watch for the very reason that they know not. "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Then he enforces the importance of watching by saying—"But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up." He seems to imply that as the good man did not know whether the thief would come in the first, second, third, or fourth watches, there might be a possibility of his not watching, thinking that the thief would not come in the first watch; but Jesus cautions the disciples against not watching all along through the four watches, by saying—"Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

Now, taking our position on the stream of time when these signs had just been seen, and knowing the time within the limits of a generation, the Savior puts us on the watch, and it is right at this point of time that the parable of the "good man" finds its application. A generation can contain days, but a day cannot contain a generation. The greater must include the less; hence the parable cannot be applicable until (the church knows the generation. They do not know the generation till they have seen the signs. When they have seen the signs, and therefore do know the generation, and while they yet know not the day, but are exhorted to watch, "then [at this point of time] shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom." Just here, too, while the wise understand these things, "as the days of Noe were so shall also the coming of the Son of man be" to the wicked who understand not. They continue in darkness as to the time till the suddenness of Christ's coming overtakes them "as a snare." "As in the days that were before the flood, they . . . knew not until the flood came and took them all away, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Now, right here, and just because the wicked will not understand, to the church he says—"Watch ye, therefore, and pray always." What for? "That ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

Thus we see, while the wicked know not, and do not understand, at the same time the virgins, the church, take their lamps and go to meet the Bridegroom. They go forth. They evidently expect to meet him, else they would not have gone forth. But they are disappointed. He tarries. What is the consequence? They all sleep. Suddenly a cry is heard at midnight—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him"; and at this midnight cry he comes.

These pictures of our Savior are before us. We have glanced at a few of their points, and have seen what the pictures in their position and surroundings require in a fulfillment. Has the history of the past filled out any of these pictures? About where are we in their fulfillment? for when they do "begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." The fulfillment must be to the very jot and tittle, for "my words shall not pass away." Then how far have these pictures been fulfilled?

In 1780, May 19th, the sun was darkened. The evening following, the moon withdrew her light. Nov. 13th, 1833, the stars of heaven fell, even "as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind." The church began to look for the coming of Christ, to watch, until in 1843–4 they expected to meet this returning Lord. They were disappointed. The Bridegroom tarried.

This going forth on the word, and out from the world, in expectation of meeting Christ the King of the kingdom, and the tarrying of the King, together with the disappointment of the church, who as a chaste virgin was espoused to Christ (2 Cor. 11: 2), occur at precisely the right point of time to exactly fulfill the first part of the parable to the very letter. In all the other points this going forth completely fills the picture, unless it be objected that the parable mentions but one cry, and at that cry the Lord comes; and as there was a cry culminating in 1843–4, and the Lord did not come, this application of the parable must be utterly mistaken. We answer: If two cries and two goings forth had been so plainly mentioned as to be seen at a glance, the parable would have defeated its own purpose. The church would have seen there was to be a disappointment, and would not have gone forth in 1843. This going forth and disappointment were necessary, for two reasons:

1. To try and to prove the people. "Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried," is the express word of the Lord. Ten virgins went forth; but five were foolish. As they first went forth, there seemingly was no difference. All had oil in their lamps. The foolish only lacked a sufficient supply, having none in their vessels. But for the tarrying of the bridegroom, they would have had oil enough. The tarrying revealed their want of wisdom. The virgins are all tried, but only five stand the test, and go in to the marriage.

Thus God always has tried his people, and he always will. "I the Lord search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings." Jer. 17: 10.

2. To give the last day scoffers a chance to deny "the promise of his coming." An effect must have an adequate cause to produce that effect. In order to have a class denying his coming, another class must be preaching that he is coming." In order to successfully deny "the promise," the promise must apparently fail. Some of Christ's servants that he made rulers over his "household to give them meat in due season" are found giving that meat, proclaiming that Christ is coming, and that the promises point to 1843–4 as the time of their fulfillment. He did not come. The promise seemingly failed. Scoffers now arise and multiply on every hand, and sneeringly say, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were." They "willingly are ignorant" that the word of God cannot fail. They go on scoffing, pointing to the 1843 "failure," and thinking the whole thing "exploded," taking as illustrations of the evil tendency (as they call it) of the doctrine, the lives of those who belong to the class in the church represented by the "foolish virgins." Thus they blindly go on deceiving and being deceived. The very thing that is to them a "savor of death unto death," is to "the wise" "the savor of life unto life." "The wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand."

We have seen that the parable has been fulfilled to the letter as far as the going forth, the disappointment, and the tarrying of the bridegroom. At the same time, as we have seen Christ's illustrations demand, the wicked and scoffers are fulfilling their part of the picture. What next? The virgins all sleep until the midnight cry begins to sound. This sleeping commenced soon after 1844, because "while the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept." Then where are we now? How long is this night of sleeping? Has the midnight cry that brings the Lord commenced to sound?

From the parable of "the good man," we see the possibility of the thief's not coming till the fourth and last watch. As the coming of Christ can not be deferred beyond the bounds of "this generation," the very possibility of the thief's not coming till the last watch, necessitates the ending of the last watch within the bounds of this same generation. If "this generation" commenced May 19th, 1780, at the darkening of the sun, that is to see all the signs, who will witness his coming. Almost ninety-two years have passed. Comparatively but very few, who witnessed the darkening of the sun, are now alive. The generation has almost passed away. Then as the night of sleeping commenced soon after 1844, and it cannot reach beyond this generation, of which ninety-one years have passed (and hence is nearly to an end), we must be living in the last watch. Then, too, the cry commencing to be made in the midst of the night, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," should be, in its commencement, in the past. The night must be more than half ended. Though Christ came not in the first watch, or in the second, or third, yet we believe that that coming must occur at or before the ending of the morning watch. Then we shall soon witness the glorious beams of the arising "day-star."

Thus we can "know" where we are. Although thirty years ago the church knew not in which of the watches the Lord would come; yet we, who are watching down here seeing that the first watch has passed, that the Bridegroom tarried, that the virgins slept, that five were foolish, that the evil servants smite the "men-servants and maidens;" that the generation is almost gone, the second and third watches being in the past, we may know and feel assured that the glorious light of "the bright and morning star" will soon be seen wafted to us on the wings of the coming morning. "The wise shall understand," but "the wicked shall do wickedly and none of the wicked shall understand." Can we doubt his word? Are we not called upon to go forth on the word, exercising the saving faith of Abraham, who "believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness"?

THE UNCHANGEABLE SAVIOR.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever."—HEB. 13: 8.

What consolation it affords the Christian to contemplate Christ as an unchanging Savior. Earthly friends often prove treacherous and false; they make fair promises to-day, and to-morrow, perhaps, they are of another mind altogether. The world is full of sorrow on account of the changeable nature of temporal things. Failures, disappointment, accidents, and appalling disasters are constantly occurring, filling home with anguish and hearts with grief. There is nothing here permanent and abiding. Change, decay, and passing away, are indellibly written upon every object around us. We may be prosperous and happy to-day, enjoying all the sweets of domestic bliss, and to-morrow our dwelling may be in ashes, or disease may have invaded our circle, or death's dark shadow may have crossed the threshold and hushed the music of our song. We go out from home to tarry a little while among the mountains, or by the seaside, in the shaded bowers, or the flowery plains, on the northern hills, or in the southern valleys; but on our return, what changes do we behold. Nothing seems as it did once. Friends of other days are gone. The happy scenes of childhood are passed. The sports and pleasures of youth are no more, but life with all its stern realities is upon us, and we must breast the waves and face the storms.

The recollections of the past, the observations of the present, and the uncertainties of the future, should teach us the importance of ceasing from man, whose breath is in his nostrils, and of reposing confidence in Him who is the eternal and never-failing source of strength and comfort. Blessed be God, there is One in whom the Christian can repose perfect confidence, and receive in turn "perfect peace." In the midst of earthly changes, the ebbing and flowing, the rising and falling, the shining and fading of hopes and fears incident to a mortal existence, there is one place of rest; one sure and certain anchorage ground; one almighty, changeless, living, loving Jesus, in whom we can believe and be saved. "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever." What he was he is, and what he is, he will be forevermore. We can read in the gospels what he was when he sojourned upon earth, and we can prove by the Scriptures, and our present personal experience, what he is, and we can believe that he will be the same in the future that he has been in the past, and is in the present. Glory to God, this is comfort for the Christian.

When Jesus was here, his heart overflowed with love, sympathy and tenderness for his children. Not one soul ever came to him for a blessing, with a true heart, but what received it. Though Jesus died and rose again, and ascended on high, yet he possesses the same heart of compassion and sympathy, that he had when on earth. He is touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and he is not only willing, but able to do for us all we need. O how precious is Jesus. How happy those who trust him. The peace he giveth is like a river. He ever liveth, and though now we see him not, yet we love him, and believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Glory to God! Jesus is mine and he is heir to all things, and I a joint heir with him. Is not this enough?

THE COMING STRUGGLE,

BETWEEN THE CHURCH AND THE POWERS OF DARKNESS, SHOWING A CONFEDERACY OF SPIRITUALISTS, CATHOLICS, etc., AT HAND, WITH THE FALSE CHRIST AT THEIR HEAD, AND A PERSECUTION ATTENDING.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER FOUR.

The co-operation of the Catholics and Spiritualists, whose cordiality grew up with the two-horned beast, and grew out of their mutual acknowledgment of him as their champion, now ripens into an alliance and confederacy, through which they propose to subject all nations to their away. They enter into this confederacy by the order of the two-horned beast, as the following scripture will show—"He deceiveth them that dwell on the earth, by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast which had the wound by a sword, and did live." Verse 14. An image is a resemblance. And hence an image to the beast "which had the wound by a sword" must be another power resembling that, and therefore another union of church and state, enforcing a false religion by persecution. After saying to them that they should make an image to the beast, it is added—"And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, etc." Verse 14. We should therefore distinguish between the act of making the image of the beast, and the subsequent act of giving it life. But what distinction does the language suggest? It seems to me that for the image to be made by order of the two-horned beast, in the natural and most likely course of proceeding, would be for a convention to be called by his order, of the representatives of the two parties—Catholics and Spiritualists—to draw up a plan to unite all nations in confederacy. And then to give life unto the image and cause it to speak, etc., would be to enforce upon the world the plan they have drawn up in convention.

This act of giving life to the image is the last work of the two-horned beast, as such. Henceforth, the noted miracle-worker, at its head, becomes the high priest or prophet to the confederacy, called (Rev. 16: 13, and 19: 20) "the false prophet"; and the power belonging to his government enters into the image, as its arm of strength in subjugating the other nations, and individuals who might stand out. This enabling the image to speak for itself, by means of the power received from the two-horned beast, is plainly declared in the passage—"He had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed." 15th verse.

This two-horned beast is as yet undeveloped, and hence his career is wholly in the future. But though future, it is destined to be a short one, evidently, and as brilliant as it is short. Everything seems in condition to encourage such a development. The revolutionary fires in Europe are smoldering with intense heat, and liable to break forth at any moment, and sweep in fury over the continent, with the cry of "A Universal Republic," or some such pet notion of the revolutionists. And, since God has thus brought the elements into a state of preparation, he will soon, no doubt, choose the man for the place; and when God's time has fully come, he can accomplish it as easily, and perhaps as quickly, as he did the late humiliation of France, which all must accredit to the Divine hand.

THE CONFEDERACY.

The union of Catholics and Spiritualists to-day, for the purpose of bringing the world into subjection to their sway, would constitute a terrible majority, in almost any country in Christendom; but how much more so, after the brilliant and successful career of the two-horned beast, in gathering the disaffected millions under their standard! And, if to this idea of their numbers as a source of strength, we add their great and continuous display of miraculous power, their constant communications from the world of invisible spirits in their service, and their philosophy and religion so agreeable to worldly minds, we cannot doubt but that a strong majority in most nations in Christendom will be with them to enforce the confederacy on the world.

But the plan and principles proposed in the scheme of a confederacy of the nations, will present other and popular elements of strength in their support. The Spiritualists claim that in this triumph of their religion we are to have a New Dispensation for the world, which will answer to the Bible predictions of the Millennium, the Kingdom of Heaven on earth, the New Earth, etc.; and therefore, as by a sort of Divine right, all old institutions must yield to the millennial order of things. Hence they will engage with a will to overturn all government, religion, and law, in order to what they call the better reconstruction of society, as the kingdom of heaven on earth, according to the teachings of the spirits. In carrying out these measures, they propose that "all must give up their deeds and titles to land," in order that it may be equally shared by those who are loyal to the new arrangement. They also propose that the property in society shall not be held by the few, but be equally distributed to all the loyal. And, to show a seeming justice and liberality to all classes in society, and that all may commence with an equal chance, they open all the prison doors, and let the captives free.

But the notion of the kingdom of heaven on earth would be too defective to pass current, without a Messiah at the head of the kingdom. So, the false kingdom must have a false Christ to rule it. The Spiritualists sometimes refer to him as the "coming Messiah," but oftener as the "coming Man." But the Bible refers to him as "the Man of Sin," the "False Christ," etc. The false Christs are spoken of in Matt. 24: 23, Mark 13: 21, and Luke 17: 23. The time when they are to appear is after the tribulation, and before the Lord comes; hence in the last generation. They cannot, by any just treatment of the language, be placed anywhere else. But it must be manifest to every intelligent person that such characters have not appeared in our day; hence they must be in the future. And as a false Christ will not arise after the true one comes, we must look for him before. Some have urged the appearance of various false Messiahs to the Jews in centuries past, mentioned by Buck and others, as fulfilling this prediction; but they came at the wrong time, to the wrong people, without "great signs and wonders," and without any general acceptance; and hence could not fulfill this prophecy. They are to come at the time when the true church are expecting their Messiah, and hence are intended of Satan as counterfeits for Christ's second coming and kingdom, to deceive the careless professors and the heedless world. Hence, Christ faithfully warns all of their approach, that those who would listen to his warning may not be led astray, when they shall come "showing great signs and wonders, insomuch that if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect."

They are spoken of in the plural—"false Christs"; hence we find two specified—one appearing invisibly, "in the secret chambers," the other visibly, "in the desert." The friends of the former tell us to "believe" that Christ has come, and is "in the secret chambers"; but Christ admonishes, "Believe it not." The friends of the latter tell us that Christ has come "in the desert," wishing us to go there and see him for ourselves, with his "great signs and wonders"; but Christ admonishes, "Go not forth." As I do not find the one "in the secret chambers" mentioned anywhere else in prophecy, I shall give it no further attention, but proceed to notice the one appearing visibly, as to his first appearance, in contrast with the appearing of the true Christ. The points in contrast, as indicated in the allusions of Christ, are—

1st. The false Christ appears first, and afterward the true.

2nd. The false Christ first appears on the earth; the true appears first in the heavens.

3d. When the false Christ appears, only those who go forth where he is can see him; but when the true appears, "every eye shall see him."

4th. When the world behold the false Christ, they admire and enjoy him; but when they behold the true, "all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him."

"KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE."

C. E. DARROW.

Among politicians, this is a common phrase, especially just before election, when the political campaign is raging furiously, and some very important issue is before the people. It is very necessary at such times that the most prominent feature of their cause should be held up before the people in such a manner, if possible, as to attract the attention of every individual. So it is with the Christian, in all his life (which is a continued campaign) he should be holding up something before the people. But some may ask, What should the Christian hold up as a standard for every individual eye to gaze upon? Why, the Bible, of course. Its doctrines, its teachings, its precepts, and its examples. Nothing else is worthy of comparison to it. It is the book of all books. It reveals the future to us as well as the past. It sweeps away centuries of future time, and predicts the rise and fall of empires, and the fate of men. It is worthy the highest commendation, and the utmost praise. Whoever would be a faithful embassador of Christ, should keep it before the people. To be an earnest watchman upon the walls of Zion, anxious to declare the first dawning of Messiah's kingdom, it must be kept before the people.

Christians, ministers, men and brethren everywhere; if you are anxious to present Christ as a Savior to a dying world, keep the Bible before the people. If you wish to warn men everywhere that six thousand years since the creation have nearly run their course, would you make them understand that men are running to and fro and knowledge is increased, and that they are living in grand but awful times, almost upon the threshold of a new and glorious dispensation, then keep it before the people. If you would impress upon them the truth that Christ is soon coming to judge the quick and dead, keep it before the people. Oh yes! carve it upon the door-posts of every domicile. Stamp it upon every ensign, and wave it on every breeze; bear it aloft with pride and pleasure, that every eye may gaze on it; and every heart may throb with exultant joy. Peal its truth from every mountain-top, and let another catch the glad word, and bear it along until it shall vibrate upon every ear and reach every heart. If you would kindle the gospel fires upon every altar, that every sea and every shore may be lighted by the blaze; keep the Bible before the people. If you have five or ten talents, and would double them; if you would let your light shine, or if you would be a faithful steward in your Master's vineyard, keep the Bible before the people. If you would warn people to "flee from the wrath to come," keep it before the people. If you would "save a soul from death," keep it before the people. If you would secure for any, a happy entrance into that "life beyond death in the home of the holy," KEEP IT BEFORE THE PEOPLE.

THE BIBLE.

D. F. NEWTON.

"The Bible! the Bible! blest volume of truth,
How sweetly it smiles on the season of youth;
It bids us seek early the pearl of great price,
Ere the heart is enslaved in the bondage of vice."

1. Because it is God's book—the book of books—the book above all books—the best of all books.

"The Bible! in this book alone
We find God's holy will made known;
And here his love to man is shown."

2. Because it is a fountain of purity, and all the streams issuing from this pure fountain must be pure. "The words of the Lord are pure words; as silver tried in the furnace of earth, purified seven times."—Ps. 12: 6. Every thing from a pure and holy God must be pure and holy.

"Men's books with heaps of chaff are stored;
God's book doth golden grains afford;
Then leave the chaff, and spend thy pains
In gathering up the golden grains."

3. The word of God is life, it is spirit, it is power; it convicts, converts, sanctifies, purifies—makes meet for heaven, for glory eternal.

4. The Bible should be made the text-book in all families and schools, because God has left us recorded examples of the saving power of his word, in saving the rising age, even from infancy.

5. Another reason for taking the Bible for the text-book in the impartation of light and life to children and youth—it is a most beautiful, sublime, and perfect specimen of composition.

6. Again, the Bible should be the text-book or foundation of all intellectual and religious training, for wherever its blessed doctrines and precepts are embraced, treasured in the heart, and carried out practically in every-day life, there true grace prevails, true wisdom shines, and what things soever are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report.

7. The Bible should be made the text-book in our schools and families from the fact, the Bible, just now, is assailed by a most remarkable multiplicity and diversity of enemies.

8. Again, the Bible should be the first, midst, last, always, in educating the rising age; for God himself indicates the fact, gives line upon line precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, from Genesis to Revelation.

9. Finally, the Bible should be the text-book, the first thing, and the last thing, in the cultivation of the youthful mind and heart, for by it we are to be judged at the final day. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."—John 12: 48.

The Bible is, beyond all controversy, the best book of education in the world. It is the best book for the formation of children's minds; the best book for the acquisition and preservation of a pure idiomatic style in their native language; the best book to promote and secure the purposes of family government; the best book to make our children enlightened and good citizens of the republic; the best book, in fine, to preserve them from all evil, and train them up in all good.

Our education needs a religious element; for it is not education alone that will save us; it will merely train a skillful race of gladiators for the arena of political strife. The only source of that element of safety is the word of God. And if you take the word of God from your common and public schools, you are teaching infidelity and practical atheism to the whole nation. You are filling the mind with elements that, without the safeguard of divine truth, are sure to become fiery, bitter, and poisonous.

In its general influence over the minds of our children and over the whole business of education, the Bible in our families and schools is invaluable.

"The Bible! the Bible! we hail it with joy,
Its truths and its glories our tongues shall employ;
We'll sing of its triumphs, we'll tell of its worth,
And send its glad tidings afar o'er the earth."

This is the word of everlasting life; this is the fountain from whence all thy comforts flow; this is the bread of life; this is the fortress of the faith, the sword of the Spirit, thy buckler and defence. Oh, meditate well herein; search, read, hear, mark, learn; so shalt thou find it heavenly manna to the soul. This is the word of God; canst thou enough reverence it? canst thou enough esteem and delight in it? Every line droppeth peace as the honey-comb; every page aboundeth with gladness and with good tidings, as the ocean is filled with water.

IT is recorded of Bengel, that he was much given to prayer, and had power with God, and prevailed. One who was anxious to find out his secret, watched him, unobserved, in his hours of retirement. The aged saint sat long before his open Bible, and while perusing its sacred pages, and comparing Scripture with Scripture, the hour of midnight sounded. Nature seemed at length exhausted. He folded his arms over the open Bible, and looking up, said, "Lord Jesus, thou knowest me; we are on the same old terms."

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

BRO. GRANT:—I send you the following interesting extract on the Christian Sabbath, from a sermon by O. R. Hotchkiss, of the Washington street Baptist Church, Buffalo, N. Y. C. COLEGROVE.

"We come now to consider by what authority we observe the first instead of the seventh day of the week as a day of rest and of religious employment. There is, of course, in all Christian countries the authority of civil enactments for this observance. But that is not the authority after which we are now seeking. Have we a divine warrant for keeping the first day of the week as the Christian Sabbath?

There are authorities of the highest, such as Capellus, Usher, Gale and Lee, men who have made sacred chronology the study of their lives, who maintain that our Sunday is identical with the original, patriarchal Sabbath. If this point should be satisfactorily made out, all difficulties would vanish; the Lord's day is only a restoration of the day of the primitive rest.

Meantime, whilst this matter is in debate, what sufficient reason can be given for the present practice of Christendom? Our text tells us that 'The Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath day.' His authority over the institution is supreme and absolute. Where is that authority thrown on the subject before us? Up to the time of the crucifixion, we find our Lord giving the sanction of his example to the observance of the seventh day. We find him, on that day, engaged in the worship of the Jewish synagogue. It was his 'habit,' we are told.

What his 'habit' after the resurrection? We find him meeting his assembled disciples several times on the week, and never, so far as the record shows, on the seventh. A very significant fact this. Moreover, the ascension appears to have taken place on that same day in the presence of the disciples. And still further, the pentecostal gift of the Spirit was bestowed on the assembled church, on the same day of the week. In all these facts we see some evidence that Jesus had abandoned the seventh day of the week and adopted the first as the day of rest and worship for his church. This evidence becomes conclusive when we find the Christian communities, acting under the guidance of divinely commissioned apostles, from that hour observing uniformly the first day of the week as the day of their weekly religious gatherings. I cannot account for this phenomenon except on the ground that those apostles and churches knew they were acting under the authority and according to the mind of Christ. It is not, then, in any direct command that we find our warrant for keeping the first day of the week, but in what is to us of equal authority,—the example of Jesus and of the apostolic church.

There was a preparation in the previous economy for the change of the Sabbath day, and there was a kind of moral necessity for it, and the brief consideration of these points may be properly attended to here in the way of further justifying the practice of Christendom. They are of the nature of authority for the change, or of powerful reasons for it.

First, then, we say, there was a divinely arranged anticipation of the Christian Sabbath in the Jewish economy. In all the religious feasts of the Old Testament, the eighth day of the festival, i. e., the first day of the week, was the great, and solemn, and festal day, the day of 'holy convocation,' and spiritual gladness. It was 'on the morrow after the Sabbath' that the first ripe sheaf, the sign and promise of the harvest, was waved before the Lord with acknowledgments of gratitude and expressions of hope. In all this there was a prophetic yearning towards that blessed 'morrow after the Sabbath, that antitypical eighth day, when Jesus should come forth, the first fruits from the dead, and whenever after his church should assemble in their holy convocation, with songs of gladness and praise, As the full moon may sometimes be seen in faint outline in the first moon of the month, so the Christian Sabbath lies sketched in the very festivals of the Jewish economy. Please follow out this hint in your readings of the Old Testament, and you will find many things in the rests and feasts of the Levitical law, typical of the rest and refreshment of the Lord's day.

Second, not only was there a preparation for the change of which we are speaking, there was a moral necessity for it—a moral fitness in it. Just think of that last of the old Sabbaths before the resurrection. We call it to mind with a sort of shudder. We may call it the Black Saturday. It was the blackest and gloomiest in the annals of time since the catastrophe of the fall. Through the whole of that day 'the powers of darkness, were jubilant.

Tell me, however afterwards could that day be a season of religious festivity, of joy, and praise to the Christian community? Impossible. The associations would be all depressing. The seventh day must be abandoned as a Sabbath of sanctified gladness.

But, on the morning of the first day of the week, the tomb gives up its prey, and Jesus is abroad, the resurrection and the life. That morning is gilded with the brightest tints that ever shone on sea or land. Most fittingly was the Sabbath changed from the old day of gloom and despondency to the day of the resurrection, the natal day of immortality for the church.

My hearers, the Sabbath still remains, and ever will remain, an institution appointed of God for man; a most gracious and beneficent institution, adapted alike to the demands of his physical, mental and religious nature. How shall it be observed? for observed it should be by every people. There are two extremes, each of which should be avoided. First, there is the extreme of a superstitious and pharisaical strictness, a belittling minuteness of literal compliance with the letter of the Sabbatic law. That extreme Jesus rebuked often, and emphatically by his own example when engaged in the work of his ministry. The other extreme, and the one into which the tendency is now to run, is the secularizing of the Sabbath, the making of it as others, or the making of it a mere holiday, a day of license and of pleasure. The true golden mean is so to use the Lord's day that it shall bring rest from bodily labor, give relief to mental strain and friction, and secure religious discipline to the spirit. Whenever the Sabbath shall be thus used, it will be a joy and a blessing for ever.

OUR religion is to be estimated, not by a few intensities, but by a vital and generous glow and activity throughout our whole life. We are not to mourn because we do not feel; but if, having feeling, we find no expression for that feeling in life, we may well mourn.

WESTERN TRIP.

After much prayer, we felt it duty to comply with the earnest request to be at the Wisconsin campmeeting. We left Boston at 8.30 A. M., Wednesday, May 28th, and traveled with rapid speed, and much convenience, on the Boston and Albany express train, arriving at Springfield, ninety-eight miles, in about three hours. From there we went to Hartford, and took our first ride on the new Western Ct. R. R., to Winsted. We were delighted with our trip through a section of country where we formerly traveled with Bro. S. G. Mathewson, when we began to preach the gospel. As we passed Canton, Collinsville, Pine Meadow, and New Hartford, we thought of other days, and happy scenes enjoyed in those places with the friends of Jesus. Since then some have died, others have moved away, some have turned back to the world, while others are pressing forward for the Christian's prize, with a bright hope of soon having it in everlasting possession.

Arriving in Winsted at 5.35 P. M., we were greeted by true friends, and had a very profitable meeting in the evening. Winsted is a very pleasant New England village, built between and on the hills, abounding in fine shade trees, neat, well-built cottage homes, occupied largely by enterprising mechanics. The place presents an air of lively prosperity, indicating the management of enterprising men. A large amount of scythes and other edged tools are made in W., which are considered of superior quality. Long Pond and Mad river supply very excellent water privileges, which are well occupied. The Naugatuck and Western Ct. railroads afford excellent connections with Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, and New York.

We always enjoy our visits in Winsted, and have seen no village where we would be better pleased to take up our residence. It was there we first heard of the coming of Jesus, which led us to seek and find pardon from the sinner's Friend. We have great reason to praise the Lord that Bro. H. A. Chittenden, a prosperous Hartford merchant, came to Winsted in Dec. 1842, to lecture on the prophetic Scriptures relating to the second coming of Christ. The lectures were given in the Methodist church, when Bro. Ebenezer Washburn was pastor. The first discourse sent conviction to our skeptical heart that the Bible is true, and that there is no salvation out of Christ. As the result of this conviction, we began that day to pray for pardon for our past sins; but we did not yield to obey the Lord till the following Thursday evening, in the first prayer-meeting we ever attended. From that day to this, we have never seen a moment that we felt sorry hearing and believing the preaching of Bro. Chittenden. The hope is now more blessed than ever. Praise the Lord, we are almost to the day of his coming.

COMBATIVENESS.

The organ of combativeness is differently developed in different individuals. It is not peculiar to the human species, but is common throughout the animal race. When very fully developed, it leads to quarreling and fighting, as is seen among dogs and cats, lions and tigers, and about every other species of animal. When large and perverted in man, it leads to quarrels in families, churches, societies, states, and between nations. When rightly tempered by the power of the Holy Spirit of God, it is of great value to the possessor, and leads him to combat evil in all its forms, and enables him to "fight the good fight of faith," like a Paul among the apostles, and a Luther among the reformers. It gives life and energy, and enables one to face danger with a brave heart, and thus secure a victory over the enemy, instead of suffering a defeat for lack of courage.

Combativeness is one of the animal faculties that needs much tempering and toning, lest it should get control of the reins of life, when terrible consequences may follow, and everything like christianity be trampled under foot. Like fire, it is an excellent servant, but a hard master. The more stimulants one uses, the more he stirs up his combativeness and other animal propensities; on the other hand, the more temperate, the more easily he can control himself and keep out of quarreling difficulties.

Whoever would gain a pleasant victory over an opponent should avoid waking up his combativeness; and we have taken up this subject for the purpose of making a few practical suggestions for the benefit of those who may need admonishing. As a people, we occupy a position antagonistic to the creeds and theology of most denominations. This cannot be avoided, unless we consent to go back into the darkness from whence we came. Such a step would be too perilous to be taken with any degree of safety; saying nothing about the loss of the blessed light that now shines upon our pathway, growing brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. Believing as we do that we are seeing many precious Bible truths, that are hid from other eyes, of course we feel anxious to have others see and enjoy them with us. When we first present them, we may reasonably expect some opposition. Then is the time to put the bridle on our combativeness, and remember that the Bible says we should instruct with "meekness" those who oppose themselves. If we return sharp words, we only wake up the combative spirit, when each party endeavors to throw the heaviest clubs at each other; and after a bitter talk of hours, separate worse off than when they met; and, instead of convincing our opponent, we have only confirmed him more fully in his former views, and driven him out of our reach. That is just what Satan desired.

If we would convince people in favor of what we advocate, we must present the truth in a kind spirit, using soft, gentle words to express any hard arguments. The less of the combative spirit manifested, the more easily shall we gain the victory, and convince our opponent. The more combative the opponent, the more careful should we be not to arouse his fighting spirit; for as soon as that is waked up, it is best to stop short, and wait till another interview is offered; and then proceed more cautiously.

In every congregation, we may expect to find some in whom combativeness is largely developed; therefore, all who speak in public should be watchful, lest they set a match to some one's combative magazine. It is to be feared that some, otherwise excellent preachers, destroy half their influence for good for want of attention to this subject. Such should remember the old adage—"You can catch more flies with honey than with vinegar." So, if we would catch men, we must use kind words, expressed in love for those whom we would win to Christ. If the heart gets cold, and the first love is lost; then there is great danger of sharp words when the opposer appears with his resistance. The truth often suffers more from the heat and harshness of its defenders than from its opponents. Let those who are looking for the coming of Jesus be prudent. "He that winneth souls is wise." It is a duty we owe to our fellow men to present the truth before them in the most effective manner, keeping self out of sight as much as possible. Let us hold up Jesus and his word with all the loving kindness, meekness, gentleness, and patience, that we are capable of manifesting. Our work is rapidly approaching its completion. Let it be performed in such a way that our Lord will say, "Well done, good and faithful servant." Let each reader inquire, Could this be said in truth, if I continue to live as I am now living? If not, what change should be made? If reform is needed to receive the approbation of Christ, make it at once. Begin to-day, now. Eternal interests are at stake. Secure them before it is too late.

"HOPEFUL SIGNS."

There are now many hopeful signs to indicate that the truth of God revealed in the Bible in relation to the nature of man, the sleep of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, the immediate coming of Christ, and the saints' inheritance, will soon bring together the scattered church of Christ, that has been so long divided over human traditions and theological dogmas, that have no support from the sacred Scriptures. The last conflict with the powers of darkness is rapidly approaching. Christian, gird on your armor, and be ready for the onset. The struggle will be fierce, but victory is sure. Our Great King is marshalling his forces, and calls upon every one to rally who wishes to be with him at his "marriage supper." None are fit to engage in "the coming struggle" against Satan and his hosts, who are unwilling to give up all for Jesus, and forever renounce all connection with the devil and his works. None others will be able to stand in the hour of trial that is hastening upon us.

O, ye faint-hearted, half-hearted, wavering, doubting, trembling ones, step out wholly for the King of glory; put on "the whole armor of God," and take your position in the army of the Lord, and be ready for the grand charge upon the embattled legions of the advancing foe. It is truly sublime to be living in the present hour. Glory to God! Deliverance is at hand. Rejoice! rejoice! We shall soon see our dear Savior.

We have just received from London, England, a work entitled, "A Demonstration of the Extinction of Evil Persons and Evil Things," by H. S. Warleigh, Rector of Ashchurch, Tewkesbury, from which we make the following extract:—

"A few hopeful signs are showing themselves. Large numbers of persons are earnestly searching into the subject, especially among the laity, and are daily searching the Scriptures to see which class of opinions is in accordance with its inspired teaching; and not a few of them declare that they are obliged to abandon the doctrine of endless misery. And though some of the clergy, and other ministers of the gospel, will persecute a brother who differs from them, yet numbers of them will no longer defend their former mode of thinking, and their preaching is now more characterized by the attractions of the cross, than by the denunciation of endless woes; and some of them have testified to their increased success in the salvation of souls. With respect to many they firmly believe with us; but they lack the boldness openly to declare their change of views, chiefly on account of the loss, persecution, and inconvenience which would ensue, and which they have beheld in several instances.

Then, again, a still more hopeful sign, if possible, is, that though some periodicals will still sometimes ignore, and sometimes misrepresent the books and pamphlets with which they are intrusted, yet it is known to some of us, that many of what are called the religious and evangelical periodicals receive our doctrine, though they dare not declare it. The time, however, is fast coming, when preachers will not be afraid of their pew-holders, nor editors of their subscribers; and then vast numbers, among the most pious and deep thinkers, will be seen on the side of the truth we advocate. When we can get persons to think at all, with impartiality and earnestness, they soon begin to incline to us. But, as in former days, many by persecution and by stifling inquiry, commit themselves, and these often become too stubborn to repent. Meanwhile, our course is plain. As our God is pleased to open to us doors of usefulness or of utterance, we must, by the press, from the pulpit, in the lecture room, and in private intercourse, continue to propagate the truth committed to our charge. . . .

The attempt, however, to discuss this question, showing as it does a disbelief in the popular doctrine, begets an amazing hostility of feeling. Gentlemen forget their courteousness, ladies their gentleness, and christians their meekness. Many of them rail at us, call us by opprobrious names, and cast us out as evil; forgetting for the time how little there is in this conduct of the spirit of Christ; and how much of the old man. Others who shrink from going these lengths, will not inquire into the question, pleading, as an excuse, that it is too awful and mysterious to investigate; and that it is hidden from us; as if, indeed, we ever attempted to do do more than inquire, with reverence and prayer, what it has pleased our heavenly Father to tell us in his revealed Word about this subject. Such persons, however, would do well to inquire, whether a professed voluntary humility may not veil a sinful apathy in studying the Bible, by reading, marking, learning, and inwardly digesting it, and in their searching after God's truth. It may veil, also, much of that infallibilist self-satisfaction which leads poor human nature to think that it cannot be wrong, but far too correct to need the trouble of further thought.

It is against us, too, that we are yet the comparative few, and our opponents the many, very many; and they do not forget to make the most of this circumstance, and add to it that we are 'insignificant also.' 'Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed' it? Have any of the bishops, deans, or great divines received this doctrine? While we answer, yes; many more than our querists can know, we add, that we do not base our doctrine upon human authority, and that the propagation of every truth began with one person, and that, as at the Reformation, the revival of an old truth began with 'the few.' These 'ones,' and these parties of 'the few,' were once deemed insignificant, as they deemed themselves, and as we also deem ourselves; but heaven's truth, for the diffusion of which they were made to suffer, flourishes, and will flourish, simply because it is heaven's truth. We have as much faith in our cause as they, though we cannot bring as much power; but with this we are more than content, for with the greater clearness will it appear that 'the excellency of the power is of God, and not of us.'"

AN OFFER.

God's Word.	Satan's Lie.
"In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die."—Gen. 2: 17.	"Ye shall not surely die."—Gen. 3: 4.

£1205 are offered for one Scripture proof of what millions falsely believe, viz., man's natural immortality, and the eternity of sin, suffering, and the devil.

So earnest are many christians to have deep and searching investigation into these accepted dogmas, that one offers £1000, another (T. N.) £100, and a third (D. W. Scott, 4 Northumberland Houses, King Edward's Road, London, E.) £105.

The indisputable fact is, whether men like it or not, that there is no immortality apart from Christ. The word of God says—"Made like to corruptible man." Rom. 1: 23. "For the end of those things is death." Rom. 6: 21. "For the wages of sin is death." Rom. 6: 23. The Bible is an open book, and if the reverse of these passages can be shown, the above sum is to be had at once; if it cannot be shown, what delusion and inconsistency it must be for those who profess to take the word of God as their rule, to talk of man's natural immortality, etc., being a Scriptural truth.

The Scripture imagery is too plain to need comment, such as "Chaff driven away before the wind." "Thorns burned in the fire." "Trees cut down, rooted up, and burned in fire." "Beasts taken and destroyed." "Light put out." "Waters melting away." "The whirlwind passing by." "Clouds consumed and vanishing away." "A dream that flies away." "Powder ground down." "Vessel dashed in pieces." "Fat consumed into smoke." "Tow and tares burned in the fire."

What a contrast between the unnatural and exaggerated representation of sin's desert, given by the popular theology of the day, and the plain, simple, intelligible, yet tremendous declaration of God's word. "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

We have just received the foregoing from London, England. The truth is spreading.

Origin of the Free Methodists.—We have received a work from Bro. B. T. Roberts, Editor of the Earnest Christian, entitled "History of the Origin of the Free Methodist Church," by Elias Bowen, D. D. . It contains 350 octavo pages, and several likenesses of prominent men in the denomination. Price of the book post paid $1.50. For sale at the office of the Earnest Christian.

The Free Methodists, so far as we have become acquainted with them, are a devoted people, quite like the "old-fashioned Methodists," who lived fifty years ago. They are plain in their dress and manners, earnest in their devotions, and opposed to all secret societies, especially Free Masonry. This, as we understand, was the principal cause of the rise of this church. The book, to which we have referred, gives a full account of their rise and progress. The Earnest Christian is an excellent monthly published by this denomination.

WHAT A WASTE!

The tobacco statistics, as given by Israel Kimball, head of the tobacco division of the Internal Revenue Department, present enormous results as to the use of the poisonous tobacco weed.

"He estimates the number of consumers of manufactured tobacco and cigars in the United States at about 8,000,000, giving to each individual consumer an average of 11 pounds and 14 ounces of tobacco, and 167 cigars, the basis of calculation being the 95,000,000 pounds of manufactured tobacco, and 1,300,000,000 of cigars on which taxes were collected during the fiscal year ending with June last. The average would be larger if the tobacco manufactured and sold illegally were added."

Ninety-five million pounds of tobacco used in one year in the United States!! Think of it. One billion and three hundred million cigars!! This is enough to demoralize a nation; and we have no doubt but that thousands upon thousands are hastened to early ruin physically, mentally and morally, by the use of tobacco. But few are aware of its demoralizing and corrupting influence upon the human constitution. Its effects are most directly opposed to a pure christianity. It blunts moral sensibility, impairs the mental faculties, sours the disposition, and tends to dry up the finer feelings of the heart. What we have seen of late has made these facts very prominent. The use of tobacco is bringing a heavy curse upon the American people. Is it not time for christians to lift their voice against this corrupting habit? Will not those who profess to be looking for the immediate coming of Christ set a good example, and abandon the use of tobacco forever, trusting in the Lord to give them a complete victory over the appetite for the filthy weed? Be decided. Resist the temptation with an iron will; with an everlasting No.

Writing for the Press.—Those who write for the press should write plainly, and make good sized letters. Sometimes it takes as much longer to decipher the words, than it does to prepare the article for the compositor. Never try to get the greatest possible amount of matter on one sheet. Remember, the compositor has to read the manuscript at a long distance from the eyes, as he stands at the desk; and it will be quite a convenience to have coarse, plain writing. Also use good black ink. Write your name, and all proper names, very plainly. Do not write carelessly. After a page is written, look it over with care, and see that every t is crossed, and every i dotted. If you have occasion to interline words, be particular to make plain letters. If you make a wrong word, cross it out, instead of attempting to write another in its place. If these points were observed, it would afford cause for much gratitude, and save us many perplexities.

NEW CONSTITUTION.

The Spiritualists, with Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull at their head, have published a new constitution, which they call the "Constitution of the United States of the world." It is prepared with much ability, and is quite different from the existing Constitution. No doubt it will be popular with the Spiritualists and their sympathizers. It strikes a death-blow against aristocracy, and the present system of monopoly. This will make it popular with the laboring classes, including the Internationals. It appears evident that it means "business," aye, more—revolution. Political matters are taking a "new departure," with a new impulse, sustained by a host who are terribly dissatisfied, as they have reason to be, with the present state of things. Old fogyism will fare hard in the approaching conflict. Its mene, mene, tekel, seems to be written upon its crumbling walls, and its supporters stand aghast at what is coming. The swelling, rumbling roar of a world-wide revolution may be distinctly heard in the distance, advancing like an approaching hurricane. The political heavens are gathering blackness, presaging horrid scenes not far in the future. The hour for action seems to be at hand, and may burst forth at any time. The train is laid, waiting for the fire-match to produce the explosion. Men are entering into this new movement with a will that indicates desperation. They have hurled their motto to the breeze—"Liberty, Equality, Fraternity"—with a firm resolve to crush all monopoly and aristocracy. When the storm breaks forth it will be terrible.

Let christians be fully clad with "the whole armor of God," if they expect to conquer the approaching foe, and come off victors. Let holiness of heart be our motto. Nothing short of it will fit us for the coming conflict with the powers of darkness. Some may cry "peace and safety," but it is emphatically an hour of danger, of no ordinary nature. Perils are on every hand. "What meanest thou, O sleeper?" Satan's hosts are marshaling for the final contest before the coming of Christ. Let us be brave for our Divine Deliverer.

"Strikes."—The strikes among the laboring classes are becoming serious matters throughout the world. Instead of being ruled by their employers, they are now dictating to them the hours of labor, and the price. They require more pay for only four-fifths as much work; that is, they demand more pay for eight hours' labor than they have been receiving for ten; hence one-fifth of the labor is to be stopped. This will make quite a change in the country when carried into full effect.

Love of Money and Dress.—Dr. Crosby a noted minister in New York, makes the following sensible and truthful remarks in a tract of his, entitled "Consecrated Looking-glasses."

"If I were called to point out the most alarming sins in this city to-day—those which are most wide-spread in their ravages, most deceitful in their influence, and most soul-destroying in their ultimate effects—I would mention the love of money on the part of men, and the love of display on the part of women. While open vice sends its thousands, these fashionable and favored indulgences send their ten thousands to perdition. They sear the conscience, incrust the soul with an impenetrable shell of worldliness, debauch the affections from every high and heavenly object, and make man or woman the worshiper of self."

ONE ERROR INVOLVES ANOTHER.

The assumption that Christ is now reigning in heaven over disembodied men is the basis of the doctrine of the spiritual coming of Christ at the death of saints, to convey them home—a theory constantly being preached on funeral occasions, all over the land. But Paul thought we should "wait for God's Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead" (1 Thess. 1: 9, 10), thus proving the personality of his coming—the coming of a person who had once been "dead." A gospel that leaves out this feature of truth, and substitutes a sentiment that clashes with it, is not in harmony with the true gospel. Furthermore, Paul affirms—"Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time" (Heb. 8: 28); and this restricts the coming of Christ to one event, instead of myriads; and that one brings from heaven a person who had once been "dead." The coming of Christ must be just as literal as his departure, and all admit that was literal; for Jesus said—"If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." John 14: 3. Here we learn (1) that the same "I" that was to "go away," was subsequently to "come again"; so surely as he went away literally, he must return literally; and (2) when he thus comes back from heaven, he will receive the saints unto himself; consequently he does not receive them unto himself at an earlier epoch of time, for he cannot receive them twice without repudiating the first act, thus involving their excommunication from heaven after their first reception, preparatory to receiving them the second time. But Christ will never undo his own work after once doing it, and will not do his work till the proper time.

As he will not usher unjudged men into a world of glory, and as the judgment of the "dead," as well as the living, is due "at his appearing (2 Tim. 4: 1), the gathering time comes then, and not at death; agreeing with the statement of Christ—"And they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds." Matt. 24: 30, 31. Till that time arrives, they will remain scattered to the four winds. Furthermore, "every man" will remain destitute of reward till this scene dawns—"The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Matt. 16: 27. "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man." Rev. 22: 12. The reason why "every man" remains unrewarded till then, is because they are not judged previously—"And the sea gave up the dead, ... and they were judged EVERY MAN." Rev. 20: 13. If "every man" is both unjudged and unrewarded till the resurrection, they cannot be shining in glory previously. God will judge, reward, and save men—not ghosts. W. S.

DARKNESS AT THE CRUCIFIXION.

A friend of truth is anxious to know whether the darkness which occurred at the crucifixion of Christ, is correctly accounted for in the following article, which has appeared in several periodicals:—

"A VINDICATION OF A BIBLE PHENOMENON.

In the New Testament account of the crucifixion of Christ, the earth is spoken of as—in consequence of that awful act—incurring the malediction of God, and being enveloped by an eclipse of the sun in total darkness for the period of two hours. The truth of this statement is strenuously disputed by Gibbon, the skeptic author of the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." At the close of his memorable fifteenth chapter, every sentence of which contains a covert thrust and sneer at the authority of the Bible, he says that Pliny, the great Roman astronomer, lived at the period of the Crucifixion; that he (Pliny) recorded in his journal and diary the most unimportant atmospherical phenomena that he witnessed in the heavens, but that he entirely, strange to say, omitted to notice this wonderful eclipse that marked the bloody termination of the earthly pilgrimage of the Son of God. Nothing in Gibbon is calculated to make a worse impression upon the minds that are not already firmly convinced of the truth of the Scriptures.

It is, therefore, most important that the sneer of Gibbon, resting upon the silence of Pliny, should be refuted, and a distinguished scholar, Herr Kalk, has devoted himself to the task with, it is said—for we have not perused his work—the most complete success.

He has calculated the Jewish calendar to A. D. 31, and the result of his researches confirms the fact recorded by the Evangelist of the wonderful physical events that accompanied the crucifixion. His astronomical calculations also show that on the 6th of April, A. D. 31, there was a total eclipse of the sun, accompanied, in all probability, by the earthquake spoken of in St. Matthew.

This mode of reckoning is verified by another calculation made by calculating backward from the great total eclipse of April, 1818, which also gives April 6 as the date of the new moon, A. D. 31. As the vernal equinox of the year fell on March 25, and the Jews held their feast of the passover on the following new moon, it is clear April 6 was identified with Nisan 14 of the Jewish Calendar, which, moreover, was on Friday, the day of preparation for the Sabbath; and this agrees with the Hebrew Talmud, so that astronomy, archæology, traditional and Biblical history, seem to unite in fixing the date of the crucifixion at April 6, A. D. 31."

1. We doubt whether that darkness was caused by an ordinary eclipse of the sun, as it lasted three hours, which would have been impossible in case of an eclipse.

2. Christ died on Thursday, instead of "Friday," three days before his resurrection, which occurred on the "first day of the week."

3. He also died on a paschal full moon, thus locating the crucifixion A. D. 30, April 6, instead of A. D. 31, on "Friday," and on a "new moon." We prefer to regard the darkness supernatural. If Pliny could overlook the eclipse of 31, so he could the darkness of 30. We cannot fight error with error. W. S.

PREPARATION FOR THE MINISTRY.

A young brother in a distant State writes me as follows:—

"I have given myself—my all—to Jesus, and am striving to do his blessed will. I believe that it is his will that I should become a preacher of the truth. When I pray to him to send forth laborers into his vineyard, I seem to hear him saying—'Go work in my vineyard.' I am trying to fit myself for the ministry. If you will inform me what books will be useful to me in my studies, you will confer a favor upon me." S. J. T.

As others have recently asked similar questions, I give a brief reply in the Crisis.

1. A minister of Christ needs, to begin with, a heart full of perfect love, which will give him an ardent relish for prayer, and a burning spirit of exhortation. It is not expected that the young minister will be a finished theologian at once; nor is this necessary in order to begin with. It is better to begin with practical themes, and not be too anxious to rush at once into the deep waters of theological strife. With the soul full of love, it will be easy to dwell upon experimental themes. It is better for boys to spread hay a while before trying to mow.

2. Meanwhile, heed the admonition of Paul to Timothy—"Study to show thyself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." To do this successfully, the Concordance is the greatest aid that can be had. A Bible Dictionary will aid somewhat, if we remember that when theological views are touched, it is wedded to theology. The Emphatic Diaglott, though not perfect, will prove a help. A list of books will be seen advertised in the columns of the Crisis, treating on different subjects, which would greatly aid a young preacher, such as "Good Tidings," Constable on Future Punishment, Whitmore on Immortality, and many others. These are aids only. The Bible itself must be studied closely, that the minister may become familiar with it, and drink in its spirit of devotion, as well as its doctrines. When we learn doctrines from the Bible, we get them without the combative spirit which too often comes with other books filled with truth. The truth clothed in the spirit of love is far more effective than when clothed with a contentious or combative spirit. Some old preachers, too, would do well to learn this. The minister who leaves the impression on the minds of his hearers that he is "all fight," loses half of his power to do good. Rather breathe the spirit of love in every sermon, and this will pave the way for the reception of the truth. W. S.

Scatter the Seed of Truth.—The mail has just brought me the intelligence that some fifteen in one town in Nebraska have been led to rejoice in the truth, just by reading tracts and pamphlets, and are standing firm in spite of a storm of sectarian opposition; while a little way over the line in Iowa, about a dozen more have been led into the truth in the same manner, though they have been often called infidels, atheists, and Sadducees. In the absence of hard arguments, some people resort to hard names, thinking thus to gain the mastery. But truth has always met hard treatment, so this is nothing new. We are constantly hearing of single cases where people have been led into the light of truth by reading tracts.

This fact should prompt us to greater activity in scattering productions that will cut their way through, and make themselves felt wherever they go. We want works of point and faith—not such as seek to cover up every point for fear people will feel hurt and complain. We want arguments that will hold like a harpoon—arguments that can be seen and remembered—even though they may hurt at first. Men cannot well fight with a tract. We want the country flooded with tracts, filled brimful of sharp arguments—not sharp language, but hard arguments in soft words, though not lost by wordy indefiniteness. I notice this kind of tracts are far more effective. Let us send out these silent messengers to enlighten the people. W. S.

DOES DEATH END LIFE?

When we lay the foundation of a theory, why not let the premise father the conclusion? A Spiritualist paper thus spreads it on to a brother orthodox:—

"The Christian Register has a long and able article to prove that life only begins here in the body, to be continued and completed, or perfected, after the death of the body. This is just what all Spiritualists teach and ever have taught, and not only believed but conclusively proved by living witnesses, and yet these Christian papers, writers and preachers take every occasion to ridicule and abuse us as infidels, because we will not discard our senses and deny the real evidence, and rest on the authority of the churches and faith to establish a belief. The writer says very truly that many lives are only begun here, and suddenly cut down in our midst, while we have great hope and expectations of their valuable services, and he is satisfied that the life goes on to complete its work, but carefully avoids any allusion to its nearness to a participation in the affairs of friends and earthly home."

If death does not end life, why may not the claims of Spiritualists be true? The "living witnesses" of Spiritualists are duped by demons. W. S.

HARD QUESTIONS TO ANSWER.

1. If the body is really the prison-house of the soul, and if the soul would be better off out of prison, why did God ever make it a crime to let a soul out of prison?

2. If the soul would be better off out of prison than in prison, why did God ever imprison it?

4. Is the soul human, divine, or satanic in its origin? If of human origin, how can it live forever without being immortalized? If divine, how can it ever be damned without damning a part of God? If satanic, how can it be saved, unless devils also can be? W. S.

House of Worship.—On the 27th of May a house of worship, belonging jointly to our brethren and the Congregationalists, was dedicated in Magnolia, Wis., each society having full control of the house half of the time. Bro. G. Howard will fill the desk the coming season one half of the time. W. S.

Queries.—Will Bro. W. Sheldon answer the following questions:—

1. Did Christ exist as a personal, conscious being prior to his birth? And

2. Does the original justify us in believing that he did? E. A. Marsh.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

CALIFORNIA STAGE RIDE.

O. R. FASSETT.

Having finished my work in Lake Co., I started for San Francisco, May 1st, at four o'clock A. M., in the stage, to ride as far as Callistoga, to take the cars, a distance of fifty miles. And it was my good fortune to enjoy what I never expected to experience, a downright California stage ride, of the break-neck description. I had heard of these drives, and had read Horace Greeley's account of his renowned ride, when my hair stood almost upright as I imagined his descent at this full speed of a stage team down mountain sides. On my way up, I had pointed out to me the world-renowned driver of that memorable ride of Mr. Greeley's, and who for it received a present of a valuable gold watch and chain.

The first twenty-five miles of my morning ride was before breakfast. But we had a team which put us through. Where the road was smooth, or down grade, we left the landmarks behind us as fast as one desired to travel, save on rails in railroad cars attached to an engine. Imagine us starting from a hotel, as soon as the driver is ready with the ribbons and whip in hand, each horse on his hind legs, and then bounding at full speed over the soil. The brethren Cutters, who are old stage proprietors in this country, now retired on a farm, retain one of their horses which is twenty years of age, and he is never harnessed to a wagon, to this day, but he must go through the same pranks at starting. In the beginning of the drive he is as young as a colt in his actions.

The stage team of four or six horses is a curiosity when at full speed. Every horse knows his duty and attends to his work. His head is fixed, with ears lying back to hear the significant crack of the whip (for the driver never speaks), and observes nothing but the road and where to plant his feet. The driver has the reins, whip in hand, and foot upon the break, all of which are operated at times with the quickness of lightning almost. Imagine the tension of mind, nerve and muscle of the driver, and of each horse, all apparently equally interested to make a safe journey for themselves and the passengers they are carrying over the road, and looking out for their safe conduct to the end.

Down Saint Helena Mountain.

Before reaching this mountain, we had intimations of a rapid drive. The ascent was long and tedious, and the mountain lay at this end of our journey, just before reaching Callistoga, where we were to take the cars. Having reached the Summit House, and letting the horses rest a few minutes, and watering them, and all being ready for a start, the crack of the whip gave the horses intimation to be ready for a five-mile run at swiftest speed possible down the winding road to the valley below. We caught a view of Callistoga just as we mounted the summit, above the Summit House, seven miles below, and for a moment trembled, and looked upward to the great God for his guardian protection, and then felt calm, and safe in his hands. Our load consisted of four men inside, and a lady and child, and two men outside with the driver, with usual baggage. The five miles to the foot of the mountain were driven in thirty minutes, and we had to stop and pass three teams loaded with goods during the time. At times we could look down a ravine, or precipice, five hundred feet, sometimes one side of the stage, and then on the other. Imagine what would be the consequence of the stumbling of a horse, or the breaking of a wheel, or of upsetting the coach! But I was undisturbed, and looked out upon the magnificent and romantic scenery, above, below, and on either side of us. I trusted to God and the driver, as the candidate entrusts himself into my hands when I bury him in the liquid grave, as he looks upward to his Redeemer.

The horses, trained for these expeditions, are the natives of this land, which are the surest-footed horses in the world, I am told. They are of smaller build than our horses east. And I would here remark this fact, that nearly all land animals, and fishes, and birds, and trees of the same varieties, this side of the Rocky Mountains, differ in kind from those on the other side. Among the birds you will find the crow, bald eagle, and robin, looking like those at the east; and of course these have crossed the mountains. Horses and cattle differ, and nearly all quadrupeds. The fox and some other animals are again an exception. Reptiles differ. The rattlesnake we killed on the road, which came near biting one of our horse's heels, differed from the same species at the east. So do fishes of the same species. Trees and shrubbery of the same varieties also differ in kind. This fact is noticed, and also mentioned, by scientific men.

The God of nature is the God of revelation, and He who maketh "one star to differ from another star in glory," and "bodies terrestial and . . . celestial," can also by his almighty transforming power make these corruptible, dishonored, weak, natural bodies incorruptible, glorious, powerful, and spiritual; "and as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." May the marvelous "mystery" be accomplished in his own good time, and "mortality be swallowed up of life," "death swallowed up in victory," and "the chariots of the Lord" appear and the horsemen thereof, conveying us upward on more rapid speed than ever mortals descended to valleys below. Hasten, Lord, the glorious time, for

"Jesus hath cheered the dark valley of sorrow,
We'll RISE when he comes, and to meet him ascend."

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. S. Towle.

Bro. Grant:—After reading the Crisis, and receiving both comfort and instruction from its many contributors, I thought it would not be amiss to relate a little of our experience in this place, and to tell of Jesus and his love; perhaps some brother or sister might receive comfort from reading it, as we have from others. There has been a cloud of ignorance and superstition hanging over this place for a long time in the past. The cloud has at last broken away, and the true light now shineth, and men and women are rejoicing in it. A little more than two years ago, there was but one or two of us in this place or within several miles of it; now they can be counted almost by scores,—believers I mean, for there are many that believe who do not confess Christ and his truth. The cause has been slowly but steadily increasing since the seed was sown by Eld. J. Pinkham some two or three years ago, although his testimony was not received at that time, and he had to suffer the reproach that usually comes upon such preachers when they go into a new place; yet through the mercy of God some of the seed fell on good ground, and is now yielding the peaceable fruits of righteousness.

I was at that time an unbeliever, but through pity for a dear friend and true believer in the second advent of Christ, he was invited to my house, and from that time I commenced to read my Bible, and found things not new and old, but things entirely new; and as soon as I saw them I received them, and found peace. Since then, I have done all I could to spread the great truths found in the word of God, and feel like continuing in the strait and narrow way.

We have had a good deal to contend with, but God has planted a few here that cannot be easily shaken. We have met often, as we see the day approaching, and have comforted one another wiih these words—Jesus is soon coming again to redeem his people, raise the dead, change the living, and gather them from the four corners of the earth to give them immortality and eternal life. Although few in number, the Spirit of God has been with us. Sometimes only eight or ten meet together. It has seemed as though our little meeting must go down, and our light go out in darkness; but the hand of God was beneath to lift us up. We were made low only to rise again brighter, and better prepared to fight the good fight of faith. Now, those days of darkness and gloom have given way to brighter ones. Our meetings are changed from our little kitchens to a large schoolhouse, and the average attendance is one hundred to one hundred and fifty. Many have been hopefully converted, and buried in the likeness of Christ. We feel truly the Lord has been with us. We feel to praise his great and holy name and lift up our heads and rejoice, as we see the signs thicken around us of his speedy return.

Now, dear brothers and sisters, although darkness may surround you, and storms beat severe, remember Him who with a word stilled the raging of the deep, healed those that were diseased, cast out devils, raised the dead to life, and has promised to give eternal life to as many as will come to him. Cast not away your confidence, for it will bring great recompense of reward.

South Effingham, N. H.

From Sr. Sarah M. Brown.

Dear Friends of Jesus:—It is a good while since I have spoken to you through the columns of our noble paper. Glory to God, I am still striving to walk in the good old way. It is now almost eight years since I started in the service of the Lord; and, blessed be his name, I have not the least desire to turn back. No, I would rather bear all the scoffs and frowns of the world, and gain the crown of life at last. O, how it rejoices my heart to think of the day near at hand, and not afar off, when we shall see Jesus and be made like him. I believe time is short, and what is done must be done quickly. O glorious hope of soon seeing our Redeemer. Blessed be his name, I want to be among those who shall say, "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us. We will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." I am willing, and feel glad to witness to the goodness of Jesus, for I feel that he has been very good to me. Yes, far better than I deserve. It is ever my desire to live humble at his feet, and learn of him.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us live in that way and manner that we may be examples worthy of imitation; that the ungodly may see that there is a difference between us and the world. The Lord help us to be faithful to the end, that we may have the crown of life that fadeth not away. Thank the good Lord, the time is soon coming when we shall meet never to be separated, and when all these days of toil and suffering will be over, and God with his own soft hand shall wipe the tear from every weeping eye; and pains, and groans, and grief, and fear, and death itself shall die. Glory to God for this blessed promise, the last enemy which is to be destroyed is death.

"They shall sleep, but not forever;
There shall be a glorious dawn."

Then our loved ones will come from the land of the enemy, blooming with immortality, and have eternal life. May we all be so unspeakably happy as to be counted worthy to enter in to the marriage supper of the Lamb, never more to go out, is the prayer of your unworthy sister in Christ.

Sharon, Mass.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. E. McCulloch writes:—"We are still battling for truth in Nevada, and in other places in this State (Ohio). The Lord is causing the good seed of truth to spring up in some hearts, and we trust it will bear fruit to his glory. At Norwalk on Sun., 26th ult., we planted three happy, believing souls into the likeness of Christ's death, and they are now on their way rejoicing in hope of eternal life. At this place, on May 12th, we buried three in baptism, and still the work is onward. May the Lord continue to bless our efforts.

We are striving for a higher-toned christianity, and feel that we are receiving great blessings in this direction, and are better prepared to accomplish good in the cause of Christ and truth. O for a getting nearer to Christ, a full consecration and sacrifice! May the Lord help his ministering servants to see and feel the importance of this work, in order to be efficient, and qualified to do the greatest amount of good to our fellow men."

Bro. A. J. Young writes from Vallejo, Cal., May 9th, 1872:—"We are prospering finely. The interest is still good, and on the increase. We are having additions to our numbers almost daily. Bro. Fassett was with us last Sunday, and baptized five. Eight joined the covenant, among whom were the 'Editor,' and one other, who was an infidel, having become interested in reading our works, and attending our prayer meetings. I feel happy, and praise God for his goodness to us. Less than one year ago, ten of us covenanted together in christian fellowship. Now we number forty-three. Many are interested."

Bro. Ali Andrews, Bridgeport, Ct., writes April 19th:—"I lost my good wife Nov. 16th, 1871, aged fifty-five years, two months, and three days; and her mother, who has lived with me thirty-two years, died April 1st, 1872, aged eighty-three years, six months, and seventeen days. My mother died April 16th, 1872, aged eighty-four years, one month, and eleven days."

Obituaries.

Daniels. Departed this life in Nottingham, N. H., May 15th, 1872, Bro. Ira McDaniels, aged sixty-nine years.

Our brother embraced Christ for his friend some forty-five years since, and upwards of thirty years ago I bore the tidings to him while he was laboring in his field of the soon coming reign of Christ, which he received joyfully, and maintained to the last. He has been through his pilgrimage a daily devoted christian, and a very ardent lover of spiritual worship. By his request, the writer attended the funeral services, being assisted by Elder Cummings, of Lee, of the Christian denomination. D. Churchill.

Sohl. Died in West Barre, N. Y., May 26th, 1872, of consumption, Marion E., wife of Lewis Sohl, and daughter of the late Bro. S. Sanderson, aged twenty-four years.

She leaves a husband and one child, and a large circle of friends who mourn, "not as those that have no hope." Funeral at the church in East Shelby. Sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 12. We buried her between her father and my sister Lottie, where she quietly sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the dawn of the resurrection morning, when we hope to greet the occupants of those three graves forever saved in the "land of the living." A. P. Moore.

Fadden. Died at New Auburn, Sibly Co., Minn., April 6th, 1872, of consumption, Margaret Fadden, wife of James Fadden, aged forty-three years.

Sister Fadden embraced the hope of a soon coming Savior some twenty years ago, under the labors of Brn. Himes and Orrock, in the Stone Settlement in Stanbridge, C. E.. She fell asleep sweetly in Jesus. E. Bacon.

Webster. Died in Conesus, N. Y., May 17th, 1872, Florence A. Webster, in the twenty-first year of her age.

She was the youngest daughter of the late Bro. Lawrence Webster. It is the prayer of the writer that the bereaved family remaining may so live that they may have eternal life and a reunion with those who now sleep in Jesus. W. J. Hobbs.

Wheaton. Died in Springwater, N. Y., May 14th, 1872, of consumption, Sr. Minerva Farley Wheaton, aged fifty years and eight months.

In the death of Sr. Wheaton our church in Springwater suffers a severe loss. She was a faithful and devoted christian. Sermon by the writer from 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8. W. J. Hobbs.

Gates. Died in Fremont, Steuben Co., N. Y., May 26th, 1872, of consumption, William Gates, aged fifty-seven years.

His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, while words of profit were spoken from Job 14: 10 by the writer. Jas. E. Wells.

Richardson. Died in Ware, Mass., Edward Coolidge, only son of Dr. E. C. and Clara H. Richardson, aged one year, ten months, and twenty days.

We hope to soon meet our dear little son in the kingdom of our Father. E. C. R.

Williams. Died May 5th, Carrie, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Williams, aged fifteen years.

We tried to comfort the bereaved family from the words of Jer. 31: 15, 16. M. R. Miles.

I expect (D. V.) to labor with the church at Sugar Hill, N. H., the whole time the year to come. N. Wheeler.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

GREAT BRITAIN.

London, May 30. [World's Special.] The British Government considers that the negotiations with the American Government with regard to the treaty of Washington have failed, and will inform Parliament that they will withdraw from arbitration at Geneva.

ROUMANIA.

THE JEWISH TROUBLES AGAIN.

New York, May 31. Intelligence from Berlin states that a committee of the Alliance Israelite Universelle has constituted itself in this city to consider practical measures for preventing the recurrence of persecutions of Jews such as have lately disgraced Roumania. Most of the members being influential Jewish bankers, it has been proposed to exercise a pressure on the Roumanian government by refusing to buy Roumanian bonds and thus forcing them out of the public exchange market till legislative measures are taken for the security of the Jews in the Principality. The recent statement of the pardon granted by Prince Charles to the five Jews implicated in the late riots and judged guilty by the jury was premature. An actual pardon has been granted only to two, but the remaining three sentences have been considerably reduced in rigor.

New York, May 25. St. Petersburg advices say that it having been discovered that secret societies were making rapid progress among the Russian naval schools, the minister of marine has issued an order stating that any student who hereafter joins a secret society, will be punished as a criminal.

In Brief.

—— The Americans in Rome are about to build a church within the walls of the city, and a site has already been obtained on the Via Nazionale, at the corner of the Via Napoli.——Barbara Ubryk, the story of whose long imprisonment as a nun, attracted so much attention a few years ago, has now recovered from her severe and protracted sufferings and is living quietly and happily at Cracow.——Twelve hundred acres in the vicinity of Sacramento, Cal., have been sown to sugar beets this season.——It has been remarked that every European prime minister, except Cardinal Antonelli and the Turkish grand vizier, is a free mason.——A degree has been issued by the Governor of Poland, promising full pardon to all Polish exiles who return home.——The news comes across the water that an International Congress of old Catholics will be opened in Vienna on the 15th of August, 1872.——The burned district of Chicago now abounds in half-dead-and-alive trees, the sides which fronted the fire being dead and charred from the roots up, while the opposite sides are full of sap and the branches green with leaves.

Conference.—The fourth quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held, the Lord will, with the church at Sugar Hill, Lisbon, commencing Thursday, June 6th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., to hold over the Sabbath. Bro. Couch and others of God's servants are expected to preach the word. Let there be a general rally from Northern New Hampshire to this meeting, of both preachers and people. An invitation is extended to all.
T. W. Piper,
J. G. Smith,
C. H. Fletcher.

Mechanic Falls Campmeeting.—The committee having decided to enlarge the ground and stable, and build a boarding tent, hereby request the brethren interested in this meeting to meet on the camp-ground the second Tuesday in June, to aid in doing this work. To hire the work done will be quite expensive. Come in the name of the Lord, and his blessing will attend your efforts. A few axes, bush-scythes and rakes will be needed, and those who can do carpenter's work will please bring such tools as will be wanted. Should the time appointed be stormy, come the first fair day in the week till Friday; after that the Monday following. Come prepared to stay two days, if necessary.
R. R. York, Chairman,
Jesse Gay, Sec., of Campmeeting Committee.

P. S.—Those wishing tent ground, can select lots at this time.

Vermont Tent and Conference.—The next Quarterly Vermont Conference will be held under the canvas in connection with a Tent meeting at Post Mills, Thetford, Vt., commencing Tuesday P. M., June 18th, 1872. June 18th, 19th, and 20th, will be conference days, and the meeting will continue as long as it seems duty. We hope there will be a general effort on the part of preachers and churches to be there. Let every church send delegates, or write a letter to be read at the conference. Let us have one more rich feast in the Lord. I am expecting to be there. Others, I understand, are engaged, whose names will be mentioned hereafter. H. F. G.

New York A. C. Conference.—If the Lord will, this conference will hold its next annual meeting in the new Chapel, in Springwater, about thirty miles south of Rochester, on the Genesee Valley R. R., commencing Thursday evening, June 13th, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Good homes and ample accommodations will be provided for all who come, and all are invited. It is expected that all the churches desiring to further the general interests of the cause will be represented at this annual gathering. Delinquent and new churches are earnestly urged to co-operate with the body, and they are hereby cordially invited to seats (by delegate) in the convention. For their information, it should be stated here that each church belonging to the conference association, is required by the constitution to report either by delegate or by letter, at least at each annual session; and are also requested to send in quarterly such donations as they may be able to collect for the general mission fund. This is an important meeting, and should be remembered in the earnest prayers of the church.
D. Cogswell, President.
Wm. E. Brown, Secretary.

☞ The fare has been reduced from Rochester to Springwater to $1, for all those who attend the Annual Conference, June 13th to 17th. The tickets must be procured at the Erie Railway Office, opposite Power's Block, State Street. Trains leave Rochester at 8.55 A. M. and 4 P. M. Let all who can, come the first day, and stay through the meeting. Bro. Daniel Cogswell will give the annuall address Thursday evening.
Wm. E. Brown.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 13th, and continuing until June 23d. The invitation is to all. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is better than last year for having a good meeting. Our grounds will be better fitted up. There will be wood, hay, straw, and lumber for tent frames found on the ground. There will also be a grocery upon the ground, where all things necessary for the comfort of the people can be bought at reasonable rates. The profits accruing will go to bear the expenses of the meeting. We are hoping to secure the labors of ministers from abroad. Particulars hereafter. Elds. C. C. Ramsay and R. M. Thomas will be present, with many others, to preach the word.
Alonzo Raymond, President.

The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its sixteenth annual session at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 18th. This meeting will be held in connection with the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting. (See notice above.) Let the churches send delegates to this meeting, and all the ministers who are interested in the soon coming of our blessed Lord, make a sacrifice and be at this gathering. You are wanted to help in this cause. Ministers who are members of this conference are required by the Constitution to report by letter, if not present. All are cordially invited to this meeting. Alonzo Raymond, Secretary.
Job Gildersleve, President.

Minnesota State Campmeeting.—In accordance with a vote of our State Conference, a campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove, called "Cheatham's Grove," in the town of Utica, in Winona county, commencing on Thursday P. M., June 27th, holding over Sunday, and as much longer as the interest will seem to warrant. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with a permanent preacher's stand, good seats, and a good well of water, and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground. Brn. and Srs. of the Advent faith, throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles, and work for God. Come from every quarter. Come with hearts filled with God's love, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs declare the soon coming of Jesus, and shall we not improve this annual blessing as the Lord requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and to the salvation of others? Come, Christians, of every name, and unite in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove. Brn. and Srs. in the ministry, from far and near, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon coming Jesus, whose reward is with him. Come embued with power from on high, a holy unction from the throne, that many sinners may be saved as the result of our meeting.

N. B. Arrangements will be made with the various R. R. companies for half fare tickets from those points where the brethren will notify me this month that they wish them. Those who come to tarry on the ground, should come prepared (with tents if possible), and with bedding and provisions. Probably many can have shelter on the ground in a building erected by others who have used the ground. Come one, come all, and may the Lord give a time long to be remembered on account of his presence.
S. C. Wellcome, Sec. State Conference.

Barn Meeting.—There will be a barn meeting in West Groton, Vt., commencing Saturday, June 8th, at four o'clock P. M., in Bro. Scott's barn, to hold over the 16th. Brn. Geo. H. Wallace, Geo. E. Brown, H. C. Willoughby, John H. Evans, and C. W. Nelson are expected to attend.

There will be a free social gathering at Ruggles Grove, north-east of the village of Fall River, Mass., Sabbath, June 9th, at two P. M. Adventists are particularly requested to attend, for the purpose of conferring relative to the best place to locate the Bellows traveling tent for a two weeks (more or less) meeting, and the permanent establishment of local meetings. Sympathy from friends round about is needed to get things in this line well under way at Fall River.

The official members of the church at Lisbon Village, N. H., having moved away, meetings of our kind are not sustained here now, and brethren sending appointments will do it on their own responsibility. I have hitherto secured the hall for meetings for brethren, but I shall not be able to do it longer, as I am about to move to Maine and stay with my feeble mother in the town of Corinna, where my address will be hereafter until further notice. Allen Damon.

There will be an annual Grove meeting in Springwater, July 6th and 7th, commencing on Saturday the 6th at two P. M. Social meeting Sunday morning at nine o'clock. Preaching at half past ten A. M. C. F. Sweet.

Also there will be a meeting of one week in Lorraine, Jefferson county, N. H., including two Sundays, to commence on Saturday, June 22nd, at half past seven P. M., as Brn. N. P. Clark, D. Ballou, and Williams may arrange. C. F. Sweet.

We have secured the old campmeeting grove, at Belfast, where our meeting was held last year. All who wish to put up tents, please inform what size, and what kind, in season, that all may be done in time. We shall meet on the 5th of June to enlarge and prepare the ground. Let as many come as can to prepare the ground. Bring your tools, spade, crowbar, picks, and hoes.

A Word to Colporteurs or Missionaries.—Beloved brethren in the work of Christ, you that feel an interest in spreading abroad a knowledge of the immediate coming of Christ to judgment, and feel a love for the perishing in your heart, and desire to warn them of their danger, and would judiciously scatter my tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending," you can send to the Crisis office for such quantities as you think you can dispose of, to that class of readers that would appreciate them. My plan is for you to sell them to such persons as would be willing to purchase, at eight cents per copy, and give them to the poor, and to such as would read them with candor, that might not feel disposed to purchase; and the money coming from the sale of those purchased to be used in paying your expenses in traveling, or sent to the Crisis office, to help pay the expense of publishing more tracts. Those who are known at the Crisis office as brethren of faithfulness and integrity, will have no difficulty in obtaining said tracts; while others who are not known at said office, can obtain a recommendation from a source that will be approved and accepted. The second edition of said tract is now published and ready. What is done, must be done quickly. Amen.
L. T. Cunningham.

Hoosick Valley Tent.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.
A. W. Sibley, }
S. G. Mathewson, } Tent Committee.
H. K. Flagg, }

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

I wish to say we have made arrangements, and bought the timber standing on the Springfield camp-ground, of eight acres, for one thousand dollars, and if any of the brethren wish to help us by taking stock of from $25 to $100, they will be sure of their money back when the timber is cut off. This secures us the ground for eight years, if we need it so long, which is very doubtful; but we have to deal with one of no faith.

There are some three or four good places in the front circle for wooden tents, and there are two families on the ground to watch them. This will be a desirable chance to build since this arrangement, as board can be had on the ground, and any kind of lumber delivered, and help obtained to put them up. H. Munger.

Conn. A. C. Quar. Conf.—The next meeting of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held at Campville (near Bro. Elliott's), commencing July 3d, and holding over the following Sunday. It is proposed to hold the meeting in the "Mission Tent." Provision will be made for those who attend. Campville is on the Naugatuck, above Thomaston. Per order, B. Hitchcock, Pres.
L. S. Ludington, Sec.

The next session of the Maine North Westerly Quarterly Conference will be held in Hartford, Me., vicinity of Stetson school-house, commencing Thursday evening, June 6th, at five o'clock, and hold over the following Sabbath. A general invitation is extended to all to come. Preaching brethren are especially invited. Brethren and sisters, make an effort to come to this meeting, to do good, honor God, and save men.
Jesse Gay, President.

The next quarterly meeting of the A. C. Conference of Northern Pa. and Southern New York, will be held at Middlebury (Button Town), Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, June 7th, and continue over Sunday. Let there be a general gathering. J. W. Taylor, President.
A. H. Briggs, Secretary.

The Nova Scotia A. C. Conference will be held at Bear River, commencing Thursday, June 13th, and continue over the Sabbath. A cordial invitation is extended to all. John J. Woodworth.

NEW TRACT.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged,

OF

"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR," Or, The Commune.

BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

For sale at this office. Price, by mail, single copy, 7 cts.; five copies, 30 cts.; ten copies, 50 cts.; fifty copies, $2.00; one hundred copies, by express, $3.50. Ag't.

COUNT THE MERCIES.

Count the mercies, count the mercies,
Number all the gifts of love;
Keep a daily, faithful record
Of the comforts from above:
Look at all the lovely green spots
In life's weary, desert way;
Think how many cooling fountains
Cheer the fainting heart each day.
Count the mercies, count the mercies,
See them strewn along our way.

See, oh, see how rich the beauties,
In the charming scenes of earth!
Think of all the untold blessings
Clustering round our home and earth;
Think of friends and precious kindred—
To our hearts so dear, so sweet;
Think of heaven's unnumbered comforts—
Can you all the list repeat?
Count the mercies, count the mercies,
Making bright paths for our feet.

Count the mercies, though the trials
Seem to number more each day;
Count the trials, too, as mercies,
Add them to the grand array.
Trials are God's richest blessings,
Sent to prompt our upward flight,
As the eaglets' nest all broken
Makes them fly to loftier height.
Count them mercies, greatest mercies,
That bring heaven within our sight.

Count them mercies that shall sever
Cords which bind our spirits down,
Causing us below to grovel,
And forget our heavenly crown.
Let all earthly ties be riven,
Nests be broken, hopes decay,
If to God our hearts be driven,
If from earth we soar away.
Count them mercies, wondrous mercies,
Urging us the heavenward way.

Oh, what richer, purer comforts!
Better far than those of earth—
Joys unfailing, hopes enduring,
Treasures of surpassing worth;
Beams of bright celestial radiance
From the central source of light,
Spreading o'er each scene of sadness
Halos gladdening to the sight.
Precious mercies, priceless treasures,
Bringing us such rich delight.

Let us number o'er our jewels;
Let us estimate their worth;
Let us thank the gracious Giver,
Strewing blessings o'er the earth.
Let our hearts o'erflow with gladness,
Let us tell the wonders o'er,
Till our multiplying mercies
Seem a countless, boundless store;
Then let praises, grateful praises,
Be our language evermore.

WHOSE SERVANTS ARE YE.

O. D. WOODRUFF.

Occasionally, preaching brethren who believe the Lord called them to preach the gospel, complain of poor pay and hard fare. Sometimes the fault is in the preacher, sometimes in the church, and not unfrequently in both. One thing however is certain, if God commissions men or women to preach the gospel, he will see that they are taken care of. You could not enlist men to work for a corporation that turned you off each pay-day with a miserable pittance, insufficient for actual wants; neither can you win sinners to Christ while complaining that God, who called you, does not half take care of you. Do you claim to be a servant of the most high God, then every such complaint stains his character, dishonors his holy name, and brings reproach to the cause you profess. If your eye is single to the glory of God, and the churches where your preach are like the drouth of summer to your temporal wants, bread for yourself and family will come from some other source. It is promised by Him who cannot lie, therefore is sure.

Suppose after your preaching, brethren and sisters well-to do in this world's goods, testify of the blessed hope, and how they would not part with it for "worlds like this," and then go to their homes, partake of their good things, and leave you to reach yours without money enough to provide wife and little ones salt and potatoes, to say nothing of fuel, house-rent, and clothing; do not be discouraged, neither find fault with the Lord; he is not dependent on their liberality to lengthen out your barrel of meal, or cruise of oil. The time has been when the faithful servant of God, without house or friends, penniless, disheartened, and ready to die, was fed by ravens, and the same tender care that watched over him will not neglect you. Should the Lord open the way for you to preach to those brethren again, be sure that the Holy Spirit prompts and leads you, and then give them the unadulterated gospel of Christ; for they need to learn that "worlds" cannot slip through their fingers with such ease, while the "blessed hope" with all its power can hardly find a way into their pockets.

Another difficulty is, that preaching ofttimes contains more self than Christ, and in this case, a miserly, stingy stupor creeps over the audience, and hearts and pockets are alike unyielding. The skillful fisher of men takes Christ along to fill his net; but without Christ, he may toil through long sermons, weary and late, and catch nothing. If without Christ, the preacher attempts to make five loaves and two fishes feed the multitude, he need not be surprised if there are no fragments with which to fill the baskets. Sometimes the preacher fears that his reputation as a preacher will decline, unless he can somehow share the hospitality of kind brethren all the time, with nothing to do, except, forsooth, to write lists of appointments for the paper, requesting to be informed if they conflict, while journies to the post office (unless otherwise ordered) afford bodily exercise, which, doubtless, profiteth little. "Regular preaching" of this kind, without reference to the will of God, or the leading of the Holy Spirit, formalizes the churches, and closes avenues of support against God's faithful laborers, who feel the woe, and go forth trembling under sense of duty, bearing the cross. Better preach one Holy-Ghost sermon a year, and work the rest of the time to provide for the house, instead of being wandering stars with no definite object except to maintain a reputation, as one of the "regulars."

Many years ago, a venerable preacher of the gospel of Christ, except while in jail, or preaching, improved opportunities to help his brethren, on one occasion helping make tents (Acts 18: 1–8), rather than sit in the parlor and have the good sister get nervous trying to prepare something good enough for the minister to eat. The modern custom that preachers must be petted, and treated to the best the house affords, has encouraged indolence, unfitted them for preaching a live gospel, and added to the list of dyspeptics. If our good sisters will reduce their anxiety for fine victuals when the minister comes, they may have better preaching. The preaching brother who helped make the tents also said, "if any will not work, neither shall he eat;" and it may be that the Lord wants some who complain of poor pay to follow this advice, as a providential means of stopping it.

It is impossible for a man to preach with power, if his eye is on the pay, instead of being single to the glory of God. Like a refrigerator, he will lower the temperature wherever he goes. It is extremely aggravating for the brethren to spead bountiful repasts before the preacher, and then send him almost empty away, with the wants of a hungry family staring him in the face. Sermons sometimes abounds with Gibbon, Mosheim, and Josephus, but are destitute of Christ; and again the goat, ram, and other beasts in prophecy are brought out and made to serve a theory. Many times have they been put in position for an invincible time argument, but as yet have failed in their calculations. As few are competent to traverse history and engraft it on prophecy, the great majority, who favor time argument, follow the most convincing leader, and believe by proxy, hence some have been for Paul and some for Apollos. There is danger here, and may we not lose sight of the coming of the Just One under pressure of argument?

The God of the Bible has arranged his own time table of events, and fixed the bounds of time itself. He has encouraged us in his word to attain a knowledge in close proximity to the appointed hour, but Jesus admonishes us (Mark 13: 33)—"Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is." Noah had the brief knowledge of "seven days" in advance of the flood, "and as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man." Many a good soul, who has loved Jesus and his coming, but could not comprehend time arguments, has been shown the road to destruction because they could not believe in definite time; and some have even feared they might be lost on this account; but haply for them, Inspiration secures salvation to all who love the appearing of Jesus, notwithstanding brethren have sometimes limited it to those only who endorse their time arrangement. When Jehovah shall make known his time, all argument will cease and all strife will end. We are not in darkness that that day should overtake us as a thief. Signs and events both celestial and terrestrial, in clusters now appear, as if shoveled out to complete the prophetic word wearied with delay; and their testimony, though fearful and grand, eloquently proclaims the great day of the Lord near, even at the door.

We would not say my Lord delayeth his coming; neither would we oblige him to wind up the affairs of this world to accommodate our theory. We would not complain at our lot, nor murmur in the way. Let us remember those murmurers, whose carcasses fell in the wilderness (Num. 14: 29); and with God for our provider, Jesus for our Savior, and the Holy Ghost for our teacher, we cannot lack a good thing. The righteous will not be forsaken, nor his seed begging bread. The dross is soon to be exchanged for gold, weakness for power, dishonor for glory, and mortality for immortality. Shall the light afflictions of the present peril the immense interests of the future? Let us leave our murmurs and complaints at the foot of the cross; and as time's fleet wing bears us swiftly away, may the glory of the crown be the silver lining of life's trials and burdens, the cherished visitor of the meek and the lowly, until the sun in his glory shall pale before the redeemed of the Lord in the city of the Great King.

Southington, Ct.

BE NOT DECEIVED.

M. MORRISON.

These last years the state of my health has prevented my writing occasionally for the Crisis as formerly; but I am still waiting for the "blessed hope." The holy Redeemer, who came to save men from their sins, and not in them, has warned us against resting in a dead faith, and a hope that perisheth. He has assured us that "many" are doomed to meet with an awful disappointment in the day of his coming. Who can describe the state of that professor, whose hope of immortality will be eternally blasted by the assurance—"I never knew you"? How appropriate, how forcible, how gracious, is the exhortation, "abide in him; that when he shall appear we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." I think if ever there has been a time when the exhortation of the apostle, "Be not conformed to this world," was disregarded, and treated with perfect indifference by professed Christians, it is emphatically true of the present time. It is as little heeded by a large portion of the professed church as though it were not between the lids of the Bible. Do they show forth by their dress, deportment, and conversation, that though in the world they are not of the world? We read that "God is the same yesterday, to-day and forever," and if he required his servants in the first age of the Christian church to deny themselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts, does he not require the same of us, notwithstanding any who dare speak against unchristian fashions are at once put down for fanatics? When arguments are presented, which they can neither climb over nor pull down, they will repel them by that notorious expression, "Have charity." When they get upon this hinge, they swing clear from the face of all arguments. Charity is a good thing; and when taken in its true gospel sense, stands as first among the Christian graces; but when in the sense many use it, is a spurious article, a counterfeit coin, and they are no more alike than light and darkness.

True charity is indispensable in a Christian. But it does not consist in withholding the truth for fear of giving offence, or covering up one's faults, or flattering a man that he is right when he is wrong. This is the devil's charity, and not the charity of the Bible. Said the Savior at one time to the Jews—"Ye hate me because I tell you the truth," and human nature is the same now as it was then. Truths which come in contact with our own darling sins—sins which have been made honorable (if I may so speak) by a long practice, we, like the Jews, are inclined to reject. The argument which many professors use to justify themselves in conforming to the world is, that their conscience allows them. They "feel no condemnation." So did Paul's conscience allow him to persecute the saints of God. The Jews' conscience allowed them to crucify the Son of God. Our conscience is not a safe standard; for, says Christ, By my words shall ye be justified in the last day. Here, then, is our safety, our peace, our blessedness; even to abide in him; in his doctrine, in his commandments, in his Spirit. O brethren, let us honor the Rock of our salvation, by humbly keeping close to his word. We are living in "perilous times"; let us, therefore, weigh well the exhortation of the apostle—"Be not deceived; God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

"WHAT SAITH THE SCRIPTURE?"

S. L. MANLEY.

BRO. GRANT:—I send the following, without note or comment, saving the inquiry, Is not all to be literally fulfilled? "And he shall send Jesus Christ, . . . whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3. "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up; that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things." Acts 15: 14–17. "When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory." Ps. 102: 16. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all nations shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen." Rev. 1: 7. "And again another scripture saith, They shall look upon him whom they pierced." John 19: 37. "And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and of supplications; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him. . . . In that day there shall be a great mourning in Jerusalem. : . . . And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart. . . . All the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart." Zech. 12: 10–14. "In that day there shall be a fountain opened for sin and uncleanness." Zech. 13: 1; 14: 9–20; Isa. 66: 15: 24; Rom. 11.

BE EARNEST.

THERIA E. WEAVER.

While reading the Crisis last evening, I was fully convinced that there was not earnestness enough in our devotions to God and to our fellow men around us. I believe that we are very, very near the end of all things; and if we are so soon to enter into rest, as signs now seem to show, how earnest and active we ought to be in striving to get people to go with us to the better land. I have for a long time felt as if there was truly more need of earnest, real earnest workers in the cause of God. I feel for one that if I was up, so that I could work, I could not rest day nor night. As I lie here on my bed of pain, I am not an idle dreamer, by no means; but I am trying in my limited way to do all in my power to try and get others to go with me to the heavenly land. O how often in my sad, wakeful hours at night, do I lie and pray for God's servants to be more deeply impressed with the nearness of the coming of Jesus, and to be more earnest in their endeavors to persuade people to come to Jesus. How near we are to the judgment. Have we done all in our power to persuade people to be christians? Have we been truly in earnest in this matter? How should we feel to see our fellow men around us in a dying condition, and we could help rescue them from that state, and yet did not try to help them? They would think we had but little feeling for them. Well, they are truly in a lost and helpless condition, and must soon sink in death and destruction, unless they are made to see their helpless state, and find a refuge in Jesus.

O, dear ones, who labor in the vineyard of the Lord, suffer a few words of exhortation from one of the weakest of the weak, in whose heart the truths of God's word are deeply settled. Do, in the name of Jesus, be earnest in the work of the Lord. Talk plainly, but not harshly. Keep Jesus' coming before the world—the speedy coming of Jesus. He is coming, coming soon. How sad to know that some of our dear ones must be lost; some brother or sister, or perhaps a dear father, or mother, or children. How can we help being in earnest, when we think of these things? Why, it does seem to me at times that I cannot keep my voice silent. The people are rushing heedlessly to the bar of God. What an awful fate awaits them there. O my God! do stir up thy ministers to a deeper work of earnest labor. Give them a double portion of thy Spirit. Give them the compelling power, as it were, that they may compel them to come in.

Dear ones, how sad it will be to know this dear friend, and that dear friend, must never see the glories of the new earth. My heart yearns over poor, lost sinners. I pray God to call so loud upon them, that they will yield to his offered mercy. Time lingers still, and may God help us to be truly in earnest. I think we may expect to see Jesus coming at any time. How necessary to have our work done and well done. I weep as I write. I pray too. O God, help me to do my whole duty. O Lord, impress the hearts of thy dear ones to a deeper, more earnest work. While time lingers, may we improve it to the very best of our ability. Lord, help. Jesus, hear our prayer. Father, save all that can be saved. Bless thy servants, male and female. Let them feel the weight of their mission. Dear ones, work, work, faithfully.

"WHY WILL YE DIE?"

S. WOODRUFF.

Without the Spirit of God man is lost. He knows not the point of compass. His mind is dark to the things of God. When first converted, how often the Spirit of God is grieved, and a wanderer's pathway taken. Broad is the way that leads to destruction, and many walk together there. It is only by the Spirit of God, illuminating the mind of the church, opening the eyes of their understanding to the word of God, yea, the prophetic word, whereby they have been able to discern the signs of the times, and see the day approaching. Our hearts should be full of gratitude to God for his unspeakable love and mercy towards his creature man, in unfolding to him the grand coming future, and the glory of the world to come. The thought is glorious and blessed. Yes, heaven's rays of light shine upon our pathway, therefore we walk not as children of the night, but of the day.

Children of this world, why will ye die? Life and death are set before you. The gospel day will close, the harvest be past, the summer soon ended. Consider it, ere it be too late. Behold the Judge standeth at the door. Why will ye die? Joys that are immortal are before thee. The fair fields of Eden, and the glory of an unending eternity are set before you. The eternal morning, in all its beauty will soon dawn, which shall reveal the great Head of the church. When redemption's plan is completed, the dear ones sleeping in Jesus will stand upon the new earth in fadeless beauty. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, for why will ye die? Saved or lost, we must stand at the bar of God. "Why will ye die?"

A VISION.

M. D. BABCOCK.

"In the last days" they "shall dream dreams," and "see visions."

Whether this be that spoken I cannot say. While in Providence, R. I., a few days ago, I met with Sister Eliza Lake. She related to me a vision she had about three weeks ago, while sick with typhoid fever. And this was the vision: She was just recovering from her sickness, and one night, about ten o'clock, while her husband sat reading by her bedside, she turned over from him, facing the wall, and said to herself, I will now have a talk with my Jesus; and in a moment she was lost, and seemed to be taken up from the world, and there she met an angel, and he had a large book in his hand, and she asked him what this was? and he told her it was "the book of life." She looked, and saw her name written in large letters, and under it her husband's; and under his she saw the name of one of her sisters, and her husband. Then she had three more sisters, whose names she thought ought to be there, but they were not. She asked the angel why they were not there? He told her that two of them were all carried away with the cares and fashions of this world. He feared they would be lost. And the third one there was no hope for. He wanted her to go and warn them of their danger.

Here she stopped and said to me, "I have been to two of them, and told them what the angel said, and it was the greatest cross I ever had." Then I looked up from the book, and opposite me seemed a very high wall, and on this wall I saw written in large, plain figures, the year and the month Jesus would come. She asked the angel what those figures meant? He told her it was when the world would come to an end; but you must not tell those figures to any one, for no one knows the day nor the hour. You will live to be translated, he said. Then I seemed to be raised higher, and there I saw Jesus, but the glory was so bright I could see no more, and I came to myself.

I turned over. I had not been asleep, and there sat my husband still reading. I can, she said, see those figures now just as plainly on the wall, but I shall not tell them to any one, not even my husband. O, if the world knew, said she, what I know! what a preparation there would be among them! She is one of God's little ones, and often doubting, but she now no longer doubts, but feels the end is very near, and she has a great work to do. May we all be ready.

THE PERFECT ONE.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

Jesus, the well-beloved Son of God, is the only one altogether lovely. He only is "the chiefest among ten thousand," of whom David was but an imperfect type, even when it was said of him that he was a man after God's own heart. It is Jesus, the "Son of David," who is without fault, truly in all things a perfect and upright one, "a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfill all my will." Acts 13: 22. No other one of the human family is perfect in knowledge. All are liable to be mistaken. Jesus only is infallible. It is only by keeping very near to him that we are safe from the wiles of the adversary, who, if he may not devour, yet would by all means in his power strive to ensnare us by leading us to embrace error. Some of the errors which he advocates are very dangerous, and if adhered to will result in death.

The christian is liable to be assailed on every hand by these errors, and they often come in such a guise that many receive them as truth. They are adapted in such a way to our infirmities and weaknesses, that unless we are kept by the power of God, we are sure to fall into the snare. If we "lean to our own understanding," or trust in our own wisdom, we cannot escape. But we may trust in Jesus, be led by him, and then we are safe. We may hear the rumbling of the opposing thunders, but they can never shake the Eternal Rock, which is our refuge. Children, cling close to Jesus. He is the perfect one. He will keep you in perfect peace, if you trust in and obey him.

FRUITS OF SPIRITUALISM.

E. O. ALLEN.

A man by the name of R. K., of the town of Westfield, Mass., who became converted from infidelity to Spiritualism, said he utterly rejected Jesus Christ as the Savior of the world, as preached by the apostles, and boasted that he was perfectly independent of Jesus Christ for his salvation. He professed to be a healing medium, and advocated laying hands on the sick, and advertised in one of the public papers to that effect. A few years later, he was taken sick. The physician was sent for in a short time. He was apprehensive of danger. He inquired of his physician what his chance was? He was informed his chance for recovery was very doubtful. Then he became very earnest for his comfort in Spiritualism. He soon proclaimed to his friends that Spiritualism had failed him, and said he was a lost man, and wished some one would pray for him, yet it would do no good. He had a neighbor that was a deacon, who was an exemplary man in word and deed. The contrast was great between the two men. This "R. K." seemed when well to abhor the deacon; but when he found himself about to die, he was willing to send for him to pray for him; and I was credibly informed by a member of the Methodist church there, and since by one of the select men of the town, that he sent in a request to all the churches in the town to pray for him. He soon after became delirious and died.

DIVORCE AND MARRIAGE.

F. H. BURBANK.

It is evident that Jesus considered fornication and adultery the only lawful grounds for divorce. There has been a little private discussion in this quarter in regard to the right of a man to marry a woman whose husband had committed adultery, and from whom she had been divorced thereby. Or, can a man divorced from an adulterous wife marry another while the former wife is living? My own conviction is that it would not be altogether agreeable to a man or woman to marry a scripturally divorced person while their former partner remained alive.

Again, it appears to my mind, that a scriptural divorce gives no license to marry again, but merely allows the aggrieved party to separate from the criminal in order that they may have no fellowship with those who commit adultery. Yet there are those who think that the aggrieved ones have a right to marry again, as they claim that such could not prevent what had occurred, and were innocent of transgression, and, being scripturally dead, that their former partners were to them practically dead.

Will not some of our brethren who have considered such matters give us their convictions in regard to them through the columns of the Crisis, as it may be for the benefit of our brethren and sisters generally.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

SANITARY NOTES.

CLINTON COLEGROVE.

It is one of the half-mysterious and superlative follies of some young persons that they imagine excellent and robust health to be of no great account, and rather covet a kind of genteel indisposition, with pallor, languor, and languishing. Amazing infatuation! What a terrible lesson these persons sometimes have to learn in after life. How roughly and painfully they are taught the inestimable blessing of health. What they so sadly misappreciated, they finally learn to value, at the cost of bitter experience. Some, supposing the rosy flush of health to be unfashionable, take special pains to extinguish it, and with spices, and divers ingenious or supposably effective agents, fight off the beautiful carmine of nature. Others, deprecating pallor, consume infinitesimal but destroying arsenic to kindle a morbid glow in the countenance, or create an attractive brightness. Others, disliking the full, round chest of hearty health, the gift of bounteous Providence, cruelly resist and baffle nature with cordage, and strive to mould their shape to the likeness of a very erroneously conceived model of comeliness.

We spoke in a former article of the utility of aiming at enlargement of the chest by a system of voluntary and frequent inspirations. Especially should this be practised by persons in sedentary life, by people with imperfect development of the pulmonary organs, by persons liable to a development of phthisis or consumption, and by nearly all young persons. If it were inculcated by teachers in our schools, and insisted on judiciously, there is little doubt that it would tend powerfully to longevity and health. But it is true in some cases it cannot be done, as, where there is tubercular deposit, with ulcerations and soreness, or inflammation, general or local.

I would like to mention a sanitary and very simple expedient for persons who suffer from languid appetite, and feeble action of the digestive organs. It is this: Ride in a wagon without springs, on a smooth road. Of course invalids, in some cases, cannot do this without injury. There are some organizations so delicate, as not to bear the jar. But in a large proportion of cases we think the moderate and continuous jar, for a longer or shorter time, according to circumstances, will be found to act as an excellent tonic and appetizer. An hour might be long enough for some, while six or eight hours might be none too much for others. Let a wise discretion direct in different cases. Some have a great partiality for horseback riding, and this may answer well in a proportion of cases. But the jolting and excitement are not adapted for all; while the steady, moderate, and even concussion or percussion imparted to the whole frame in the method first mentioned is excellent for those who can bear it without pain, or excessive fatigue.

There is a difficulty experienced by some persons at intervals. I refer to exquisite soreness and tenderness of the gums. There is in such instances, of course, a degree of inflammation. Those who suffer in this way would be glad to know what to do. We reply—first, beware of that intestinal inaction known as costiveness. This should be remedied by diet, coarse bread, plenty of fruit, and sometimes a mild laxative medicine. (A mouthful or two of bran, eaten uncooked, will act laxatively.) Second, look out for the teeth. They may be decayed, or food may be lodged beneath the partially detached gums, or tartar may have accumulated, acting as a continual irritant. These evils should be attended to. Third, an excellent plan in such cases of occasional inflammations, and habitual tenderness, is by a vigorous effort, every morning at rising, to convert the mouth into a kind of temporary air-pump. Every person knows how to do this. Seek by repeated efforts at suction to relieve the distended blood-vessels. The saliva will in some instances become immediately tinged with blood, and the effort should be continued until the congestion is for the time relieved. Perseverance in this plan will, we think, go far to prevent the recurrence of these distressing mouth-inflammations; in some cases so severe as to render eating almost impossible.

Another trouble to which many persons are subject, is a foul breath. Those who are conscious of this evil (and an evil it surely is) are often themselves much annoyed, because they justly fear to become obnoxious or offensive to others. The cause of this difficulty may be decay of the teeth, an unrinsed mouth, the use of tobacco, indigestion, costiveness, catarrh, and especially any imperfectness in the action of the excretory organs, or those which throw off the waste of the system. If what are called the emunctories fail in their action of relieving the body of all impurities; then, that which is thus retained may be detected in the breath, since the pulmonary organs are taxed to throw off that which should be removed through the pores of the skin or other avenues. Hence, a reasonable care should be used to keep the skin free of obstruction by frictions or ablutions, or both, to obviate costiveness, and, if possible, to enlarge the capacity of the lungs, so that the waste naturally accomplished through this avenue may not be retarded and concentrated.

A person of my acquaintance, who had but one lung, and who had very poor teeth, and who used morphine habitually and freely (producing constipation), naturally had a foul breath. Sometimes correctives may be used to advantage, or rather the unpleasantness may be disguised by the use of aromatic or other substances. The most effective means of this kind, perhaps, which could be used, are found in a simple and very excellent little inhaler, known as "Cutler's Pocket Inhaler," in connection with which a prepared and beautiful combination of Carbolic Acid with Iodine is used as the material inhaled. This is, indeed, an expedient designed not merely to disguise, but to neutralize and correct the impurity of a bad breath. Especially in every case of unwholesome secretion from the lining membrane of the mouth, the fauces, the bronchial tubes, or the pulmonary cells themselves, does the contact of the inhaled fluid tend to act with good effect, to improve the secretions, and purify the respirative channels. It is also recommended by high medical authority for use in catarrh, accompanied by vexatious and offensive secretions. The instrument and medicine are furnished at $2. The writer can give directions to any who might wish to obtain them.

Lastly, we have only time to mention one thing more, to wit, an almost certain expedient for the cure, or more properly prevention, of a most unwelcome visitor, commonly called a felon. We have known the efficacy of this for many years, although we have not seen it current in the papers until quite recently. The remedy is simply emplastrum epispasticum, or common blister plaster. But observe, it must be applied early, as soon as the needle point sensation is felt, which so distinctly betokens the approach of the sly and fierce intruder. When you have the sensation of a thorn or sliver in the finger, and can find none, look out. Have your remedy ready, and lay on a circular piece, an inch in diameter, and one eighth or tenth of an inch in thickness, and keep it on several hours, or until the skin begins to rise; then take it off and put on a little tallow.

Alas! alas! for all the ills of this poor mortality of man! Alas for the ten thousand dangers and pains! O, when will the Restorer speak an Almighty word, and end the misery and mischief forever? Poor earth cries; poor man groans; creation is in pain. Sin has wrought tremendous havoc.

NEVER ANSWERED BACK.

The words might be sharp, harsh, censorious, or even bitter, it mattered not, she threw nothing back, but met them all with the same sweet spirit of calm endurance. She was often placed in very trying circumstances, but her self-control never left her; her patient kindness remained unchanged.

When a mere child, her mother gave, as it were, the care of the entire family into her tender hands, and kissed her a last farewell. Tender, delicate child that she was, and yet so strong, so firm in goodness! Her father, hasty, irritable, at times unreasonable, was most exacting in his requirements; but she met his various moods with patient, forgiving love.

Her brothers and sisters were passionate, fitful, and trying, but their misdemeanors were never visited with sharp rebuke. She never answered back to their peevish and complaining words.

I have seen sadness come over her countenance like a heavy cloud, and large tear-drops roll slowly down her fair cheeks, but no temper-flashes ever disturbed the quiet beauty of her face, no violent emphasis or unlovely accents broke the melody of her sweet voice. I've seen her slowly leave the room to avoid a conflict, and once, through some misunderstanding she received a painfully upbraiding letter, she stole away softly to her chamber, and afterwards she told me "That she hastened to God to get right feelings quickly."

One day she was telling me of a particular trial with one of the wayward children, and I asked, "Well, what did you say?"

She answered, "O, nothing. I only kept still. You know it does not not make things better to answer back."

"But what did you do?" I again asked.

"I just waited, as patiently as I could, until she got over it."

"Keep still." How wise, how heroic, how beautiful to keep still and bear in silence sharp, passionate words. "Just waited." How admirable the grace of patience, to wait until the furious storm of anger is over, and never increase it by the utterance of a single word.

How sweet to see little children turn silently away from contention; and how beautiful for young people to abstain from answering back. —Ex.

AN INTERESTING SIGHT.

"We have seen," says a writer, "from two to six great hearty boys siting by the kitchen stove, toasting their feet and cracking jokes, while their mother, a slender woman, has gone to the wood-pile for wood, to the well for water, or to the meat-house for frozen steak for breakfast. This is not as it should be.

There is much work about the house too hard for a woman; heavy lifting, hard extra steps, which should be done by those more able. Boys, don't let your mother do it all, especially if she is a feeble woman. Dull, prosy house-work is irksome at the best. It is long work, too, it being impossible to tell when it is done; and then, on the morrow, the whole is to be gone over with again. There is more of it than one is apt to think.

We wish some busy, all-day housekeeper, the arrangement of whose house is about as inconvenient as it can be, a not uncommon state of things, would count her steps taken in one day, and let us have the result in miles; let it be noted how many times from the stove to the wood-pile, to the pump, and up and down stairs, and especially how many times from the stove to the buttery."

We know a mother of seven "great hearty boys," who will say, "It wasn't my boys, this writer saw toasting their feet, etc., while their mother went to the wood-pile for wood."

We think most of those boys ever regarded it as a duty and a pleasure to help lighten the burden, and save the steps of that dear mother. And now she is old, the thought of it is a source of comfort to her and to them. And we trust the above exhortation will lead all our young friends to be ready to help and comfort their mothers.—Well Spring.

AN OBEDIENT BOY.

A company of boys were playing very earnestly one day, and were evidently enjoying themselves finely. One, in particular, seemed to be the leader of their sports, and his whole heart was in the play.

Just as he was proposing a new game, and instructing his comrades about it, a neighboring window was thrown up, and a sweet, gentle voice called,

"Charley, your father wants you."

The window was closed at once, and the gentle lady immediately withdrew, not even stopping to see if Charley heard, much less to ask him if he was coming.

The boy was so busily playing that it seemed doubtful if the mother's quiet voice would reach his ear, but she knew her boy, and the words had hardly escaped her lips before everything was dropped, playmates and play forsaken, and Charley was within the doors, in answer to the call.

I think I have seen a boy somewhere, who does not obey quite like that. Do you know what his name is?—Little Christian.

A boy who early smokes is rarely known to make a man of much energy of character, and generally lacks physical and muscular as well as mental energy. We would warn boys to shun tobacco as a deadly poison.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

WATCH!

Watch! 'tis our Lord's command
Unto his waiting Bride;
A stranger in a desert land,
And foes on every side.

Watch! thou hast reached the days
Of peril, long foretold;
Now heavenward fix thy steadfast gaze,
King Jesus to behold.

Watch! signs are flitting past
That speak his coming near;
The hours of night are fleeing fast—
Soon, soon he will appear.

Watch! lo, the morning breaks!
Wipe all thy tears away;
Put on thy bridal robes, and deck
Thee for the festal day.

HADES.

HENRY CONSTABLE.

There are few subjects connected with theology on which so much variety of thought, and so much confusion of thought exists as on the subject of Hades, or the intermediate state of man. By this state we mean the condition of man from the period of death to that of resurrection.

The variety of thought upon this question is quite apparent. One has only to take up the different works, or portions of works, that have been written upon it in order to see this. The boasted unanimity of Rome utterly disappears before this mysterious question. Protestant theologians are here not at much greater variance with Roman controversialists than they are with one another.

The confusion of thought that exists upon it is equally apparent. Writers, who, upon most other subjects, exhibit consistency and clearness, are here utterly lost in a maze of hopeless perplexity, inconsistency, and self-contradiction. For examples, we may point to the learned Archbishop Usher's chapter on "Limbus Patrum," in his "Answer to a Jesuit," and to Bishop Pearson's article on "The Descent of Christ into Hell," in his "Exposition of the Creed." Neither of these great writers is evidently here at home. Perplexity and confusion of thought are evident at every step they take in their argument. Some great fundamental misconception must needs exist to account for the utter confusion of minds such as those of Pearson and Usher.

Nor can it be said that the question is one of little or even of secondary importance. The vast amount of thought that has been expended on it is proof of this. Man can never be indifferent to the question of the nature of that state to which all the past generations of his race have gone; in which those whom he has loved now abide; to which he feels himself drawing nearer each day and hour that he lives. And it is also certain that there are few questions which have afforded a basis, real or fictitious, to a greater number of the doctrinal questions that have agitated Christendom, from the earliest ages to our own. One half of the vast doctrinal system of the church of Rome is built upon what she supposes to be the intermediate state of the dead. New theories, or revivals of old ones, swaying multitudes of minds, ground themselves upon what is thought of this state. Systems and sects would collapse and fall to the ground if their support from this mysterious source were withdrawn.

No man, then, can be charged with undertaking a needless, an uninteresting, an unimportant task, when he applies himself to the best of his ability to this question. If he has only truth upon his side, if he can only make clear that which is now lost in hopeless confusion, and make that certain which is now confidently disputed, he cannot be said to have written to no purpose or in vain.

For our part we would not venture upon this field if we did not think that we had something to say which was worth a hearing. We do not claim for our thoughts absolute novelty. We are not of opinion that absolute novelty is any recommendation in our branch of science,—that of theology. We have met with the main features of our view in many writers, both modern and ancient. But in some of these it is so mixed up with other questions to which chief prominence is given, and in others discredited by the accompaniment of erroneous views upon fundamental doctrines, that there appears to be urgent reason for presenting it before the christian public in a form such as we now propose. To the lovers of truth in every church of Christ, we commend this effort to clear up and establish upon its Scriptural basis a most important question. We ask but for a candid hearing. We ask but for readers who will say, "If the view here advocated be indeed God's truth, we will accept it with all our hearts."

CHAPTER I.—MAN IN HIS ORIGIN.

I. It will scarcely be disputed that in this inquiry into the intermediate state of man, the preliminary inquiry must be, What is man? The understanding of human nature, so far as it can be understood by us, will of necessity be found the very best guide to our understanding what is affirmed of it in any of its conditions.

II. Now here we have no doubt whatsoever that most christian inquirers have approached this fundamental question from the wrong side. As it appears to us, we have, mostly, formed our opinions of human nature from some philosophical system, and then, if we have not deemed any further inquiry altogether superfluous, applied ourselves to Scripture chiefly for the purpose of confirming a foregone conclusion. This appears to us to be altogether and completely an error. To the believer in the divine authority of Scripture there can be no dispute as to whether it or any human philosopher can speak upon this point with the greater weight. The only question can be as to whether Scripture has here given us information. If it has, it cannot be disputed that the Maker of man is the one who is best able to inform us as to the nature of the creature of his hands. One verse of the Bible on the nature of man, on the source of his life, on the meaning of his death, must outweigh a whole treatise of Plato, Aristotle, or Epicurus.

III. Now certainly, when we read the Scriptures with any care, we will repeatedly find that they do speak on this question. They do not indeed speak on it in the way of formal treatise; but they seldom speak in this way of any of their doctrines. Systems of theology may be drawn from Scripture, but Scripture itself does not, generally, propound theology in this systematic way. Its definitions and descriptions of man, in all his conditions, in his rude origin and mature completion, in life, and death, and resurrection, will be found by any fair inquirer to be just as full and systematic as its declarations upon upon almost any other subject on which it treats. We will then endeavor to learn what we can of man from our Bible. If we are not greatly mistaken it will give us as full and as clear ideas of him as we require. More than this we cannot ask. We also believe that any real additional information beyond what we have in the Bible is not to be found in philosophical treatises upon human nature. They may be full where Scripture is only brief; but where they pretend to add to the real amount derivable from Scripture, we are quite satisfied that they are at best but guessing, and are generally wrong.

Almost the earliest, and certainly the fullest account we have given us of human nature is in Gen. 2: 7. It is worthy of our closest consideration. It is the word of the Maker telling us what the creature was which he made. The words are—"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

IV. No careful reader of this verse can fail to see that the creation of man is described in two distinct stages, in each of which he is spoken of as man, though his condition in these two stages is widely different. The first stage is the creation of the organized body and figure in a lifeless state: "God formed man of the dust of the ground." Here we have the figure as it lay lifeless and thoughtless. And yet this figure was man. We cannot dispute this, for God tells us so himself. It was man before he could think, or feel, or breathe.

V. That we are not straining language with any desire to accommodate it to a theory is evident from the fact that writers and reasoners of the highest ability, and whose opinions on the subject of our present work differ altogether from ours, have taken the very same view of it that we do. "Man," says Bishop Hall, is his "Contemplations," "God did first form, then inspire." "Man," says Augustine, "was up to this only body." "He was already man," says Tertullian, "who as yet was but earth."

VI. Now this is a most important point to be clearly understood. We have brought before us in this verse what man originally was. We have here told us by God himself all that we can truly and properly claim as our own. Here is our original. It is not much. It is dust. This is a great point to be clear upon. Man did not become man after the breath of life was breathed into him; he was man before. He was man when as yet he had no life; when he had neither spirit nor soul, whatever ideas are to be attached to those terms, placed within him by his Maker. "God formed man of the dust of the ground." We insist upon the plain meaning of this Scripture to its fullest extent. We are here not told that God formed man out of dust and spirit, or out of dust and soul, but out of dust and dust only. Man has now soul and spirit. They belong to him so long as God leases them to him. But the time was, be it long or short, when he had neither one nor other, and yet was man. And our plain inference is that the time might come when he would be bereft of both, and yet, when that which was thus bereft of soul and spirit would still be man.

VII. It will be well here to give the opposite view of man as to what he is thought properly to be, and to which we suppose the text in Gen. 2: 7, to be flatly opposed. It is the Platonic view of human nature, now in its main features thoroughly incorporated into our prevailing Christian theology, so that to most minds it appears to be as much a part of divine revelation as the existence of God, the incarnation of Christ, or future rewards and punishments. According, then, to Plato, man was formed out of the dust of the ground. Man was properly a soul, which, for one reason or other, was united to a body. This union to body Plato considered an evil, and he therefore regarded death as a blessing in itself, inasmuch as it dissolved the undesirable union, and freed the soul, i. e., the man, from that which was a clog and a burden to him. Death was, in Plato's view, not the cessation of existence to man, but the change of his mode and condition of life, a change to the good man of sure and unmitigated blessing.

VIII. It will be quite plain to any one acquainted with the theology of Christendom how deeply the Platonic idea has interpenetrated it. We do not, of course, say that Christian divines have adopted the entire theory of Plato. Few of them, for instance, agree with his idea that the soul had an existence long before its union with the body; they generally suppose, we believe, that the body of each man is formed prior to, or at all events, contemporaneously with his soul. Again, few of them believe with Plato, that the dissolution of soul and body will be permanent. The Christian doctrine of a bodily resurrection forbids them to suppose this. Their theory of necessity most grievously disparages the importance of the resurrection of the body, because it teaches that man has a true life without the body; but still, few of them openly dispute the idea of the re-union of soul and body, however little they can possibly see it to be required. But the idea of Plato that what he supposes the soul is the true and proper man, and that the body is not the the true and proper man, has undoubtedly pervaded Christian theology to its very core. Thus Bishop Butler, one of the greatest thinkers that England has produced, has devoted a chapter of his grand "Analogy" to prove that "our organized bodies are no part of ourselves," and that man can and will exist in the truth of his nature, when his body lies in the grave in dust. And John Wesley, a man of profound mind, has thus defined his idea of man's nature: "I am now," he says, "an immortal spirit, strangely commingled with a little portion of earth. In a short time I am to quit this tenement of clay, and remove into another state."

It will not be disputed that Butler and Wesley here represent the current opinion of Christendom. They do not hold the body to be the true man, or essential to the idea of man. Man is, with them, a soul, which may or may not inhabit the body, but which, whether inhabiting the body or not inhabiting it, is the true and proper man. This opinion, we believe to be the very foundation stone of an amazing amount of false doctrine. This false philosophy regarding human nature has tainted the theology of centuries.

IX. Nor can it be said that it is only the text of Gen. 2: 7, which teaches a philosophy of our nature directly opposed to that of Butler and Wesley. All subsequent Scriptures give us the very same idea which we have taken from this old text. Thus when man had sinned, and God came to him to pronounce his doom, God reiterates in even fuller terms the first description of his proper nature. He tells Adam that he is to return to the ground, for out of it he was taken; for "dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3: 19. How different, how opposed to Wesley's definition—"I am an immortal spirit, strangely commingled with a little portion of earth!" We surely cannot place the two definitions together without perceiving that they convey different and opposing ideas. The idea conveyed in God's words was that adopted by the old saints. Thus when Abraham takes upon him to intercede for Sodom he says, "Behold, now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but [only] dust and ashes."

X. If we look into the accounts of Scripture, we find also that where death has taken place, when spirit and soul have left the body, when the body has been brought to that very condition in which Adam's body was ere God breathed into it the breath of life, yet this body thus reft of all life is still regarded in Scripture as the man. Popular theology teaches that in death the body is but like a garment laid aside from use; or a dwelling abandoned, while the wearer of the garment, or the dweller in the house, i. e., the soul, the real man, has gone elsewhere. But certainly this is not the view taken in Scripture. The very opposite view is there taken. The body, dead and lifeless though it be, is there looked on as the man. Thus, whenever we read of burial throughout Scripture, we invariably read that Sarah, or Abraham, or Jacob, or Moses, or others as the case may be, are buried in the grave. We never read anything of our common language on monumental stones and in funeral sermons, that all that is mortal of such or such a one lies in the grave, while he has himself gone elsewhere. The person, the individual, the man, he who was once alive, is throughout Scripture spoken of as lying in the grave.

XI. We will just look at one or two instances of the kind which are related at some length in Scripture. The widow woman at Zarephath has lost her son by death. Breath, spirit, soul, life, all have left the corpse. It lies colorless and rigid and lifeless. Yet Elijah regards this lifeless figure as the widow's son. "And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, and laid him upon his own bed." The dead body is regarded by the prophet as the man. In the very same way our blessed Lord speaks. Lazarus his friend has died. Where did Christ think and say that Lazarus was? In the grave. "Where have ye laid him?" he said to the standers by, and they pointed out the grave. Over the grave stands the Lord of life, and he addresses what lay in that grave as Lazarus. "He cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. And he that was dead came forth."

XII. We will now draw attention to another Scripture, which establishes our view that with the body is essentially bound up the personality of man; that without the body it is not allowed that the man can be said to be. "I am an immortal spirit," says John Wesley. John Wesley thought that this spirit was his true self, that where it was he was, and where it went he went. But our great Teacher teaches an opposite doctrine. It is the evening of his resurrection from the grave. As his disciples speak of the wonders of that day, "Jesus himself stood in the midst of them." At the sight, "they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed they had seen a spirit." Jesus proceeds to disabuse them of their error. He tells them—"Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself." In the mind of Jesus his body was absolutely essential to his personality. A spirit, whatever ideas we may attach to that term, was not, and could not be, Jesus himself. He does not allow us for a moment to suppose that he could exist as a man independently of his body. Our modern notion that the true I, the true man, is a spirit, or a soul, which may leave the body, and yet without the body be the man, is rejected by our Lord.

XIII. If we are content, then, to take the teaching of Scripture as our guide, we will see that its teaching is that man in his origin was made of earth in the very same way that all the lower creatures were created from it; that to any true conception of man the idea of body is absolutely essential; that no subsequent addition of spirit or soul, whatever be the ideas we attach to these terms, can assume to have superseded this idea of man; that as they were once disassociated from man, viz., ere God had given them to man, so they may again be disassociated from man; that man may return to his old condition ere he had them at all, and the dead body they have left is then the man, the person, the self.—Rainbow.

THE WATCHMAN'S CRY.

Words by M. M. Weaver. Music by Geo. E. Lee.

2 O cold and dark the night has been,
And enemies have triumphed long;
But now, beyond the reach of sin,
At last we'll sing the conqueror's song.
No more we'll weep o'er parted friends,
No more we'll linger by their grave,
Thank God, our every trial ends,
For Christ has come his saints to save.
CHORUS.

3 Before us rise celestial hills,
And fields of pleasure ever green:
No chilling winds, no scorching rays,
And no decay shall there be seen.
Our songs of joy shall ne'er grow old;
Beauty and youth shall e'er remain,
Long parted friends together meet,
And never, never part again.
CHORUS.

4 O hallelujah! let the cry
Go through the earth from pole to pole,
Behold the heavenly Bridegroom's nigh,
He's welcome to the faithful soul.
With waiting hearts we bid him come,
We'll gladly answer to his call,
And with the bright angelic throng,
We'll gladly crown him Lord of all.
CHORUS.

DEFINITE TIME.

N. H. BARBOUR.

"When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory."

"Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor her, yea, the set time is come."—Ps. 102.

God has certainly set the time when he will bring again Zion; when her warfare will be ended, and his people see eye to eye; and it is then "he will appear in his glory." Many of our brethren seem shy of those portions of God's word in which definite time is mentioned. But if the subject be investigated in the right spirit; with no dogmatical assertions; simply with the view to learn what God has spoken, I think harm to the cause of Christ could not result. Surely it cannot be wrong to investigate Scripture on this subject. It is true, men have no right to set the time for the coming of Jesus. But it is not only right, it is a positive duty, to search for all the light we can get on this most important event. Many say—"It makes no difference when the Lord comes, if we are only ready." To me it does make a difference. I cannot say to our High Priest—"Come, Lord Jesus, and come QUICKLY," and then turn to my brother and say—"It makes no difference to me when he comes."

Angels and patriarchs, holy men, apostles and prophets, have all earnestly desired to know when Christ would come in his glory. I, too, feel the same earnest desire, deep down in my heart, to know "what, and what manner of TIME" the Spirit of Christ which was in the prophet, did signify. And God being my helper, I will continue to search, and "search diligently," and never, NEVER give over until I fall asleep, or see the King in his beauty. Disappointments may be bitter; that of 1843 was exceedingly so to me; and I have never seen an argument that satisfied me since then, until the four strong arguments which God has given for 1873. The eating of that "open book" in the 1843 message was sweet. O what love, what unity, what strong faith we then had! But the digestion was to be bitter. The disappointment followed; and those who passed through it will never forget the bitterness of that cup. Perhaps that which God put to the lips of Abraham was not more so, when the old man started on that three days' journey to offer his son, his only son, as a burnt offering. He stood the trial, and did not draw back. He went on his way; built the altar, prepared the wood, bound his son, and nerving himself for the last sad act of obedience, grasped the knife, and with uplifted arm aimed at the life of his boy. But God's eye was on him, and quicker than thought an angel was sent to stay his hand. "Stay thy hand, Abraham," said God. Now I know thee.

If God would try us,—and surely nothing has been so severe a trial to the Advent people, as the passing of the time—shall we turn our backs on this part of God's word, and say "no more time for me"—"A burnt child dreads the fire," etc., etc? "If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

God has called out the Advent people. A hundred years ago, men were waiting for death; and so many good christians are today, and pray that God will prepare them for death; but when he comes, he will have a few, at least, who can say—"Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us." Now he has a waiting people. They came out on time. What would the 1843 movement been with the 1843 left out? They will go in on time. At the end, the vision will speak and not lie. And depend upon it, "the wise shall understand." Then, dearly beloved, do not be afraid to investigate, but let us be meek and have the Spirit of Christ.

THE COMING STRUGGLE,

BETWEEN THE CHURCH AND THE POWERS OF DARKNESS, SHOWING A CONFEDERACY OF SPIRITUALISTS, CATHOLICS, ETC., AT HAND, WITH THE FALSE CHRIST AT THEIR HEAD, AND A PERSECUTION ATTENDING.

I. K. LOMBARD.

NUMBER FIVE.

The Man of Sin (2 Thess. 2: 3–8) has been applied by most all in former years to the popes; but since Spiritualism came up, many are inclined to apply it to that. But, as Catholics and Spiritualists are to be allied together in the confederacy, may we not regard the Man of Sin as the false Christ, at the head of the confederacy, and hence the offspring and development of both systems? The popes of the past have but faintly filled the picture of arrogance, blasphemy, and lawlessness, attributed to the Man of Sin, and have still less shown the "all power, and signs, and lying wonders." But the head of the confederacy, as the offspring of Spiritualism, with all its licentiousness and blasphemy, will undoubtedly fill the picture fully. He is represented as one whose coming is "with all power, and signs, and lying wonders," and "with all deceivableness of unrighteousness"—all of which we may expect from one who is to be the embodiment of Spiritualism. But, in filling the position of a false Christ, by claiming to be the millennial Messiah, we may expect him to far exceed all the shocking blasphemies we have yet heard in Spiritualism, and prove himself "the Man of Sin, . . . the Son of Perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." 2 Thess. 2: 3–4. As this Man of Sin is to be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming, his work must be located just before that event; and for this reason also he must be the head of the Anti-Christian Confederacy, and the same as the false Christ of Matthew and Mark.

Such seems, in substance, the general scheme of the confederacy, which, on assuming all power and authority, embraces Spiritualists, Catholics, and others gathered under their standard, and proceeds to declare that all old institutions must now pass away, to give place to the new order of things, as the commencement of the millennium. Their plan will contemplate the union of all nations, though in proceeding with the work, it seems that time does not allow them to go much beyond the limits of Christendom. The image of the beast—the confederacy—will now "speak and cause that as many as will not worship the image of the beast shall be killed." The worship of the image here seems to imply the taking the oath of allegiance to the confederacy, and hence is a virtual acknowledgment that the new arrangement is the millennial kingdom, and the person at the head of it is the world's Messiah.

In carrying out the work of the reconstruction of the rebel States, only with more severity, as the penalty of refusing the oath in this case is death, and confiscation of property. In administering the oath of allegiance, they will probably allow the people to a given date—perhaps thirty or sixty days—in which they will be required to go to a certain point named, as their county seat perhaps, and there take the oath to support the new order of things, or be dealt with as traitors or rebels after the time expires. And that they may be able to detect any such delinquents at sight, they provide that all who take the oath, "both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, shall receive a mark," as a token of loyalty, "in their right hand or in their forehead." They further provide that "none shall buy nor sell save those who have the mark." And as not to buy nor sell is in effect not to possess, it implies that those who refuse the mark shall have their property confiscated, which has ever been the policy of persecutors. I hope that the Lord's stewards will consider this matter, and so make good use of their property in God's cause, and not leave it for the enemies of God to revel on in a little from this.

It seems evident that the general tide of society will set in favor of the confederacy at the first. Since the false Christ comes "with all deceivableness of unrighteousness," and "with all power and signs and lying wonders" in support of his claims, "insomuch that if it were possible he would deceive the very elect," it seems hardly possible that those who have neither the heavenly wisdom nor heavenly protection of the elect should fail to become his victims. With a philosophy so liberal to their natural inclinations, and a prospect of sharing in the general equalization of land and other property among the loyal; and with such wonderful miracles, and such constant communications from the spirit world in support of the new arrangement, it would seem to a careless worldling that their inclination, interest, and reverence, all combined to urge them into an enthusiastic acceptance. Some men of wealth will no doubt take exceptions to the plan of dividing their property among others, but will finally submit to take the oath, receive the mark, and share equally with others, as better than to stand out at the peril of their lives and get nothing.

Many, probably, who at heart would prefer the Bible and its religion, but do not enjoy that religion, nor understand the prophecies, will allow their scruples to be stifled by the thought that the gospel dispensation, like the Mosaic in the past, must have its day; and that the New Dispensation, since it is to be the millennium, should change things as much or more than that did; and that perhaps the changes now being made as suggested by the spirits, and suited to the "progress of the age," may agree with what theologians and divines have called the "hidden," "mystical," or "spiritual" sense of the Bible. Others, no doubt, will earnestly oppose the new development as subversive of all moral distinction, and contrary to all that is sacred; but unable thus to control the current of public opinion, so strongly setting against them, and dreading the popular clamor and the penalty of refusing the mark of the beast, and seeing no asylum in standing out (but with the despised and faithful few who are periling their lives by their opposition), they will finally but unwillingly yield, and sadly submit to be numbered with the rising tide of scoffers. O my soul, let me not be gathered with the scoffers, if I have to lose my life a thousand times.

The triumphs of the confederacy will be so complete, and its pretensions to being the millennial kingdom will be so speciously realized, according to the wishes of their worldly minds, that it will be hailed by all parties as the long expected "good time coming," and the crowning glory of this "age of progress." And the false Christ, at the head of the confederacy, will be hailed as the long expected "Coming Man," and the best exponent of the wants and wishes of the New Age. The Spiritualists will hail the new arrangement as the complete triumph of their scheme; the Catholics, as a glorious revival of their long-lost supremacy and power; the Protestant churches, as the glad realization of their hopes of a temporal millennium, which so many have doubted and opposed; while the politicians will enjoy the Universal Republic; the philanthropist will delight in the United Brotherhood of nations; the infidel will exult at the seeming triumph over Christianity and the Bible; and with these, the libertine will hail the new era as an age of free indulgence; the roughs and rowdies will hold high carnival over the opening of the prison doors, and the general license to "do as you please"; the lazy, idle rabble will find their millennium in the thought that in the general distribution of land, and the equalization of property, they will be rich enough without work; and all will hold a general jubilee, to celebrate the mutual triumphs of their various aspirations, and congratulate each other on the bright prospects opened to them for the future.

The triumph of the confederacy will seem complete, and the enthusiasm of the populace will know no bounds. In the intoxication of the hour all work will be neglected, and as each one will have a plenty of money to revel on, a season of festivity and pleasure will prevail everywhere. The prevalence of the idea that men are released from all past obligation to law, religion, and conscience, will encourage a general tide of dissipation in all directions.

A NEW CREATURE IN CHRIST.

J. C. SMITH.

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." 2 Cor. 5: 17.

In writing on this verse, we shall not be able to advance but a little compared to what there is recorded for our instruction and edification. Yet what I have to write, I trust will be to the glory of God. I hope that some may be stirred up to seek after holiness of heart and purity of life, and the life they now live may be lived by "faith on the Son of God." The marginal reading of the verse is is follows—"Therefore [or, for this reason] if any man be in Christ, let him be a new creature." Jesus, our great Teacher, has taught this lesson in many places, and has declared that by faith we are made "whole." Faith of the right kind will give perfect soundness, and that is what we want. The Lord would not have us sew "new cloth unto an old garment"; yet he would have us be new creatures. He would also rather have us either cold or hot, than to be lukewarm, which implies neither; and because men were neither, he would spew them out of his mouth. Thus Jesus has brought out character in different forms. There is no middle ground to take, if we would become new creatures in Christ. There is but one true way, and that is by "repentance," "faith," and obedience. These will work a life of purity to all who follow in the "way."

The natural man is dead in trespasses and sins. He knows not God by nature, being a "child of wrath" and an alien "from the commonwealth of Israel, and a stranger from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." In this state, he may well be termed the "old man." His character is made manifest in many ways. The apostle describes him in the third of Romans, as one whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness, and whose feet were swift to shed blood, destruction and misery being in his ways, and the way of peace he hath not known; neither is there any fear of God before his eyes. Thus his ways are ways of darkness, and in him is no light at all. Chambering and wantonness, strife and envying, witchcraft, hatred, malice, guile, adultery, fornication, seditions, heresies, variance, murder, drunkenness, revelings, banquetings, and many abominable idolatries, all of which are of darkness, and proceed from the natural man, prompted by the prince of the power of the air, or the spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience.

Now in order to be a new man, or creature, we are to "cast off the works of darkness, and . . . put on the armor of light," and then let our "light so shine" that others, seeing our good works, may be led to glorify our Father in heaven. "Wherefore, putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbor." The conversation of the "old man" we put away, and of the new we put on, "which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness" by Jesus Christ. Thus our new life-power comes from Christ; "for we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them"; and so, by having Christ's righteousness, we shall be made new "in knowledge, after the image of Him that created him; where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free; but Christ is all and in all." His ways, then, will be our ways; his mind our mind; and instead of having the spirit of the prince of darkness, we shall have the Spirit of the Prince of peace, and by faith live a new life. Old things are passed away, and all things have become new. Wherein we were once blind, we now see; dead once, but now alive; new in Christ; made every whit whole; cleansed from all sin. Where sin abounded, grace now much more abounds; and so our life becomes one of joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, virtue, knowledge, godliness, brotherly-kindness, and all the graces that make up the new life, flowing from Christ the living head.

"Jesus paid it all,
All to Christ we owe;
Sin had left a crimson stain,
He washed it white as snow."

And now, to conclude, let me say to the dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad,—let us abide in Christ, the new and living way that has been brought to light through the vail, and ever walk worthy of Him who has called us from darkness to light, and show to a guilty world the reality of the new man in Christ, that when he appeareth, we may be like him, and see him as he is.

"Make haste, O man! to live,
Thy time is almost o'er;
Oh! sleep not, dream not, but arise,
The Judge is at the door.
Make haste, O man! to live."

BREAD AND STONES.—A nobleman advised a benevolent French bishop to add a new wing to his house, in the modern style of architecture. The bishop, however, replied, "The difference, my lord, between your advice and that which the devil gave to our Savior is, that Satan advised Jesus to change the stones into bread, and you desire me to turn the bread of the poor into stones." We see in these days much of the bread needed by God's starving poor turned into stones in the shape of gothic piles, steeples, and turrets. What will the Master say about it when he comes?

ZION'S BEAUTY is "the perfection of beauty." It is moral beauty; it is spiritual beauty; it is the beauty of holiness. It is desired of saints; it is admired and possessed of angels; it is the jewel of Christ; it is the delight of God.

WESTERN TRIP.

We parted with our friends at Winsted, eight o'clock Thursday morning, May 30th, and took passage on the Western Ct. R. R. for Millerton, where we made connection with the Harlem road. We enjoyed our ride through the section of country where we had so often journeyed in former days to publish the glad tidings of the coming kingdom. Many hallowed associations cluster around those hills and valleys, where we held meetings in company with Bro. Mathewson in school-houses, groves, and meeting-houses, in Colebrook, Norfolk, Canaan, and Salisbury. Blest be the remembrance of those days, when we saw scores of sinners converted to Christ. But we will not linger to talk of these things, though we might do so with much satisfaction.

Having arrived at Millerton at ten A. M., we waited till 12.40 P. M., when we left for Albany, connecting at Chatham Four Corners with the 8.30 A. M. express from Boston, which took us away with rapid speed through a fine section of country. The season is more backward than in the vicinity of Boston, the apple trees just beginning to bloom. Arriving at Albany we traveled with earnest speed on the New York Central road to Rochester, thence to Suspension Bridge, where we took the Gt. Western for Detroit; then the Michigan Central for Chicago. In going through Canada, from Suspension Bridge to Detroit, we pass over a fine farming country, of level land, good soil, and very heavy timbered, resembling "The Timber Land" in Iowa. As in the Mohawk Valley, N. Y., the farmers here were ploughing for their summer crops, as they were in February in California. Good wheat is raised in Canada, and other crops. The summer is short but earnest, and comes suddenly.

Leaving the Queen's Dominion, we crossed the Detroit river in a large ferry boat to Detroit, in Michigan, where we found the Michigan Central train waiting our arrival. This is a superior road in every respect. The cars are new and elegant, of the most approved pattern, the road bed smooth, and the average speed about thirty-five miles an hour, through a very fine country. We enjoyed the ride deliciously in observing the pleasing scenery, meditation, sleeping, and eating our hygienic food, which we always carry with us in our journeyings. Would that all knew its worth, as well as the writer, from actual experience. What a vast amount of suffering, expense and labor would be removed from social life. A little self-denial at the table affords a large amount of physical enjoyment; while on the other hand, a little foolish gratification of the appetite a few minutes in eating unhealthy food, too much, too fast, or too often, gives one continued bad feeling, a premature old age, and an early grave. The saying is an expressive one—"Many dig their graves with their teeth"; as said the apostle, "Whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame." One of the reforms most needed, and the most difficult to secure, is a reform in diet. We are most fully convinced that nine-tenths of the sickness and bad feelings are caused by an abuse of the stomach. This is no hasty conclusion of ours, but the result of many years of careful observation and experience. We should speak more on the subject, but for the fact that so few are willing to listen. They seem specially sensitive when we say anything against the indulgence of their appetite, in the use of unhealthy food and drink. If most would cut down the quantity one third or one half; spend two or three times more minutes in eating; and not eat more than two-thirds as often, they would find themselves feeling fifty per cent better; and if, in addition to this, they would use strictly healthy food, they would feel a hundred per cent better. Try it.

We arrived in Chicago Friday evening, May 31st, and went at once to our home at Bro. Billings, whom we found still in poor health, but improving from a hard siege with disease. He has a fair prospect of partial recovery, but not of perfect health. He is in good spirits, and loves the blessed hope. We spent the Sabbath, June 2nd, in the city. The Spirit of the Lord was with us in our meetings. Quite a number requested prayer in the evening, and hearty testimonies enlivened the exercises. The people seem anxious to hear about the great truths in which we are interested. The signs of the times are such as to attract their attention, and lead them to think that some great event is really at hand. The exercises of the evening closed with the administration of the Sacrament, enjoyed by a large number.

Bro. Burr will issue this week a new tract on the inheritance, adapted for general circulation. It is the substance of a sermon preached. He has been obliged to give up meetings on the south side, in consequence of not being able to preach three times a day, besides attending to all his other arduous duties.

During the day, while the churches were holding their meetings, Forepaugh's great Menagerie, Museum and Circus, was being prepared in the heart of the city, so as to be ready for exhibition on Monday. Among other things to be seen is a representation of the last supper of our Savior with his disciples, in wax figures.

STRIKES.

The strikes still continue with increased energy and success. The combinations are so strong and extensive that employers are compelled to submit, or stop their business. Capitalists are being placed in a very unpleasant situation, which is daily becoming more uncertain and perilous. The end is not yet; neither is there any bright spot in the future. A state of anarchy is fast approaching, when every lawless one will do as he pleases, and the lovers of order will be subject to mob law. Such is the prospect. We are watching these upheavings in society with much interest, as "latter-day tokens." The tide of evil is rising rapidly, and spreading in all directions. As in the days of Noah, it is high time for all who wish to be saved to enter within the heavenly ark—Christ. It is not safe to delay another hour. Let us warn our neighbors as did Lot in Sodom, and hasten away from the city of destruction, before the falling of the fiery tempest. There is no time to spend in tarrying to see the foolish follies that are attracting the attention of the careless throng rushing down the broad road to eternal ruin. Let us all "strike" against Satan, and never do another stroke of work to advance his interests. While his host of emissaries may try to intimidate us, and make us turn back to his service, let us stand with invincible firmness against all his proposals, if it cost us the loss of home, friends, reputation, and even life; remembering that if we love life for Jesus' sake, we secure eternal life in the coming kingdom. Who cannot afford to lose a dollar to save a million? Who cannot afford to lose this short life to secure eternal life? It is time to make a general revolt against Satan, trusting in the Lord for eternal salvation. Deliverance is at hand. It is time to lift up the head and rejoice because of approaching redemption.

"Glad tidings, glad tidings,
The kingdom is near."

"ON TRIAL."

We quote the following from a sermon by Henry Ward Beecher:—

"In the past, the Bible has not been free from controversy and assault. In our day, these assaults are stronger, better aimed, more in alliance with scientific inquiry. Aimed with an acuteness never brought to bear before; but I believe the preponderance of evidence still remains with the Bible. Nevertheless, the campaign is going to be another Waterloo; the ground to some seems to be falling away." Again he says: "He is little conversant with the times, the world, or humanity, who does not know that over religion there hangs, to-day, an amount of doubt and uneasiness which may not be computed. Many are simply unsettled. They say, some things which used to be taught as truths, we know are not truths." The christian religion is on trial. The pressure on every side increases; not from Spiritualism alone, but from the developments of intellect and the progress of ideas. It is forced to take the defensive, and if it can pass triumphantly through the coming crisis, no fears need be entertained for its future."

The theology of the day "is on trial," and "the pressure on every side increases." We do not believe "it can pass triumphantly through the coming crisis." The reason why modern theology cannot pass "through the coming crisis" is because it is not in harmony with the Bible. Many candid, intelligent christians begin to see the wide difference that exists between the plain, simple teachings of the Bible, and the obscure, mystical dogmas of theology, which have so long blinded the eyes of sincere seekers after truth. They begin to see that some things in popular theology are nothing but mere opinions and traditions of men, without one passage of Scripture for their support. Of course the defense will be earnest, and many hard things will be said against those who venture to call in question the "venerable errors" in the sectarian creeds.

"THE RADICAL CLUB."

Boston has a religious association known as the "Radical Club." Ministers, once sound in faith, are now showing sympathy with this "club." In the report of a recent meeting, we find the following from one of their speakers:—

"I think that Christ is the creation of the human mind; for we mistake God very greatly when we think that he is outside of man. I believe that Christ is the God-man; but we cannot find that Christ in any details of the letter. We must build on an ideal."

Such departures from Bible Christianity are becoming common. Infidelity is seizing the reins of orthodoxy, and finds but little opposition; while the pure doctrine of the Bible and holiness of heart are scorned by both, and turned out of doors."

RUN TO AND FRO.

In Daniel's prophecy (chap. 12: 4), it is said that in "the time of the end, many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." There is no doubt in our mind but that we are living in "the time of the end," foretold by the prophet." All the signs of the times are in harmony with such a conclusion. The evidence thickens almost daily. The jots and tittles are filling up rapidly, and soon the last one will be completed. What a solemn, and yet glorious hour is the one in which we are living.

When speaking of Daniel's prophecy, just quoted, Dr. Adam Clarke says:—

"Many shall endeavor to search out the sense (of the prophecy) and knowledge shall be increased by these means."

Matthew Henry says—"They shall read it over and over, shall meditate upon it, sift out the meaning of it, and thus knowledge shall be increased."

Dr. Gill says—"Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased; that is, toward the end of the time appointed, many shall be stirred up to inquire into these things delivered in this book, and will spare no pains or cost to get a knowledge of them; . . . will carefully peruse the writings of such, who have lived before them, who have attempted anything of this kind, and will go far and near to converse with persons that have any understanding of these things; and by such means, with the blessing of God upon them, the knowledge of the book of prophecy will be increased, and things will appear plainer and clearer, the nearer the accomplishment of them is; and especially when prophecy and facts can be compared."

BRO. WM. SHELDON may be expected at the campmeeting in New Hartford, Iowa, commencing June 13th.

RELIGIOUS REVIVALS.—A Mrs. Wilcoxson recently lectured in Lawrence, Kansas, in favor of Spiritualism. At the close of her lecture, as reported in the Lawrence Tribune, she was questioned as follows:—

"Do you believe in the literal resurrection of Jesus?

No. It would be contrary to well known natural laws, the facts of chemistry, etc.

How account for a change of heart in christian conversions?

This question she said she was inclined to treat mirthfully, but supposed it had been asked in all seriousness. She denied that there was any such change, and so there was nothing to account for. Persons may become excited with religious enthusiasm, or alarmed by fears of perdition; but their character remains the same after as before, in such experiences."

We do not see how a person who knows anything about revivals could honestly make such a statement. Does not the reader know of persons whose characters have been changed by christian conversion?

"THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?"

We have just received a new work from London, Eng., entitled, "Man's State in Nature," by W. Griffith, author of "The Entire Evidence on Future Punishment." Bro. Griffith is an able writer, having clear perception, and his publications will make popular theology tremble to its very foundation. Strong men are being raised up in Europe to defend the doctrine for the belief of which we have been shut out of many churches, shunned by the ministers, and called "Infidels"; but we can well afford to bear all this for the truth's sake as it is in Jesus. We are rejoiced to know that many holy, intelligent men are rallying around the standard of truth, willing to leave the consequences in the hands of the Lord. When men love truth more than reputation, or a good salary, then they can give up popular errors, and bear reproach with Jesus.

The following is from Bro. Griffith's chapter headed—"The Soul—what is it?"

"The whole nature of man is popularly embraced under the phrase, 'body and soul.' Sometimes a third element is discriminated from 'body and soul;' as when we speak of the 'mind,' the 'intellect,' or 'reason.' By a still closer analysis it may be maintained that 'spirit,' in particular passages of revelation, is employed to express an idea in advance of the others. When so understood, 'spirit' denotes the basis of what may be called the evangelical or everlasting life; while 'mind' must be taken to signify those faculties which distinguish men from the unreasoning and irresponsible denizens of earth; including both the intellect and the conscience. 'Body,' of course, means the material part of us, that which is ever undergoing the two-fold process of waste and renewal.

The word 'soul' is of broader and more fundamental import than the other terms,—underlying them and comprehending them; as a substance, e. g., is conceived to embrace and sustain its properties. Of its existence and varied powers we have the same conclusive proofs that we have of the existence and properties of matter; and even more so; for they are ever present both to our consciousness and observation.

But while the existence of soul, in the essential and biblical meaning of the word, is so evident, much controversy may yet be necessary to define its precise nature, and to determine the whole of its relations to the developments and capabilities of man.

Attempting to trace these relations, we shall begin upon sure ground if we assume that the soul is, at least, the vitality of the body. It is but speaking of it under another name to call it the life-force within us. For, according to Revelation, Adam was not 'a living soul' till God had breathed into his formed but inanimate body 'the breath of life.' By that divine inflation he began to live. 'He became a living soul.' He did not thereby come into the possession of a living soul; but he became just that. Previously he had been a wonderful inanimate organism of 'dust,'—formed by the Lord God. Then he became 'a living soul.' The word 'soul' throughout the Scriptures, both of the Old and New Testaments, is so used that, without a doubt, the writers embraced under the term precisely that which our word 'life' primarily and properly signifies.

Life is, by the highest authorities, allowed to be a spiritual principle; that is to say, a power or force not material. It acts, indeed, upon matter, and produces all its known effects in the region of matter—effects which are peculiar to itself; but, under the most searching investigation of the anatomist and physiologist, it never becomes the direct object of perception, and never submits itself to analysis. The last resolution concerning it to which science brings us is,—that it appropriates material substances and endows them with certain properties,—properties sui generis, which come with the life and depart with it.

Life thus viewed is a force or power, subordinating and utilizing material things with imperial authority, and according to a wisdom which is consummate and confounding. This force is associated most intimately with all the phenomena of our nature; for every thought, feeling, and action, bodily and mental, sleeping and waking, voluntary and involuntary, make demands upon it. Toward large classes of these phenomena it stands in the unquestioned relation of cause, or of scientific antecedent. And this self-evident connection (by which the life-force is linked to a large and most important part of our life experience and history) is such as to suggest the inquiry, whether it does not bear precisely the same relation to every part. It supplies a clue to some of the facts of our nature (facts both fundamental and universal in the sphere of that nature); is it the clue to them all? In searching for the unknown, our only wise plan is to make careful and thorough use of the well known.

As, therefore, we have, in the principle of life, an explanation of some of the phenomena of which we are in quest, let us see whether it will account for them all. If, after proper investigation, it should be held that the life-force is not the basis and cause of all our life-phenomena, it will become an important question to determine what classes form the exception. The inquiries now proposed are not only interesting, but they are upon the track of truth fundamentally important both in philosophy and religion. It is of the first necessity to prosecute them, if possible, to a definite and demonstrated conclusion. What is the traceable and scientific cause or antecedent of organic, sensational, impulsive, mental, and moral phenomena in the human subject? Are they all sustained and ruled by one principle or force? or, must they be distributed among several? If a variety of causation should be maintained, then, what are the several departments in which the varied operations are displayed? How is the causation to be defined? and how are the boundaries of each operation to be discovered?

While nothing on earth is more common than life, it is equally true that nothing exists in so great a variety of form and degree. All material things and physical agencies are made to subserve the purposes of life. They are but the manifold basis of its support. The world, of land, water, and air, is simply a vast and confounding vivarium occupied to repletion with living things. The solid strata of the earth form the museum and archives of ancient life. It is as though God would compel us chiefly to employ our thoughts upon the marvels and mysteries of life. The subject confronts us in every memorial of the past; it challenges us in every fascinating object of the present. Facilities for its prosecution woo our thoughts and affections everywhere. Ten thousand illustrations, in every shade of beauty and attractiveness, offer themselves as our guides and handmaids;—flinging themselves into our daily paths, accosting us in our most leisurely and retired hours, when musing meditation is best prepared to drink in inspiration from matter, or spirit, or divinity. Yet, with few exceptions, men are deaf and blind to these sweet invitations. They will woo the starry heavens, the stormy night; they will gaze entranced upon the snow-clad mountain; they will worship toward the rising and setting sun; they will discourse on the beauties of landscape, grow garrulous upon new mown hay, listen in rapture to Philomel. Sights, sounds, scents, forms,—everything that regales the senses and awakens the imagination is seized upon and retained with avidity. But it is a simple fact that LIFE, the self-evident but mysterious force which underlies and evolves almost every feature of interest around us, has but rarely received a loving, ardent investigation. The principle of attraction observed in the falling apple has enabled the philosopher to make wonderful discoveries in distant worlds. The principle of life, involved in the growth of the apple, and in every other organized thing, I believe, has only to be traced with adequate care, and discoveries equally great and valuable will repay the toil in regions of thought and knowledge of immensely more importance to us. Our knowledge of religion, both natural and supernatural, will thereby become more definite and sure."

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST?

Paul could affirm—"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ;" which leads us to inquire, What is embodied in this gospel? "The gospel of Christ" must be the very gospel which Christ preached, and which he authorized others to preach, which widely differs from the diluted gospel of the day, which passes under the same name. The gospel proclamation with which Christ commenced his mission has neither been altered nor abrogated; but the true gospel of Christ will fully harmonize with that original proclamation, including the additional fact of Christ's death and intercession. The gospel so far as then preached by Christ was true. And what did he preach? "Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. . . . And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. 4: 17-23. The gospel preached by Christ is here styled "the gospel of the kingdom," or the good news concerning the coming of a kingdom which, in some sense, was then "at hand."

The twelve disciples were sent out to preach the same gospel—"the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Then seventy others were sent out with the same thrilling message—"the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Was this message true? Certainly, for there is not an intimation anywhere given that it was an incorrect announcement. Nor can it signify, as some have claimed, that the Messiah was at hand; for he had already come. What kingdom, then, was meant? Evidently the very kingdom which Jesus taught his disciples to pray for, as he would not preach about the coming of one kingdom, and tell his disciples to pray for a different one to come. They were instructed to pray, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Certainly Jesus did not teach them to pray in opposition to his own preaching; hence, he was proclaiming a kingdom to "come" on "earth," and a literal kingdom, too, that will become the home of saints now dead; for while preaching "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," he remarked to his disciples, "I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 8: 11. Sit down where? "In the kingdom of heaven." What kingdom did Jesus preach about? "The kingdom of heaven." Abraham, though now dead, will be in that kingdom when it comes, together with the now scattered saints, who will be gathered to its metropolis. This involves the resurrection as a prerequisite to the establishment of the kingdom preached by Christ and his disciples.

While giving this proclamation—"the kingdom of heaven is at hand"—Jesus said, "As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity. . . . . . Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Matt. 13: 40-43. Thus, "in preaching the gospel of the kingdom," Jesus taught that the "end of the world," or age, should dawn before the kingdom should come, and that a separation should then take place, leaving only the righteous to dwell in the kingdom. Again, in the midst of this grand proclamation—"The kingdom of heaven is at hand," Jesus thus speaks about the time of its introduction—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them. . . . Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 31-34.

All the holy angels were to escort Christ to his throne, before the kingdom which he preached about should become the home of the faithful. Said Jesus to the high priest—"Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Thus he closed his career with the claim that "hereafter" he would come from heaven enthroned in "power," or clothed with kingly majesty.

This stirring message concerning the coming of the kingdom, was first preached under restrictions—"Go not into the way of the Gentiles; and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not; but go ye rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." This gospel was sent "to the Jew first"—and why? Because the law of Moses was in force until the cross, which made a distinction between Jews and Gentiles; but at the crucifixion "the middle wall of partition was broken down," and it was then made known "that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ through the gospel." So before the cross the gospel message was confined to the Jews.

But after the Savior's resurrection the restriction was taken off, and the same gospel (not a new one) is sent to all mankind—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." What was the message called which Jesus first limited to the Jews? "The gospel," and also, sometimes, "The gospel of the kingdom." And what did he call the message given after his resurrection? "The gospel." It was the same message before proclaimed, with the same name, with the additional fact that the prospective King had emerged from the shades of death in robes of immortality, and gone on high to perfect the remedial scheme, from whence he will return to "judge the quick and dead, at his appearing and kingdom." That this restricted message was to have a wider promulgation, was a fact asserted by the Savior himself, while it was still being restricted to the Jews—"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." It was finally to overleap its Jewish boundaries, and be preached to others.

After the resurrection, the apostles kept preaching about the kingdom, and connected it with Christ's appearing; so when they mentioned Christ's appearing, the kingdom was involved; and when they mentioned the kingdom, his appearing was involved; because he "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1. Nor did they lose sight of the fact that it was "at hand" in the same sense in which it was preached "at hand" by Christ. Paul could say, "Let your moderation be known to all men; the Lord is at hand"; which was tantamount to saying, the kingdom is at hand, from the fact that Paul connected the kingdom with the Lord's coming, as before shown. "At hand" in a comparative sense,—the remaining time being so short compared with the time that had already past. This was the exact meaning of the Savior; for while preaching the kingdom "at hand," he enumerated a catalogue of events to transpire before the kingdom should come—events to cover centuries, and then said—"When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Luke 21: 31. While Matthew tells us that Jesus preached, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," Mark affirms he preached "The kingdom of God is at hand"; from which we learn that the two are identical. Though Jesus preached this kingdom "at hand" in some sense, he at the same time specified a long chain of events to transpire before it should come; and after they should have occurred, the kingdom should be "nigh at hand." This proves that Jesus meant "at hand" in a comparative sense, at the time of his ministry.

In the same sense Paul could say, "The night is far spent; the day is at hand." In the same sense Peter affirmed—"The end of all things is at hand." In the same sense, too, the Revelator testified—"Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, . . . for the time is at hand." These words introduce the fact that under the sounding of the seventh trumpet "the kingdoms of this world" should "become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever"; and yet that event was said to be "at hand."

It is easy, then, to see in what sense Jesus preached the kingdom "at hand." Until the gospel message was diluted, the gospel of Christ was strictly "the gospel of the kingdom"—the kingdom due at the return of Christ from heaven. And no other kingdom has a right in the gospel of Christ. While "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ," I am ashamed of some substitutes that pass under that name, as they are of human origin, and intended to supplant the true gospel.

In the gospel of the day, which is partly genuine and partly spurious—a mixture of truth and tradition—Christ is accepted, but the promised throne of David is denied him, and another throne put in its place. They admit Christ's claim to kingship, but give his kingdom a wrong chronological and geographical location, placing it in heaven above, composed of disembodied souls, instead of locating it in the New Earth, where "the tabernacle of God shall be with men" with bodies immortalized; and beginning it eighteen hundred years ago, instead of waiting till after the judgment.

The true gospel of Christ presents to the eye of faith a world of literal personalities, and not a realm of shades—personalities who have been exempted or released from death, and changed to a state of deathlessness. "They that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world . . . neither can they die any more." Though once capable of dying, the time will come when they will possess deathless natures, having experienced "the redemption of the body"; for Christ "shall change our vile body" at his return from heaven. Death can hold the saints for a time, but soon its power will be broken; and then the kingdom will come. Abraham and all the saints will then sit down in the very kingdom which Jesus preached about so long ago, the only kingdom which the true gospel ever pictured out as the future home of the saints. Then "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever"; even "the kingdom under the whole heaven."

IMMORTALITY OF CHRIST.

"Who only hath immortality."—1 TIM. 6: 16.

This personage, "who only hath immortality," cannot refer to God the Father, as that would deny the immortality of Christ, and of angels. But Christ and angels are represented as being deathless, and that which is deathless is immortal. The contrast here given is not between God the Father and all other beings, but between the "man Christ Jesus" and the race of man at large. "In his times," yet future, he will manifest himself as "the blessed and only Potentate" due this world, "the King of kings, and Lord of lords, "who only hath immortality—not in contrast with God and angels, but in contrast with mankind—and as High Priest he is now "dwelling in the light"; and in this locality "no man hath seen or can see" him; but both Christ and God have been seen in the past, in other localities, as Adam and Moses saw God; and they will both be seen again in the future, for "the pure in heart shall see God." Christ "only hath [obtained] immortality."

NOTE FROM KANSAS.

A Bro. in Kansas, who now feels called to the ministry, writes the following note of query and experience:—

"ELD. WM. SHELDON:—Dear Sir:—Please give me your reasons for open communion. I have studied the subject considerably, but can come to no satisfactory conclusion. I desire to know the truth, and to do the will of God, to whom I have given myself, for time and for eternity. In the summer of 1866 I heard you preach at Princeton, Ill., and became interested in the doctrines you advocate, and at the close of the meeting I obtained some tracts, and read a few pages; but as my parents were not willing for me to read them, fearing that I would embrace the 'heresy,' I laid them by to read when my mind should become mature. I never saw them again. I remembered that you told us that this earth was to be the final home of the saints. I examined the Bible closely, and found that these things were so. Last August, I made the acquaintance of Sister Clark, of the Advent faith, who lent me some copies of the Crisis, by which I first learned that man is mortal. Since then I have read 'Ghostology,' 'Futurity,' and several other works on the nature and destiny of man.

I now wonder that all cannot see this truth, which the Bible so plainly teaches. I wonder that I never saw it before. I am looking and hoping for the speedy return of Christ to earth, though I do not think the definite time of his coming is known to us at present; but I believe that it will be known to the saints before the day of his coming arrives. I believe that God will destroy the wicked. I believe these truths, not because I am prejudiced in their favor, but because the arguments for them are such as I cannot gainsay."

REPLY.

We commune with God's children because (1), we know of no Bible rule by which to exclude them from the Lord's table; and (2), we do not find it in our hearts to hold them off. The stale old arguments offered so long on the other side, do not convince us that perfection in theology is a prerequisite to christianity. We much prefer to have all see the light on baptism at once, and attend to the ordinance without delay; but we think it possible for some to be slow in seeing this truth, as well as other truths, and still be saints; and we would rather admit a Judas to the table than to keep a saint away. We cannot be judges. "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat." Our effort to keep unworthy communicants away should not be so rigid as to keep worthy ones away; for we are commanded to receive "him that is weak in the faith." A sprinkler may suppose he has obeyed; but if honest, when he sees he has not taken the right step, he will make haste to obey God. As some are slow to see, let us not put their eyes out before they have time to look from the right stand-point. Meanwhile, let us kindly show them God's plan from various stand-points, always exercising caution lest we arouse their will before they get a glimpse of the truth; for will blinds the eyes.

This letter illustrates the fact that seed which is sown, though apparently lost for a time may subsequently spring up. How much good a stray copy of the Crisis may do, or reading matter of the right kind, in some other form. Let us do more to dispel theological darkness by scattering the light of truth. As in this case, some one may thus be reached who will feel it duty to spend his life in proclaiming the gospel message to others. It is not expected that every tract will produce this result; nor is it every gospel sermon that proves effective, though both may make an impression. But we should not cease preaching because some sermons do not prove as effective as others; nor should we grow slack in scattering truth in printed form, because all the seed does not take root at once. Error lifts its defiant head in every quarter. Its dupes spare neither time nor means to spread the poison of false theology. They are wakeful, active, bold, and incessant in their efforts. Shall we, who are engaged in the best of all good enterprises, be sleepy, dilatory, cowardly, and lazy, in the face of such a foe? Let us arise in the strength of truth, and make ourselves felt in every quarter. Send out the silent preachers to enlighten the people.

INHABITANTS OF HADES.

A Southern minister thus writes me:—

"Since you were here, the truth, as you preached it, has met with much opposition from the preachers of the various sects. The most able and learned among them have been called out, and labored much to keep the people in the old Orthodox track. I heard a learned man of much ability affirm that hades was a place for the conscious spirit of deceased persons; that there are two apartments in hades, one for the good, and one for the bad; that death holds the body, and hades holds the soul. To prove the latter, he cited Rev. 20: 13—'Death and hades delivered up,' etc. . . . . I am glad that some stand firm to the truth, but others are too timid, and have fallen back to popular theology."

That the hades of the New Testament is identical with the sheol of the Old Testament, is evident from David's prophetic statement concerning Christ, quoted by Peter—"Thou wilt not leave my soul in sheol" (Ps. 16: 10); "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hades" (Acts 2: 27). Here Peter uses hades in the place of sheol, thus showing that the Greek hades synchronizes with the Hebrew sheol. But sheol is a place of unconsciousness, even if it were a place for departed spirits, with two departments, as some assume, without a shade of proof; for the Bible affirms—"There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in sheol." Eccl. 9: 10. So if sheol, or hades, is the abode of disembodied spirits, they must be in an unconscious state. Where, then, is the advantage of having the body in one locality, and the spirit in another? But the Bible never makes hades the abode of living spirits, for hades is to deliver up "the dead." Query. Are they "dead" spirits?

The heathen speculations concerning hades located it in the bowels of the earth, making it an underground world of ghosts. Let those who wish to make hades a spirit-realm, in opposition to the Bible, and in harmony with heathenism, take the whole dose, bitter as it may be, and henceforth talk about having departed spirits go down cellar to live, in a dark, underground hades, and cease this talk about departing to be with Christ, for he is not down cellar; cease quoting—"The spirit shall return to God," for God is no more under the ground than he is just where the dying saint is giving up the ghost. Cease applying this passage to death—"absent from the body, and present with the Lord;" for "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven;" not ascend from hades. Heaven is not hades, nor has hades "two apartments;" that is theological speculation.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"There shall be a time of trouble," etc.
"From whence come wars and fightings?"

The following extract from the Boston Journal of last evening, somewhat indicates the condition of society. With which read James 5: 1-6. Let the brethren be patient, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

June 8th. W. C. STONE.

VIOLENCE AS AN ARGUMENT OF LABORING MEN.—So long as laboring men, believing themselves to be overworked or under paid, unite in reasonable demands for change, and combine to secure, by fair and honorable means, what they believe to be their rights, the matter, however much it may be deprecated on account of the derangement of trade which must result, yet lies primarily between themselves and their employers, and the public have comparatively little concern with it.

When, however, as in New York, they employ violence and use pistols where other arguments fail; when, as in Philadelphia, they threaten the city gas works, and endeavor to precipitate upon the city the crime and bloodshed which must follow the prevalence of utter darkness in the streets; when, as in Chicago, they threaten to throw from the tracks incoming trains, and recklessly endanger the lives of hundreds of innocent men and women—then, we claim, they have forfeited the last claim to consideration and sympathy, and transforming themselves into the most cowardly criminals, deserve prompt and severe treatment as such.

We hope the time may come when working men will see that their own interests, if no higher motive, call for the employment of peaceful means in the furtherance of their purposes, and that such actions as those specified above, if merely threatened, are disgraceful; and if executed, are outrageous and inexcusable. In the meantime, if blind violence is to take the place of reason and calm judgment, the ringleaders in these infamous designs may rest assured that the executors of the law will have prompt and cordial sympathy, and all needed aid, from the great body of our people, in suppressing every act of violence."

THE ABSENT DISCIPLE.

On the evening of Christ's resurrection-day, when the disciples met to sorrow over their absent Lord, Jesus suddenly appeared among them, and turned their sadness into joy. But one who ought to have been there was absent. He was a man of prominence among the disciples, "one of the eleven." Why he was not present we are not told; but that he lost much by his absence is evident. The other disciples were made glad by the sight of Jesus, and by the joy that accompanied his presence; they received special instructions from him on subjects of vital importance; they obtained the precious blessing of peace which he bestowed, and received the gift of the Holy Ghost. But Thomas was not with them, and he therefore missed the light, and peace, and joy which the presence of Jesus brought to the waiting disciples, and he failed to receive the gift of the Spirit, which made their hearts strong. As the result of his absence on this important occasion, he was compelled to wait a week, contending with his doubts and fighting his fears. What a period of mental conflict that week must have been to his heart!

Thomas may be regarded as a "representative man." There are many at the present day who, unfortunately, act as he did; they are absent disciples. There are two modes of religious life after conversion, one or the other of which is adopted by every christian, and by some both are tried at different times. One is, to observe simply the external proprieties of religion, attend church once or twice on Sunday, occasionally partake of the Lord's Supper, and endeavor so to live as to avoid bringing reproach on the church by unchristian practices. Many look on this as the sum total of Christianity.

We believe we should have more frequent and continuous revivals were it not for these absent disciples. Instead of making a part of the motive power of the church, they are a dead weight which the church is compelled to carry; and some weak churches stagger under the load until they fall. The heart of the faithful pastor often faints because his people fail to rally around him. Many of them never appear in the weekly lecture or prayer meeting, or class-meeting, except in times of revival. Then, when others have built the fire, they come for a time to be warmed by it. People complain sometimes that the week-night meetings of their church are wanting in interest. Let all go who can, and there will be no ground for such complaint. There is something inspiring in numbers, while empty seats, even though painted and upholstered, have a depressing effect. If all the members of a church who can attend a meeting at any given time, and go there with a praying spirit, that meeting cannot fail to be interesting. If all our absent disciples would only come home and stay home, they would not only be quickened into new spiritual life themselves, but they would greatly encourage others, and the influence on the hearts of the ministers would be seen in the additional warmth and life which would inevitably be given to their preaching.—Ex.

QUARTERLY MEETING IN IOWA.

The quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference convened at Tama City, Iowa, May 25th, by appointing Bro. M. A. Newcomb president pro tem, and Wm. H. Shafer clerk. The church of Christ at Ettie, Clark township, Tama Co., presented by P. S. Converse their delegate with twenty members in full connection, and were received. Adjourned sine die. WM. H. SHAFER, clerk pro tem.

NOTE. This meeting, so close to the annual meeting, was not very well attended, but was very good for those who were there. I had to do most of the preaching. Bro. Talmadge spoke once, and four united with the church.

I called at Ettie on my way down and back. Men have been here preaching against the truth, and have managed to sow discord, so that some will be like good seed sown by the wayside. Four were baptized.

I am now at home, preparing for our annual campmeeting. Hope that there will be a good attendance. This closes my twelfth year for the conference as an Evangelist. A condensed report will be given hereafter of this year. We are nearing home and rest.

P. S. W. DEYO.

Correspondence.

From Bro. C. H. Hurd.

BRO. GRANT:—Through the tender mercy and ever-abounding care and providence of our heavenly Father, we are still favored with a being upon his footstool; and are having "all things" work for our good, just as really as the Word reads it shall, to those who love the Lord. Once we did not know much about what it is to have divine comfort in affliction and, even now, we know only a little about it; but we do bless the Lord that he has given us to know something about it in our own experience; it is so good to learn things for ourselves and not be dependent upon what others have experienced in these things entirely. Affliction alone is unpleasant and oftentimes severe, but, it so good to know what care the Lord has for his people, by actual experience; that we can patiently endure "these light afflictions," which are all in our favor, if we are the Lord's. And, in times of great need we have more special help from Him when we are made to know how helpless and comfortless we are without true faith and obedience towards God.

For several weeks lately, we were deprived of the blessed privileges that we have enjoyed for the last six years of our life in meeting together with God's people several times a week for his worship, by sickness and other things beyond our power to control. Once we should not have thought that we could have possibly endured these things, but now they have proved to be "rich in blessing," far beyond our expectation. Our God is a present helper.

Last Saturday, we had the pleasure of walking seven miles to West Parsonsfield, Me., to meet in conference meeting with the dear people of God there, the like privilege of which we have not had for several months past, having spent the winter in Lowell. And it was really good to be there and find the little church holding fast the profession of their faith; and that the Lord is still blessing in the salvation of sinners in the place.

About one year ago, a sister who was converted since the establishment of meetings there was baptised, her husband, an unconverted man being much opposed to her identifying herself with the Advent people, and would not so much as go to the water to see the rite administered; but now he is a believer in the truth and within a few days has become a praying man.

The meetings on the Sabbath were interesting and profitable seasons, there being good and timely preaching, followed by exhortations from some of the lovers of Jesus. Also a very interesting session of Sabbath school was had, this being the first day of the school. It has opened well and gives bright promise for good results to come. We find that death has been culling its victims in the place since last we were there. One young lady who was a constant and interested attendant upon the meetings, having labored under much conviction without yielding her heart to the Savior until brought down upon a sick and dying bed, has in a few short weeks faded and drooped and died.

Freedom, N. H., May 31st.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. ORSON WEED, East Litchfield, Conn., writes:—"Two years ago last December, the Lord called me at the midnight hour, in a loud voice like thunder, loud enough to wake me, being dead in trespasses and sins, and plucked me as a brand from the fire. He took my feet out of mire and clay, and put my feet upon the Rock, Christ Jesus, and put a new song into my mouth, even praise to our God. The voice was—'Prepare for the judgment.' I was as wide awake as I am now, and I did not know what I should do. I thought I should die before morning; and I said, O Lord, if thou wilt go thy way for this time, when I have a convenient time, I will call for thee. I put my light under a bushel, until the second Sunday of Jan., 1870, when it began to shine. I had been a very wicked man. I did not read the Holy Bible, but would work on the Sabbath. I was a lover of whiskey, and of all kinds of spirits, and would drink too much. I also chewed and smoked tobacco. Since I got the love of God in my soul, I can praise his great and holy name for the good work that he did for poor unworthy me. I have read the Bible through, and begun it again the first day of this year, reading a chapter morning and evening.

I like the Crisis very much. It has been as a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path."

BRO. S. C. GOVE writes:—"Yesterday (May 27th) I had the pleasure of meeting with the brethren and sisters of Alton, N. Y., where Bro. B. P. Stevens preaches every two weeks. At the close of the forenoon meeting we repaired to the water some three or four miles away, where our beloved brother buried six willing souls in the liquid grave, showing by this their intentions of following the Savior. It was truly a pleasure to behold the sight. In the evening we spoke to the faithful ones at the Chapel of the inheritance of the saints. Good attention was given, and many responses of 'amen' were frequently heard. The Alton church is destined to be a strong church. They are living with the expectation of soon seeing Jesus. May the Lord bless them and add to their number such as will be accounted worthy when the Master shall come."

BRO. H. B. SEVEY writes:—"Since our meeting in Garland I have not been able to preach. Shall rest awhile, but hope soon to gain strength to work for Jesus in proclaiming present truth. Have visited Augusta, where the brethren and sisters are striving for the unity of the Spirit. They hold prayer-meetings twice a week, with good interest. Our meeting in Hallowell was not what we could have wished, but were glad of the meeting. Some were blest. Four rose for prayers. Held a meeting in Gardiner with Bro. Rhodes. Two put on Jesus by baptism. Meetings were held in Military Hall. Brethren wishing to preach in Gardiner (Military Hall), can correspond with J. Thomas, Jr. Our meeting there was among the best. The Holy Spirit was with us, while we talked of our hope and the faith."

BRO. A. OGSBURY writes from Normal, Ill.:—"I look as much for the Crisis as I would for a valuable friend and companion. It has been a source of great help and comfort on our weary pilgrimage. I should like to see some of the preachers that I have heard years ago. Bro. H. L. Hastings preached in my house nearly twenty years ago, in Williamsburg, L. I., which I shall not forget. It was a means of grace to help us on to a better state of things. I have sometimes forgotten my duty and overlooked the great prize of eternal life; but God in his mercy has had compassion on our weakness, and for his Son's sake given us power to resist temptation, and set our feet upon the Rock, Christ Jesus. My desire is that He whose right it is might come and reign, and give us eternal life with all his saints."

SR. S. GADSBY writes:—"Please thank the friends who have sent me so many tracts. One package came from Auburn. I do not know where the rest came from, but God knows, and he will reward. I am happy in the love of Jesus. He is my friend. I never felt him so near. He blesses me in standing up for the truth as it is in his Word. May God help each one of his children to be faithful, and not get discouraged. By giving our all to Christ, he is ready to go before us in all we do. I know this is so. My prayer is that the Lord will soon send some one to Ware, Mass., to preach this blessed truth."

BRO. D. O. HOPKINS writes:—"I have been laboring the last winter with a company of colored people in Brooklyn, and last Sunday I baptized eight (some of them have been slaves.) They came out of the water shouting. I am trying, amid many trials and perplexities, to labor for the Lord. I would like to spend my whole time in the vineyard, but cannot."

HOLKINS. Died in Warehousepoint, Ct., Col. Harvey Holkins, aged seventy-five years.

In the death of Bro. Holkins, we have all lost a friend and brother—one that was a friend indeed. Bro. Holkins always carried a liberal heart; was independent in thought, and ever ready to grant to others the same right. His has always been a home for the weary pilgrim. For many years his great delight has been the promulgating of what he so earnestly believed—the soon coming of Jesus and its kindred truths.

The family have sustained a loss this world can never make up to them; but while this is true, they feel the fullest assurance that a husband and father sleeps in Jesus, and they sorrow not as those without hope.

The funeral exercises of the Episcopal church were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Goodrich, assisted by Bishop Niles, of New Hampshire, who spoke words of great comfort to the friends while he discoursed on the resurrection.

AFRICA.

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

LONDON, June 9. A despatch from Zanzibar, Africa, states that further information received from the interior regarding the whereabouts of Livingstone shows that the veteran explorer is still prosecuting his researches into the interior. The long-debated question of the Nile appears to be settled at last, the energy and perseverance of the great traveler having been rewarded by the discovery of the true source of that river. During his researches he has been fortunate in making numerous discoveries of a character entirely new to science. He has collected abundance of materials, the publication of which he intends shall take place in due time, which must prove of the highest interest to the civilized world. One of the most remarkable results of his explorations has been the discovery of an underground village, the subterranean inhabitants of which differ largely in habits and language from other savage tribes in Central Africa. He is now investigating this strange people and their country. Ample stores will be forwarded to him from Zanzibar.

OVER 22,000 PERSONS HOMELESS.

THE INUNDATION ON THE PO.—Florence, June 9. The inundation on the Po has rendered 22,000 persons homeless in the province of Ferrara alone. The destruction and suffering in the neighboring river provinces are not so great, but extensive and severe.

In Brief.

—— Rev. Robert Collyer has made that $2000 horse shoe for Cornell University, and received the money for it. The shoe, inscribed "Robert Collyer, maker," was presented to the Vice President of the College by Mr. Collyer, at the close of a lecture at Ithaca, on Tuesday evening.—— Frederick Douglas, whose house at Rochester was lately destroyed by fire during his absence, reached that city at one o'clock in the morning to look after his family, but not knowing their whereabouts applied at two hotels for lodging, and was refused. He finally got lodging with a personal friend.——The Workingmen's Union of New York has issued an address to the public defending strikes and strikers.——The celebrated elephant Romeo, one of the oldest and said to be the largest in the United States, valued at $30,000, died in Chicago on Friday afternoon.——Mr. Whittier, Mr. Garrison and Mr. Bartol; and many other of Mr. Sumner's best friends, publicly regret his ill-advised speech against Mr. Grant. It is the most decided and striking error that Mr. Sumner has made in his entire political career.

☞ Twenty years ago Protestantism had no hearer in Italy. Now they have over 30,000 regular hearers, and over 10,000 communicants. For the last eight months over 30,000 Bibles have been sold in Italy, and that, too, from a Bible Depository standing in full view of the Vatican.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

VERMONT TENT AND CONFERENCE.—The next Quarterly Vermont Conference will be held under the canvas in connection with a Tent meeting at Post Mills, Thetford, Vt., commencing Tuesday P. M., June 18th, 1872. June 18th, 19th, and 20th, will be conference days, and the meeting will continue as long as it seems duty. We hope there will be a general effort on the part of preachers and churches to be there. Let every church send delegates, or write a letter to be read at the conference. Let us have one more rich feast in the Lord. I am expecting to be there. Others, I understand, are engaged, whose names will be mentioned hereafter. H. F. C.

THE ANNUAL CAMPMEETING at Tremont, Mass., will commence Monday, July 22d, and continue over the following Sunday. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents with them are requested to do so. Bro. Bellows will be on the ground with his large tent. All who are interested in the blessed hope and soon coming of the Lord, who can, are requested to attend this annual feast, where the Lord has so signally manifested his power. Come in faith and the power of the Holy Ghost, that we may enjoy one more heavenly gathering, and secure the salvation of some poor lost souls, to share with us the heavenly inheritance. HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

THE Mass. Conference Tent will be pitched the last week in June, at No. Dana, Mass.
L. BOUTELL.

THE Grove and Basket Meeting at Hermon, Me., in grove owned by Mr. John Emerson, about one fourth of a mile from Hermon Corner, towards Leather's Corner, will commence Saturday, June 29th, at nine o'clock A. M., and hold two days. We hope for a large meeting. Those who come are expected to provide themselves food. The brethren in the region will take those from a distance home with them Saturday night. Efficient aid is expected to preach the word.
For the Brethren, F. A. BAKER.

NEW YORK A. C. CONFERENCE.—If the Lord will, this conference will hold its next annual meeting in the new Chapel, in Springwater, about thirty miles south of Rochester, on the Genesee Valley R. R., commencing Thursday evening, June 13th, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Good homes and ample accommodations will be provided for all who come, and all are invited. It is expected that all the churches desiring to further the general interests of the cause will be represented at this annual gathering. Delinquent and new churches are earnestly urged to co-operate with the body, and they are hereby cordially invited to seats (by delegate) in the convention. For their information, it should be stated here that each church belonging to the conference association, is required by the constitution to report either by delegate or by letter, at least at each annual session; and are also requested to send in quarterly such donations as they may be able to collect for the general mission fund. This is an important meeting, and should be remembered in the earnest prayers of the church.
D. COGSWELL, President,
WM. E. BROWN, Secretary.

☞ The fare has been reduced from Rochester to Springwater to $1, for all those who attend the Annual Conference, June 13th to 17th. The tickets must be procured at the Erie Railway Office, opposite Power's Block, State Street. Trains leave Rochester at 8.55 A. M. and 4 P. M. Let all who can, come the first day, and stay through the meeting. Bro. Daniel Cogswell will give the annual address Thursday evening.
WM. E. BROWN.

THE Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 13th, and continuing until June 23d. The invitation is to all. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is better than last year for having a good meeting. Our grounds will be better fitted up. There will be wood, hay, straw, and lumber for tent frames found on the ground. There will also be a grocery upon the ground, where all things necessary for the comfort of the people can be bought at reasonable rates. The profits accruing will go to bear the expenses of the meeting. We are hoping to secure the labors of ministers from abroad. Particulars hereafter. Elds. C. C. Ramsay and R. M. Thomas will be present, with many others, to preach the word.
ALONZO RAYMOND, President.

THE Iowa Christian Conference will hold its sixteenth annual session at New Hartford, Butler Co., commencing June 18th. This meeting will be held in connection with the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting. (See notice above.) Let the churches send delegates to this meeting, and all the ministers who are interested in the soon coming of our blessed Lord, make a sacrifice and be at this gathering. You are wanted to help in this cause. Ministers who are members of this conference are required by the Constitution to report by letter, if not present. All are cordially invited to this meeting. ALONZO RAYMOND, Secretary.
JOB GILDERSLEVE, President.

THE NEXT Quarterly Meeting of the R. I. and East Conn. Conference will be held at Escoheag Hill, W. Greenwich, R. I., commencing Wednesday, July 3d, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over Friday. There will be no business done on the fourth of July, but it will be wholly spent in devotional services. Preachers and delegates will (it is hoped) be present on the first day of the meeting, as it will be devoted to business.

TIME TABLE. On the Providence, Hartford and Fiskville R. R., trains leave Providence, going west, at 7.10 and 10.10 A. M., and 2.20 and 5.5 P. M. Arrive at Greene (at which depot stop) at 8.6 and 11.22 A. M., and 3.29 and 6.27 A. M. Trains going east leave Plainfield, Conn., 6.45 and 8.53 A. M., and 12.15 and 4.27 P. M.

It is desirable that delegates will come on morning trains, as there will be teams in waiting at Greene Station (at which place those coming from east or west will buy tickets) to take them to the place of meeting. Let every church be represented by delegate or letter. N. A. ANGELL, Clerk.

MINNESOTA STATE CAMPMEETING.—In accordance with a vote of our State Conference, a campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove, called "Cheatham's Grove," in the town of Utica, in Winona county, commencing on Thursday P. M., June 27th, holding over Sunday, and as much longer as the interest will seem to warrant. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with a permanent preacher's stand, good seats, and a good well of water, and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground. Brn. and Srs. of the Advent faith, throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles, and work for God. Come from every quarter. Come with hearts filled with God's love, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs declare the soon coming of Jesus, and shall we not improve this annual blessing as the Lord requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and to the salvation of others? Come, Christians, of every name, and unite in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove. Brn. and Srs. in the ministry, from far and near, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon coming Jesus, whose reward is with him. Come embued with power from on high, a holy unction from the throne, that many sinners may be saved as the result of our meeting.

N. B. Arrangements will be made with the various R. R. companies for half fare tickets from those points where the brethren will notify me this month that they wish them. Those who come to tarry on the ground, should come prepared (with tents if possible), and with bedding and provisions. Probably many can have shelter on the ground in a building erected by others who have used the ground. Come one, come all, and may the Lord give a time long to be remembered on account of his presence.
S. C. WELLCOME, Sec. State Conference.

THERE will be an annual Grove meeting in Springwater, July 6th and 7th, commencing on Saturday the 6th at two P. M. Social meeting Sunday morning at nine o'clock. Preaching at half past ten A. M. C. F. SWEET.

ALSO there will be a meeting of one week in Lorraine, Jefferson county, N. H., including two Sundays, to commence on Saturday, June 22nd, at half past seven P. M., as Brn. N. P. Clark, D. Ballou, and Williams may arrange. C. F. SWEET.

THERE will be a Grove Meeting held in West Levant, in the Emerson Mills neighborhood, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock, and hold four days. OUR LAST EFFORT.

"The Judge standeth before the door."—JAS. 5: 9.

The evidence points to 1873 as the time when Christ shall come, and we shall be called to give an account of our stewardship. The warning must go forth. Immediate action is demanded to give a distinctness to the cry—"Behold! the Bridegroom cometh!" We are already engaged in this work, and are sending out tracts; also receiving funds for this purpose. Let all who have hearts that beat in this direction, pray to the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest. Send funds or pledges for this purpose to GEO. T. ADAMS, Agent of the Adv. Chris. Pub. Society, or to L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

A WORD TO COLPORTEURS OR MISSIONARIES.—Beloved brethren in the work of Christ, you that feel an interest in spreading abroad a knowledge of the immediate coming of Christ to judgment, and feel a love for the perishing in your heart, and desire to warn them of their danger, and would judiciously scatter my tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending," you can send to the Crisis office for such quantities as you think you can dispose of, to that class of readers that would appreciate them. My plan is for you to sell them to such persons as would be willing to purchase, at eight cents per copy, and give them to the poor, and to such as would read them with candor, that might not feel disposed to purchase; and the money coming from the sale of those purchased to be used in paying your expenses in traveling, or sent to the Crisis office, to help pay the expense of publishing more tracts. Those who are known at the Crisis office as brethren of faithfulness and integrity, will have no difficulty in obtaining said tracts; while others who are not known at said office, can obtain a recommendation from a source that will be approved and accepted. The second edition of said tract is now published and ready. What is done, must be done quickly. Amen.
L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

HOOSICK VALLEY TENT.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—JOHN B. WHITE, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. SIBLEY, S. G. MATHEWSON, H. K. FLAGG, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

I WISH to say we have made arrangements, and bought the timber standing on the Springfield camp-ground, of eight acres, for one thousand dollars, and if any of the brethren wish to help us by taking stock of from $25 to $100, they will be sure of their money back when the timber is cut off. This secures us the ground for eight years, if we need it so long, which is very doubtful; but we have to deal with one of no faith.

There are some three or four good places in the front circle for wooden tents, and there are two families on the ground to watch them. This will be a desirable chance to build since this arrangement, as board can be had on the ground, and any kind of lumber delivered, and help obtained to put them up. H. MUNGER.

CONN. A. C. QUAR. CONF.—The next meeting of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held at Campville (near Bro. Elliott's), commencing July 3d, and holding over the following Sunday. It is proposed to hold the meeting in the "Mission Tent." Provision will be made for those who attend. Campville is on the Naugatuck, above Thomaston. Per order, B. HITCHCOCK, Pres.
L. S. LUDINGTON, Sec.

THE meeting-house at West Parsonsfield, Me., will be dedicated to the Lord June 22nd (the Lord willing), as a Union house. H. L. Hastings is expected to be present to preach a part of the day. A protracted effort will be made to save sinners, as the interest may demand. A cordial invitation is extended to all, praying that they may come filled with the Spirit. Ample provision will be made to accommodate all who come.
A. S. TOWLE.

THERE will be a Quarterly Conference at Bremen, Me., commencing Friday, June 21st, at two o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to all who love the truth.
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

THERE will be a Grove meeting at West Peru, Me., July 4th. Brethren and sisters, let there be a general rally to this meeting. A. A. ABBOTT.
E. M. HAGGETT.

NEW TRACT.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged, OF

"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR,"

Or, The Commune.

BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

For sale at this office. Price, by mail, single copy, 7 cts.; five copies, 30 cts.; ten copies, 50 cts.; fifty copies, $2.00; one hundred copies, by express, $3.50. AG'T.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY.

BEFORE.

The morning breaks in clouds, the rain is falling,
Upon my pillow still I sigh for rest,
But yet I hear so many voices calling
To work by which my burdened soul is pressed,
That I can only pray
"Strength for the day."

'Tis not a prayer of faith, but weak repining,
For with the words there comes no hope, no light:
In other lives a morning sun is shining,
While mine is but a change from night to night;
So while I weep I pray
"Strength for the day."

For it is hard to walk in constant shadow,
Climbing with tired feet an uphill road;
And so, while my weak heart dreads each to-morrow,
And I once more lift up my heavy load,
Desponding still I pray
"Strength for the day."

AFTER.

Now looking back to the long hours ended,
I wonder why I feared them as they came;
Each brought the strength on which its task depended,
And so my prayer was answered just the same.
Now with new faith I pray
"Strength for each day."

For in the one just closed I've learned how truly
God's help is given equal to our need;
Sufficient for each hour it cometh newly,
If we but follow where his teachings lead,
Believing, when we pray
"Strength for the day."

He who has let the load which we are bearing,
Who walked each step along the path we tread,
Is ever for his weary children caring,
And keeps the promise made us, when he said
He'd give us all the way
"Strength for our day."

THE TIME.

"A WORD IN SEASON."

J. B. COOK.

To whom it may concern:—The six feet of a tall man are not diminished by a child's ignorance of the details; so of all distance, and of all duration, through the six "great" days of earth's toilsome week. Let facts be facts, and be above all dependence on the ignorance of him who is authorized to "be ignorant." 1 Cor. 14: 38.

The chronology of history is not annulled by the obscurity of some of its details, or the long-drawn negations of unbelief, darkness, or doubt. The tall man of six feet is that high; so the six thousand years of the groaning creation are, by Bible numbers, about all told. Why, then, cast doubt? Why obtrude doubt as to parts, where the case is so clear as a whole? The grand facts embraced are, that the "four" earthly kingdoms are already "numbered and [Rome, the last in the series, about] finished"; that the 2300 and 1335, as years, are about accomplished; that the series of Bible numbers sum up, by Dr. Elliot, six thousand with this year; that very much of God's providential interpretation and application of his word falls within this cycle; that the papacy was inaugurated by imperial authority, and after 1260 years was subverted at the French Revolution; that then, and since, the second coming of Christ has been preached as an approaching or impending event; that the chronology of prophecy for "the sufferings of Christ and the glory to follow," as derived from Dan. 8 and 9, 1 Pet. 1: 11-13, and dated in the margin of our Bibles (Ezra 7, Dan. 9), did together point to about 1843; that "the vision" has since then tarried, or seemed to tarry, while the mandate of the Most High sounds through the earth, "Wait for it! because it will surely come, it will not tarry" (Hab. 2: 1-4); that the period from the birth of Jesus to his heavenly mission and ministry was "about thirty years" (Luke 2: 6, 3: 23); and that these thirty years of tarrying tally in, and terminate with, the Bible numbers, that end the 6000 years about 1873.

Thus the picture is about filled out, as drawn by prophecy. This embraces all earth's national history, all of Zion's desolations, all "the time of the end." Now "let all the people say, Amen."

The spirit of the prophet that brought down Gabriel, to make known what is so noted in the Scriptures of truth, does not inspire doubt, but faith. A speculative spirit never opened heaven, nor obtained an interview with revealing angels, nor a divine commission to preach the message of mercy. Dan. 10, Luke 2: 25-32, Acts 10: 10. No; but it drove Adam from his Eden home and dominion; flooded the world; desolated the city and sanctuary of Israel; filled all Christendom with apostasy, and makes occasion for the judgment that now impends.

Some seem to dream that they are able to decide on points of truth that are high as heaven, and belong alone to God to disclose and settle. No, friends, no! The crowning themes of prophecy are divine in their application, as really as in their origin; and one of the mightiest miracles of all time centres in "the word of God," with its unerring fulfillment. They form the firmest material of all history.

We read that "His foundation is in the holy mountains"; and the frame-work of prophecy is as unchanging as "the mountains about Jerusalem."

"The time" is always commensurate with the Gentile kingdoms; the desolations of Zion, or the apostasy, to which it severally applies. Hence, all theoretic and verbal criticisms against it amount only to a mere bundle of negations, and go for nothing!

The week is seven days in all language; but it is accommodated to tally with "seven years," from Adam to Ezekiel. Gen. 5: 3-31, 19: 21-30, Ezek. 4: 6. This fact will suffice for faith, whenever the case requires its application in the understanding of God's providence in fulfilling his prophecy. For unbelief of this might question ever so much more. Luke 16: 10.

It is on the principle of this usage that "God hath appointed a day [determined on the time, or measure of duration] in which he will judge the world in righteousness." Acts 17: 31, Jer. 23: 5, Ps. 102: 13-20, 2 Pet. 3: 8-10. Where and how is this appointment made? It is just where the occasion called out "the time for the sufferings of Christ and the glory that is to follow." Dan. 8 and 9, 1 Pet. 1: 11-13.

Note.—This is sealed and assured by the resurrection of Jesus.

How is the time, so confirmed and fixed, filled out? By Persia, Greece, and Rome,—the governments of all the history that this prophecy embraces. Nay, more; by the treading down of the city, sanctuary and host, and tallying with "the times of the Gentiles"—noted in the Scriptures of truth. Dan. 10: 21 to 12: 13.

Note.—This "rock" of truth has stood against all the shocks of earth and hell, through the 1335 and 2300 years—the only "time appointed," on to "the end." Dan. 8: 19. This end God "declares from the beginning"; and his counsel (so set forth) "will stand," whoever may tilt against this "rock of ages," or freely against this "God of truth." Amen.

Can there be a better demonstration of this truth than the word of God, with its obvious and world-wide accomplishment? Then, having had the time so revealed, and so associated with the facts of all world government, during this time, we await "the end." But not the reproduction of all these prophetic scenes, on the scale of reduction descending to a small point, that will please the doubter (if not the tempter), and come next to nothing. No, no. Sin and Satan, death and hell, with all their host, may go down that way to their fiery doom, and "be as though they had not been"; but faith sees "the coming One," and his great salvation, looming up in vision. The great King in his beauty, the kingdom and its abounding blessings of the New Covenant, seem about here in their glory.

Hence, a groundless doubt, a trifling argument, a profane assumption of a higher wisdom than the prophecy contains, seems like the obtrusion of the old Jewish "smoke in the nose" (Isa. 65: 5), rather than the grateful incense of a hopeful heart which delights in the promises, which are about to be fulfilled in paradise restored. Amen.

Let us take the Word, with its wondrous fulfillments, and be "reconciled to God." Then we wait for Christ—not Anti-christ.

TELL JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"And went and told Jesus."—MATT. 14: 12.

There are three thoughts suggested in these words upon which I wish to make a few remarks for the comfort of some dear saint. First, the grounds, second, the occasions, third, the benefits, of going and telling Jesus. Can we approach him? Will he receive us? Is there a way open so that we can come boldly without fear of being repulsed? Yes, whoever will may come with the greatest freedom. The grounds of our approach are, first, the relation he sustains to us. He is our kinsman, for he took our nature. He is the Son of man as well as the Son of God. Second, the offering he made for us. He died for us. He has put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. We approach Jesus by Jesus. On the ground of his merit, his worthiness, his perfect acceptance before God, we draw nigh and tell him all. He is a merciful and faithful high priest. He knows all about the weaknesses and infirmities of his people, for he was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin; therefore, we may come boldly to the throne of grace. He is our intercessor.

Second, the occasions. Is sin a burden? Does it rest heavily upon your conscience? Do you feel far away, and as if no one cared for you? Is the world gloomy, and is your heart troubled because of conscious guilt? Go and tell Jesus. He is the sin-forgiver. He can remove the sting and fill you with peace. His blood cleanseth from all sin. Plead his merits. Pour out your heart's desires before him. Tell him all; keep back nothing. Unbosom every sorrow and let tears of penitence fall at his feet. He will forgive, and say to you as he did to one of old, "Thy faith hath saved thee, go in peace, and sin no more." Are you tempted? Has the enemy almost gained the advantage over you? Are the attractions of earth so strong that you cannot leave them? Do you lust after evil things? Is your soul haunted from day to day with evil suggestions? Have you fallen in with the current of pride and fashion, and is your mind so bewildered that you hardly know what to do? O break away. Go and tell Jesus. He knows the power of temptation. He can succor you. Tell him your weakness. Tell him how the devil is winding his coils about you. Tell him how the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eye, and the pride of the world draw you away from the path of duty. O tempted child, go at once and tell Jesus. Are you in trial? Does some relative or personal difficulty perplex your mind? Is it intricate and beyond the comprehension of men? Go and tell Jesus. He can settle the matter. He can unravel the tangled skein of this world's affairs, and put everything in its right place. Go and tell Jesus.

Are you bereaved? Has a loved one been severed from you by the ruthless hand of death? Is your path lonely now, and do you often weep in secret places? Is there a silence in your dwelling, and an anguish in your heart that no words can express? O lonely, sorrowful, bereft one, go and tell Jesus. He can sympathize with you. Behold him in the house of Mary and Martha. See him weep at the grave of Lazarus. How kindly he sympathized with those bereft sisters. O, what a friend is Jesus. How could we live in this world of sorrow without him? What a privilege that we may tell him all our griefs. Reader, whatever thy needs, go and tell Jesus.

The benefits of telling him will be the reception of all the blessings he has to bestow. No good thing will he withhold from us, if we do his will. Telling Jesus everything brings honor to him and peace and salvation to us; grace here, and unending glory hereafter. Go and tell Jesus.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

In a recent number of the Herald appeared the following query:—"I would ask of any one who does not believe in the trinity, in unity of the Godhead, how they harmonize the following Scripture with their view, viz., "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." —John 14: 9; 1 Tim. 3: 16, and Col. 2: 9. W. W. S.

As no other reply has appeared, I will try to show the harmony of this text, not only with my view, but with other Scripture, and with our intellectual comprehension, meagre and confined though it is, of the universe in which we dwell and of its Creator.

"He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." It may be said that we see God in his works, or, "the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." If, then, we use the same figure, how much more truly may it be said that we see God in the heavenly character of Jesus Christ.

That this was the sense in which Jesus used the words—"He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," seems evident from those which follow, in which he disowns all the supernatural power and wisdom which were exhibited in his ministry. "Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works."

The same kind of expression occurs in several instances, but no one would think of putting the construction upon them that Trinitarians do upon this.

Let me cite one of them: "He that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me." Now if, instead of the verbs hear and despise we insert the verb see (and we can suppose it with all propriety), we shall have nearly the same expression as was given in the answer to Philip—"He that seeth you, seeth me; and he that seeth me, seeth him that sent me"; or, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." But if this proves that Christ was the Father, it equally proves that the disciple was Christ.

As to the next text (1 Tim. 3: 16), I accept the Syriac in preference to the English version—"And truly great is the mystery of righteousness, which was revealed in the flesh, and justified in the spirit, and seen by angels, and proclaimed among the Gentiles, and believed on in the world, and received up into glory"; which I think harmonizes better with our common intelligence, for I cannot conceive of God being justified in the Spirit. Moreover, this reading is accepted by many others as being most probably genuine. It is adopted by Griesbach, while the received reading is placed at the bottom of the page.

Col. 2: 9. The same expression, almost word for word, is applied to believers, in Eph. 3: 19. But without noticing this, the most that can be inferred from this text, by comparing it with the context, is, that salvation through belief in Christ is full and complete, without the addition of carnal ordinances.

The most express declarations concerning the unity of God repeatedly occur both in the Old and New Testaments, but especially the Old; and these expressions are void of all ambiguity upon which we might thrust so incredible an idea as multiplicity in unity. Had there been any distinction of persons in the divine nature, such as the doctrine of the trinity supposes, it is at least so like an infringement of the fundamental doctrine of the Jewish religion, that it certainly required to be explained.

I think I have shown the harmony of these texts with the doctrine that "there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus"; in whom we see all of God—the infinite and absolute—that our mortal eyes can bear to behold, or our frail thoughts to entertain; and to a careful consideration of this great subject I most earnestly invite the attention of the readers of the Herald.—Herald of Life.

TO THE WANDERER.

ALICE J. CHENEY.

Sinner, hast thou wandered far
From thy Father's happy home?
With thyself and God at war?
Turn thee, wanderer, homeward come.
Hast thou wasted all the powers
God for noble uses gave?
Squandered life's most golden hours?
Turn thee, sinner, God can save.

Is a mighty famine now
In thy heart? yes, in thy soul?
Discontent upon thy brow?
Turn thee, God can make thee whole.
He can heal thy bitterest wound,
He thy gentlest prayer can hear;
Seek him, for he may be found,
Call upon him, he is near.

"FEED MY LAMBS."

D. N. SMITH.

There is much implied in these words. We know what kind of food the Savior would have given to his lambs; it is the "sincere milk of the word." When he was upon the earth they brought their children to him, that he might lay his hands upon them and bless them. They needed not his Spirit, for it was not then poured out, as on the day of Pentecost; they had him present with them; but he said, "I go away," and "I will send you the Comforter"; and this is what we have to do with at the present time.

But with many Sabbath schools, this only efficient agent for conversion is almost ignored. At a Sabbath school institute held in New Haven a few years since, by Dr. Vincent, the topics for discussion embraced almost everything in relation to the Sabbath schools except the one of the most importance, the conversion of the children; this was not on the programme. There were twenty-eight subjects discussed, including mission schools, church schools, parents, superintendents, pastors and teachers, or workers, rooms, furniture, maps, libraries, black-boards, and many other topics, all of which were well enough, intellectually considered; but the important question is, Can the children see Christ through all this machinery vividly enough to induce them to give their hearts to him? Is not something more wanted?

We read of having a form of godliness without the power. We believe in having system and order in everything; this is God's law; but the Sabbath school system without the vitalizing power of the Holy Spirit is inefficient and weak.

We know the institution of the Sunday school is doing a great work in instructing the rising generation; but it seems that if the result of this training does not bring them to His service, and prepare them for his kingdom, it may be considered a failure. We repeat and reiterate the conviction, that there is but one way of conversion, which is the direct influence of the Spirit of God upon the heart; and until He speaks to the child in this way, all other teaching will be fruitless.

May the Lord arouse his church to renewed zeal in this cause, in these last hours of time. I say hours, for I think we are so near the end that we cannot count the hours. "Behold the Judge standeth before the door."

WORK WHILE THE DAY LASTS.

The rest will soon be given to those who have labored. The prize will be awarded to those who have conquered; the crown to those who have borne the cross; the kingdom, the inheritance, to those who have truly been pilgrims and strangers on the earth.

A little time is left in which to labor. "Work while the day is shining." The night is coming. The day of labor will soon be closed. Shall we have our work done? Our Master is not a hard one. If we are faithful, we shall be accepted. He will say, Well done. But those who have not exerted themselves to improve their time, and have not labored unselfishly for the Master's interests, for the good of his vineyard, cannot be accepted.

Awake to life and to duty. The time is almost past. What have we done? How can we redeem the time? We cannot recall the past. Let us improve the present. There is still work to do, and if improved faithfully, there is still a chance that we may hear the Master say, Well done.

"There's resting by and by;" but the rest comes after the labor. Brethren, let us labor to enter into the rest.—Advent Review.

SANCTIFICATION AND CHRISTIAN PERFECTION.—NO 2.

L. B. LOCKWOOD.

MR. EDITOR:—In a former number I gave the outline of my views on these subjects. And whatever may be the time of the Advent of the Savior, it is certain that without holiness no man shall see the Lord. Correct views on that subject, therefore, are of the very first importance. If we "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord," then whether he comes at midnight, at cock crowing, or in the morning, we shall be ready. And "blessed is that servant whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

"All is not gold that glitters." "All are not Israel that are of Israel." "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? and then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye workers of iniquity."

We are well aware that the word "sanctification" has a primary and secondary meaning; and that it is sometimes applied to objects that have no personal holiness. But our controversy is with ideas and not with words. It is believed by some, that after men become christians, there is another great change to be experienced in this world, which they term "sanctification" or "christian perfection," in which state they live free from sin; and which is accomplished not by a gradual growth, but by an instantaneous change. And this doctrine, whatever the terms employed, we believe to be unscriptural, and consequently injurious. It leads inquirers in a wrong direction, and "makes sad" the hearts of humble christians "whom God has not made sad."

Our objection to this doctrine of "sanctification" is, that it makes a radical distinction between christians; divides them into two classes,—justified and sanctified; a distinction which is without the shadow of scriptural authority. And there is not a solitary passage of Scripture, brought to sustain this doctrine (of sanctification), that does not apply to all christians. If the "sanctified" are those who are influenced by love to God and man as their highest object; those in whom the love of God reigns supreme; who can say for "me to live is Christ," and "to die is gain;" whose ultimate object in life, is not to benefit self, but to glorify God, and to do good to men; if this description applies to the sanctified, does it not apply to all christians? Can a man be a christian, in any sense, and yet "lack that one thing"? If he "love father or mother, wife or children, house or lands more than" Christ, is he to be called a christian? Has not Christ himself declared that such an one is not worthy of Him? Ananias and Sapphira "kept back part of the price;" but were they true christians?

We believe that that great moral change which makes the sinner a saint, is a great and radical change; such a change as is accomplished when the dead are raised to life. And, says the apostle—"You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." In that moral resurrection which the Ephesians had experienced, there was a radical change; a new principle was implanted in them; and they were "new creatures in Christ." Between a dead body and a living body there is a radical difference; even though that living body be in a state of syncope; and incapable of motion, for a time. It is not the quantity but the quality of our moral feelings that determines our character. And hence, says the apostle—"The fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is;" and not, as an old author remarks, "of what bulk it is." And hence it is, that whilst the long prayers and ostentatious works of the Pharisee are condemned; even "the widow's two mites," and even "a cup of cold water," given from love to Christ, will meet with the divine approval.

In the first great moral change which transforms the sinner into a saint, there is a radical change, such a change as is implied in the resurrection of a dead body. A new principle is implanted, even supreme love to God, and as the christian advances in life, that principle increases in strength, and in degree. As he "has received Christ Jesus the Lord, so he walks in Him." The germ of holiness is implanted when he becomes a christian; and "the leaven" eventually "leavens the whole lump." Holiness in the human heart, is "like a drop of oil in a bucket of water;" it is small in quantity, but spreads over the whole surface, and eventually fills the whole vessel.

Hence it is that the only distinction which the Scriptures make between real christians, is a distinction corresponding with the three different stages of human life—infancy, manhood and old age. Hence we read of "babes in Christ"—"young men"—and "fathers;" "first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." But we have not the least intimation that there are two kinds of christians; one justified and the other sanctified. All christians are perfectly justified, and all are more or less sanctified. The "babe in Christ" is just as really a child of God, and "joint heir with Jesus Christ" as the mature christian; and is just as really sanctified, though not to the same degree.

All that is necessary for the infant is, to grow; and all that is necessary for "the babe in Christ" is to "grow in grace." He has the moral image of God upon his heart; or he is no christian. And if he has that, then he has that "holiness without which no man shall see the Lord;" and if he has that holiness, then he is "sanctified;" for holiness is supreme love to God; and if love to God is supreme, then he is sanctified, though sanctification be not perfect in degree. The drop of holy oil, which was infused into his soul, when his heart was first changed, that drop is small in quantity, but it spread over the whole surface, and controls the whole. If the vessel be shaken, the oil may mingle with the water; but being of a different nature, it will never become identified with it; and soon as the vessel is, at rest, it will rise to the surface. The oil is perfect in nature, but not in degree; yet eventually it fills the whole vessel—becomes perfect in degree. And then, when the grain is ripe, it is cut down; and eventually it is gathered into the garner. But from the commencement to the end of the christian's earthly course, there is no radical change in his new moral nature. The "babe in Christ" grows to manhood, and old age; but is the same being at every stage of experience. The light that first illuminates his soul, "shineth more and more unto the perfect day;" but it is the same light still.

PREACHING.

How great the variety! How many efforts fall short, go above or beyond the mark! Take heed to your manner and matter of preaching. You are not a lecturer, nor critic, but a preacher of the cross. You should, in the preparation and delivery of a sermon, try to realize that every hearer is inquiring of you the great answer to, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" As to the manner of preaching, we can but say, your manner must be like yourself. An interesting speaker addressed our people recently, and his manner impressed us in this wise. He appeared—without manuscript—as one loading a heavy gun. Slowly and carefully he proceeded, as if word, syllable, and sentence, came to him from afar. He packed closely, and to us he seemed anxious about the result. He kept his eye upon the people, and when they did not appear to understand, he repeated with emphasis. The longer he preached, the less he appeared, and the more prominent to all was the cross of Christ. Oh, how he preached—preached Jesus and the cross.

Preaching should be such as takes hold upon the people. Flickering lights, shooting meteors, telegraphic sensations, and bursting bubbles may interest and call forth commendations from the floating populace, and "light-reading" readers, but whom will such preaching lead to Christ? Not any; but their darkness is the greater for having heard such so-called preaching. The preaching that takes hold upon the people is the preaching of the cross. You cannot deceive the people. If you attempt to preach yourself, for self-glory, the people will see it, and your preaching will be in vain. A gospel properly proclaimed is its own attraction. It takes hold upon the people, and such a hold as sinners cannot shake off. If you want self-glory, go to the literary or political world, and dig, dig deep, and you will find it; but the glory of preaching belongs to God, and he will turn and overturn until men and preaching are consecrated to his glory through the salvation of souls. Gowns, and prayer-books, and long prayers, and liturgies, and other ecclesiastical paraphernalia, may not be out of place in the closet; but pray what can be done with such things by way of converting the masses? They are dead weights.

Preaching that comes from the soul, gushing from the mouth, sparkling in tear-drops, tracing the blood-veins, and dropping from the fingers, can be rendered useful in the cities amid the splendor of diamonds and thunderings of pipe-organs, or it may be taken at three o'clock in the afternoon into the country school-house, where, surrounded by rude benches, broken windows, bare floors, and coatless lads, it will wield an influence which will only be fully realized when eternity dawns upon us. This is the kind of preaching that will take hold upon all kinds of people.

Plain preaching is an important point. Some ministers are ever talking about the philosophy of religion, and its relation to science. "Premises," "reasonable hypothesis," "third proposition" with a "logical conclusion." Others make a great effort to quote the "fathers," renowned poets, and a large sprinkle of Shakspeare.

Christ is your model preacher. He corrected the wrong by a presentation of living truths, and the apostles succeed him in time and manner. He spoke in such a way that the people could see, hear, and feel, and withal be convinced. Do not omit plain figures of speech, common illustrations, and Bible narratives with suitable quotations, which the people can understand.

Aim at success every time you preach. Believe that you will accomplish something. Trust to God for the leavening power. Keep your own heart right, your hands clean, and your mind pure, and press the truth with earnestness, and your word shall not return void.—Methodist Recorder.

THE TRACT IN THE SOLE OF A SHOE.—A man having received a tract, used it in filling up the space between the inner and the outer sole of a shoe. Some time afterward, another man, of the same business, sat down on a Sabbath morning to put a new sole to that shoe; but, when he had cut away the old leather, he saw the tract, and his attention was instantly arrested by its title—"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." It was an arrow from the quiver of the Almighty. The work was laid aside. His soul was troubled, nor could he find rest until he found it in Christ Jesus.

Gems.

— What you have once decided solemnly and prayerfully to be right, stick to it, not questioning but that violation is guilt. When sure you are right, never mind what others say of you.

— If you are told that another reviles you, do not go about to vindicate yourself; but rather say, my other faults I find are hid from him, else I am persuaded he would have told of them also; and if this be not true, no one will believe it long.

— Prosperity is no just scale; adversity is the only true balance to weigh a friend.

— Malice itself drinks the most part of its own poison. The poison of serpents is deadly to others, but harmless to themselves. The poison of malice is deadliest to its possessor.

— Flatterers only lift a man up, as it is said the eagle does the tortoise—to get something by the fall.

— He who knows himself well, is not troubled by the reflections of bad men, nor flattered by the praises of friends; for he esteems himself so moderately, that he knows as poorly of himself as others can, and properly estimates the emptiness of praise.

— Prayer is ever profitable. At night it is our covering; in the morning it is our armor.

— The more a man looks at others, the less he sees of himself; and the less he sees of himself, the less he knows of himself, and self-ignorance is the cause of all self-inflation.

— Judge not the rich by their wealth, nor the poor by their poverty.

— If every man had a window in his breast, blinds would be in great demand.

— Some people are uneasy. They ransack creation for pleasure; dig into the bowels of the earth for wealth; soar on the wings of imagination for gratification; when nothing can give peace, comfort, satisfaction, or rest, unless there is peace within. They need not go abroad for joy, who have a feast at home.

HOW TO FISH FOR MEN.

1. Improve your time. All being ready, put out your line at once, and keep it out every moment possible, as you cannot tell the minute when you may take a big fish. Hold forth continually, in season and out of season. Only yesterday a young lady just converted wrote to me, "Do you remember in your letter to my brother urging him to a christian life that you added, 'I think your oldest sister is a christian?' That troubled me. I knew I was not a christian, and I knew that I ought to be one." Keep out your line.

2. Be sure and keep your float whirling lively and bright. Make the truth fresh and attractive. Turn its bright sides to men's hearts. If you can add a bright feather from the wing of fancy it will be all the better.

3. Row often over the same ground. The fish that is not quite ready to take hold this time round may spring for it next. No matter if other more expert fishermen than you have been over the ground before you. God may give to those hitherto indifferent an eye to your hook. Be careful about saying, "There are no fish to be caught there."

4. Be prepared for some disappointments. Now and then your hopes will be greatly raised only to be greatly dashed. You may reel a splendid fellow to the boat's side, and just when you are sure of him off he will slip from the hook, and you will lose him. You will sometimes be sure a man is stepping into the kingdom, and the next you know he is in the deep water of worldiness or skepticism.

5. Finally, be patient. This is the supreme, indispensable quality in a good fisherman. A fisherman's patience is proverbial the world over. You must learn to fish the whole day without taking a single fish, or even having a bite, and yet consider that you have had a good time, and go at it again, light and cheerful, the next day. Above all things, be not weary in well-doing if you would catch souls.

THE DESERTER.—Not long since, there came to my house one who had been in the army. He was poor, and wanted help. "Why not apply for a pension?" I asked; and I wrote for him to Washington, presenting his claims. But the answer came—"The man of whom you write was once in the army, but deserted; he can draw no pension. The government has no money for deserters."

Are there not many in the outward church very much like this man? They have enlisted in the service of the Lord Jesus, their names have gone on the roll, but they are not in the ranks; they are not at their proper posts; they do not respond to the call; they have run away; they are deserters. They do not like the sacrifice the christian soldier must make, nor the hard work he must perform, so they have left the ranks. But these men are all known in the heavenly city; their names are registered. They can get no heavenly pension, no bright and glorious reward, in that city of the great King. There will be no great and everlasting joy for them; no crown, no harp of praise, no song of victory and love, no glad welcome of the King; no pension; they are deserters. They put a hand to the plough, but looked back; they are not fit for the kingom of heaven. Are you one of them?—Amer. Messenger.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE LIKE?

1. It is like a large, beautiful tree that bears sweet fruit for those that are hungry, and affords shelter and shade for pilgrims on their way to the kingdom of heaven.

2. It is like a cabinet of jewels and precious stones, which are not only to be looked at and admired, but used and worn.

3. It is like a telescope, which brings distant objects and far-off things of the world to come very near, so that we can see something of their beauty and importance.

4. It is like a treasure-house of all sorts of valuables and useful things, and which are to be had without money and without price.

5. It is like a deep, broad, calm, flowing river, the banks of which are green and flowery; where birds sing and lambs play, and dear little children are loving and happy.

My dear children, because I love you, I want you to love the Bible. If you attend to it, it will make you, through God's blessing, wise, rich, and happy, forever and ever. It is God's book. It is the best book. It is a book for little children.

THE BIRDS AND THE NEST.

Who taught the bird to build her nest
Of wool, and hay, and moss?
Who taught her how to weave it best,
And lay the twigs across?

Who taught the busy bee to fly
Among the sweetest flowers?
And lay her store of honey by,
To eat in winter hours?

Who taught the little ants the way
Their little holes to bore?
And through the pleasant summer's day
To gather up their store?

'T was God who taught them all the way,
And gave them all their skill,
And teaches children when they pray,
To do his holy will.

ONLY A FLOWER TO GIVE.

"Mother," asked little Phœbe Cary, "have you nothing I can carry to poor Aunt Molly?"

Phœbe's mother was poor, and her closet was very scant that morning.

"I wish I had, Phœbe," said she. "Can you think of any thing?"

Phœbe thought. "I've only a flower," said the little girl, "I will take her a sweet pea."

Phœbe had a sweet pea which she had planted under her window, and as it grew and flowered, both mother and daughter loved and enjoyed it. Phœbe picked one and then ran down to a poor old sick woman, who for a whole year had lain in her bed suffering with great pain.

In the afternoon a lady called to see Aunt Molly. She saw a sweet pea in a cracked tumbler on a small stand by the poor woman's bed.

"That pretty posy a little girl brought me this morning, who said it was all she had to bring," said Aunt Molly, with a smile; "I'm sure it is worth a great deal to know I'm thought of; and as I look at it, it brings up the image of green fields and the posies I used to pick when I was young; yes, and it makes me think what a wonderful God we have. If this little flower is not beneath his making and his care, he won't overlook a poor creature like me."

Tears came in the lady's eyes. And what did she think? She thought "If you've only a flower to give, give that. It is worth a a great deal to the poor, the aged, the sick, to know that they are thought of."

PRETTY BIRDY.

"Little birds sleep sweetly in their soft, round nests, Crouching in the cover of their mother's breast."

Don't hurt the sweet, beautiful songsters, little folks, not a hair of their heads, nor their nests or little ones; it would be cruelly wicked to do so. Hark! how sweetly they sing: Sing praises? Yes, they do. Turn to the one hundred and forty-eighth Psalm, and see how every thing above and every thing below, animate and inanimate, praise the Lord, and the birds among the rest. Learn a lesson from these merry, melodious songsters? Certainly we can.

"We learn a lesson from the birds
Of life from day to day;
The things we set our hearts upon,
Oft quickly pass away!"

BOYS HELPING A HORSE.

"Mamma, I've been helping a horse to pull a load of coal up the hill!" merrily shouted a little happy-looking boy one cold, frosty morning. "The hill was very slippery, mamma, with frost and snow; and I felt so sad to see the poor horse struggling to get up! I remembered that, last winter, papa had some ashes strewn on the road; so I got some in my wheelbarrow, and, with my spade, spread them up the hill. The man then said, 'Gee up, my good horse!' and he was soon at the top of the hill. Then, mamma, the man said, 'Thank you, my little man; you have helped my horse to pull this load of coal up the hill.' I feel so happy, mamma!"

"You have done a good action, my dear child,' replied the parent; "one that is not only pleasing to me, but also to your heavenly Father. Never omit to show kindness to animals."

"I'LL tell your mother of you," said one little girl to another. "Tell her," answered Maggie; "you cannot tell her any thing naughty of me that I don't tell her myself." That is right. Let every boy and girl tell mother when they do wrong, and I am sure they will not keep doing it.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HOUSEWORK FOR GIRLS.—It is the law of nature that no human being can have a sound, vigorous body, accomplish much physically, and enjoy long life, without good muscles. Though there is a variety of ways by which exercise may be obtained, yet domestic labor is best adapted to develop and strengthen the whole system. Within a few years much interest has been awakened upon the subject of physical exercises and games; calisthenics and gymnastics have been introduced inside the school-room, and are becoming a part of the regular exercises in many institutions. This is an improvement in the right direction, and is good so far as it goes, but it is entirely inadequate to meet fully the demands of nature.

No kind of exercise for girls is so well calculated as household work to develop all the muscles of the body; to do it in early life, and gradually, under circumstances favorable to health generally. The girl and young woman must thus be trained year after year, otherwise she will never obtain that hardihood of constitution, that strength of muscle, that power of endurance, or in other words, that balance of temperament so essential to good health and happiness in all the social and domestic relations of life.—Home and Health.

EFFECT OF LIGHT ON SMALL POX.—The Journal of Telegraphy says:—"Among the many investigations now being made of the chemical action of light, there are none more interesting or more important than those which are directed to the observation of its effect on the health. It has been observed by Dr. Weber, that the sensibility of the skin is much increased in those parts of the body which are always exposed to the light, and this difference has ever been measured by that eminent physician. This remarkable fact is especially observable on persons suffering from small-pox, the severity of the skin disease being visibly augmented if the patient be not confined in a dark room. Dr. Waters has recently published a paper on this subject, in which he states that if the room be darkened so that not a ray can enter it, the effect is to arrest the disease at the papular or vesicular stage; it never becomes purulent, and the skin between the vesicles is never inflamed or swollen; the liquor sanguinis is not changed into pus, nearly all the pain and itching are absent, and the smell is, if not entirely removed, greatly diminished. Another advantage, important in a therapeutical point of view, is the assistance given to medicines, the absence of light increasing the excretory powers of the skin."

A HINT TO NURSES.—You know what a racket is caused, even by the most careful hand, in supplying coals to a grate or stove, and how, when the performance is undertaken by the servant, it becomes almost distracting. If you don't remember take notice the first time you are ill, or you have a dear patient in your care, or the baby is in a quiet slumber. Let some one bring on her coal-scuttle or shovel, and revive your recollection. Well, the remedy we suggest is, to put the coals in little paper bags, each holding about a shovelful. These can be laid quietly on the fire, and, as the paper ignites, the coals will softly settle in place. You may fill a coal-scuttle or box with such parcels, ready for use. For a sick-room, a nursery at night, or even for a library, the plan is admirable. Just try it. Besides, it is so cleanly. If you don't choose to provide yourself with paper bags, you can wrap the coals in pieces of newspaper at your leisure, and have them ready for use when occasion requires.—Good Health.

HOW TO IMPROVE OUR SANITARY CONDITION.—A great cause of disease is improper food and hurried eating. In order to fully understand how to eat and how to conduct ourselves after eating, it is necessary that we should become acquainted, in some measure, with the process of nutrition. Many persons tumble their food precipitately into their mouths and swallow it without mastication, contrary to express laws of nature. Food should undergo thorough mastication and salivation before it enters the duodenum and becomes mixed with the bile and pancreatic juices. This bile is there secreted by the liver. The chyme having undergone the changes adverted to, is urged, by peristaltic motions of the intestines, onward through the alimentary canal. If the peristaltic be diminished, owing to the deficiency of bile, the progress of digestion is retarded and the bowels become constipated and dyspepsia often follows. In such cases a thorough and active cathartic should be used to produce specific action, arousing the secretions and producing free bilious evacuations.—Ex.

WARM BATHS FOR CHILDREN.—A physician in a very sensible article upon bathing, says: "For 'wind in the stomach' children are thought to have, for their tiresome crying, and for the restlessness and worrying at night with which they are afflicted, if the warm bath were resorted to oftener, and the dosing of soothing syrups and worse nostrums less, it would be better for the children."

LEMON FOR A COUGH.—Roast the lemon very carefully without burning it; when it is thoroughly hot, cut and squeeze into a cup upon three ounces of sugar, finely powdered. Take a spoonful whenever your cough troubles you. It is good and agreeable to the taste. Rarely has it been known to fail of giving relief.

DURING the process of eating, no liquid of any kind should be taken, as thereby we are very apt to injure the stomach by introducing imperfectly masticated food, and to cheat it by diluting the gastric juice, the action of which is necessary to dissolve the food taken into it.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the imminent, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

THE COMING OF MESSIAH.

Messiah's coming, and the tidings
Are rolling wide and far,
As light flows out in gladness
From yon fair morning star.
He is coming! and the tidings
Sweep through the swelling air,
With hope that ends forever
Time's ages of despair.

This old earth from dreams and slumber
Wakes up and says, Amen!
Land and ocean bid him welcome,
Flood and forest join the strain.
He is coming! and the mountains
Of Judea ring again;
Jerusalem awakens,
And shouts her glad Amen!

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. K. LOMBARD.

NUMBER SIX.

But their jubilee celebration will soon be followed by the severe judgment of God. Paul, no doubt, has this jubilee festivity in view in the passage—"When they shall say, Peace and safety, sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape." The peace and safety cry now is of peace and safety ahead, in the "good time coming." The popular churches look for it in the world's conversion, others in "the progress of the age." But, in celebrating the new order of things, under the confederacy, they will regard the "good time" as already commenced and destined to continue forever. Hence they promise themselves, in their infatuation, an eternal release from the Bible and all its requirements, with a continual flow of prosperity, "peace, and safety." But their joy will soon be turned to heaviness, and their laughter to mourning and bitterness, in the pouring out of the seven last plagues upon them.

But, before we take up the judgments of God upon these blasphemers of his holy name and persecutors of his people, we will consider first the tendency of orthodoxy toward the position of Spiritualists, and then the faithful warnings of the church waiting for their coming Lord, as they behold this apostasy rising amidst the perils of the last days. We shall find both the apostasy and the warnings definitely given in the prophecies.

ORTHODOXY DRIFTING INTO SPIRITUALISM.

As the rise and progress of this confederacy has been clearly revealed in the word of God, so has it been evidently ordained in the wisdom of God. It may strike some as a confusion that I should accredit the development to both God and Satan. But the confusion is only in appearance. What God has sometimes done with individuals, with whom he has become wearied, in "delivering them over to Satan," he proposes to do with the mass of professors of religion in coming up to the judgment, "because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved" (2 Thess. 2: 11, 11), as we said, "For this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness."

God's judgments are often of such a nature that Satan performs them, according to a principle expressed in the Psalms (17: 13), "The wicked" are "thy sword." Hence, God often ordains what Satan performs; and this seems especially true of the confederacy, which, as a counterfeit for Christ's coming and kingdom, will prove "a strong delusion" from God to those who have no heart for the genuine coming and kingdom, but wish for something else.

The object of God in the Spiritualist development is to bring the human family to their senses as they are stupidly coming up to the judgment, by offering them at the peril of their lives something that must be shocking to their moral sense, if they have any. It is therefore in the divine purpose an act of mercy and salvation to those who would be right, and no injustice to those who would be wrong.

In its operation it will divide society into two distinct parties—those who are for God and his truth, and those who are against the same. It will separate the saints from the world, unite them in brotherly love, and ripen them for the judgment. It will also require those who are inclined to make a mockery of religion, to heartily take sides either with God or the world, and end their seeming neutrality. Thus all mere profession of religion will cease, since none will profess under such peril who do not mean to live it; and while it ripens the saints for glory, it also ripens those who will not be saints for perdition.

In these days of religious liberty, God has been offering men his truth without compulsion. He has brought the Bible to every house, and made it the cheapest book in the land. He has given us, too, every needful advantage in acquiring a knowledge of its truths. Never before could every body have it, and read it for themselves, with access to so many helps and aids as now. Never before could they prove its authenticity so easily, nor hear it preached so generally, nor hear all sides so liberally, as in the present generation.

And yet, with all these advantages, it is to-day less read, less believed, and less loved and listened to, than it was in the days of our fathers! In their thirst for reading they read everything but the Bible; and in their liberality they can admit everything but the truth.

Among the many who profess the religion of the Bible, comparatively few are careful to regulate their lives or their doctrines by it. Doubtless nine-tenths of them would sooner receive a popular error, than an unpopular truth; and if urged to change their errors for Bible truths, they will very likely trample down the plainest statements of the Bible, protesting that "it makes no difference what we believe."

In view of this state of things, it is not difficult to see that this last great apostasy, which heads up in Spiritualism, has had the foundation laid for it in the popular churches; and hence the issue which the apostasy develops is, first, God's truth against popular errors in the church; and, finally, Christianity against Spiritualism.

Paul alludes to this apostasy in 2 Tim. 3: 1–7, when he says—"In the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, heady, high-minded, ... despisers of them that are good, ... lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness," etc. This language clearly shows an apostasy of professors of religion in their daily lives; and the next passage—"Ever learning, and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth"—shows an apostasy in doctrine; while the eighth verse—"Now as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth"—shows that they drift into Spiritualism at last. If they are "ever learning," they are making progress in some direction; but if they are "never able to come to the knowledge of the truth," their progress must be in error; hence Spiritualism finally ensnares them.

To resist the truth as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses is to resist the truth as they did, by working miracles against it; hence it means to resist it as a Spiritualist.

The apostle must be understood as referring to the same times of peril to come in the last days of which he had just been speaking, when a few verses after he charges Timothy to "preach the word," giving as the reason—"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." And since the allusion must be to the time of which he had just been speaking, it shows clearly that the last day perils will be marked by an apostasy in the church, when they will get tired of sound doctrine, choose teachers after their own lusts, turn away their ears from the truth, and give heed to fables.

Paul does not here say what fables they incline to, in turning away from the truth; but in his first letter to Timothy (chap. 4) he told him of this departure "from the faith," which was to come "in the latter times," and says they "shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." O that they might have eyes to see whither they are tending in their blindness, before they sink in everlasting ruin!

But in speaking of the "man of sin," Paul has given some of his strongest language concerning this apostasy. He declares that there shall "come a falling away first," as preparing the way for the man of sin to be revealed. He also says that "because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved, . . . God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie." 2 Thess. 2: 10, 11.

This passage evidently teaches that as they have not the love of the truth—Bible truth—in their hearts, but will persist in their errors regardless of what the Bible says, therefore God gives them a plausible support for their errors in the developments in Spiritualism, that they may manifestly take their position with the friends of error and sin, where they belong. This "strong delusion" seems intended to draw out and unite all the friends of error, "that they all may be damned who believe not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness."

If we inquire what popular errors in the professed church receive a plausible support in Spiritualism, we find that the fundamental doctrine in Spiritualism is as popular and held as tenaciously in the churches, as it is with Spiritualists. I refer to the immortality of the soul—a doctrine so essential to Spiritualism that their whole system must stand or fall, with one and all, on their belief or disbelief on this one point.

As all believers in the immortality of the soul hold that man in death retains and exercises the various faculties of his mind with increased vigor and intensity, they can but allow that they must still retain their interest for their friends. And it would be a strange supposition indeed to think that with more interest than ever for earthly friends, they should find no power to communicate what might be profitable to them.

Popular theology teaches that when men die they become angels, and hence all "angels' visits" mentioned in the Bible are so many spirits of the departed. And they tell us, too, that the "familiar spirits," which the Mosaic law forbids men to consult, were spirits of wicked men who had died. Thus while in the nature of the case it seems reasonable to believe they may communicate, if the soul is immortal, the interpretations of popular theology virtually say they have done so in numerous instances recorded in the Bible.

So in these days, while so many are in doubt about the condition of the dead, and future rewards and punishments, because they do not choose to listen to the Bible teachings on these questions, the spirits of devils come rapping for a hearing, claiming that they are the spirits of our departed friends, right from glory, and can tell us all about that world. And if they are the spirits of our friends who have died, they can certainly tell us all about these matters. And we sooner listen to them on these matters than to anybody else, if the Bible is not authoritative with us. And the hope that they may be our friends, with the novelty of the entertainment, leads the inquirer on, step by step, till, fascinated by their influence over him, he gives them his confidence and is blindly led to believe God a myth, the Bible a lie, and religion a delusion.

Millions of humanity are already charmed by their seductive influence, and hardened by their blasphemies; and still more are advancing in the same road to moral perdition.

No error is more popular than the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, or the view that the dead are alive in the spirit world; while the Bible declares them asleep in their graves; and no thought could be more fascinating to the bereaved heart holding this error than the hope of communication with the friends departed. But if it appears, as the Scriptures plainly show, that they get their communications from demons instead of their departed friends, it proves the Spiritualist development a delusion—a "strong delusion"—the most fascinating, corrupting and blasphemous that has ever cursed fallen man.

Orthodoxy may affect to wonder at their infatuation, and deplore their blindness; but, sad as may be the moral results of this delusion, they are but the legitimate results and ripe fruits of the orthodox doctrine that every man has a part of God for his mind. For if the doctrine be true that he has a part of God for his mind, and is therefore immortal, it is equally true that having a part of God for his mind, he must be holy as God is holy, and cannot sin. And more blasphemous still, he may claim as being a part of God, and partaking of his attributes, that he is equal with him, and owes him no allegiance! Indeed, there is no end to the monstrous fruits which grow on this vile tree.

"THE SACRIFICE AND THE OBLATION."—DANIEL 9: 27.

J. B. CLARK.

The question has been asked—"Who caused the daily sacrifice to cease? Messiah, or Rome? which?" After asking this question the party quote, Dan. 8: 10, 11, as being the daily sacrifice that was made to cease, as spoken of in Dan. 9: 27.—"And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease."

The little horn of Dan. 8, is said to "take away" the daily sacrifice and to tread under foot the sanctuary and the host, for a period of 2300 days; at the expiration of this period their daily sacrifice was to be restored to them, and their sanctuary cleansed. Thus the daily sacrifice brought to view in Dan. 8, could not have been the sacrifice and the oblation brought to view in Daniel 9: 27. Consequently neither the Messiah or Rome took it away, because this is the expression used in the prophecy or vision of the eighth chapter, and any other expression would not be proper. It does not say the little horn made the sacrifice to cease.

But the language in Daniel 9: 27, refers to another matter, as we shall show, by commencing at the twenty-sixth verse—"And the people of the prince [or princes] that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary. This was subsequent to Messiah's being cut off. The angel makes mention of this fact of the destruction of their city and who shall do this work, then proceeds with the direct subject—"And he (Messiah) shall confirm the covenant with many for one week, and in the midst of the week he [Messiah] shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease."

It is supposed by some that the prince brought to view here in verse 26, is the Roman Emperor, or prince; but in fact they—the people, are Messiah's future people. One translation reads thus—"Messiah the ruler." And in this verse it reads—"The ruler's people that shall come," evidently referring to the Gentiles.

It was the Romans that came, for no one else could come, as Rome was a universal empire comprising the whole Gentile world—"Messiah's future people." I believe the prince brought to view in verse 26, and the "he," brought to view in verse 27, refers to "Messiah the prince," or, as in another translation, "Messiah the ruler."

Now the question what sacrifice and oblation did Messiah cause to cease in the midst of the week? I answer the one offering and sacrifice for sin, of which all other offerings and sacrifices were but types. It was in the midst of the week, after the sixty-two weeks, when the Messiah was cut off—when he offered himself a sacrifice upon the cross. He did not offer the sacrifice daily as those priests did; but he made the one offering and sacrifice when he offered up himself, and he made it—the one sacrifice and the oblation to cease forever. This is but one sacrifice. It does not say sacrifices and oblations—plural. It must mean that sacrifice and oblation (singular) which the Messiah was to make to God for sin, once for all. It was that sacrifice which is the antitype of all the legal sacrifices from the days of Abel to the days of the Messiah.

Paul says (Heb. 7: 27)—"Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifices first for his own sin, and then for the people, this he did once when he offered up himself." Again (Heb. 10: 11, 12)—"And every priest standeth daily ministering, and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins, but this man after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God."

We believe this is sufficient to prove that the one sacrifice and the oblation which was offered up and made to cease was the one sacrifice made on Calvary. Did it not cease? it did. Did it not cease forever? it did. And who will deny that all legal sacrifices did not cease with it? Have there ever been any legal sacrifices offered since the one offering on the cross, when Christ offered up himself for sins? No. This is the last sacrifice that was ever offered in our world to take away sin. All sacrifices that have been offered since Christ's death are illegal.

Therefore when the people of the ruler or prince came, and destroyed the city and the sanctuary, they did not cause any legal sacrifices to cease, for those infidel Jews were abandoned of God long before the Romans destroyed their city, and sanctuary. Therefore the sacrifice and the oblation that was made to cease cannot possibly have any reference to the time when those illegal sacrifices ceased to be offered up at the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. "THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?"

W. GRIFFITH.

It is usual to divide this world of life with all its varieties into two kingdoms,—the vegetable and the animal. But, though the two are sufficiently distinct in their broad features, as in the oak, on the one hand, and the horse on the other, there are points at which they both meet, and where the one seems to blend itself into the other. Some specimens of living things unite the essential properties of the vegetable with the lower properties of the animal; and these links of connection are such as to suggest the conclusion that life in the two kingdoms is essentially and fundamentally one in principle. The differences are vast, the varieties are endless. These modifications, we will assume, were impressed upon the first germs, or full embodiments of the life-force as they proceed from the almighty hands. But still they are all endowed with that inherent likeness and kinship which bind them together as the divergent members of one essentially related family.

If we study life in some of its lower forms, as in the fungus, we observe that a certain force acts in a special way. It seizes upon materials of suitable kind, appropriates them, assimilates them, and builds them up into a definite organism—a mushroom. The result of this organism is that other germs of precisely similar life-force are developed; which, being disturbed, act, sooner or later, in precisely the same way. They, too, seize upon matter; appropriate it gradually to their own use; assimilate it to peculiar qualities, and dispose it into a wonderful, delicate, and beautiful organism. Without doubt, you may trace in a vegetable of the lowest form, a power which selects, combines, and arranges material substances, after a manner, and with results which no human intelligence or skill can repeat. We account for this marvellous elaboration by saying, the mushroom grows.

Let us put by the side of this, another feature or phenomenon of life,—of life in a higher form; and compare the two. There is the eavesmartin gathering materials from the softened clay to build its nest. It selects a site, lays a foundation, raises a structure, and furnishes it,—all for a special purpose. We look at the clever little architect, and admire the work; but we do not feel so confounded before this operation as we do in presence of the fungus growth. We have found a name for the impulse or force by which the bird acts. It is fulfilling its "instinct." But wherein does this "instinct" essentially differ from the life-force of the vegetable? The bird works, as we believe, without plan or ideal, without rectification, without failure, without instruction, observation, or experience; and never with variation or improvement. Because of locomotion and voluntariness in fixing upon a site and gathering materials, we accredit the worker with intelligence. Might we not, with equal justice, attribute intelligence to the mollusc in building its shell? Admitting the intelligence, is there not intelligence, or its analogue, somewhere in the wonderful life-work of the fungus? The form of working is very different in the two cases; but the principles and result of the work are precisely similar in both—selection, combination, and arrangement of material substances. If the life-force accounts for the fungus structure, may we not allow that life-force is the efficient cause of the shell and of the nest? and that instinct is only a name for the mode in which the animal's life-force acts in building its house?

All vegetable growths involve the same facts—whether we take the fern, the crocus, the rose, or the cedar. The life which is in them builds the leaf, the stem, the flower, the seed. It is a building, or, at least, a fabrication—a putting together of prepared materials in regularly organized forms, and according to definite types. There is absorption of substances from the earth, and from the air; the expanding of the leaf to the sun to take in its influences. What a laboratory is the leaf! What motions are there in its veins! What dispositions and adaptations in the arrangement of the matter which has been appropriated, modified, vitalized! In the building up of the cedar a marvellous intelligence and a mighty force are displayed. We neither understand the one nor the other; and, perhaps, ought not to speak of them as two. All force has its definite mode of action; and commends its mode and result to our approval and admiration, displaying wisdom.

The life-force in this world performs wonders, in its blindest form of working, which far surpass all that we associate either with instinct or reason. The bee's cell is greatly celebrated for its form and economy of material. But what comparison is there between a bee's cell and a bee's wing? Yet, life without instinct has formed the wing. What comparison is there between the locomotive engine and the human body? But the body, though elaborated in the silence and darkness of mere animal function under the blind working of life-force alone, displays forms of mechanism, minuteness of adaptation, degrees of perfection, and marvels of result, that man, with all his reason, invention, and powers of "creation," cannot even accurately trace. Of so much greater power is the blind working in man than the highest, intelligent working by man.

What is it that evolves from the white and yolk of an egg, solid bones, claws and beak, cartilage, muscles, intestines, nerves, skin, and feathers, so that the partridge-chick comes forth from the shell able-bodied and almost prepared to shift for itself? The life-force has done it all.

One grand function of life is to build for itself an organism. This function is common to all life, vegetable no less than animal. And another function is common to both kinds of life, that of producing germs of life-force, which becomes the basis and cause of other structures or organisms like to the parent source. There is no instinctive and intellectual form of working in this world to be compared with the simple operations of the life-force. Hence the life-force, pure and simple, is greater than instinct, greater than reason.

From each term in this argument I leave out the idea of God; not because that is inappropriate in any sense; but because it is common to all, and no more implied in one than in the other, inasmuch as God is the original source and sustaining efficiency everywhere. If life is from God, so is instinct; and equally so is reason. The capability and achievements of life being so much grander than those of instinct and reason; so, in that proportion, it must be allowed to hold the pre-eminence. Account for it as you may, the fact is incontrovertible.

How far, then, does the life-force carry us in accounting for life-phenomena?

Sensitiveness is a property of vitalized substances, or of living tissues and organisms. It is found in vegetable tissues, for some of them respond to touch; and many of them are highly sensitive to the sun's influence. The petals of certain flowers, as the daisy, afford ample illustration; opening in the sunshine, closing in the shade. Sensitiveness, in greater or less degree, pervades the animal kingdom. There, we know, it stands related to consciousness, and takes the name of pleasure or of pain. In the insect, to select a low specimen in proof, we allow it to be a property of life. The life-force, in that class of creatures, endows the tissues and fibres with feeling; or, in other words, shows in them and by them that feature, or faculty, of itself. And, ascending to the very highest earthly organism, that of man, analogy warrants us to attribute its more perfect feeling to the superior life-force which its higher development implies. The organism is nobler, more complex, elaborate, delicate, and finished; and the sensibility has kept equal pace with the structure. The life-force is the agent of construction, and, at the same time, the agent of animation at every point.

Animals take advantage of their sensitiveness, and bask in the sunbeams, or bathe themselves in the cooling stream. Will the life-force account for these facts? Surely the principle, or power, which has built an organism, is also equal to the right use of it. Moreover, we admit that life, which forms and endows all the organs of the body, also presides over some of their functions, and carries them on perfectly without any other supervision—the stomach, to wit. Life tells us when to eat, by hunger; what to eat, by relish for it; how much to eat, by satiety, or failure of appetite. And life performs the digestion, the circulation, and the assimilation. It uses its own organ. Why should it not be allowed that the life-force, which has given sensitiveness to the whole animal frame, is the agent which presides over the voluntary uses to which that sensitiveness is put—when the lark, e. g., basks in the dusty road, or the linnet washes in the purling rill? Probably, so far the principle will be allowed. But if so, what hinders its wider, its universal application, to the same class of phenomena? Why should we not say that life is the agent which rules in all our sensations?

Perception is another vital phenomenon. It is manifested in the lowest forms of animals. The worm, whether by hearing or feeling, perceives danger and shrinks into its hole. Do we require any other agent but that of life—the force which has endowed its tissues with the faculty (and therefore done the greater marvel)—to account for the perception and for the shrinking? It is a sound rule, not to multiply causes, but to resolve phenomena into as few as possible. We have in the life-force of the creature an adequate explanation of the act by which it seeks to preserve life. Surely, that power, whatever it be, which organizes and vitalizes and renovates, is sufficient to account for the continued and appropriate use. And more, the perception is but a link in the circle of vital phenomena. They are all related and dependent. Perception is necessary, not only for preservation against an enemy, but for sustentation by food. The worm makes a choice of substances for aliment, by some faculty of discerning what is appropriate for its nourishment. This choice is as necessary for its continuance and well being as any vital process involved. It is an essential part of a complex and perfect whole. Hence, no doubt, it is a working of the one agency which presides over the whole.

By a similar line of observation we may advance to the movements of animals, and resolve them into functions of the life-force. The instruments of locomotion, be they the skin, fins, legs, or wings, are all constructed without aid from instinct or reason; apart, even, from consciousness or sensation. Is it not life in the young bird that aspires to leap from its nest and fly away? What moves those wings so perfectly at the first trial? as when a boy, I saw seven young wrens follow my finger when withdrawn from examing their nest. It was the first time they had spread their wings, or been outside their nest. It was the first time they had spread their wings, or been outside their eaves-built home; but each one flew to a neighboring hedge, and took refuge there with perfect ease. Does not life answer the question of flight, just as well as the prior and much harder question of wing and feather? It is common to see young things exulting in the use of their locomotive powers; and we talk of an exuberance of animal spirits; must we not recognize in these facts another form of the manifold workings of life? The wild fowl on its wing, whether in search of food, or in migration to a distant home, is prompted by sensations, or perceptions, or instincts, which have their seat and explanation in that vital power, which accounts for the creature as a whole.

We call in the word "instinct" to aid us in conceiving of many facts connected with food, reproduction, migration, and self-preservation; but really we have explained nothing by its service. For instinct is only a generic term, expressive of certain life-functions which carry the appearance of intelligence.

The question has been raised whether any creature on earth besides man is endowed with reason; of course, in a feeble though proper sense of the word. It is a suitable question for science to entertain; and in conjunction with it may be taken a related inquiry; whether many of the human species, as idiots, have not been wanting, equally with the lower animals, in the faculty of reason? We do not associate a third element in the constituents of animal existence. We allow that one spiritual principle, although greatly varied in its functions and powers, is all that the facts require us to understand. There is so much difference between the clinging crawl of the caterpillar and the jubilant flight of the butterfly, as to require two different sources or agents to account for it. And if, at first, we might suspect a duality of agency, yet, when we come to know that the crawl and the flight are only two different stages and forms of locomotion in the one creature, the suspicion departs. The wings were lying in embryo while the insect was yet a grub. So, whatever approach toward mind may be traced in the visual and locomotive functions of the eagle, a still greater resemblance, downward, may be perceived between them and corresponding functions of the snail. They are both in search of food; and if the one is guided by a feeler, and by what is called the sense of touch, we must bear in mind that light, streaming from objects around, makes its appeal to the nervous system in a membrane of the eye specially adapted to receive impressions in that way. All sensation by eye and ear, nose, tongue, and skin proper, is but a modified form of contact, through a suitable medium, between the nerves of the body and external nature.

In the animal world we see the varied working of the animal life-force. It accounts for the organism, for the animal functions, for the locomotion, for the perceptions and sensations of pleasure and pain, for the volitions, for the instincts. In other words, it accounts for the animal and all its habits. It is the animal and all its habits; for when that is spent or expelled, the animal is not, and the carcase soon disappears.

Life-force in man is evidently a higher principle than in any other denizen of earth. It builds a nobler organism, nobler as a whole, and nobler in many of its parts; the hand and brain especially display this superiority.—"Man's State in Nature."

(To be concluded.)

GIVING UP FOR CHRIST.

It is not what a man takes up, but what he gives up, that makes him "rich toward God." Now what ought a follower of Jesus to give up for his Master's sake?

1. Of course every man who would become a Christ's-man must renounce everything that God's word and a healthy conscience set down as wrong. All sins are "contraband" at the gate-way of entrance to the christian life. The sentinel at the gate challenges us with the command—"Lay down that sin!" "Cease to do evil" comes before "Learn to do well."

2. We must give up whatever by its direct influences tends to injure ourselves or others. Here comes in the law of brotherly love—the law avoiding the appearance of evil, and of renouncing whatever causes our brother to stumble. This is the generally accepted basis for the duty of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks. They endanger my neighbor A——, and they are destroying my brother B——; therefore I ought to avoid setting the example of their use. Total abstinence, then, rests on the double ground of self-preservation, and of self-denial for the sake of others. We have a very poor opinion of the piety of any man who will not give up his bottle of wine, or any other self-indulgence, for the sake of taking a stumbling-block out of a fellow creature's path.

This second principle of abandoning every practice which may mislead others, is the one to be applied by a christian whenever he is solicited to play whist, or attend the opera, the circus, or the dancing party. You may not become a gambler, but cards make gamblers of others. You may not be corrupted by the opera-stage or the promiscuous dance, but their influence has damaged thousands of your fellow christians. The safe side of all questionable amusements is the outside.

3. Give up whatever tends to pamper the passions, or to kindle unholy desires. Paul's noble determination to "keep his body under," implies that there was something or other in Paul's fleshly nature which ought to be kept under. It is also true of about every christian that somewhere in his nature lies a weak point, a besetting tendency to sin; and right there must be applied the check-rein of self-denial. Even eminent christians have had to wage constant battle with sexual passions. Others have had sore conflict with irritable, violent tempers. Old Dr. Alexander used to say to his students—"Young brethren, envy is a besetting sin with the ministry; you must keep that abominable spirit under." When a servant of Christ is willing to take a back seat, or to yield the pre-eminence to others, he is making a surrender which is well pleasing to his meek and lowly Master. One of the hardest things to many a christian is to serve his Savior as a "private," when his pride tells him that he ought to wear a "shoulder-strap" in Christ's army.

4. Another very hard thing for most persons to give up, is to give up having their own way. But the very essence of true spiritual obedience lies just here. It is right here that self-sufficiency and vanity and waywardness and obstinacy are to be met. Here they must be sacrificed to that demand of the Master that he shall rule and not we. Only a truly self-denying, self-abnegating disciple can adopt those words which the holy-minded Dr. Skinner lined off to his brethren just before his death—

"My Jesus, as thou wilt!
O, may thy will be mine;
Into thy hand of love
I would my all resign!"

5. The last rule of giving up is, that time, ease and money must all be held tributary to Christ. In these days of stylish equipage and social extravagance, how few christians are willing to give up to Jesus the key of their purses and bank-safes! Too many go through the solemn farce of writing "Holiness to the Lord" on their property, and then using it for their own gratification. Every servant of Christ should systematically bestow at least one tenth of his annual income in christian charities, and as much more as he or she can afford without robbing others. What child of God was ever bankrupted by benevolence?

It is harder to give up ease than money. Personal exertion to save sinners, to do disagreeable duties, and to "keep at it" in up-hill work, is one of the severest tests of self-denying godliness. Blessed is that disciple who can say, "It is my meat to do my Master's will, and to finish the work which he gave me to do."—American Messenger.

SANCTIFICATION.

N. M. WELLS.

Prominence is given to this word, also to other terms of the Bible, such as holiness, purity of heart, at the present day; yet not greater prominence than the word of God gives it. Praise the Lord. Paul wrote to the Thessalonian converts—"This is the will of God, even your sanctification." God says, "Be ye therefore perfect." "Be ye holy; for I am holy." Paul says—"Leaving therefore the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection." The Bible teaches us to be "wholly sanctified," "filled with the Spirit."

O that I could describe the feelings of gratitude to God for what the Savior has given me to experience for three months past—that he dwells in my heart, fills it with pure love, and rules my will. The presence of God often appears like a flood of sunlight, pervading my whole being. How sweet is this complete resting in Christ; "dead unto sin, and alive unto God." I can now say I abide in Jesus, and he in me, all the time.

I have for several years rejoiced in the "blessed hope" of the coming of Jesus, but never saw it in such beauty and light as since Jesus gave me this perfect love. Bless the Lord. Let all within me praise him.

God will have a pure church ready for the coming of our Lord. May we all "be able to comprehend with all the saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that we may be filled with all the fulness of God," our lamps trimmed and burning, ready to meet the Lord.

Ashly, Penn.

CHRIST'S HAND.

It is a strong hand. It balances all worlds, steadies the swinging universe; ordains the march of law, and the succession of events.

It is a redeeming hand. It alone wrought salvation, opened the gates of despair, wrenched out of their fastenings the bars of the tomb, broke the sceptre, and destroyed the sting of death; from earth to heaven threw up the highway for the ransomed of the Lord.

It is a tender hand. It can crush; it can dash in pieces mailed defenses as easily as shiver the potter's clay; can cleave the mountains—aye, bow the very heavens. It was laid so gently upon the brow of infancy, that the smiling little one looked up into what did not seem a stranger's eye, and waited a benediction. So tender, that it wipes off tears and heals the broken in heart.

It is a bountiful hand. It can spread the table in the wilderness, and wherever opened, satisfieth the desires of every living thing. It sprinkles loving benefits, and scatters tender mercies.

PERSUASION and conviction are the ends which a public speaker should aim at. A good speech is stamped with simplicity, directness, and vigor of thought and expression. The discourse that moves a man to a pure life and noble deeds is rhetorically correct. If a man would do, he must first be.

WISCONSIN CAMPMEETING.

Monday at 10 A. M., we left Chicago en route for the campmeeting at Prairie du Sac, Wisconsin. Ten miles from the city we passed through Norwood Park, where the Advent Christian Times is now printed, instead of Buchanan, Mich. It is a new settlement, in a fine section of country. But few buildings are yet erected, but we think the place will grow rapidly.

On the way to our point of destination, we passed through some as fine farming land as can be found in the world. It would astonish our New England farmers to see such handsome land as is found in Ill., Iowa, Wisconsin, Nebraska, and California. The soil is rich and deep; the surface level, and free from stones. The prospect for good crops this year is encouraging. Madison, the capital of Wisconsin, is very pleasantly located on elevated ground, almost surrounded by beautiful lakes. The Capitol building is in the midst of a handsome park, having an abundance of ornamental trees, which afford a delightful summer shade. Leaving Madison at 5 P. M., we arrived at the camp-ground at 8.30 in the evening, and found a very bright prospect for a good meeting. We were rejoiced to meet Bro. W. Sheldon, and learn that his health is improving. He is one of the Lord's true men, whose labors have been greatly blest in the western vineyard. He is highly esteemed by the church of Christ for his self-denial and constant faithfulness as a christian minister. We found him advancing in divine life, a lover and advocate of the doctrine of holiness of heart, as a necessary preparation to meet Christ at his coming. We commend him to all the churches.

The camp-ground at Prairie du Sac is the most delightful one we ever saw. It is an oak grove, free from underbrush, and covered with nice green grass. The camp door-yard is a beauty. The ground is level, excepting a gradual slope towards the south. It is kept very clean. It is a charming spot for the worship of the Most High. The day after our arrival was as lovely as we ever beheld in the world. The sky was cloudless, the temperature delightful, and all the surroundings were heavenly. It seemed as though we could not be far from paradise. A handsome circle of white tents encompassed the ground, having the large one in the centre. This was said to be the largest campmeeting ever held in the western states. The order was perfect. During the entire meeting we lay down and slept at night as free from fear of disturbance as we would at home. We had no need of watchmen. A holy influence pervaded the ground. It truly seemed like a sacred spot, where wickedness was as much out of place as tobacco spittle on the carpet of an elegant parlor. We did not hear an oath, or see any improper conduct during the meeting, nor a man the worse for the use of intoxicating liquor.

THE MEETINGS

were first class, precious seasons of refreshing from the Lord. The leading theme was holiness of heart. A large proportion of the encampment were deeply interested to secure the perfect love that casteth out all fear, and made an entire consecration to Jesus, receiving in return "great peace," and a complete assurance of acceptance. We have never before seen a whole encampment make more marked progress in divine life in one week than during this meeting at Prairie du Sac. Almost every professor of religion received special blessings, and resolved to live nearer to the Lord than ever before. There was no fanaticism, or undue excitement in the meeting, but a deep-toned feeling that took strong hold of the entire being. The pure principles of christianity were adopted as the rule of life, to be carried into daily practice every where.

There was a large number of young women who took an active part in the meetings; more than are often seen in these last days, when the foolish follies of the world are leading nearly all the young away from Christ and christianity. These had not bowed to the god of fashion, as most other young professors have done. It was a delightful sight to behold them so steadfast in the service of Christ. Very interesting young people's meetings were held daily at 3½ o'clock by Bro. Abram Slocum, a young Methodist, who has recently united with us, and was baptized during the meeting. He loves the blessed hope, and bids fair to be a useful minister of the gospel. Two other young men—Bro. George Howard and Bro. Philo Hitchcock—were ordained to the work of the ministry. There were several other promising young men, who took part in the meetings. The interest continued to increase every day. Several members of other churches came and united with us in the devotional exercises, expressing much satisfaction, and receiving a share in our rich blessings from the Lord. A goodly number sought and found peace in Christ, and seventeen were buried with him in baptism in the Wisconsin river.

So far as we heard, there was but one voice in relation to the character of the meeting, which was expressed in the following language. "It is the best I ever attended." With the rest we must confess we were never in a better one; and the closing conference meeting, on Sunday evening, was the best we ever enjoyed. The scene will never be forgotten by those present, so long as memory endures. It was truly a heavenly feast. This was a legitimate result arising from sanctification to the Lord. We believe the time has fully come, when the doctrine of holiness should have a prominent place in all our meetings, as a necessary preparation to meet Christ. It is perilous indeed to stand opposed. As a people, looking for the immediate coming of Jesus, we should be living fully up to the Bible standard, being entirely consecrated to the Lord, where we can be able to say in truth—

"My all is on the altar."

We closed our blessed campmeeting with a heavenly communion season, when two hundred and eleven gathered around the table spread in the large tent. We enjoyed it exceedingly. Jesus smiled upon us in a most gracious manner, and gave us a sweet foretaste of the heavenly kingdom. Our hope looks more blessed, bright, and valuable than ever; and the prospect of its immediate consummation is exceedingly glorious. We must be very near our happy Eden home. Of this we have no doubts. Praise the Lord for the light now shining on the sacred page. Dear Brn. and Srs., we are right in looking for the speedy coming of our Savior. The bride is getting ready. Armageddon's battle is at hand. The hosts of the enemy are marshaling their forces for the final conflict. Let christians be ready to face the foe.

Monday morning, June 10th, we bid adieu to our dear friends in Jesus, and the lovely camp-grove at Prairie du Sac. The blessings received at the meeting paid most richly for all the sacrifices made by those in attendance. Returning we stopped a day in Chicago, where we found all astir as usual. It is marvelous to see how fast the city is rising from its ashes. We met some true and tried friends in Jesus. We found Bro. Billings some better. He has received great benefit from the use of the water of the Bethesda spring, at Waukesha, Wisconsin. Bro. Sheldon is also being benefited by its use. We have great confidence in its healing virtues for all kidney and liver difficulties. It is producing some remarkable cures in cases of diabetes and Bright's disease. The water can be obtained by the gallon or barrel of Bro. L. Carrol, 153 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown. Price $1. per gallon, or $25 per barrel, of 30 gallons. This water is evidently the most effectual remedy known for the diseases of the liver, kidneys and associated organs.

Bidding farewell to our Chicago friends, we hastened home over our favorite route on the Michigan Central, and Great Western R. R., by Niagara Falls. We found all well, and prosperous as usual on our return. Praise the Lord for his great goodness and loving kindness.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The present aspect of things in the world is truly alarming. It seems as though a demoniacal spirit had taken possession of the people in all countries, which threatens the destruction of everything held sacred in the family, society, church, state and nation. The tide of social rebellion is rising at a rapid rate. The contention between labor and capital is daily increasing, and we see no prospect of any improvement. The feelings are becoming more and more aroused, and we may soon expect to see a disastrous destruction of property by the excited men among the laboring classes. So long as their employers sumbit to their demands, this might be avoided; but when the capitalists and manufacturers combine against the laborers, serious consequences must follow. Already the piano manufacturers in New York have met and passed the following resolutions:—

"Resolved. That we, the piano-forte manufacturers, pledge ourselves and hereby agree each for himself and his firm, to open his shop for ten hours as a day's work, and in no case will we accede to less than ten hours' labor per day."

The Singer Sewing Machine Company, which employs some 2,300 men, has given notice that if a sufficient number of the workmen will return to labor on the ten-hour system, the shops will be kept open, if not they will be closed. This state of things will only serve to widen the breach between the parties till they will be driven to desperation, and seek each other's destruction. The prospect for "distress of nations" is certainly startling. A world's revolution may be expected like the one in France in 1792–3.

NATIONAL CAMPMEETINGS for holiness will be held by the Methodists, and other denominations, at Sea-Cliff Grove, L. I., commencing July 3d; Richmond, Me., July 24th; Urbana, Ohio, August 8th; Williamsville, Ill., Sept. 4th. Each of these meetings will continue about ten days. The one to be held in Maine is about three miles north of Richmond Village, on the west bank of the Kennebec river, on the Maine Central R. R. There will be excursion tickets on the railroads for those who wish to attend. Sea-Cliff Grove, Long Island, is twenty-six miles from New York City.

THE WOMEN in San Francisco have started a new business arrangement in that city, known as the "Women's Pacific Publishing Company," which has just been incorporated. "It has for its capital the sum of $25,000—its officers, superintendent and business agents are all women; the type-setters are women; and so, in fact, are all connected with the concern, with a few necessary exceptions."

OUR CAMPMEETINGS.

We are satisfied that well-regulated campmeetings exert a power for good beyond any other meetings. Satan well knows the advantage of large gatherings to arouse the people to act in his favor. It is in harmony with a law of human nature; and where there is a large meeting composed of christian men, there is a corresponding power for good, in proportion as they are consecrated to the Lord. At our coming campmeetings in Springfield, Alton Bay, and other places, we hope to see the largest number of believers and the most united effort known. The time has come to break down sectarian walls, and to unite on a pure christian basis, that can be adopted by every true disciple of Jesus in the world. Of course all will not think alike in relation to every doctrinal point; but every one who truly loves Jesus, or wishes to be ready for his coming, can unite around the standard which has for his motto—"HOLINESS," "without which no man shall see the Lord."

We have a strong wish that, among all our campmeetings, we might have one to which everybody should be invited who is interested in the doctrine of holiness and entire consecration to God, as a preparation for the coming of Christ. We think such a meeting would produce most glorious results. Let us make it a subject of prayer.

PERSONAL.—On our return from the West we had the pleasure of meeting Bro. and Sr. Stoddard at Lockport, N. Y. Sr. S. came on to Rochester with us, being on her way to the Springwater Conference. She is pastor of the church at Lockport, and is a faithful laborer in the Lord's vineyard, deserving of the hearty support of the church of Christ.

SOUL OF MAN.

Since the term "soul," so often used in the Bible, is sometimes used to signify the person entire, sometimes the mind, and sometimes the life of the person; and since it is so often said to die, and since there can be no mind without life, how can a soul, in any sense, live after the death of the person? When the person dies, it is true that the life leaves the body, but not as a personality, for it never was a personality, but simply an element. If man could not live without an inside personality to make him live, neither could the horse live without an inside horse to give life to his external horseship; and if the outward person could not live without an inward person to produce life, neither could that inward person live without another inward person to make it live; and then that second inward person would just as really need a third inward person to cause it to live, and so on, till a thousand inward persons are found; and then we should have to look for still another inward person to produce life, or else fall back upon the reasonable fact that life is an element that causes a personality to live, instead of being a personality itself; and when we take that ground, it is plain that the first personality could live on the same principle independent of an inward personality.

Life leaves the body under the stroke of death in the same sense in which light leaves the candle when blown out—it is not still in existence in another locality. So when soul signifies life, death kills it; and when it indicates mind, death kills it, for there can be no mind without life; and when it signifies person, as all admit, death kills it. There is, however, a life in Christ, the property of the saint, which death cannot kill. But present life is obliterated by death. By killing the person, the life is killed; by killing the life, the mind is killed; for mind depends on life, and life cannot exist independent of an organism as a personality, being only an element, or result of the spirit of life. The Bible reads thus:—

"All they that go down to the dust, shall bow before him; and none can keep alive his own soul." Ps. 22 : 29.

"Thou hast delivered my soul from death." Ps. 56 : 13.

"He spared not their soul from death." Ps. 78 : 50.

"Let my soul live and it shall praise thee." Ps. 119 : 175.

"The eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, ... to deliver their soul from death." Ps. 33 : 19.

"My soul chooseth strangling and death rather than my life." Job 7 : 15.

"The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. 18 : 4.

"Eight souls were saved by water." 1 Pet. 3 : 20.

"Every living soul died in the sea." Rev. 16 : 3.

"What man is he that liveth and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?" Ps. 89 : 48.

"O Lord, thou hast brought up my soul from the grave." Ps. 30 : 3.

"His soul draweth near unto the grave." Job 33 : 22.

"He will deliver his soul from going into the pit." Job 33 : 28.

"Thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption." Is. 38 : 17.

"God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave." Ps. 49 : 14.

"Deliver my soul from the sword." Ps. 22 : 20.

"They smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword utterly destroying them." Josh. 11 : 11.

Where is the proof that soul signifies a personality independent of man, instead of meaning the man entire, or the life or mind of man? W. S.

CAMP WISCONSIN.

Our campmeeting was a rich feast. It was the largest yet held in the State, having thirty-six tents on the ground. This contrasts strikingly with the time when we have had only two tents at a meeting. In some respects it was the best meeting we have ever had, and will thrill the State with a healthful spirit. About twenty ministers attended, including Bro. Grant, who preached several searching discourses. Bro. Chandler from Iowa also attended, and helped in the preaching of the word, besides our home ministers. Seventeen were baptized during the meeting, including one who was a Methodist minister a few months ago. The social meetings were seasons of thrilling interest. Requests for prayers were made at different stages of the meetings, both by sinners and wanderers; and a goodly number found peace. At the close of the meeting the Lord's table was surrounded by two hundred and eleven disciples of Jesus. May we all meet at the marriage supper of the Lamb. W. S.

WISCONSIN CONFERENCE.

The annual meeting was blended with the State campmeeting, held at Prairie du Sac, and held its first business session June 5th; Bro. O. S. Knapp was reelected as President; P. W. Hough, G. Thomson, and N. A. Hitchcock were appointed as business committee. Also the following committee on ordination was chosen:—W. S. Shears, Wm. Sheldon, G. Thomson, P. W. Hough, and N. A. Hitchcock. Conference doors were opened for the reception of new ministers and churches. The Helena church was added; also the following ministers: Abram Slocum, Anson Brown, Fletcher Ghormley. Reports were heard from the various churches and ministers, partly in person or by delegates, and partly by letter, setting forth a degree of prosperity, interspersed with sectional adversity. The experiment of districting the State for quarterly meetings was satisfactory, and continued. The following brethren were appointed to take supervision of this work for the coming year:—Eastern District, G. Thomson. Western District, P. W. Hough. Southern District, Geo. Howard. The following ministers were ordained:—G. Howard and Philo Hitchcock. Other items of business of a local nature were attended to; but our sessions were short to give time to attend devotional meetings. The following campmeeting committee was elected for the coming year:—Wm. Sheldon, O. S. Knapp, E. P. Graves, P. W. Hough, T. Barker. The meeting with which this conference was connected was one of special interest—a rich feast. WM. SHELDON, Secretary.

EATING HERBS.—At our recent Wisconsin Campmeeting, I heard a new argument in favor of tobacco chewing:—"He that is weak eateth herbs." Rom. 14 : 2. I think, however, that it will not be extensively used in justification of tobacco chewing, as it carries the admission that the user is "weak" in the faith, and that the practice is not justifiable in the strong. W. S.

"SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION."—This sixteen page tract by Bro. Taylor is an excellent document to put into the hand of the skeptic, who discards a literal resurrection of the dead. It will make itself felt wherever it goes. Let it be scattered. W. S.

ANSWER.—The questions propounded by Bro. Marsh, in a recent Crisis, are answered affirmatively in previous articles from my pen, as he will notice by looking over his file; so I do not here repeat the arguments. W. S.

ORDINATION.

A most impressive ceremony took place at the Evangelist Christian Church, Brandywine Street, east of 16th, on Sunday evening, June 9th, on which occasion Bro. Marvin W. Lutz was ordained as an evangelist. The laying on of hands was performed by Elders Hook, Wilfong and Esling, and witnessed by a large congregation. The prayer of Elder Wilfong on behalf of the candidate could not but touch the hearts of all present, conveying as it did to the mind the realization of the great responsibility resting on the act, so far reaching in its results, not only for time, but for eternity.

Bro. Lutz gave a brief account of his former life, stating how very far he had gone in the paths of wickedness, so that nearly every one interested in his welfare had given him up as reprobate, until like the apostle Paul, he had suddenly been arrested in his mad career, and brought into humble submission to the feet of Jesus; and as soon as the Lord spoke peace to his heart, the great work of the ministry was laid upon him, and like that same apostle, he could say woe is me if I preach not the gospel. That whereas he was once a blasphemer, and despiser of God's truth, it was now his delight to proclaim far and near the glorious news that immortality is obtained through Christ only; and that the great day of redemption is drawing near, when there shall be a reward given to all who have served the Lord on earth, and loved his appearing. Bro. Lutz also referred to his labors in the East, and elsewhere, and the great encouragement he had received in his efforts for the salvation of men. It had been nineteen months since his conversion; yet he was still striving to be faithful and to follow the Lamb whithersoever he should lead. Elder Hook, through whose instrumentality he was converted, preached the ordination sermon from the words of the apostle Paul, in his last charge to Timothy, his son in the gospel, and the instruction given to the newly ordained Elder was most solemn and affecting, and will long be remembered by all present. God grant that the labors of this servant of Christ may be abundantly blessed, and that many adorn his crown of rejoicing in the great day of the Lord, who shall shine as the stars evermore. EMMA E. ALEXANDER.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

Recently, an article appeared in the Crisis on this subject, and as I am now able to give a scriptural view of the matter, I herewith present it. Before doing so, I would just state that the article referred to was written by myself, and sent to the Crisis office early the present year. Christ gives all the instruction we need upon the point in Matt. 19 : 9, which reads thus: "And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery." From these words it is very evident that if a man's wife is guilty of fornication or adultery, he can put her away and marry another. The same rule holds good both ways; so that a woman may be divorced from her husband, if he is guilty of fornication or adultery, and after the divorcement she can marry again and not be condemned of our Savior for so doing.

It is plain that for no other cause than that of fornication or adultery does Christ countenance divorces. Marriages of persons who have been divorced upon other grounds than that named, put the parties thus married in the list of adulterers and adulteresses.

Thus I have presented in a few words what I believe to be the truth in the matter.

Yours in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TO THE BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

DEAR BRETHREN:—In presenting this, my third report, from this field of labor, I would just say, nothing of special interest has occurred since my last report. We now number seventy members in church fellowship. We have organized two Sunday schools, with about seventy-five scholars, which promise to do well. The Bible question book is the best I have ever seen, and the scholars and teachers are perfectly delighted with it. Our common-sense way of explaining the Bible is regarded generally by the people as the most plain and reasonable they have ever heard; and a number of the leading and most intelligent members of other churches heartily endorse our views. I am fully satisfied that if we had a few commodious and plain houses of worship, which would give permanence to our cause, that the gospel of the kingdom (which means the speedy coming of our Lord Jesus Christ to raise the dead saints and set up his everlasting kingdom amid the glorious restitution of all things) would be heartily and widely embraced throughout this region. O surely the great and glorious Nobleman is even now sending out his orders to the distant homes of the angelic millions, to hold themselves in constant readiness to escort him on this triumphant mission. Amen. My dear brethren, pray, pray always for us down here.

PEYTON G. BOWMAN, Missionary.

A FEW GOOD THINGS.

L. BOUTELL.

My three weeks' labor in Philadelphia and Camden were very pleasant indeed to me. I found, seemingly, a very steadfast, united church of Second Advent believers, whose hearts are in the work, ready to respond to the blessed doctrine of Christ, even if it should make them of no reputation. They have counted the cost, and many of them have been on the way long enough to learn the blessedness of self-denial for Christ's word and the love of his coming. The meetings continued to be interesting while I staid. The last Sunday was one I shall not easily forget. The morning session brought together a good congregation, and an unusual number of old, gray-headed people. It has hardly been my lot to speak to so many at one time; and as I rehearsed the signs of the near approach of our Lord and Master, their countenances bespoke their love of his speedy return, in tears of joy unspeakable. I told them the signs were such they might, even as old as they were, live to welcome their loving Savior to give them eternal life. I found they were related to this same Jesus, for as we discoursed of his goodness and love to the children of men, and of his coming to redeem them from death and the grave, they were filled with ecstasy and joy; and the more we exalted and praised him for his great love, the more they rejoiced, and gave utterance to their feelings by words of glory and thanksgiving, and a wind-up by the shaking of hands. I left them with reluctance, but cheered with the hope of everlasting life with them on the new earth. We enjoyed a communion season with them after preaching the last evening.

At Camden, N. J., I found a church of like precious faith, looking for the same "blessed hope," who appreciate the truth, and feast on the gospel that brings the Lord to give reward and consummate the hope, by filling the earth with his glory. I made new and happy acquaintance with some whole-souled disciples, who are steadfast and abounding in the work of the Lord. A goodly number had just been baptized, and the Lord had added to the church. They are thriving, if we may judge from their readiness to testify for Jesus. Their prosperity (also of all other churches) depends on their love for Christ and one another. "Love is the fulfilling of the law" and gospel. The love of Christ and his soon coming, with the desire to save the lost, should swallow up every minor principle. They should be a peculiar people, zealous to be so set apart for Christ that they may be efficient in saving the perishing. Then the oneness which Christ prayed for would manifest itself, and the world would take knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus. But these are perilous times; they are terrible times. Long and friendly ties are easily broken. Recklessness, disorder, rebellion, dishonesty, world and pleasure loving, with deep-seated apostasy, Spiritualism and infidelity, yea, the haters of our Christ, the Bible Christ, are all in one long train, filling up their cup, contending for a good time, but against our Lord and his Christ. But the victory is sure. It will turn on Zion's side. "Fear not, little flock," it is your Father's good pleasure to fulfill his promises to you. By patient continuance in well doing the prize will be gained.

On my return from Philadelphia, I felt it duty to look after the lost sheep of the house of Israel. So I stopped at Guilford and Madison, Ct. Had meetings in both places, and good seasons in telling them what I most heartily believe. I have learned the secret of christianity. It is first to believe with the heart, then confess it with the mouth, even if they say you are one of them. And every time you confess for Christ and his word, you will grow stronger and stronger. O how many lose what they have by burying their talent in a napkin. The tongue must be loosed before the true light can shine. I was in hopes my short stay in these places might do them good. I enjoyed my mission work among them. It brought to mind former days and many blessings. There is great importance attached to exhorting one another, and so we must do it if we would live.

I called on Bro. Rogers, at New London, and found him interested to get the truth of Jesus' coming and the word of life before the people; and is looking for an opening, and hopes it will soon find its way among the people there.

From here, I went to Stonington, and found Bro. Brewster at the depot waiting when the train stopped, as I had apprised him I was minded to call and spend the night with him. He made an effort, and secured the Congregationalist vestry, and gave a notice of preaching that evening. I was surely surprised, but went at the time appointed and commenced a meeting. The Advent hymns were sung with the spirit and understanding, which gave the key-note to the services, and many heard the simple story of the plan of redemption, to be consummated at the coming of Christ the second time, without sin unto salvation. Thus we did our best to sow the seed by all waters, not knowing which will prosper, this or that.

I also spent Sunday, on my return, at Westerly, R. I. I arrived home Monday, after an absence of five Sundays, having prosperity in the Lord, and a safe journey to and from the place visited. So I can but thank God and take courage, and praise him for his unspeakable goodness to me and mine.

"I NEVER KNEW YOU."

N. D. BABCOCK.

How sadly these words will ere long fall upon the ears of the majority of professed christians. "I never knew you." "Be ye not conformed to this world. O you that are looking for Jesus, how long will these be idle words to you? How few show by their dress, character, and conversation that they are not of this world. Jesus said to his father, "these (my disciples) are not of the world," but there are a few, the Father keeps in these last days. How few dare speak against the fashions of this world, lest they offend; and the reason is, many professors, quickly get offended and tell you to your face or behind your back, you had better mind your own business. This leads many to say, We must have charity, lest you offend one of God's little ones. Away with such trash, and let us have God's word, which is to judge us in the last day.

We are hated if we tell the truth. The Jews hated Christ because he told them the truth. My conscience does not condemn me, they say. Did Jesus say follow your conscience, or follow me? Ye are my disciples if ye do whatsoever I command you. "Love not the world." Are you there to-day? Noah, in building the ark, condemned the world. So ought we in our daily walk. Be "known and read of all men." O for a coming out from the world, and taking a decided stand on the Lord's side. Away with the devil's sugar-coated pills of charity to feed the conscience. We must come out from the world if we are ever saved. Deny yourselves, and take up your daily cross, and follow me, said Jesus.

Many christians, and even ministers of the gospel, have got it settled that about all the cross we have is to come to meeting, and get up among a few of God's children, and tell how good the Lord is and has been to them. Some young converts are so often told to get up and bear their cross, they really feel a heavy burden roll off when they tell they love Jesus, who has done so much for them. It is a cross only because we have been taught so; but when we love Jesus with all the heart, what a pleasure to say so, when we realize his goodness to us. How easy to keep his commandments. All for Christ, is the only easy, true, and safe way. When Jesus said, Take up your cross daily, and follow me, how many of you think he meant speaking in meeting? Cut yourself entirely from the world, and we shall find out what the cross is.

SPECIAL SESSION OF N. H. CONF.

Met according to appointment at Rye, N. H., May 24th, 1872. Bro. Couch chairman. In the absence of the Secretary, Bro. T. E. Lang was chosen Sec. pro tem. Prayer by Bro. D. F. Leavitt. Preachers present,—J. Couch, J. G. Smith, T. W. Piper, M. Harmon, E. Owen, L. E. Saulpaugh, T. E. Lang, D. F. Leavitt, N. Barbour, T. L. Churchill, J. Parsons. The meeting then proceeded to examine the case of Elder Mark Stevens. Heard a report from Eld. J. G. Smith, chairman of committee appointed by conference to investigate charges preferred against Eld. M. Stevens, relative to his christian and ministerial character; after which the following preamble and resolution was passed:—

"Whereas, certain charges having been preferred against Elder Mark Stevens, member of this conference, detrimental to his christian character; and that, according to the report of the council sent by this conference to investigate the case, said Stevens stands convicted of said charges, to that degree that in our judgment renders him unworthy of christian confidence; therefore Resolved, That said Elder Mark Stevens be dismissed from this conference."

T. E. LANG, Sec. pro tem.

CORRECTIONS.—The first paragraph that commences on the second column of No. 5, in "The Coming Struggle," commences with an obscure sentence, owing to the omission of a line or two. It should read—"In carrying out the work of the reconstruction of society, according to the principles of the confederacy, it seems they will pursue a policy somewhat like that followed in the reconstruction of the rebel States, only with more severity," etc. And then, in the second paragraph below the one just noticed is an obscure expression, though printed as I wrote it. It is: "The gospel dispensation, like the Mosaic, must have its day." I would have it read—"must yield to another." I. K. LOMBARD.

In nothing do men more readily take the shadow for the substance than in religion.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. Alling.

BRO. GRANT:—It is so long since my name has appeared in the Crisis, some may think I have either grown cold, or apostatized from the faith; but thank the Lord, neither of these evils have come upon me. I am still looking with desire and expectation for that very same Jesus who has "gone into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return"; and see not why our hopes may not be realized before the ending of 1873. As the Master said, "In such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh," it is safe to look daily, and be in constant readiness. I am aware that some of our good brethren are looking for prophetic fulfillments, ere that day dawns, of the closing verses of the eleventh chapter of Daniel, in the rise of some new power that will "plant the tabernacle of his palace" at Jerusalem for a brief period; while others are looking for a literal antichrist that will unite Spiritualism with communism, and other isms, and become a great leading persecuting power, and take his seat in the temple of God, assuming that he is God; while others claim the periods are all literal days, and yet future, and to measure the reign of antichrist, or some other undefined, imaginary power. Now it does seem to me, if these brethren will but carefully observe the clear consecutive order of the rise, the measurement, the number and the duration of the ruling powers of earth, that were to exist prior to, and up to the very time of the coming of Christ, as defined in the second and seventh chapters of Daniel, and in the whole book of Revelation, and let their testimony govern, they never would assume the manifestation of any such power or powers yet future. Whatever power it may be, noted in Dan. 11 : 40–45, and elsewhere in the Bible, it is certain that the fourth kingdom, in its divided state of ten kingdoms, with the papacy, as an existing, war-making power, will be the controlling, dominant rulers of earth to the end.

The world's history of the past and of the present agree with the clearly revealed statements of these inspired writers, and cuts off every theory that substitutes anything else in their place. I have thought much as to why it is that so many different views are put forth, each of which seems to require time for their fulfillment prior to the coming of Christ; and can solve the matter only in this wise: All can see from positive statements in both the Old and New Testament Scriptures, that there is a work yet future to be fulfilled on the earth that will require time. Now if the world is to be destroyed, as is claimed by many, by the immediate burning day of 2 Pet. 3, at the coming of Christ, they are driven to the necessity of extending time for the accomplishment of that work prior thereto. It appears to me if they would be consistent, and admit that it takes seven full millenniums, to make up the great antitypical week of earth's history (2 Pet. 3), and then admit the positive statement of the Revelator that the last one—the day of the Lord—will be as long as each of the preceding; viz., one thousand years, all would be plain. They then could see that God himself had provided ample time and room for the fulfillment of all his purposes connected with the work of restitution, as declared by all his holy prophets since the world began.

The recent remarkable spring in railroad matters, the construction of many new roads, the extension and refitting of old ones, with new cars, new engines, etc., are among the ominous tokens of these last days. By these improvements, a strain is put upon the already overtaxed labors of man and beast, as also upon the productions of the land; all tending to increase the already fearful overcharge of all minds with "the cares of the world." O how immensely important is the injunction of Christ to his church to take heed, lest we be also snared. The danger never looked so fearful as at the present time. Hence, let us one and all "watch, ... and pray always," that we "may be accounted worthy to escape all these things" that are coming to pass, and "stand before the Son of man."

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. WM. B. HUSSEY writes from Portsmouth, N. H.:—"We have truly fallen into perilous times, but I am glad these perils are marked in the Bible, so that we can know where we are in the history of the world. I believe we are very near the closing scenes of this world, and soon Jesus will come and gather his saints and reward them with everlasting life on the new earth, restored to Eden beauty and glory. It fills my heart with joy to know that we are almost home. Our hope will soon be realized, and our trials will be all over. Here we have sorrow. We have to lay our friends in the lap of earth, where they must sleep until Jesus comes. I can say with a full heart, Come quickly, and bring everlasting life to all of the jewels. I hope to meet all of God's dear children in the kingdom, where parting scenes will never come.

Praise God, we are almost home. We shall soon sing the victor's song on the shining shore. The coming of Jesus is my only hope. This world is a vain show. Take away my hope, and the world looks dark to me; but with a gospel hope of Jesus' coming, and a restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began; with such a hope as this, my heart is cheered."

BRO. S. L. HUBBARD writes from Athol, Mass.:—"I feel that the Lord is good. He has been very good to me, and I feel that I cannot do enough for him. I am striving to do the will of God, that I may have right to the tree of life. Dear brethren, let us keep low at the feet of Jesus, and be led by his spirit, that we may not be led into by and forbidden paths. Oh, let us not be weary in well doing, for in due reason we shall reap, if we faint not. Let us all be ready to meet our coming King. Let us have on the whole armor of God, and live so that we may have the spirit of God continually in our hearts, that we may feel that we are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ to that inheritance, that is incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away. Let us be bold soldiers of the cross. May the Lord inspire us with more love, that we may do good as we have opportunity.

Oh what a glorious hope we have—a soul-inspiring hope; a hope that reaches to that within the veil. No wonder the apostle calls it a 'blessed hope.' John says, he 'that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he [Christ] is pure.' Let us examine ourselves in the light of God's word, and see if we can stand the test; for nothing impure, or unholy, will ever enter the kingdom of heaven. Let us cleanse ourselves from everything that is unlike Jesus. It is blessed to feel that Jesus saves us from all sin. Soon, if faithful, we shall see the King in his beauty, and sing redemption's song. The trials of earth are almost over. A few more tears and sorrows; a few more disappointments, and we shall meet in the everlasting kingdom of our God, with all the redeemed host, to go no more out forever. What a blessed thought! to be forever with the Lord, with all the apostles and prophets and the good of every age and clime, beyond the power of temptation. I long for that day to come. We cannot expect to get to the kingdom of heaven on flowery beds of ease. The Revelator saw an innumerable company, which no man could number, come out of great tribulation, having washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

Let us so live that we may be filled with the Spirit, and not be entangled with the vain things of this world, but keep our eye on Jesus; then all will be well. Oh that men would be wise, and seek a refuge from the coming storm; that they would flee to Christ, who will have mercy, and to our God, who will abundantly pardon. Jesus is yet on the mercy seat, and on the giving hand, saying, Turn ye, turn ye, for why will you die? His arm is not shortened that he cannot save, neither his ear heavy, that he cannot hear. His mercy is everlasting. Oh do not grieve his blessed Spirit any longer.

His blood atoned for all our race, and sprinkles now the throne of grace. Oh, sinner, heed the warning, to Jesus quickly fly; then you on that morning, may meet him in the sky."

Obituaries.

TUCK. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Bangor, Me., May 25th, 1872, my beloved wife, Aurilla A. Tuck, aged thirty years and ten days.

Aurilla was a loving and affectionate wife, a kind and tender mother, one of the noblest of women, and, above all, a christian. During her sickness, which lasted about four days, she was very calm and patient, although at times suffering severely. A few hours before she died she prayed earnestly for her little family and others, and expressed the wish that they might meet her in the kingdom. She was sensible to the last, and fell asleep calmly and peacefully, to await the resurrection. No more sickness nor death awaits her, but health, and blooming beauty, and everlasting life. May the Lord grant that our little broken family may be again united in his kingdom. Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by Bro. Samuel Bragg. CHAS. C. TUCK.

BRISTOL. Died Feb. 19th, 1872, in Galesburg, Mich., Julia S., wife of Jackson P. Bristol, and daughter of Simeon and Reliance A. Wood, aged thirty-two years and twenty days.

She is gone. We miss her kindly greeting, her tender counsel, and her loving presence. She rests from her labors, sweetly sleeping in Jesus.

"Nor pain, nor grief, nor anxious fear
Invade thy bounds; no mortal woes
Can reach the peaceful sleeper here,
While angels watch the soft repose."

MRS. M. A. GARCIA, M. D.

BRISTOL. Died May 17th, 1872, Lulu Anna, youngest child of Julia S. and Jackson P. Bristol, aged four years, one month, and seventeen days.

She used to sing "The sweet bye and bye," and a few friends sang it when we laid her to rest beside her mother, who died only three months before. Thus they slumber in Jesus, but they shall not always sleep. M.

HIBBARD. Died in Hereford, P. Q., May 17th, Jared Albert, only son of C. D. and Ruby Hibbard, aged ten days.

LITTLEFIELD. Died in Patten, Me., May 31st, 1872, Abbie Estella, daughter of Zenas S. and Hannah B. Littlefield (formerly of Winterport), aged fifteen years, ten months, and twenty-three days.

THE FLOOD.

LONDON, JUNE 13. Details of the floods near Prague, caused by the heavy rains, show that the destruction of life and property was far greater than was at first supposed. The water poured over the country, sweeping everything before it. The fertile districts were devastated, and a number of villages were swept away. The loss of life is appalling, the number of persons who perished being estimated at seven hundred.

PONTIFICAL ANNIVERSARY.

ROME, June 17. The twenty-sixth anniversary of the accession of Pope Pius IX. to the pontifical chair was celebrated yesterday in a becoming manner by the faithful. Four thousand persons, representing all nations of the earth, proceeded to the Vatican and presented congratulatory addresses to His Holiness, who, on appearing before his visitors, was greeted with loud cheers.

THE JEWS IN ROUMANIA.

LONDON, June 10. Earl Granville, seconded by the Italian Government, has proposed a conference of the European powers, to consider the course to be adopted in view of a constant recurrence of the barbarous outbursts against the Jews in Roumania, and the propriety of exerting a direct pressure on the Roumanian Government to compel preventative measures. Prince Gortschakoff, in reply to Earl Granville's proposal, sympathizes with the persecuted Jews, but apprehends that the course proposed would only excite agitation on the Eastern question, and that, therefore, he is not willing to enter into such a Conference. He proposes a joint note to the Roumanian Government as to its intentions, and guarantees that it can afford protection to the Jews, and thinks that this would awaken it to some sense of its responsibilities. Should the reply to his proposal be unsatisfactory he would suggest a settlement on the basis of the Treaty of 1856. Prussia takes the same ground. The answers of the other Powers are not yet known, but it is probable that the suggestion of Gortschakoff will be adopted.

FRANCE.

PARIS, June 14. The Right in the Assembly has resolved to demand of President Thiers to dismiss some of his ministers and carry on the administration in accordance with the views of the majority. President Thiers objects to the triumvirate, but favors the appointment of M. Grevy as Vice-President.

The Protestant Synod, now in session here, have just passed through an unusually animated discussion, which resulted in the schism of the church.

M. Guizot, leader of the Orthodox party, maintained the authority of the Scriptures, while Rev. M. Coquerel, who is at the head of the Liberal party, justified certain divergences relative to the divinity and resurrection of Christ.

The Liberals, demurring at the action of the Orthodox majority, withdrew from the Synod.

DOMESTIC.

THE LABOR MOVEMENT.

THE STRIKES—RIOTOUS DEMONSTRATION.—Word was brought to the police this morning that several gangs of strikers were going up-town for the purpose of pulling down Steinway's piano manufactory. About two hundred strikers made their appearance and began threatening demonstrations. Several of the leaders, when they saw the police, advised a charge on that body. Capt. Jenner, finding that they were not inclined to act in a peaceable manner, ordered his men to disperse the crowd. They did so, the strikers hurrying off in all directions. The employes of Singer's sewing machine factory met this evening and elected president and secretary. The iron and metal workers of this city and neighborhood, including Brooklyn, Williamsburg and Hoboken, struck this morning for eight hours, and an advance of twenty per cent. on wages for piece-work.

[Special Dispatch to the Boston Herald.]

Demoralization of the Strikers—Withdrawal of Public Sympathy.

NEW YORK, June 14. The strikers appear to be getting demoralized generally. They are quarrelling among themselves, threatening to mob employers who refuse to accede to their demands, burn factories and do mischief generally. They complain that the press is against them as well as the police, and that it is constantly misrepresenting them and their conduct. A number of workmen who have shown a disposition to return to the shops have been assaulted and beaten, and some notorious demagogues are doing their best to cause trouble. It is asserted that certain French Communists are the principal mischief-makers and will be disappointed if they do not create a riot. It is reported that several large manufacturers have purchased arms to protect them and their establishments from the rioters. There is little doubt there would have been bloody scenes before now but for the vigilance of the police, for many of the strikers are ugly and feel very revengeful because some of the firms have stood out. The public seems to be withdrawing much of its sympathy from the workmen on account of their ill temper and grievous indiscretion. They continue to menace Steinway & Son, and the Singer Sewing Machine Company, because they regard those two firms as the cause of preventing the general adoption of the eight-hour law. Serious riots are improbable. The plans of the strikers were learned through the indiscretion of some of their number and were intended by the leaders to be kept a profound secret. When the secretary of the society heard that a reporter had become aware of them, he exclaimed in great wrath and excitement that their publicity would cause the ruin of the whole affair, and after angrily rebuking the uncautious talkers threatened the reporter with exclusion from the hall hereafter, and the refusal of all further information if he should make public their violent designs. The announcement of the plot which they know will insure ample preparations to repress, and which may possibly deter the men from attempting to carry out their intentions, but they are now rendered desperate by the desertions from their ranks, and may not be easily checked in their efforts at intimidation. If there be no trouble between the strikers and police it will not be the fault of some of the former, who are noisy, threatening and malignant.

THE WESTERN TORNADO.—Later particulars from the scene of the tornado which visited Quincy and Degraff, Logan county, O., show it was more destructive than the first reports indicated. In Quincy fifty or sixty dwellings and stores and two churches, and as many more shops, stables, and outbuildings were unroofed or rocked upon their foundations or demolished. The air was literally filled with flying weather-boards, furniture, lath and plaster. A parlor door was caught up by the wind and hurled through the air, and falling upon a woman crushed her so she died. The tornado on the way to Degraff, struck Bogg's flouring mill, four stories high, containing three thousand bushels of grain, moving the building nine inches upon its foundation and carrying away the roof and a portion of the fifth story. It ploughed its way through Degraff, scattering destruction in its path, but hurting fewer persons and injuring a less number of buildings. After leaving Degraff it passed several settlements, and finally rose from the earth, and was sent for miles, carrying in its funnel-shaped form timber, rails and debris which it had gathered in its destructive march. The papers give the names of thirty-nine persons injured in Quincy and eleven in Degraff, the list not comprising all the injured in the former village. Mrs. Rall, reported to have been killed in Degraff, is yet living, but two of her children were killed. Morse Glick in Quincy has since died from wounds.

A DESTRUCTIVE HAIL STORM.

Providence, R. I., June 14. A hail storm in Blackstone Valley this afternoon did great damage to the window glass in the villages of Albion and Ashton, and to vegetation in the vicinity. About 1000 lights of glass were broken in Albion, and 240 at Ashton. Heavy showers prevailed north and south of the line of hail.

New York, June 14. Several trees on the squares and Central Park were torn up by the tornado this afternoon, and several small vessels in the harbor lost spars and had their sails torn.

In Brooklyn, a partially finished three-story brick house on Broadway was blown down, and George Brown killed, and three other workmen seriously injured. The roof of Hawley's dye works was blown off, and the roofs of three houses on West street also destroyed. Mary Cullen, ten years of age, was blown off the dock at the foot of Pacific street and drowned. Brig. J. E. Newall, lying in Newton dock, was badly damaged by the tornado. Trees in various parts of Brooklyn suffered severely.

Norwich, Conn., June 14. A terrible storm of wind, rain and hail passed over Eastern Conn., just north of this city, this afternoon. The storm covered a belt twenty miles wide, and did great damage in Willimantic, Plainfield and the surrounding country. Hail-stones as large as eggs fell, large trees were uprooted, windows broken, and several new buildings much injured.

Hartford, Ct., June 14. A severe hail-storm passed over Kensington and East Berlin this afternoon. One factory had 2000 panes of glass broken, and windows were broken in nearly every dwelling. Growing crops were badly damaged and fruit trees were uprooted.

VALIDITY OF CAR TICKETS.—Justice Fletcher, of Concord, N. H., on Monday decided that railroad tickets are good until used, though issued only for a specified time. A passenger on a train from Vermont presented a ticket issued in Chicago in June last and marked "good for thirty days," which the conductor refused to take, and refusing to pay his fare, he was arrested on the arrival of the train at Concord, where the case was laid before Justice Fletcher, who decided that the ticket was good till used, and the man was discharged.

TENT MEETING AT LYNN.—The Massachusetts Advent Conference Tent will be pitched the first time this season at Lynn, Mass., Chesnut Street, "Glenmore." The meetings will continue eight days, commencing Tuesday evening, June 18th, by preaching from Bro. Miles Grant, at half past seven o'clock; after which there will be meetings under the tent daily, afternoons and evenings. Bro. Grant, Couch, Morrill, and others will be with us to preach the word. The signs of the Lord's soon coming compel us to be awake, and make every effort possible to save the lost by the preaching of the gospel. The meeting will be for the benefit of all classes of men. Come, saints and sinners, one and all, to this meeting. Freedom for all to worship the Lord together in spirit and truth. Bro. Grant will be there Sunday, June 23d. J. COUCH. L. BOUTELL.

The tent will also be pitched at North Dana, Mass., the 27th of June. L. B.

Now is the time for grove and tent meetings all through the State, especially in new places where they need help. The conference voted to hold twenty-four such meetings in the State the coming year. Some have been held. Let the calls come for meetings in such places. We will do all we can to assist you in the good work of spreading truth and saving the lost. The Advent Conference committee urge action in this last work of warning this generation. Have meetings where help can be had and good done.
L. BOUTELL, for the Committee.

THE Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee will meet on the camp-ground Wednesday, July 3d. J. COUCH.

THE Mechanic Falls, Me., Campmeeting will commence August 26th. Particulars hereafter.
For Committee, R. R. YORK.

BASKET MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a meeting held in a bower, erected for the purpose, in Winchendon, Mass., near the New Boston church, Fourth of July, commencing at nine o'clock A. M. Bro. James Hemenway is engaged, and Bro. H. F. Carpenter is expected. Come one, come all. A hearty welcome is extended. Those coming through Fitchburg will come on the Vermont and Mass. R. R., buying tickets for Royalston, and stop at Parker's Station, half a mile from the meeting. Those coming through Keene will stop at Winchendon, where they will be met by brethren and conveyed to the ground. For the church, GEO. A. COLE.

THE ANNUAL CAMPMEETING at Tremont, Mass., will commence Monday, July 22d, and continue over the following Sunday. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents with them are requested to do so. Bro. Bellows will be on the ground with his large tent. All who are interested in the blessed hope and soon coming of the Lord, who can, are requested to attend this annual feast, where the Lord has so signally manifested his power. Come in faith and the power of the Holy Ghost, that we may enjoy one more heavenly gathering, and secure the salvation of some poor lost souls, to share with us the heavenly inheritance. HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

TENT MEETING AT NORTH DANA.—The Lord willing, the Mass. tent will be pitched at North Dana, Mass., Thursday, June 27th, to hold over the 4th of July, and longer if thought best. It is hoped that there will be a general gathering to the meeting of those around. Brethren and sisters in adjoining towns, come. Bring bedding as far as possible. We will try and do the best we can for the accommodation of all. North Dana is on the A. and E. R. R. Cars leave Palmer for North Dana at 8 25 A. M. and 6 P. M. Leave Athol 7.25 A. M. and 3.00 P. M. More anon.
GEO. A. STREETER, for the Tent Committee.

THE Grove and Basket Meeting at Hermon, Me., in grove owned by Mr. John Emerson, about one fourth of a mile from Hermon Corner, towards Leather's Corner, will commence Saturday, June 29th, at nine o'clock A. M., and hold two days. We hope for a large meeting. Those who come are expected to provide themselves food. The brethren in the region will take those from a distance home with them Saturday night. Efficient aid is expected to preach the word.
For the Brethren, F. A. BAKER.

THE NEXT Quarterly Meeting of the R. I. and East Conn. Conference will be held at Escobeag Hill, W. Greenwich, R. I., commencing Wednesday, July 3d, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over Friday. There will be no business done on the fourth of July, but it will be wholly spent in devotional services. Preachers and delegates will (it is hoped) be present on the first day of the meeting, as it will be devoted to business.

TIME TABLE. On the Providence, Hartford and Fiskville R. R., trains leave Providence, going west, at 7.10 and 10.10 A. M., and 2.20 and 5.5 P. M. Arrive at Greene (at which depot stop) at 8.6 and 11.22 A. M., and 3.29 and 6.27 A. M. Trains going east leave Plainfield, Conn., 6.45 and 8.53 A. M., and 12.15 and 4.27 P. M.

It is desirable that delegates will come on morning trains, as there will be teams in waiting at Greene Station (at which place those coming from east or west will buy tickets) to take them to the place of meeting. Let every church be represented by delegate or letter. N. A. ANGELL, Clerk.

GROVE MEETING.—The annual grove meeting of eight years' standing will be held on the Widow Morris' farm, in Central Springwater, N. Y., commencing on Friday evening, July 5th, and holding over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come to this annual gathering. Come one and all in the spirit of the Master, and let us all labor and pray that good may be done.
By order of Committee, C. F. SWEET.

GROVE MEETING.—There will be a meeting in J. Pipper's grove, in Albany, N. H., to commence June 30th, and hold over the Fourth of July. J. H. Ewing, G. H. Wallace, H. C. Willoughby, and others, are expected to preach the word.
STEPHEN DINSMORE.

A CONFERENCE will commence at Gardiner, Me., in Military Hall, Thursday evening, June 27th, and hold over the Sabbath. Brn. H. B. Seavey and Wm. H. Doughty will be there. Bro. J. Carr will preach Sunday, July 7th.

MINNESOTA STATE CAMPMEETING.—In accordance with a vote of our State Conference, a campmeeting will be held in the beautiful grove, called "Cheatham's Grove," in the town of Utica, in Winona county, commencing on Thursday P. M., June 27th, holding over Sunday, and as much longer as the interest will seem to warrant. The ground is well fitted up for meetings, with a permanent preacher's stand, good seats, and a good well of water, and other conveniences for those wishing to camp on the ground. Brn. and Srs. of the Advent faith, throughout Minnesota, to you a special appeal is made to come out to this feast of tabernacles, and work for God. Come from every quarter. Come with hearts filled with God's love, to work for the salvation of perishing souls. The signs declare the soon coming of Jesus, and shall we not improve this annual blessing as the Lord requires us to do, to his glory, to our own growth in grace, and to the salvation of others? Come, Christians, of every name, and unite in the worship of God for a few days in the tented grove. Brn. and Srs. in the ministry, from far and near, you are invited to come and help sound the glorious message of a soon coming Jesus, whose reward is with him. Come embued with power from on high, a holy unction from the throne, that many sinners may be saved as the result of our meeting.

N. B. Arrangements will be made with the various R. R. companies for half fare tickets from those points where the brethren will notify me this month that they wish them. Those who come to tarry on the ground, should come prepared (with tents if possible), and with bedding and provisions. Probably many can have shelter on the ground in a building erected by others who have used the ground. Come one, come all, and may the Lord give a time long to be remembered on account of his presence.
S. C. WELLCOME, Sec. State Conference.

THERE will be an annual Grove meeting in Springwater, July 6th and 7th, commencing on Saturday the 6th at two P. M. Social meeting Sunday morning at nine o'clock. Preaching at half past ten A. M. C. F. SWEET.

ALSO there will be a meeting of one week in Lorraine, Jefferson county, N. H., including two Sundays, to commence on Saturday, June 22nd, at half past seven P. M., as Brn. N. P. Clark, D. Ballou, and Williams may arrange. C. F. SWEET.

THE meeting-house at West Parsonsfield, Me., will be dedicated to the Lord June 22nd (the Lord willing), as a Union house. H. L. Hastings is expected to be present to preach a part of the day. A protracted effort will be made to save sinners, as the interest may demand. A cordial invitation is extended to all, praying that they may come filled with the Spirit. Ample provision will be made to accommodate all who come.
A. S. TOWLE.

A WORD TO COLPORTEURS OR MISSIONARIES.—Beloved brethren in the work of Christ, you that feel an interest in spreading abroad a knowledge of the immediate coming of Christ to judgment, and feel a love for the perishing in your heart, and desire to warn them of their danger, and would judiciously scatter my tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending," you can send to the Crisis office for such quantities as you think you can dispose of, to that class of readers that would appreciate them. My plan is for you to sell them to such persons as would be willing to purchase, at eight cents per copy, and give them to the poor, and to such as would read them with candor, that might not feel disposed to purchase; and the money coming from the sale of those purchased to be used in paying your expenses in traveling, or sent to the Crisis office, to help pay the expense of publishing more tracts. Those who are known at the Crisis office as brethren of faithfulness and integrity, will have no difficulty in obtaining said tracts; while others who are not known at said office, can obtain a recommendation from a source that will be approved and accepted. The second edition of said tract is now published and ready. What is done, must be done quickly. Amen.
L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

HOOSICK VALLEY TENT.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—JOHN B. WHITE, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.
A. W. SIBLEY, S. G. MATHEWSON, H. K. FLAGG, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

I WISH to say we have made arrangements, and bought the timber standing on the Springfield camp-ground, of eight acres, for one thousand dollars, and if any of the brethren wish to help us by taking stock of from $25 to $100, they will be sure of their money back when the timber is cut off. This secures us the ground for eight years, if we need it so long, which is very doubtful; but we have to deal with one of no faith.

There are some three or four good places in the front circle for wooden tents, and there are two families on the ground to watch them. This will be a desirable chance to build since this arrangement, as board can be had on the ground, and any kind of lumber delivered, and help obtained to put them up. H. MUNGER.

FOURTH OF JULY MEETING in Kingston, N. H.—The groves in which for many years this meeting has been held, being no longer in existence, and no other good one being accessible, the meeting this year will be in the Chapel, near Bro Gale's residence. Elders G. W. Burnham, B. D. Haskell, W. Burnham, and C. Cunningham are expected to be present; and it is hoped that some others will be able to attend. We trust that there will be a general rally of the lovers of Christ in all the region to this meeting, and that the "form of the fourth" will be in the midst, as in years past. C. CUNNINGHAM, by request.

FOURTH OF JULY MEETING.—There will be a meeting at East Kingston, N. H., on July 4th, commencing at ten o'clock A. M., and continuing through the day and evening.
L. T. CUNNINGHAM. E. COX.

THERE will be a Grove Meeting held in West Levant, in the Emerson Mills neighborhood, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock, and hold four days. We invite all the lovers of Jesus to come and celebrate with us, and the preaching brethren who can labor for the salvation of souls in harmony with God's holy prophecy.
ISRAEL DAMMAN.

CONN. A. C. QUAR. CONF.—The next meeting of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held at Campville (near Bro. Elliott's), commencing July 3d, and holding over the following Sunday. It is proposed to hold the meeting in the "Mission Tent." Provision will be made for those who attend. Campville is on the Naugatuck, above Thomaston. Per order, B. HITCHCOCK, Pres. L. S. LUDINGTON, Sec.

THERE will be a Grove Meeting in South Newburgh, to be holden on the farm owned by James Farnham, to commence Friday evening, June 28th, in a school-house, and Saturday and Sunday in the Grove. Our preaching brethren are cordially invited to come and help dispense the word of life. ISRAEL DAMMAN.

TENT MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting on Mayberry Hill, Casco, Me., July 4th, and hold over Sunday. We want all the brethren and sisters to come in the name of the Lord, to work for him.

THERE will be a Quarterly Conference at Bremen, Me., commencing Friday, June 21st, at two o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to all who love the truth.
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

THERE will be a Grove meeting at West Peru, Me., July 4th. Brethren and sisters, let there be a general rally to this meeting. A. A. ABBOTT. E. M. HAGGETT.

NEW TRACT.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged, OF

"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR,"

Or, The Commune.

BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

For sale at this office. Price, by mail, single copy, 7 cts.; five copies, 30 cts.; ten copies, 50 cts.; fifty copies, $2.00; one hundred copies, by express, $3.50. AG'T.

THE BELIEVER'S HOPE.

My hope is built on nothing less
Than Jesus' blood and righteousness;
I dare not trust the sweetest frame,
But wholly lean on Jesus' name.
On Christ, the solid Rock, I stand.
All other ground is sinking sand.

When darkness seems to vail his face,
I rest on his unchanging grace;
In every high and stormy gale,
My anchor holds within the vail.
On Christ, the solid Rock, I stand;
All other ground is sinking sand.

His oath, his covenant, and blood,
Support me in the 'whelming flood;
When all around on earth gives way,
He then is all my hope and stay.
On Christ, the solid Rock I stand;
All other ground is sinking sand.

HADES.

HENRY CONSTABLE.

(Concluded.)

CHAPTER II.—MAN ONE PERSON.

I. We saw in our last chapter what man was at first, and what man might become again, viz., body without life. We cannot too much insist on this as the Scriptural view of our original and essential nature. Man is not a spirit, man is not a soul. Attach what ideas we please to these terms, endow them with what capacities we fancy, it is not permitted us to use either of them, or both of them, as our definition of man. Man is earth. The body of man, in whatever condition it be, is man. Without the body we are not for a moment permitted to suppose that there is or can be such a person as man. They may be taken from him, and that from which they are taken retains the attributes of manhood, and spirit and soul, whatever they are, in whatever state or condition they be, to whatever place they may have gone, cannot have attributed to them, or to either of them, the attributes of manhood. The man, the person without them, has ceased to be a living person, whether we suppose them when separated from him to be living or dead.

II. Before we proceed to discuss the nature and properties of soul and spirit, so far as they are told us in Scripture, it may be well to say a few words on the utter absurdity of supposing them apart from the body, to be man, or a person. We suppose that every one will allow that each man constitutes only a single person. We suppose that no one will maintain that any change of which man is capable can have as its result the making of two men or two persons out of what was but one. In life we allow that each individual, however composed, is but a single person. No one can surely contend that death converts this single person into two or three!

III. We will in the course of our inquiry have a good deal to say about death, and what it is. We do not accept the common definition of death as regards man to be an adequate definition of it, but we fully accept it as a true definition of it, to a certain extent. The definition we refer to, is that death is the separation of the soul and spirit from the body. As we have said, we accept this as perfectly scriptural and true; we only object to it as not conveying the entire idea of what Scripture means and defines by death. But death is unquestionably the dissolution of union, the separation of the spirit and soul from the body of man.

IV. Now what is the result as regards person? Has it made two persons out of one? We wait for an advocate so hardy as to say that it has. Until he appears, we will assume that there is no man of sense or reflection who will say that it has. At once there is brought before us the question, whether is the body without the spirit, or the spirit or soul without the body, the true and real person? Plato has decided the question in his own way. He never fancied that death made two persons out of one, but he did fancy that death separated the true and real person from what had been associated with it for a time. With him the true, real person was the soul. To it he gave all the attributes of personality. Accordingly, when death came, and the soul was separated from the body, the true person, the soul, went forth, leaving that body which was not a person, but had only been associated with a person, behind. When Plato makes Socrates speak of death and its separation, he makes him say always, "I depart hence to-day," "I depart to the gods." The separated soul he suppose to be the true person, to be Socrates. He is not guilty of the absurdity of supposing that another Socrates remained behind in the lifeless corpse. He expressly denies that what the sad friends of the philosopher would then look upon would be Socrates at all. Socrates had gone away: was beyond the sky: the dead body they looked at no more deserved to be called Socrates than would an old garment which Socrates had worn and laid aside. The only difference was that he had worn one garment, the body made of clay, longer than another garment, the dress composed of wool.

V. Now unquestionably our Platonic divines in heart adopt the theory of Plato. But then they are clogged with their recognition of a book of which Plato was ignorant—the Bible. This Bible persists in calling the body when dead the man. It says that Abraham, and Jacob, and David, and others departed from life, are in the grave, and it never says that they are in heaven or anywhere else but in the grave. Now here is the perplexity of the theologians who platonize. They cannot deny that the persons who have departed from life are in the grave, without denying those numberless Scriptures which say they are. They therefore in words, whatever they think in their hearts, allow that they are in the grave. But they also hold, and possibly, if not probably, with a stronger faith, that these persons are in heaven, or hell, or a hades distinct from the grave! And thus we see that the recognition of spirit or soul, separate or united to each other, distinct or different names for the same essence, leads its christian maintainers to the absurdity of supposing that death has converted one person into two. In life there was but one Abraham, in death there are two; in life there was but one David, in death there are two Davids! In life there was but one Christ; during the three days of his death there were two. One David was in the sepulchre at Jerusalem; another David was somewhere else. One Christ was in Joseph's tomb; another Christ was preaching to spirits in prison, or otherwise busily occupied. One Abraham was asleep and dead; another Abraham awake and living. Such is the absurd yet necessary conclusion to which men who accept the Scriptures as true are led when they adopt the philosophical idea that the soul or spirit separated from the body is the true man, or a man or a person at all.—Rainbow.

ENTIRE CONSECRATION.

T. L. WAUGH.

For some time in the past, I have felt the need of coming up to the higher christian life; but often have realized that there was a great work to be done in my heart before I could obtain the great blessing of a clean heart. I have tried to exercise faith, but still it seemed hard to bring my mind to the point of making a full surrender. My past experience has taught me that we must make an entire consecration to Jesus before we can have a real active faith.

I have had to break off from those things which tend to draw me away from God, and be willing to be led entirely by the Holy Spirit, and follow Jesus, if need be, through reproach and sorrow. O, how many are grieving the Spirit by doing those things which they know are wrong and are forbidden in God's word. I wish here to speak against novel-reading, for I know the effect it has upon the mind. Well may they be called sugar-coated, for they destroy all taste for religious things, and are Satan's bait to drag people down to ruin. I once loved to read them, but resolved to give them up. I can say—"Here I give my all to Thee."

There is a blessedness and sweetness in the service of God that is unspeakable. I feel that I am willing to give up the world with its affections and lusts, and be all the Lord's; yes, not only willing—I give them up. My trust is in Him. He is becoming more and more precious to me. And soon, if faithful, we shall see the "King in his beauty."

O Jesus, Jesus, Jesus,
My all-sufficient Friend;
Come, fold me to thy bosom,
E'en to my journey's end.

Morris, Ct.

A CLOSING, LOVING APPEAL TO EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS.

"A word spoken in season how good it is."—PROV. 15: 23.

"Open rebuke is better than secret love. Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful."—PROV. 27: 56.

"Let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head; for yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities."—PSA. 141: 5.

"To conquer is a glorious thing;
To dare in mind, in heart, in deed;
'T is great, 'tis glorious to succeed!"

Beloved in the chair editorial, you have friends, not a few, but, who among them all dearer, or more faithful than the one now addressing you? Who among your numerous friends say to you kindly, for mercy's sake "stop and think before you farther go?" "A friend in need is a friend indeed."

"He that rebuketh a man, afterwards shall find more favor than he that flattereth with the tongue." "Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."—James 5: 20.

For lack of timely outspoken, saving, God-fearing faithfulness in rebuking sin, we are perishing, dying the death. In brandishing the two-edged sword of God's truth against popular sins that cry aloud for vengeance, what are we in comparison with you if clothed in your right minds, sitting at the feet of the Lord Jesus? Yet feeble as we are—insignificant as we are—speak we must to be refreshed, for duty's sake, for Christ's sake.

"For right is right, since God is God,
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

Beloved editors and publishers, when you advertise and puff books and papers, what is it for—to please the Master? Can you, dare you put pen to paper in literary notices till you know whether you are building the Lord's kingdom or Satan's? Only a short time since we said to a religious editor, "Friend, what could induce you to notice that vile sheet, made up more or less of lies?" "Why," said he, smilingly, "it was a mere compliment, everybody puffs it!" Serve the devil by way of compliment, or because others serve him? Another very pious editor slaughters by wholesale. Some four or five beautiful volumes are placed on his table for puffing. He gravely and sanctifiedly tells the public, he is pressed with duty, and has no time for critical examination, but from the contents he presumes they must be worthy of commendation. Besides, other good editors have puffed them, and forthwith he draws his bow at a venture, takes a leap in the dark, sink or swim, kill or no kill, for the Lord or for the devil, he lets fly! Could Satan desire an agent more to his liking? Thus the leprosy spreads—takes deep root.

Some publications in the book and periodical form begin with lies, keep on steadily and increasingly with lies and lying, page after page, all through, boldly, unblushingly, devilishly, letting everybody see and know they are the devil's faithful servants. Others again, conceal the cloven foot—the snake lies coiled unseen, everything outwardly appears beautiful and fair.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death."

"Far off, the road which leads to death
Looks beautiful and fair."

Satan's ways are moveable, thou canst not know them. Read along—by and by, what do you see? the serpent with forked tongue. Not long since we saw a new book from the American Tract Society," puffed here, puffed there, by religious editors, not excepting the "Female Guardian." Surely, thought we, this must be a valuable keepsake; we ventured to purchase several copies. What now? Satan in the beginning? No. Where then? in the middle? There the viper was sure! Oh! oh! what a devil! what a devil! His infernal nose is getting into every dish! Embrace him, clasp him to the bosom, who don't? what religious editor, novel writer, puffer and seller does not take stock in this lucrative business?

Look at the trash, heaps on heaps, the silliest of the silly, the devilishest of the devilish, termed "gift books, Christmas or holiday presents for children," sent forth from religious book stores, advertised and puffed by religious editors! What a curse, what a curse! Is it a wonder that so many of our dear youth are lovers of pleasure—baptized infidels? sons and daughters of Belial? To advertise and puff these imps of Satan, placed on your tables by pious booksellers, what but serving the devil is it? What else, friends? Ashamed of it? Not a blush is on your cheeks. You bow the knee to Baal with heart-felt complacency, with as good grace and dignified composure as you sit down to a luxurious repast, brazen-facedly! "Such is the way of an adulterous woman: She eateth and wipeth her mouth, and saith, I have done no wickedness." Prov. 30: 20.

Sick at heart, on opening your weekly and monthly issues, and beholding your abominable time-serving, popularity-seeking, catering to a corrupt public taste; your receiving honor of men, while casting behind you the honor that cometh from God only! puffing meanwhile the very bubblings and scum of the pit, the rottenest of the rotten, the quintessence of hell—how otherwise than sick even to vomiting! Not only sick but we fear greatly. We open your linsey-woolsy sheets tremblingly, lest venomous, hissing serpents, not a few with forked tongues and heads uplifted, run here, run there, biting or stinging to death, little folks and big folks, up stairs and down. Frequently we are constrained for mercy's sake, the safety of our family, little ones and great ones, to scream out piercingly: "Beware of the snakes, the coiled serpents! run! flee! escape for your life!"

These last mentioned, advertised and puffed by pious editors (snakes in the grass), are Satan's transformations, or angel devils. The former alluded to, the obscene, brazen-faced, openly and squarely, for death and damnation, "the world, the flesh and the devil." Which the most dangerous, the most to be feared and shunned? the lion devils or the angel devils? The American Tract Society, "The Christian Union," and other religious bodies (not a few), including many pious editors and publishers, repudiate the lion devils, but clasp the angel devils to their bosoms. This is all Satan asks, or wishes for. These angel devils, religious novels and tales, he well knows lead, unmistakably, to the lion devils, the most obscene and soul-polluting publications.

It is through the imagination chiefly that society is corrupted. Most temptations would appeal in vain to the other faculties. The insinuating, tainting products of the Satanic press, the opera, the theatre, the gambling-hell, the ball, the extravagances of fashion, and the pleasures of dissolute society, all make the appeal to the imagination. There are poets who, with siren notes, charm the unsuspecting victim into the jaws of destruction. Poets

——"Whose poisoned song
Would blend the bounds of right and wrong,
And hold with sweet but cursed art
Their incantations o'er the heart,
Till every pulse of pure desire
Throbs with the glow of passion's fire."

There are novelists and actors who, by similar methods, wield influences most potent for corruption and ruin. And all this measureless mischief is wrought through the imagination.

Repent of your wickedness, friends, do works meet for repentance? When? At doom's day? Because sentence against your evil doings is not executed speedily, your whole heart is fully set in you to work wickedness with greediness! Tell the Lord Jesus of you? How awfully and shamefully you dishonor his name? trample bleeding mercy under your feet? We have told him, we do, we shall. Beware, friends, lest by and by he tear you in pieces. Read Proverbs, chapter 1, beginning at verse 20, and go through the chapter, and see how terribly God deals with incorrigibles, the willfully stiff-necked and obstinate—"He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy."—Prov. 1. See your picture portrayed vividly. When told in love, a spirit of gospel meekness, in strains sweet as angels use, weepingly, beseechingly, for Christ's sake, for the honor and glory of Him who shed his precious blood on Calvary, for the sake of precious souls yet unborn, to stop this putting the shoulder to Satan's wheels—stop stretching every nerve in blotting out the life, the essence and quintessence of gospel purity—any signs of life, hope, confession, restitution, or of ceasing to do evil? Do your stiff-necks bend in the least? your callous, adamantine hearts soften or relent? Think, beloved editors and publishers, of proud Korah's troop, what became of them?—Numbers 16; of Nadab and Abihu, that offered strange fire; what did God in their case? Send fire from heaven, burn them up?—Lev. 10. how read ye?—"Though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will he not depart from his foolishness."—Prov. 27: 22. "Why should we be stricken any more, ye will revolt more and more."—Isa. 1: 5. "Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit," what now? more hope for a fool? Solomon says so.

The devil is in this work of yours, friends, no mistake, sure as you live and breathe. And still you help the old serpent, stand side by side with him. Hail fellows, well met! Souls perish through your instrumentality? How many, think you, in the day of final reckoning, will date their downfall and everlasting ruin through your puffing apparatus? Will it help you or these lost souls, by saying, "it was popular to puff them?" Or what will it profit in taking the grog-seller's plea—"If I don't kill, somebody else will. If I don't poison souls to death, consign them to the pit bottomless, by dealing out liquid death, and distilled damnation, some one else will." Children, not a few, of those who traffic in strong drink, rum and tobacco, become inebriates, bloated sots, and find a drunkard's grave. Fathers, mothers, sons and daughters, all find a common hell of weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth. So it may be with these dealers in intellectual poisons, that intoxicate the mind, corrupt the heart, pollute the soul—sink it lower than the grave! "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." "They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind."—Hosea 8: 7.

"Who sows to winds, the whirlwind reaps,
And life's great end confounds;
Then be, ye stewards, wise to escape
The wrath that knows no bounds."

There is no offence upon the face of the earth which causes such deep, overwhelming, heart-burning grief and sorrow, as does this one single crime of seduction, of leading the youth of our cities astray in paths of vice and sinful amusements, through the medium of novels, silly tales, fictitious writings.

"Oh, if there be a doom more dread
Than others on the judgment day,
It sure must be for him who led
A pure and gentle heart astray.
There may be pardon for the knave,
And mercy for the wretch that stole;
But heaven, I fear, will ne'er forgive
The murderer of a human soul."

"And he said, Go and tell this people; hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not? Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert and be healed."—Isa. 6: 9, 10.

"Wo to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may set his nest on high, that that he may be delivered from the power of evil. Thou hast consulted shame to thy house, by cutting off many people, and hast sinned against thy soul. For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it. Wo to him that buildeth a town with blood, and establisheth a city by iniquity. Behold, is it not of the Lord of hosts, that the people shall weary themselves for very vanity.

NOTE. Any religious book, tract, or periodical, that has not for its object God's glory, virtuous purity, the soul's salvation, should go down in a twinkling lower than the grave; the sooner the better. Every paper, weekly, monthly, quarterly, blowing hot and blowing cold at the same breath, bowing and scraping to a corrupt public opinion, ought to die, the death speedily. Any periodical that winks at sin, shrinks from publishing a full and free gospel for fear of losing caste, or from a time-serving, man-fearing spirit, is a curse instead of a blessing. It is a leader of the blind, and if the blind lead the blind, both will fall into the ditch. There are scores of so-called religious papers, that are merely skimming the surface of things, feeling their way, just as far in Bible reforms as their party, denomination, or the popular current will sustain them, and no further. Where there is one outspoken, fearless, independent, uncompromising weekly or monthly, there are multitudes shunning to declare God's full counsel, conniving at sin, daubing with untempered mortar, healing slightly, reproving popular evils of the day no further than will sustain the pocket and a good reputation for orthodoxy. —D. THE FIRE IN MERIDEN.

WM. A. FENN.

Monday morning we were obliged to witness the devastation usually apparent after so terrible a fire as that of Sunday night, April 28th. Half consumed buildings surrounded with boxes and barrels, and fractured furniture, with soiled goods, are unmistakeable evidences of losses sustained by some one; but in this case, as in most city fires, the greater sufferers, are not prominently represented amid the ruins.

That poor widow living in the third story of a wooden building, stands a poor chance to save her little store of household goods, when driven from her couch at dead of night, by the hot flashes of uncontrolable fire and the suffocating smoke. With lightning speed her thoughts run over the various articles constituting her only earthly possessions but before hands or feet can respond to will, and secure even the choicest; to save her life she must make a hasty flight down a long stairway, chased by the angry demon, whose tongues of fire seem anxious to lap up the last vestige she has hastily grasped to cover herself, and as she approaches the street the mortification of appearing before a crowd in her night dress, bids her tarry even amid danger and robe herself.

The above pictures the lot of our beloved Sr. R. J. Whitehead, who occupied some rooms in the third story of Cook's building which was one among several burned in West Meriden, Sunday night, April 28th.

It is not necessary to tell the readers of the Crisis, that Sr. Whitehead is a worthy and (now) very needy woman. The choicest as well as the least cared for relics of her household were consumed. The great Chicago fire moved nations to deeds of sympathy, but no one of the sufferers in that great conflagration could lose more than all they had, which was the case with Sr. Whitehead.

Who among the readers of the Crisis will at once enclose an offering to our sister who will gratefully receive and judiciously appropriate it? Address MRS. R. J. WHITEHEAD West Meriden, Ct.

— The strength of the sinner is his own weakness. The strength of the christian is the strength of God.

Desire, ask, believe that you receive, and you shall have.

— Be thankful to any man who reproves you, with whatever spirit he may do it; as thereby you may avoid the same reproof again.

— Prayer without watching is hypocrisy; and watching without prayer is presumption.

— He who looks largest to himself, looks smallest to others.

— There never was a road so long it had no end. Let this thought comfort you in hardest trials.

— He who chases a shadow will never catch it, and will only weary himself; so is he who pursues a slander.

— He who lifts his feet high seldom stumbles over a pebble; so he who is careful how he lives, is rarely overthrown by human stumbling-blocks.

— If you believe all things, all things shall be yours. If you believe nothing, you shall have nothing.

— Good words are like dew-drops; they fall silently, but who can tell their effect?

— Many are not able to tell what they believe until they learn what some others believe.

— So contrary the one to the other are the weapons of carnal warfare and those of the christian soldier, that to wear and use the one, the other must be put off.

— It is doubtful if any man could by possibility do his noblest, or think his deepest, without a preparation of suffering.

OLD NANNY'S FAITH.

A servant of God was taken ill when far from home, and thus writes: "Just at the grey of the dawn in the morning, the fold of my tent parted, and a black face peered through. It was old Nanny, a colored woman. Looking tenderly at me, she said—

'Massa, does ye see de bright side this morning?'

'No, Nanny,' said I, 'it is not so bright as I wish it was.'

'Well, massa, I allers sees de bright side.'

'You do,' said I; 'may be you haven't had much trouble.'

'May be not,' she said; and then went on to tell me, in her simple, broken way, of her life in Virginia, of the selling of her children one by one, of the auction sale of her husband, and then of herself. She was alone now in the camp, without having heard from one of her kindred for years. 'May be I ain't seen no trouble, massa.' 'But, Nanny,' said I, 'have you seen the bright side all the time?'

'Allus, massa, allus.'

'Well, how did you do it?'

'Dis is de way, massa; when I see great black cloud coming over' (and she waved her dark hand inside the tent, as though one might be settling down there), and 'pears like comin crushin down on me, den I jist whips aroun on de oder side, an I find de Lord Jesus dar, an den its all bright and clar. De bright side's allus whar Jesus is, massa.'

'Well, Nanny,' said I, 'if you can do that, I think I ought to.'

'Pears like ye ought to, massa, an you's a preacher of the word of Jesus.'

She went away; I turned myself on my blanket, and said in my heart—The Lord is my Shepherd; it is all right and well. Now come fever or health, come death or life, come burial in the desert, or in the church-yard at home, the Lord is my Shepherd. With this sweet peace of rest, God's care and love became very precious to me. I fell asleep; when I awoke I was in a perspiration; my fever was broken. Old Nanny's faith had made me whole."—Times of Refreshing.

DRESSING PLAINLY.—1. It would lessen the burdens of many who now find it hard to maintain their places in society.

2. It would lessen the force of the temptations which often lead men to barter honor and honesty for display.

3. If there was less strife in dress at church, people in moderate circumstances would be more inclined to attend.

4. Universal moderation in dress at church would improve the worship by the removal of many wandering thoughts.

5. It would enable all classes of people to attend church better in unfavorable weather.

6. It would lessen, on the part of the rich, the temptation to vanity.

7. It would lessen, on the part of the poor, the temptation to be envious and malicious.

8. It would save valuable time on the Sabbath.

9. It would enable us to do more for good enterprises.

THE WORK IN GOD'S VINEYARD.

"Something to do in God's vineyard?"
Is that the question you ask?
"Something to labor and toil for?"
Come, let me set you a task.
Go through the streets of our city,
In through the garrets and slums,
Down in the dark, dingy cellars,
Where the pure air never comes.

Hunt up the starving and naked,
Seek out the desolate poor;
'Tis not a long way to travel—
Close by the steps of your door.
Here, take my hand; I will lead you
Into this palace of gin,
So we can watch, and unnoticed
Look at the ones that come in.

See you that dissolute creature,
Filthy and ragged and vile,
Wickedness stamped on each feature,
Passion and evil and guile?
Once she was fair as the fairest—
Cheeks that were red as the rose,
Eyes that were bright as the starlight,
Decked in the daintiest clothes.

See you that staggering drunkard,
Reeking with lust and with shame?
Once he had glory and riches,
Once he had fortune and fame.
Once, with his wife and his children,
Plenty and pleasure and peace
Grew in his garden, like flowers,
Blessed with a steady increase.

Come with me into this basement,
Scarcely a home for the beast;
Never a beam through the casement
Comes from the sun in the east.
Here, amid anguish and sorrow,
Misery mournfully lies;
Dreading the dawn of the morrow,
Poverty sickens and dies.

Ask me not, questioning stranger,
"What is there left you to do?"
Through the wide world is there labor,
Plenty for me and for you.
Thankless, perhaps; but no matter;
God will send power to thee—
He will reward thy endeavor,
Work in his vineyard and see.

JUDGING FROM APPEARANCES.

"Halloo, Limpy, the cars will start in a minute; hurry up, or we shall leave you behind."

The car was waiting at a station of one of our western railroads. The baggage-master was busy with his checks. The men were hurrying to and fro with chests and valises, packages and trunks. Men, women and children were rushing for the cars, hastily securing seats, while the locomotive snorted and puffed.

A man, carelessly dressed, was standing on the platform of the depot. He was looking around him, and seemingly paid little attention to what was passing. It was easy to see that he was lame, and at a hasty glance one might have supposed that he was a man neither of wealth or influence.

The conductor gave him a contemptuous look, and slapping him familiarly on the shoulder, called out—

"Halloo, Limpy, better get aboard, or the cars will leave you behind."

"Time enough, I reckon," replied the individual, and he resumed his seemingly listless air.

"All aboard!" cried the conductor.

"Get on, Limpy!" said he, passing the carelessly dressed man.

The lame man made no reply.

Just as the train was slowly moving away, the lame man stepped on to the platform of the last car, walked quietly in, and took a seat.

The train had gone a few miles when the conductor appeared at the door of the car where our friend was sitting. Passing along, he soon discovered the stranger whom he had seen at the station.

"Your ticket, quick!"

"I don't pay," replied the lame man quietly.

"Do n't pay?"

"No, sir."

"We'll see about that; I shall put you off at the next station"; and he seized a valise which was over the head of our friend.

"Better not be so rough, young man," returned the stranger.

The conductor released the carpet-bag for a moment, and seeing that he could do no more then, passed on to collect the fare from the other passengers.

As he stopped at a seat a few paces off, a gentleman who had heard the conversation just mentioned looked up to the conductor, and asked—

"Do you know whom you were speaking to just now?"

"No, sir."

"That is Peter Warburton, the President of the road."

"Are you sure?" asked the conductor, trying to conceal his agitation.

"I know him."

The color rose a little in the young man's face, but with a strong effort he controled himself, and went on collecting his fares as usual.

Meanwhile, Mr. Warburton sat quietly in his seat; none of those near him could unravel the expression of his face, nor tell what the next movement in the scene would be.

And he, of what thought he? He had been rudely treated; he had been unkindly taunted with the infirmity which perhaps had come through no fault of his. He could revenge himself if he chose. He could tell the directors the simple truth, and the young man would be deprived of his place at once. Should he do it? And yet why should he care? He knew what he was worth. He knew how he had risen to the position he now held. When a little orange peddler he stood by the street crossings, he had many a rebuff. He had outlived those days of hardship; he was respected now. Should he care for a stranger's roughness or taunt?

Those who sat near him waited curiously for the end. Presently the conductor came back. With a steady energy he walked up to Mr. Warburton's side; he took his books from his pocket, the bank bills and the tickets he had collected, and laid them in Mr. Warburton's hand.

"I resign my place, sir," he said.

The President looked over the accounts for a moment, then motioning him to the vacant seat, said—

"Sit down, sir; I would like to talk with you."

As the young man sat down, the President turned to him a face in which there was no angry feeling, and spoke to him in an undertone—

"My young friend, I have no revengeful feelings to gratify in this matter; but you have been imprudent. Your manner, had it been thus to a stranger, would have been injurious to the company. I might tell the directors of this, but I will not. But in the future, remember to be polite to all you meet. You cannot judge a man by the coat he wears, and even the poorest should be treated with civility. Take up your books, sir. I shall tell no one of what has happened. If you change your course, nothing that has passed shall injure you. Your situation is continued. Good morning, sir."

INTERESTING TO FRUIT GROWERS.—Editor Boston Daily Globe:—Sir,—Will you do the public a service by inserting in your excellent paper the recently discovered fact that the apple tree may easily be clearrd of all canker-worms by a single application of arsenic in water. Mr. Page of Danvers and myself tried the solution on many large orchard trees, a few days ago, and found it effectual. I have since used the same solution on that pest of the garden, the gooseberry and currant worm. Every worm dropped to the ground and died within twelve hours. The liquid did no injury to the foliage. We have tried various degrees of strength, but one pound of arsenic in sixty gallons of water is strong enough if properly applied; stronger solutions discolor the foliage. Put one half pound of arsenic in ten gallons of water, and heat to boiling point to dissolve; add twenty gallons of cold water, and apply with a garden pump or a syringe in very fine spray. One to two gallons to each tree, according to its size, will be required. If properly applied, most of the canker-worms will die in twenty-four hours, and all within two or three days. With due care such a solution may be used without fear, but ignorant or careless hands should never touch it. The time to apply it is immediately.

Caution.—It is not safe to make the liquid stronger than the above, nor to apply it in too great quantities. In our experiments we applied at first one pound arsenic to fifty gallons water, and as the leaves were not discolored in twenty-four hours after, and only a portion of the worms were at that time dead, we repeated the application on some trees, and applied a very much stronger solution to others; the result was, in those cases, much of the foliage withered three or four days after.—HENRY B. LEARNARD in Globe.

VALUE OF COAL ASHES.—As an absorbent, dry coal ashes are equal to dry earth, and much more convenient. Every family that has a patch of land big enough, should make it rich by having a hogshead where a bushel or two of coal ashes are thrown as a basis. Into it pour all the foul water of the family, and throw in the dry ashes of each day. Twice a year upset this receptacle, and spread the contents over the garden, and spade it in before the ammonia escapes.—Ex.

"This is for your Health."

FAITH A REMEDIAL AGENT.

The good book says, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine." Every one has realized something of the depressing and devitalizing effects of grief and despondency. But, there is another influence quite as important as a merry heart, both as a remedial and a life-sustaining agency. It is a living faith. The person who undoubtedly believes in an eternal hereafter, and has unquestioning faith in the Supreme Being who, whatever appearances may indicate to the finite comprehension, "doeth all things well," has a hold on existence and a resource for health beyond all calculation.

A merry heart conduces to a balanced circulation—one of the essential conditions of health. A firm faith gives steadiness and straightforwardness to character, and determination to the will, both of which are indispensable to the "normal play of all the functions." The doubting mind must of necessity waste more or less of its vital energies in unavailing efforts to solve the complicated problems and unfathomable mysteries of a future state; or if it settles down in the quiescence of unbelief, it lacks the inspiration and inervation of hopefulness. The man with abiding conviction that God rules, and that existence is eternal, will go through difficulties, endure privations, face dangers, and triumph over disasters, that would appal and unman a despondent or a doubting heart.

The old Christian martyrs, because of faith, could brave torture and smile at death. They could see the consuming flames encircling their bodies, and feel the contortions of the quivering flesh, with comparatively little suffering. A strong will-power can almost control sensation when circumstances require it. Without faith one cannot be true to duty in times of trial and temptation. If his belief for himself and for others, extend only to the measure of an earthly existence, the motives for grand and noble deeds are comparatively weak. But if he believes that his actions, his words and his deeds, with himself will live forever, the incentives for doing well and being true, are immeasurably increased.

Physicians have many occasions to notice the sanitary as well as remedial influences of faith. The invalid who believes most, hopes most; and, other circumstances being equal, is always most amenable to treatment.—Science of Health.

WALKING.—Walking briskly, with an exciting object of pleasurable interest ahead, is the most healthful of all forms of exercise except that of encouragingly remunerative, steady labor in the open air; and yet multitudes in the city, whose health urgently requires exercise, seldom walk when they can ride, if the distance is a mile or more. It is worse in the country, especially with the well-to-do; a horse or carriage must be brought to the door even if less distance have to be passed. Under the conditions first named, walking is a bliss; it gives animation to the mind, it vivifies the circulation, it paints the cheek and sparkles the eye, and wakes up the whole being, physical, mental and moral. We know a family of children in this city who, from the ages of seven had to walk nearly two miles to school, winter and summer; whether sleet, or storm, or rain, or burning sun, they made it an ambition never to stay from school on account of the weather, and never to be "late;" and one of them was heard to boast that in seven years it had never been necessary to give an "excuse" for being one minute behind time, even although in winter it was necessary to dress by gaslight. They did not average two days' sickness in a year, and later they thought nothing of walking twelve miles at a time in the Swiss mountains. Sometimes they would be caught in drenching rains, and wet to the skin; on such occasions they made it a point to do one thing, let it rain, and trudge on more vigorously until every thread was dry before they reached home.—Hall's Journal of Health.

CURE OF STAMMERING.—Keep the teeth close together, and before attempting to speak, inspire deeply; then give time for quiet utterance, and after a very slight practice, the hesitation will be relieved. No spasmodic action of the lower jaw must be permitted to separate the teeth when speaking. This plan, regularly carried out for six months, will insure success.

PURE AIR, proper food and drink, refreshing sleep, timely, careful and complete removal of all the excretions from the system, removal, disinfection or destruction of all animal and vegetable poisons from the immediate neighborhood, and a general observance of all the laws of hygiene, will do much to restore invalids to health and rid the world of disease.

TRY TO DO GOOD.

Mary Clay was a thoughtful little girl of nine years. One bright sunny morning her mother gave her a basket of fresh eggs to carry to an old blind woman who lived at a distance. As Mary took the basket she said, smiling, "Mother, this is something like what my teacher taught us at Sabbath school about 'trying to do good.'"

"Yes, my dear," replied her mother, it is doing good to take these eggs to poor old Betty, and I believe you are trying to do good;" and Mrs. Clay kissed her daughter, who set forth cheerfully on her errand.

By and by she reached Betty's cottage. She found her sitting in the sunshine knitting a stocking, for though she was blind she did not think that an excuse to be idle.

"Now, Betty," said little Mary, "I will put the eggs in the basket in the cupboard, and then you will know where to find them."

Betty thanked her little friend, and then asked if she had time to read a chapter to her in the Bible, and this Mary was very glad to do. So she reached down the Bible from the shelf, and found the chapter that Betty asked for, and read to her the fourteenth chapter of John's Gospel. When it was finished she put the Bible back on the shelf, and telling Betty she would come and read to her again soon, bade her good-by and set off home.

On her way she saw a little boy standing on a door-step trying to reach the knocker. She went up to him, and asked him if she should knock at the door for him. He answered rudely she might if she wanted to, but he did not want to go in. Mary walked away, feeling much hurt, when she wanted to do him a kindness. "I hoped I was going to do a little good," she thought, "and I have made a mistake."

As she continued her walk, she saw a man with a donkey heavily laden, which he was beating in a most savage manner. The tears started to her eyes, and she went up to the man begging him to please not to beat the poor donkey so much. "I am sure he would go only he is so tired." The man turned as she spoke, and looking savagely at her said, "I'll beat you if you don't hold your tongue," and then the stick fell heavily again upon the poor animal.

Mary was terrified and walked tremblingly away. When she reached home Mary's mother saw something was wrong, and untying her bonnet strings, asked her what was the matter. Mary could not tell at first for crying, and then after telling her mother all that had troubled her in her walk, said, "I do not think I shall ever try to do good again."

"Stop, stop, my little girl," said Mrs. Clay. "Because the boy and the man were rude and unkind, will you never take anything to poor blind Betty again, or go to read to her? That would indeed be wrong and foolish."

And then her mother talked kindly and wisely to her, telling her to cheer up, and still continue trying to do good, though sometimes you may be disappointed, remembering that our heavenly Father is kind to the unthankful and the evil, and that God will accept the will for the deed.—Christian Express.

TO MY YOUNG FRIEND.

Make yourself useful. Watch for opportunities to save steps and save trouble for those around you. Whether at home or abroad, endeavor to be kind, patient, unselfish, and agreeable. Do not be too free in expressing your likes and dislikes. Many poor children make enemies by muttering and complaining, when quiet and gentle ways would win them friends on every hand. Do not say what you would not wish to have heard or repeated. Few persons know how loudly they talk; and many a time young persons "free their minds" when they little think that their words are sounding through some slight partition or open door, and reaching the ears of the very persons about whom they are making unkind and uncourteous remarks.

Cultivate a spirit of contentment. Beware of murmuring and complaining. Such things the Bible expressly forbids. When vexed or tempted to discontent and fault-finding, think how much worse off many others are, and thank God for the blessings which you possess. You may envy the lot of others more favored than you, but are there not many who would gladly take your place? If your food is plainer than the luxurious fare of princes and epicures, hungry thousands would be thankful to get what you now enjoy; and if your clothes lack the richness and beauty of those worn by the votaries of fashion, yet how many haggard, ragged, shivering sons of want and sorrow, would gladly take your poorest garments, and thank God for the comfort that they would afford.

Pray to God to give you a quiet heart, and be content with such things as ye have. Waste no time in idle regrets or useless longings. Do the very best you can, just where you are to-day, and trust in God to open to you a wider door, and lead you in a more pleasant path, as he shall see is for your best good. Be faithful over a few things now, and you shall in due time be made ruler over many things, and enter into the joy of your Lord. —The Christian.

ISRAEL'S HOPE.—Micah 5: 7, 8.

Make haste, beloved, on the hills
The eternal day is breaking,
And withered hearts in Judah's land
To life and love are waking.
The shadows fly—the morn draws nigh,
The long expected morrow;
We'll hush our fears, we'll dry our tears,
And e'en forget our sorrow.

We're waiting now to hail the hour,
Dear Lord, of thy returning;
And out upon our watching tower
The lamp of hope is burning.
Fain would we see the head that once
For us with thorns was crowned—
In regal might, with glory bright,
By men and angels owned.

Our Savior, God, Messiah, King!
Israel's consolation;
Star of our night, now rising bright,
Our Captain of salvation.
Hope of our hearts! thou'rt coming soon
To claim thy long-lost nation;
We'll lift our eyes to yon bright skies,
And shout with exultation.

O, days of darkness, weary days,
Full soon ye shall be past;
And joy and rest and songs of praise
Shall fill our souls at last.
O, blessed promised prospect fair,
Speed on that advent day—
To see thy face, to own thy grace,
To reign with thee for aye.

HEAVEN.

J. W. THOMAS.

"I go to prepare a place for you."—John 14: 3.

Heaven has many attractions. First, there is the place. It is not an overdrawn, visionary picture, but a real, literal place. Jesus says to his disciples, "I go to prepare a place for you." It is a part of the consolation with which he comforts them, that heaven is a place, and not a mere state. Various names and titles are given to it in the Scriptures. In the context it is called a "house," and in it are "many mansions." It is called an "inheritance," a "better country," a "tabernacle," a "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God," the "New Jerusalem which is above, and is the mother of us all." It is a great and glorious city. It is above, for Jesus went up to heaven in a cloud, and was received within those pearly gates. There he is not only interceding, but preparing mansions for his people. What a place that must be! Selected out of all the locations of the universe, the chosen spot of Deity. We cannot go there until the appointed time. Jesus is coming after us when he gets it all ready for his bride, which is the church. How beautiful that home must be! Garnished, prepared, and adorned by the Prince of peace. We can see in the world places of great beauty, and we can conceive of spots far more delightful than any we see; but what comparison can these bear to heaven, where every thing exceeds whatever eye has seen or imagination conceived? The garden of Eden must have been a charming spot; but what was that compared with paradise restored? The dominion purchased and redeemed by the second Adam will far transcend in beauty and excellence that which was assigned the first Adam.

Sin broke the harmony and marred the beauty of Eden's fair morn. Since then all has been confusion and disorder. The curse rests heavily upon earth, and the flowers which once bloomed in loveliness now wither, droop and die. But over there, in the new creation, all will be harmonious. The morning stars will again sing together, and the sons of God shout for joy. There shall be no more curse, and flowers of variegated beauty will wave their heads in perennial bloom. The universe shall be cleansed of all its filthiness, and filled with the unsullied radiance of celestial splendor, and that "city of light" shall descend from above to be set as a gem of fadeless beauty in the bosom of the new-made world. Heaven and earth will be together, and the sighs and groans of mortality shall be hushed by the swelling melodies of the everlasting jubilee.

How shall I describe that place? Can I do it better than in the words of the beloved John? Has he described heaven, and told of its attractions? Let us see. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. . . He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Rev. 21: 1-7. Will not this be a lovely place? Jerusalem will then be beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth.

Then what society will be in heaven! There will be the angels, those bright and shining ones, that have been ministering spirits to the heirs of salvation during their weary pilgrimage in this world. Round about the throne there was seen an innumerable company of angels, having harps of gold. The excellent of every age will be there; the first martyr, the translated patriarch, the survivor of the deluge, the friend of God and his juniors, Isaac and Israel; Moses the lawgiver, and Joshua the leader of the host; the pious kings, the prophets, the evangelists and apostles; Paul and John, the martyrs; missionaries, and all the holy and faithful servants of God that have ever lived. Is this all? No. Where is that little one who used to lisp "father, mother"—thy child? Ah! that will be there. Jesus knows where his little brilliants are, and he will not suffer one of them to be lost. All shall be in his crown. Each little grave shall be emptied of its treasure, and those little feet shall tread yon golden streets. Perhaps thou hast a brother or sister, or a dear mother, she whose eye wept while it watched over you, until at length it grew dim, and closed. Took she not in her cold hand thine, while yet her heart was warm, and said she not, "I am dying; meet me in that bright world?" or perhaps one nearer, dearer than child, than brother, than mother—the nearest, dearest, sleeps. Shall I say who? Christian female, thy husband. Christian father, the young mother of thy babe. He is not; she is not; for death has cut them down. But they will be there. Jesus will call his own. Has heaven no attractions? Shall not we press on that we may meet them there?

Heaven will be the attractive gathering place of all the scattered family of God. From the north and from the south, from the east and from the west, they shall come glittering with light and glory. Angels shall bring them home. Every grave will be ransacked, and every jewel hid in the dust of earth shall be found, and seated at the marriage table of the Lamb. O what a day that will be! what joy, what gladness, what peace, what greetings, what reunions, what praise, what songs, what shouts of victory. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" I shall meet loved ones there. No more farewells, no more sighs, no more groans, no more parting, no more disappointment, no more loneliness, no more weary wanderings, no more tears, no more temptations, no more poverty, no more sickness, no more pain, no more death; all is over. We meet at home; we meet around our Father's table; we meet in glory; we meet around the throne; we meet by the river of life; we meet in the shaded bowers; we meet on the immortal shore; we meet with angels, and with all the blood-besprinkled host, to die no more. O what music there will be in heaven!

How the new song will roll and swell like the reverberations of the distant thunder, or the chime of waves on the distant beach—"Thou art worthy, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." There is much rich and sweet music in this world, on great occasions, when the most accomplished players and the best singers congregate to sing in concert, as at the great Peace Jubilee in Boston. There is melody indeed, but what is this compared with the great Peace Jubilee of God, when ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands of voices, with immortal lungs, in one harmonious strain, shall join in acclamations of praise to the great Peacemaker of the universe, saying, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing." And then this melody, beginning around the throne in the celestial city, shall roll outward and downward until every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and in the earth, to the remotest corner of the vast dominion, shall be heard saying, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." Will not that be music worth hearing? Who would not be there to strike the harps of gladness with the glorified, when the jargon and discord of earth is forever past? Who would not be willing to wade through great tribulation if on that immortal shore he could bear the palm of victory, and wear a robe of spotless white? What shall hinder us from going to that world of song and light? Will we not close our eyes to that which is behind, and be charmed and attracted by that which is before?

But notwithstanding the joy, and rapture, and music, and transport, that shall be in heaven, when the saints all meet at home, yet there will be peace—peace deep, heavenly, and divine. Peace in this world is like a river; over there it shall be like a mighty ocean. The God of peace will be there, and his presence will hallow all the scene. The righteous shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Earth will be at peace. No longer torn and tossed with earthquakes, or rent with internal eruptions. No fearful tornadoes shall sweep its surface, or storms deform its loveliness. It is a kingdom that cannot be moved. All shall be kept in eternal quietness. Jesus, the Prince of peace, who once hushed the raging waves of Tiberius, shall lift his voice above the storms and tumults of earth, and say, "Peace, be still," and there shall be a great calm, broad as the universe, and lasting as eternity. In that world we shall be eternally secure. God, and Christ, and the holy angels, and the blest and immortal company of the redeemed shall all be together in the new earth, with the New Jerusalem as the centre, the metropolis, and nought shall ever enter to disturb, defile, or make afraid. All will be safe and happy. This will be heaven. Age after age shall roll on, and on, and on; still all will be bright, beautiful, glorious. No sin shall defile our garments, or rust corrode our crowns. O how many are the attractions of that goodly land. Shall we be there? Only the pure in heart can see God. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things." The kingdom is nearing.

"Heaven! how thrills my heart the sound!
Heaven, and shall it be
That I shall dwell in endless bliss,
There, where my blest Redeemer is,
In joyous ecstacy?

Those thrones of peace and pure delight,
Those beauteous harps of gold;
Those shining robes of spotless white,
Those themes of rapture and delight,
Will ne'er like earth grow old.

But ever hallowed, ever blest,
With newer scenes of grace,
The joys of heaven grow brighter still,
And through eternal ages fill
Their mouths with songs of praise.

Thou humble, suffering child of God,
Though downcast now and grieved,
Those woes and trials which you fear,
Must work for good to bring you near
The God thou hast believed."

"THE SOUL—WHAT IS IT?"

W. GRIFFITH.

(Concluded.)

The brain of man and its appendages, terminating in the organs of sense, are the material medium by which the agent is brought into conscious communion with the physical universe. It is well known that the life-force of man constructs this marvellous apparatus, perpetually renews it, and keeps it full of working power. It is well known that every thought and every feeling depends on the action of the life-force, and costs an expenditure of the organized, vitalized material over which the life-force presides. No thought nor feeling is possible without the action of this vital energy. The life-force is never at a higher working pressure than when the current of thought and feeling are rolling in full tide. What then is the precise agent of thought? There can be no question that the organ of thought, or of the manifestation of thought, both to ourselves and to others, is the nervous system taken as a whole. But we require an immaterial agent working, and being wrought upon by means of the organ. What is that agent? The general answer is,—mind, intellect, the soul; by which a spiritual element is assumed, different and distinct from the simple life-force. But what says nature, and what says revelation in favor of such a distinction, and such an agency?

Nature furnishes us with a gradation of phenomena, in boundless abundance, of analogous, similar, and at some points identical character, which are culminated, crowned, by this highest phenomenon, intellect. She requires, nay admits of, no other agent but the life-force, in its different varieties, to account for the gradational or approximate features; and nature, as plainly as anatomical and physiological facts can speak, says, that life-force presides over all the phenomena of intellect. It is never absent from one of them. Its office is never suspended for a moment, while the process of thought, or feeling, or volition is advancing. Instances of suspended animation have occurred by fainting, stunning, drowning, hanging; and the uniform testimony is, that all intellection was suspended with the life and returned with the life. Nature points to the inference that thought, in all its variety, is a function of life; not of all life; but of life in its highest forms.

We cannot confine intellect, in its every feature, to man. Does it include sensation and perception? Who can doubt that these faculties belong to some birds and quadrupeds in a very high degree? Their senses are most acute; vision, hearing, scent, taste, in many of them, are more acute by far than in man; and serve them in far better stead than ours do us. But, take these faculties away from us, and what would become of our intellect? Do they not form a part of it? and are they not essential to its highest exercises, even if they do not directly or indirectly enter into and form constituent elements of its noblest excursions?

Does intellect include memory? What, indeed, could any power of thought do for us without memory? But memory is not confined to man. Dogs, horses, and elephants, not to mention other animals, we are sure possess it; because they recognize places, persons, the voice, and even understand words to a very limited extent, answering to names, calls, and directions. Memory must be regarded as a most wonderful, as well as indispensable faculty of mind or intellect.

Animals, too, have some idea of cause and effect. There is in them the association of ideas. I knew a cat that would climb up the door-post and lift the latch of the door, and so let herself into the house. How intelligently a horse goes about its work. Some dogs know Sunday, and put on their Sunday behavior with the return of the day. Cavalry horses, and hunters acquire the esprit de corps, and soon learn the wishes of their riders.

Are affection and friendship, responding to companionship, attention, and kindness, marks of intellect? You may find such responses beautifully illustrated in animal attachment and fidelity.

And this comparison of mind in man with some of its features as they are displayed in the lower animals might be carried on much further. But it is evident that the mental faculties in man so far transcend everything of a similar nature possessed by the brutes, that a vast disparity subsists between them in spite of striking resemblances. The disparity, however, is one of degree, rather than a difference in ultimate principle. Take, in illustration, the faculty of locomotion as possessed by the worm, on the one hand, and the albatross on the other. It is locomotion in each case; involving an organism, and an instinct. Each of them has faculties which enable it to take advantage and make a right use of its organs. But the bird rising in mid-air, careering through the storm, sailing night and day, with outspread wing, in tireless flight, so far transcends the earth-worm that we must speak of it as a totally different creature. The quality and power of movement in the one lifts it almost beyond comparison with the other.

So the quality, power, and range of thought, which man possesses, so far transcends the highest intelligence, cunning skill of the brute world, that it is another thing. It is only at some points that the two can be compared. In the higher manifestations of intellect man is unique; he stands alone and unapproachable. We should, however, remember that among men themselves there are amazing differences. While some of them can calculate the movement of the heavenly bodies, others can hardly count ten. While one man can build a St. Paul's, another could scarcely protect the mouth of a cave for his own shelter. While one could write an Iliad, another could not recite the names of his playfellows. There are some tribes of men whose intellect is a burlesque upon the name; tribes who are as much the creatures of passion and instinct as the wild beasts around them.

Further, if we take that specimen of humanity, the idiot, and compare our nature at his enfeebled point, with the tribes below us, we see human nature inferior in intellect to many of them. And from that utter prostration or lack of intellect, we may ascend, by specimens of our kind, through every gradation of mental feebleness and strength up to the highest. Some of them, both in the moral faculty and the intellectual, are mournfully near par with the brutes. They will work as a horse will. They may be taught a few things as a shepherd's dog may be instructed; but they must be under guidance and protection as a child all their days.

The conclusion to which these facts point is that the life-force in man varies immensely, ranging, from one cause or another, from the plane of the brutes far toward that of divinity. But the life-force which animates the lower tribes has a similar range; scarcely giving signs of vitality at one end of the scale, and vying with or excelling inferior forms of humanity at the other.

All these varieties imply a corresponding variety in that spiritual agent which we call Life. It builds its organism according to its kind. It gives more or less perfection and energy to its parts, according to its own inherent soundness and power. And the organism, being thus constructed, and animated, the same spiritual agent possesses and uses, according to its own inherent propension, capability, or taste. The one immaterial agent, life, produces the body, preserves it, and employs it. It alone makes use and full use of all its organs; its brain no less than its limbs; its senses as well as its viscera. Nature, by its resemblances, gradations, analogies, and varieties, teaches us to regard man as a part of this great animated cosmos,—standing at its head and embodying in himself its fullest types of glory. It teaches us also to regard him as a unity rather than a duality or plurality; all his faculties, instincts, passions, and powers having their basis and source in one all-pervading, all-presiding, all-operating principle.

Revelation also teaches us the same lesson. The description of man's nature, given by Moses in a passage already quoted (Gen. 2: 7), makes him a unity. "The Lord God formed Adam of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and Adam became a living soul." Two parts are mentioned, (1) "dust" which we may generalize and call material; (2) "breath of life." The material and the immaterial are clearly taught. But they blend into one person. "Adam became a living soul" by the breath of life which proceeded from the Almighty.

In the commandment, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy mind, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength," it is evident that popular terms are accumulated, to form one comprehensive injunction. No doubt it demands that all the faculties of our nature shall be employed upon the love of God. . . . . .

Nothing is more common, in the sphere of sense and observation, than life springing from life, and life pervading matter; but if mind be an element of our nature, which we must discriminate from life, then we must raise the questions of its origin or production, and of its habitat or seat. To hold that the mind, a principle distinct from life is begotten by natural generation is altogether gratuitous; and it is equally gratuitous to assert that, in every person, it is a new emanation from God. Should it be taught that mind is a principle begotten in generation; or that it is a principle which comes at some period after conception or birth, and takes possession of the animal organism in whole or in part, then will arise the impossible task of dividing the phenomena of human consciousness and action between the two agents,—between the mind on the one hand, and the life-force on the other. Both revelation and science are explicit and firm in declaring that the seat of life is the blood. "The blood is the life." "The life of the animal is in the blood." The blood is an all-pervading fluid. It continually carries life to every part, and so replenishes every organ and function. Let this life-stream be deficient in the brain, and the faculty of thought wavers or fails. Mind, as a phenomenon of life (that mysterious and most wonderful principle, which we have called the life-force, revealing this feature of itself through an organism which it has elaborated and sustains, and replenishes for the very purpose), is intelligible. And while it lessens no marvel and solves no mystery in regard to the faculty of thought, it establishes a divine simplicity for the nature of man, in harmony with all God's other working in natures which most proximately resemble our own. It harmonizes, also, with our consciousness; for we can never escape from the conviction of individuality. All the varied experiences which make up the sum total of a person's history, centre in the Ego. Life, as a spiritual principle, imparted at first by the breath of God, is sufficient to account for all life-phenomena; therefore, why should we seek for other causation? The great truths of revelation are unaffected by this view of the mental powers.

. . . . . The word "soul" in Scripture, is used in a wide latitude of signification. It covers all that pertains to man, even the bodily organism when life has departed from it; Num. 6: 4; Lev. 21: 11; Num. 5: 2; 9: 6, 7: 10; Lev. 22: 4; Hag. 2: 13; Num. 19: 13. It includes the whole person, Gen. 14: 21: is limited to life, Psalm 7: 5; distinguished from the body, Matt. 10: 28. It expresses desire and emotion generally, Gen. 23: 8; 1 Sam. 18: 1. "My soul" is a phrase common in the Psalms for me and myself. This Scripture usage is in harmony with consciousness, and with the phenomena of life. It makes one spiritual principle all-pervading, all-presiding, all-embracing in the human person. That principle is properly "soul,"—the Biblical term.

Under the Hebrew word nephesh, Gesenius gives as its comprehensive meaning, " (1) Breath. (2) The soul, amina, psukee, by which the body lives, the token of which life is drawing breath, the seat of which was supposed to be in the blood; hence life, vital principle. (3) The mind, as the seat of the senses, affections, and various emotions, to which is ascribed love, joy, fear, piety toward God, confidence, desire, appetite both for food, and also sexual; also, for slaughter and revenge; and on the contrary, hatred, contempt, revenge, sorrow. Rather more rarely, things are attributed to the soul which belong (a) to the mode of feeling and acting, as pride, patience, and impatience,—(b) to will and purpose,—(c) to the understanding and faculty of thinking." See the whole article. According to this definition of the word, it is sufficiently capacious in its meaning to embrace all I claim for it,—the whole phenomena of human life, organic, functional, intellectual, moral.

The word is not confined to the life of man; it is applied to the animals also, to "every living thing," to all forms of animal life. Adam became a "living soul" in common with the other denizens of the earth. See the Hebrew of Gen. 1: 20, 24, 30; 2: 7, 19. The manner of his creation and endowment with life seems to have been different; but the result is expressed by the self-same phrase, a "soul of life." The waters brought forth the moving creature, a "soul of life." The earth was to bring forth "soul of life" after different kinds. Everything having in it "soul of life," was to have the green herb for food. Whatever Adam called every "soul of life," that was the name thereof. After God had breathed into his formed, but inanimate body, the breath of life, he, too, became "soul of life." This identity of name shows that the difference between Adam and the other beautiful and wonderful creatures around him, was not in the essential elements of his nature, but in the superiority of them,—a diviner body, a diviner soul.

"I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath (spirit, v. 21); so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again. Who knoweth the spirit (breath, v. 19) of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" Eccles. 3: 18, 21. "No man hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit (breath); neither hath he power in the day of death; and there is no discharge in that war." 8: 8. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit (breath) shall return unto God who gave it." In these quotations the same word describes life, whether in the beasts or in men; they are declared to have "one breath." If the spirit or breath of man goes to God when it departs from the body, it thereby returns to its source; as the body returns to its source. Breathed from God at first into the nostrils of Adam, it returns to God, as liberated waters return to the ocean, as decomposed organisms return to their kindred elements. What God will again do with that returned "breath," by a new resurrection-life, is a gospel question.

APHORISMS.

SELECTED AND ARRANGED BY L. C. MCK.

A wise man hath his foibles as well as a fool; but the difference between them is, that the foibles of the wise man are kept from the world and known to himself; while the foibles of the fool are known to the world, but concealed from himself.

He who does not know himself, has all his lifetime lived away from home among his neighbors, who have learned him better than he has learned himself. He who knows himself, has lived at home, and knows more of himself than his neighbors know of him.

The surest way to conquer is sometimes to decline a battle. Thus Fabius Maximus conquered Hannibal. Thus, too, may the christian conquer his peculiar besetment. It is dangerous to provoke an unequal enemy to the fight, or run into such a situation where we cannot escape without an encounter disadvantageous to us. (The theory, then, that a man can have no virtue unless he is always in the midst of temptation is false.)

This is the process by which temptations grow upon us: first, a plain single thought; second, strong imagination; third, sensible delight; fourth, evil motions or actions.

THE LIFE BATTLE.

"So fight I," says Paul, not as one that beateth the air. But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection." The literal translation is, I strike under the eye, making it black and blue. This is a boxing phrase indicative of the sharpest, sternest efforts at self-mortification. As one who should say—conquer my fleshly appetites by violent and reiterated blows, and bring them into subjection. I lead my body along as a conquered captive. It is a beaten antagonist. My wicked, lustful nature is thus vanquished, "lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway."

Here is a tremendous warning to every one of us—a warning founded on our double danger; first from evil appetites of the body, and also from evil affections of the heart. Paul, the heroic apostle of Jesus, so felt his actual danger, that he tells us that he bruised and beat down his sensual passions, lest, having saved others, he might himself be finally lost. In the phrase before us he especially refers to the bodily appetites. "To keep the body under," i. e., I smite it under the eye. Paul, like other men of energetic make and ardent temperament, was very probably tried with strong temptations to excesses of the passions, both physical and moral. He has not chosen to let us into all the secrets of his character. He knew nothing of the modern pseudo-science of phrenology; nor would he have been one whit wiser if he had. He does not tell us how often "acquisitiveness" tempted him to pocket the, "collections" sent up to the saints at Jerusalem; or how often he fell through the sore stress of his "destructiveness," his "amativeness," or his "combativeness." Such jargon he leaves for modern empirics in the mysterious science of the mind.

But methinks I see the wrestlings of a stern and furious struggle between the holier and the baser natures of one of God's heroes in that profound and plaintive seventh chapter of the epistle to his Roman brethren. I seem to see a stout soldier of the cross, with uplifted arm and swollen sinew, crying out, "I beat down my baser self. I give no quarter to my lusts. I strangle my appetites till they grow livid in the face. I vanquish my inner foes that God may make me stronger to vanquish his foes without me, lest having saved others, I, Paul, the converted blasphemer of Damascus, should only prove to be a pitiful wretch and castaway.

For Paul claimed no immunities from danger through his position. That a man is a professed minister of the Lord Jesus is no assurance that he may not be cast into hell. He has "like passions" with his fellow-men. The same ravening lusts that have decimated the bar and the senate house have left their blood-prints on the pulpit stairs. Along the whole track of ministerial biography there lie strewed, here and there, the bleaching bones of those unhappy victims who fell a prey to the spoiler. Paul, to be sure, never fell. To the last he kept his faith, and the integrity of a godly life. And the simple reason of this continence and his constancy I read in these brave words, "So fight I, not as one that beateth the air. I keep my body in subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway."

Shall we restrict the scope of this life-battle to sensual appetites alone? Paul did not; he extended it to all the wicked propensities of his mental and moral nature. The war which every christian has to make must be universal and unsparing on the whole brood of interior passions. The sudden insurrections of anger—the malicious whisperings of green-eyed envy—the acid tongue of censoriousness—the clutchings of greedy covetousness—the restless cravings of unsanctified ambition—the subtle sophistries of deceit—the uprisings of bigotry and spiritual pride—all these and every other like them in the great rebel army of the heart, must be met with the same indiscriminate "war to the knife." He who would keep his conscience clean, and his life holy, must wage this life-battle without compromise and without quarter.

I. Let us offer a few concise rules for the conduct of this spiritual life-battle. Our first counsel is—beware of the silent marches which the flesh will steal upon you. We are fearfully and wonderfully made; the combination of body and spirit is such that each one reacts upon the other in a manner that is most direct and yet most mysterious. The encroachments of the "flesh" upon the spiritual nature are astonishingly quiet and insidious. The cravings of healthy appetite may gradually lead to the excesses of gluttony. Put a knife to your throat. Tampering with so-called innocent stimulants has sent many a professor of religion to the grave of the inebriate. The cup of coffee led to the glass of wine; the wine to the brandy; and the brandy to perdition.

With all possibilities of self-indulgence come temptations. Luxury steals silent marches on christians when prosperity brings within their reach a fine equipage, or splendid establishments. There is hardly a christian in New York who lives, when worth ten thousand dollars a year, just as he lived when hard toil gave him only one thousand or one hundred. Men change their habits gradually, not suddenly. A man may be converted in a moment. Backsliding is the process of months of years. By degrees tippling grows into intemperance; by degrees the social evening entertainment prolongs itself into the midnight frivolities of the rout, the ball-room, and the play-house; by degrees a church member exchanges the prayer-meeting for the opera. Beware of the silent marches of the enemy.

II. If you find that the contact of certain persons and places is dangerous to your weaknesses, then avoid those persons and places, cost what it may. If you are temptable by a wine cup, then keep out of convivial company. If you have tendencies to run mad with over mirthfulness, then stay away from those circles in which you are tempted to turn the christian into the harlequin. If the sight of a picture or a person excites libidinous thoughts, then look somewhere else. It is not every young christian who can be trusted even to walk through certain streets in our great cities. A "besetting" sin may lurk in that very street.

A man's besetting sin is the one that jumps with his inclinations. Does he love ease? Then he always interprets those Providences in his own favor that allow him to sit still, or to enjoy his hammock. Does he love flattery and eclat? Then he imagines he is working for God, when he is only working for human applause. Here is a dangerous foe; all the more so from its wearing the honest guise of a friend. Look out for selfishness. It is the "old Adam" lurking behind every hedge. Like Southern slavery, it will only keep the peace on condition of having its own way. If not, then its stiletto is unsheathed in a moment. It is a polite and plausible, but a godless spirit. Keep no league with it. A christian is never safe unless he is continually collaring every evil passion of his nature, and forcing it into unconditional submission.

III. Finally, put on the whole armor of God—the shield of faith, the breast-plate of righteousness, and the sword of the Spirit. Leave no spot exposed. Ahab was wounded through the joints of the harness. In the heat of the conflict look to Jesus the Captain of your salvation, and never surrender. Toward the sunset of the long bloody day of Waterloo, when the surviving remnant of the old imperial guard were summoned to lay down their arms, the scarred veterans of fifty victorious fights cried out, "The old guards can die; but they cannot surrender!"—Pulpit and Pew.

"I WILL GUIDE THEE WITH MINE EYE."

J. A. WARDLEY.

The eye of God has guided us to his holy word, to find sweet meditation there, which causes gladness in him, and inspires us with love for him. His eye guided us to see Jesus by faith, before we knew him, and to get spiritual joy from no other object but Christ, as set before us in his gospel; to see salvation by him, to view him at his birth an outcast babe in poverty; in advanced years "a [illegible] of sorrows and acquainted with [illegible] man [illegible] despised and rejected of men [illegible] grief," "[illegible] an accursed death; [illegible] That he died with a human [illegible] that he rose and ascended [illegible] body like our own. He guided us with his eye to believe that this was our Savior; and having perfectly expiated and atoned for all our sins, he is now at the right hand of God, the glorified one still, in human form, pleading our cause. He is precious to us, as being suitable for us in his glorified person and all his blessed offices; hence our hearts go after him, our affections are placed on him, and it is the desire and delight of our souls to honor, serve and obey him.

He guided us by his eye to see God was in Christ, and that we could not come to him but through Jesus. How sweet and encouraging this is to faith, that our Savior, our brother, our friend, is in our nature before the throne; and that he ever lives to make intercession for us; and as our great High Priest is able to save, and that we should not doubt either his love or his willingness; and that it is our happiness to be ever looking upon and unto Jesus, as the Mediator by whom we can come to God; to be looking for him, and to see him in his glorified form.

He shall come again "in like manner" "to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." He guided us with his eye to look for the coming of the Lord. All that we hope for depends on his reappearing. Our day of triumph and of the fullness of our joy, is to be when he shall return. Then we shall be raised from the grave; then our bodies shall be changed; then we shall be acknowledged as his friends; then we shall go to be forever with him.

And since this is so, let us bear with patience the trials and infirmities to which we are here subject. These trials will be short, knowing that soon all pain will cease, and that all that is humiliating will be exchanged for glory. Here we are strangers and pilgrims; we are away from home, in a cold and unfriendly world; consequently, our thoughts should be much in heaven, and our best affections should be there. Seeing that we look for this Savior, God grant that our eye may be fixed continually upon him, and that we may be guided into all truth, all our doings being attended with his blessing, and our whole lives be a constant progress towards the kingdom.

Lord, guide us in the christian race,
And keep our minds intent on thee;
Rejoicing when we see thy face,
And trusting when we cannot see.

Our prayer should be that He would keep us as the apple of his eye, that no evil come near us; that whatever faintings and failings may befall us, he will be ever faithful, raising us up again, and leading us evermore in his ways. As a faithful mother watches over her child, so may he undertake to teach us our path, and guide us with his eye. Nay, as a good shepherd, that he will ever carry us in his own arms, whenever our increasing weakness shall require it.

"Jesus, my Shepherd, Brother, Friend,
My Prophet, Priest, and King;
My Lord, my Life, my Way, my End,
Accept the praise I bring."

Portland, Me.

It is while we look not at the things that are seen, but the things that are not seen, that our afflictions become light, and appear in their true colors, working out a far more exceeding reward. The mist lies with the dwellers in the valley, thick and murky no doubt; but the mountain-top is clear.

THE PROSPECT.

All things seem to indicate that a great change in our world must soon take place. Every nation has its rise, "decline and fall." These changes keep repeating themselves in the history of the world. Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome, have experienced these changes in their history. The great political powers of earth, like the sun, commenced to rise in the east, at Babylon, and have now reached the Pacific coast. The political sun has set in the east, and reached its meridian among the people on the eastern and western Atlantic shores, and is now setting in the western hemisphere. A popular writer says:—

"The star of doom is surely sinking to the western zenith. Art has desecrated nature's sacred places. Slowly but surely the shadows climb the shores of the Atlantic, and ere another round is added to Time's mighty cycle of generations, the sunny slopes of America shall feel its blighting breath. The stalwart pride of America is yielding to a false utilitarianism. Her boasted liberty shall yet plead loudly, but in vain, for the vindication of justice. Soon downfall and desolation shall have swept its weighty strides to the western shores of the Pacific. Then the great earth, scattered from horizon to horizon, from pole to pole, shall be cleansed by Heaven's thunderbolts from man's pollution, and resolved into its primeval purity. Behold it hastens."

WAR CLOUDS.

Careful observers are satisfied that it will not be long before war, with all its horrors, will again burst forth in Europe. The European nations are like the dashing war-horse, ready for the conflict, only waiting for the signal note for the onset. They are nearly prepared for the bloody battle-field. The following from the Boston Journal of June 21st, gives a clue to what is going on among the sovereigns of the old world:

"The announcement that the sovereigns of Germany, Austria and Italy propose to meet at Bad-Gastein in August, has sent a temporary thrill over Europe; but there is nothing, after all, alarming in it. Even the additional intelligence that Bismarck, Andrassy and Venosta-Visconti will accompany their masters does not make people's knees tremble. For Europeans have made up their minds to the inevitable; they know that war is close at hand, and care little for the difference of a day or an hour. When Bismarck and Von Beust met at an Austrian watering place last autumn, it is certain that the triple alliance which rumor says will be consummated in August was under discussion; and possibly, had the Austrian abandoned his timidity, he would have gained more substantial advantages than Austria can now hope for. Andrassy is, nevertheless, brilliantly capable of shrewd management, and will not allow Bismarck to bully him as Beust allowed. The King of Italy merely desires to strengthen his position vis-a-vis of France, and to protect the new order of things which he has established in the now united country governed by him. There are very powerful considerations impelling toward the consummation of an alliance, but it is still possible that the Emperors and Kings will meet and separate without having accomplished anything definite. Russia looks on with interest, and orders more artillery."

THEOLOGICAL CONCLUSIONS.

Dr. A. L. Stone, the popular Congregational preacher in San Francisco, and former pastor of Park St. church, Boston, gave a lecture in his new church Tuesday evening, May 28th, on "Reason and Instinct." The Dr. is an eloquent speaker and a logical reasoner. In his comparison between men and animals, as reported in the Morning Call, he was driven to one of two conclusions: either to deny that man has a soul that thinks independent of the body; or else admit that the beasts have the same. He favored the later view. He said:

"Moral science seems reluctant to admit that the dumb animals have a share of reasoning power, but slowly and reluctantly moral science is approaching that conclusion. Such a conclusion does not degrade the human to elevate the animal." "Agassiz says: 'We notice in some animals facts that prove that they carry on a process of reasoning.'" "It is certain," says Dr. Stone, "That the more the brain of a dumb animal resembles that of man, the nearer do its mental powers approach to those of man."

This statement, which is in harmony with facts, shows that the brain is the thinking organ in both man and beast. This point is so well settled by physiological investigations that there seems no room left for doubt.

We hope the Dr. may be led to examine still further, and see that the Scriptures teach that neither man nor beast have an immortal soul; but "as the one dieth so dieth the other." Eccl. 9: 10. The sooner he and others give up the idea that any part of men or animals continue alive, in a conscious state, after their death; the sooner they will be on apostolical ground, with the whole Bible to assist them in sustaining their common-sense position.

HOW THEY DO IT.

The following from the demonical spirits, gives the true philosophy of presenting to their mediums the forms or personal appearance, of our friends who are now dead, and sleeping in their graves:—

Q. "(From the audience.) How is it that my mother, who has been gone from this world thirty or forty years, can produce a likeness of herself just as she appeared before she died—the same dress, the same mode of wearing the hair?

A. It is, properly speaking, a psychological process. For instance: the returning spirit, on coming in contact with earthly matter, with minds dwelling in material bodies, becomes immediately vividly impressed with its last sense of the conditions of earthly matter through which it lived. They are all distinct to it in memory. Its dress, its general appearance, the incidents connected with them, all are clear to it. By the process of intense outward thought concerning any one object, spirits are able to clothe themselves according to whatever objective form they may desire to assume. Your mother remembers how she dressed, in what manner she wore her hair, during the last weeks, days or hours of her life. She knows she will be remembered most distinctly, most satisfactorily by those who remain, if she can assume that objective form; so, all she has to do is to fix her mind upon the picture she wishes to weave out of your atmosphere. By intense outward thought, she clothes herself just as she wishes. It is a psychological, common process, which all spirits thoroughly understand. Even little children are acquainted with it.

Q. Can spirits, who have gone from earth thirty or forty years, produce a photograph of themselves as they appear now?

A. Yes; they can assume any shape, any appearance that they can centre their thoughts upon."—Banner of Light.

These demons, like mesmerizers, form mental pictures of our friends, when their mediums see them of real persons. Hence the demons can represent our dead friends just as they please, and in any clothing they choose. Instead of our friends being alive, and remembering what they wore, it is the demon who remembers how our friends looked. The The mental picture in the demon's mind, is all that the medium sees. They never see our real friends who have died.

THE PEACE JUBILEE.

"The World's Peace Jubilee" was opened at the Coliseum, in Boston, June 17th, and is still in progress. Its patrons consider it a success thus far. The audiences are estimated to number from fifteen to twenty thousand a day. The orchestra of a thousand instruments is said to be the finest ever in America. The chorus numbers between seventeen and eighteen thousand, and is the largest ever assembled in this country, and is under very superior discipline by Carl Zerrahn, the noted German leader of the Boston Handel and Hayden Society. He is assisted by Mr. Gilmore, the projector of the Jubilee. The first piece sung was "Old Hundred." A noted foreigner who was present said that alone paid him for coming three thousand miles. There has been great interest manifested to hear the celebrated "Band of the Grenadier Guards of London," led by the noted Dan Godfrey; the "Kaiser Franz Grenadier Regiment of Germany," and the "Garde Republicaine Band" of Paris. These bands are considered the best in Europe, and came by the special permission of their respective governments. Thus far the preference is rather given to the French.

Among the solo singers Madame Peschka-Leutner, a German lady, is said to surpass any one who has ever visited America. The lovers of music are having a great feast at the Jubilee. It is rare that an audience composed of so many distinguished men and women is assembled on either continent. The Coliseum is said to cover four and a half acres of ground, and to be capable of holding one hundred thousand people. The Jubilee is to continue till the 4th of July.

HILANDVILLE.—The meeting in Hilandville, Sabbath June 16th, was a profitable one. Hilandville is on the Boston, Hartford and Erie R. R., about ten miles out of Boston. Bro. S. G. Low has been making a noble effort to establish meetings in that place, and has not labored in vain. He is a true man, and has commenced holding meetings in other places with good success. He stands ready to do what he can to help in spreading the truth. Those who wish meetings in new places will do well to give him an invitation.

Five were baptized Sabbath noon, and in the evening a church organized of fourteen members, and two elders chosen. Bro. Low was appointed to act as pastor of the church by unanimous vote. We had a pleasant communion season in the evening.

EXTRAVAGANCE.

The extravagance of this age is without a parallel. Every year adds to its alarming progress. Covetousness is a ruling passion, hence all means are employed to obtain money, in order to gratify the love of extravagant display. There is, probably, no nation at the present time that is carrying things to such extravagance as the American people. This is a sure sign of approaching ruin. Luxury, pride, and extravagant living surely lead to the downfall of their votaries. The style of dress has become no less extravagant than the expense. Both are alarming. Parents, especially mothers, are cultivating these wicked propensities in their children, and thus leading them in the broad road to destruction:—

A MODERN CHILDREN'S PARTY.—Among the recent holiday parties given to children, we describe one which is not exaggerated, and which is a fair specimen of hundreds. This entertainment occurred in one of the most fashionable streets of Brooklyn, and at the residence of one of the wealthiest men. The mother is one of the most cultured women who grace our land, and is, in the main, a common sense, practical woman. But she has gone fashion-mad—a prevalent epidemic. It was a full-dress party. The hours appointed were from eight to eleven P. M. About one hundred guests were present, who were received by their young hostess (a miss of ten years) with as much ease and self-possession as a matron could assume. The dresses consisted of white, pink, yellow and blue silk, elaborately trimmed and decked with spangles. The little misses had their hair dressed in the latest style, frizzed, puffed, powdered and adorned with flowers. White kid gloves were generally worn. Only one thing was lacking in the miniature representation of an adult party, viz., enameled faces. Powder, however, was freely used. One little girl (if she could be recognized as such) particularly engaged attention. She was apparently ten years of age. In addition to the powdered hair and dazzling costume she sported, with true appreciation, a pair of diamond ear-rings, a gold chain and a locket studded with diamonds. Upon each arm was a bracelet of elaborate workmanship, which she held up for display, exclaiming as she did so to her admirers: "There's no sham about these; they're the real thing," which her auditors were quite willing to believe. If the above seems incredible, what will the following be? A little girl of seven summers was arrayed in rose-colored silk, $7 per yard, point applique flowers, a galaxy of diamonds, and other expensive jewelry. A gold belt, the buckle of which was studded with diamonds; a band of gold encircled the head, and from a pendant on the forehead sparkled a solitaire of great value. Her mother was heard to exclaim exultingly that the price of her child's outfit for that evening was $5000. Another mother, jealous of the sensation caused by such a display, remarked that "upon the next occasion mine shall be dressed in tea-rose silk, which is by all means less common than pink, as as my child's complexion is such that she can wear anything." Music, dancing and charades occupied the evening. The supper was all that could be desired by the greatest epicure. The party broke up about midnight. The adieus were spoken with sufficient grace and ceremony to satisfy the most ardent devotee of modern etiquette. "Here endeth the first lesson."

STRIKES.—There is just at present a little lull in the strikes at New York, but the tide of uneasiness is still increasing among the laboring classes, and worse outbreaks may be expected soon. A general uprising may soon take place, and burst forth with terrible fury. All is uncertain.

"THE SCIENCE OF HEALTH" is the title of a new and able health journal, published by S. R. Wells, 389 Broadway, New York. It contains forty-eight pages. Price $2.

"The first number of this new health journal is before us. It is devoted to an exposition of all those agencies so vitally related to health and to the treatment of disease, such as air, light, temperature, diet, clothing, bathing, exercise, sleep, electricity, and all normal agents and hygienic materials. It is an independent journal, published in the interests of the people, which is certainly a strong commendation. The first number contains many articles of general interest. The senses of sight, hearing, taste, smell, etc., are illustrated and explained. The cause and cure of earache; the proper position on horseback; water treatment of fevers; sprains and bruises; pneumonia; clergyman's sore throat; chronic catarrh; how to sleep, etc. The department of talks with correspondents contains valuable information."

"A MOTHER'S ADVICE" is the title of a little pamphlet of twenty pages, by Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D., lady physician to the New Hygienic Institution, and Turkish Bath, 41 West 26th St., New York. We have just read this "Mother's Advice." It is truly a valuable book for every girl. Every mother should furnish a copy for her young daughters. It contains advice that every girl should possess. Price 20 cts. For sale at the Crisis office.

TOBACCO.—We have received a pamphlet of forty-four pages, showing the effects of tobacco upon the human constitution, physically and mentally. It is published by Dr. James C. Jackson, Dansville, N. Y. It should be read by all who use tobacco, and all who have any intention of ever using it. Price 15 cts. single; $1.50 per dozen. For sale at the Crisis office.

BURNETT'S THEORY OF THE EARTH contains some valuable things, which have been extracted and published in a separate volume by Bro. P. M. Garr, 71 W. St., Pittsburgh, Pa. Price $1 postpaid. Thomas Burnett was an able writer on the subject. His work was published in 1683. His writings will be read with much interest by Bible students, especially those who understand the "blessed hope."

NATURE'S MIRROR is the title of a little book of eighty pp., brimful of gems and wise sayings, collected and arranged alphabetically by Bro. J. H. Walton. It would be an excellent book to put into the hands of a young man just starting out in life. Price in paper covers 25 cts., bound 50 cts. For sale at the Crisis office.

"RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD."

THEY RISE. Suggestive inquiries concerning the resurrection of the dead, as taught in the New Testament. By D. A. Dryden. Cincinnati, Hitchcock & Walden; San Francisco, A. Roman A Co.

Queer books sometimes find their way to a newspaper office, and this is one of them. An extended notice or review of a book of this nature cannot be expected in a secular paper; but our friends of the religious weeklies will no doubt take great delight in reading the pages that to men of the world cannot but be dry and uninteresting. The author is a member of the California conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the work is preceded by an introduction by Rev. M. C. Briggs, who pays the highest possible tribute to the character of the writer, and in a mild way cautions people against accepting his views, because he "dissents from his premises, his processes, and his conclusions." Observing the remarkable nature of this introduction, by a man who is well known to California newspaper readers, additional curiosity is awakened to learn the contents of the volume that is at the outset intimated to abound in heresies. The solution of the pons asinorum is mere child's play in comparison with the attempt to find out exactly what the author is driving at. We confess our inability to determine whether the writer is orthodox or heterodox. In the first chapter, the author says:—

"Paul's philosophy of the anastasis of the dead knows nothing about that psychical, metaphysical immortality of disembodied souls or ghosts of which some of the heathen philosophers dreamed, and of which but too many, even in the Christian church, are still dreaming. Nor does the New Testament know anything about this ghostly immortality of naked, shapeless souls, only as it has been foisted into its meaning by those who have interpreted by the manly lights of human philosophies at best but semi-heathen. It knows the dead as real substantial persons, angels, or men, and in its own language ever introduces them to us as such, and not as mere 'shades,' psychical essences, or bodiless spirits."

We should think that the author was trying to prove that in some way a man must ultimately, in bodily form, go to heaven or hell, but he is so obscure in his style that it is hard to tell whether he thinks that there is to be a general resurrection, and that until that time the dead, body and soul, will remain in some intermediate place—a purgatory. Anybody who wants to investigate this subject will find that the book of Mr. Dryden is full of suggestions that can lead him in his inquiries, and it contains references to all of those passages in the New Testament that can throw any light upon the subject. We hope that publishers will spare us from the necessity of examining any more theological books of this class, for we have no inclination to enter the field that is occupied by the religious journals, and the task of reading such a book is about as agreeable to the secular mind as it would be to resume the study of the calculus.—Oakland (Cal.) News.

ARE WE READY.

Somebody will be found ready when Jesus returns from heaven; and they that are ready will go in with him to the marriage supper of the Lamb, and the door will be closed against all who are not ready. This being the case, how important that we inquire seriously, Are we ready? But this question may well be preceded by another inquiry: What constitutes a readiness to meet Jesus? Certainly something more than the enlightenment of the intellect with the theory of truth is needed. The affections must be enlisted. We must be in Christ, and "abide in him, that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." 1 John 2: 28. We may abide in the truth, holding it in unrighteousness and still not be in Christ. The "Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead" must continually "dwell in us;" and that Spirit is a fruit-bearing Spirit; its fruit is "love, joy, peace," etc. Unless we have this internal and experimental evidence of our affinity to Christ, how can we have "confidence" before him at his coming? The important command is, "Be ye holy, for I am holy;" and Jesus informs us that "the pure in heart shall see God."

It is not enough to possess a pure theory; we must set our affections on things above; we must ardently love the Lord our God, even with all the heart. In short, in order to be ready to meet Jesus with a hearty welcome at his coming, we must be unreservedly consecrated to his will and work, with hearts sweetly baptized with perfect love. When we leave our "first love," God has "somewhat against us." We can live beneath the happyfying smiles of Jesus, all crucified to the world. Are we living there? Are we weaned from the spirit of the world? Do we fervently sigh for the coming kingdom? Have we an ardent relish for secret devotion? Do we live in secret communion with heaven every day of our lives? Do we enjoy the "sanctification of the Spirit," as well as the "belief of the truth?" Then we are ready to meet Jesus when he comes, and ready to work for him till he does come, keeping our "bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable," having our minds "transformed" by renewing power.

IOWA CAMP.—Up to this date (June 17th), a good hearing interest is had on the camp-ground. A dozen tents are already on the ground, and more to go up. Here I met Bro. Deyo, and a goodly number of brethren of former acquaintance. More in due time.

BRIDLE THE TONGUE.

S. O. NANEY.

BRO. GRANT:—I saw the heading of an article in one of your papers—"Bridle that tongue." I was highly edified in reading it, for it is a subject that has occupied my mind for many years. I have often been in company with my brethren, who were looking for their Lord, and instead of obeying this injunction, which is according to this word, their tongues were loose to utter many things which are strictly forbidden. I hope and pray that all those who read the article to which I have referred will not pass over it lightly. We cannot bear so much self-denial. I believe in being lively and cheerful, at proper times. There is a time for all things. Let the sayings of John Wesley sink deep in your memory. "Be serious without being sad and cheerful without being light." There is a vast difference between lightness and vanity, and a cheerful disposition. Vain and trifling things do not fill the mind of the sanctified soul, one that is prepared to enter heaven when his Lord comes. O the solid peace there is in serving God with a full soul; where there is no desire for the ways of the world, nor for anything that separates between them and God; where they can say with David—"I delight to do thy will, O my God."

Holy living is my motto. How glad I am to see once in a while a piece in the Crisis on that subject. It is both food and medicine to the hungry, emaciated soul, who believes nothing short of this will prepare us to meet our Lord in peace; for without holiness no man shall see him. The word has gone out of his mouth, and cannot return void. What God says will certainly take place. If you have no desire for holiness, pray for it, both in secret devotion and public. Take God at his word, and believe when you pray that you have the things you desire, and you will have them. "Without faith it is impossible to please" God. Commence now, and you will soon say with David, "As the heart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after the, O God."

CHRISTENDOM LEAVENED.

O. R. FASSETT.

A clergyman on this coast (California) stated in a discourse that "one of the great evidences in proof of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul was the fact that the Greek church, Roman church, and Protestant church, all believed and advocated it." This, instead of being proof of the doctrine, only demonstrates how far the whole of Christendom has been corrupted with that old "leaven" of heathenism, and confirms the truthfulness of a parable of Jesus.

PARABLE. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." Matt. 13: 33. This is a popular proof text throughout the Christian world, cited in favor of that modern fable, "the world's conversion" to Christianity. But the other parables of our Lord show that this text cannot be so interpreted. The first parable in the context is that of "the sower and the seed," which is designed to teach that wherever, and during the gospel dispensation, the "word" is preached, there will be four classes of hearers:—"way-side," "stony-ground," "thorny-ground," and "good-ground" hearers. The second parable is that of "the tares and wheat," which, being explained by Christ, teaches that both the righteous and the wicked will exist together in "the world" until "the end of the world"; and that not until after "the harvest" will the world be filled with the pure and chaffless grain, and that after the "tares are burned," and the "chaff burned up with fire unquenchable." vers. 24–30, 36–43; chap. 3: 12.

THE LEAVEN. "Leaven is a mass of sour dough." Leaven is never used in the Scriptures as an emblem of anything good, but always evil, bad, corrupt. There is "the leaven of unrighteousness," "the old leaven of malice," and "the leaven of hypocrisy." Also for corrupt doctrine. "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. . . . . Then understood they how that he bade them beware of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. Matt. 16: 6–12.

The "leaven" that this "woman took" is is either "wickedness," or corrupt "doctrine," soured by age or otherwise. We will hereafter show that it is corrupt "doctrine," and that of "the Pharisees."

THE WOMAN. A woman is a symbol of a church, a pure, or a corrupt church. Christ, as the "Husband" or "Bridegroom," is to have his "bride" or "wife" "presented to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing." "This is a great mystery; but I speak concerning Christ and the church." Eph. 5: 27–32; Rev. 12: 1. The corrupt, or adulterous, or apostate church of the New Testament, is "that woman Jezebel," "the mother of harlots," which is "the Roman Catholic church," in secular union with "the kings of the earth," and enthroned in "the seven-hilled city." Rev. 2: 20, and 17th chapter. The "woman" in the parable, who uses the "leaven," must be a corrupt or apostate church, and by putting it into the meal designs to ferment or corrupt the whole.

THE THREE MEASURES OF MEAL. Meal is bruised corn or grain, ground into flour. Wheat and grain are emblems of "the children of the kingdom" (v. 38); "the people of God" in the midst of churches made up of both good and bad professors. Rom. 9: 6, 7; Rev. 18: 4. The professed church must first be put into the mill, and ground to powder by the woman, and then she will put in the leaven, after the Oriental custom: "Two women shall be grinding at the mill." The Roman Catholic church has crushed the church of God, and ground her between the mill-stones of her tyrannical power, to make her receive her corrupt dogmas and practices. Her tyranny has divided Christendom into three great divisions, the Greek, the Roman, and Protestant churches, which here denote the "three measures of meal"; each of which that corrupt church has indoctrinated with the heathen dogma of "the immortality of the soul," and rewards in the state of the dead, until the whole of Christendom is leavened.

The Lord will now come as "a refiner and purifier" and put Christendom into the "oven." "Who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth?" Mal. 3d and 4th chap. "The day shall declare it, because it is revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." 1 Cor. 3: 13.

PEACE JUBILEE.

T. W. GILE.

What an excitement it has produced among the people of earth! Thousands are interested in the enterprise. Great pleasures are anticipated, as they come from various parts of the world to participate in its enjoyments. But how unsatisfactory in its results. Multitudes are disappointed. No permanent happiness is obtained. Their realizations fall far short of their expectations. So it is with everything earthly connected with this inconstant life. This existence is truly a checkered scene. Nothing earthly can satisfy the human mind. All is "vanity and vexation of spirit."

But there is to come off in the future a greater and grander Peace Jubilee than has ever been witnessed by the inhabitants of earth. The wheels of time are urging us onward to that event, and the great question that should occupy our minds is, Are we making the necessary preparation to participate in this Jubilee? If unprepared, all is lost. Only one class of individuals will be partakers of its enjoyments, and they are those who have been renovated by the Spirit of God and endure unto the end. To such it will be a joyous event as they join in singing the redemptive song in the everlasting kingdom of God. Let us make the greatest exertion to obtain admission into this Jubilee, and enjoy it forever.

TRUSTING THE LORD.

R. L. SITLER.

Little more than nineteen years ago I felt myself to be a sinner, and resolved to seek Jesus, the sinner's friend. I sought him with all my heart, and found him true to his word. Since that time, I have found him a friend in every time of need. I find that we need not make long prayers in order to meet with divine compassion; "but when ye pray, use not vain repetitions as the heathen do," says the Lord, "for they think they shall be heard for their much speaking."

Several years ago, I went some distance from home to organize a Sunday school. On my return, the horse which I was driving became unmanageable. I was alone, and no human help was near, and the horse was going at full speed on the very edge of a high embankment. I then prayed, without asking the Lord "to convert the world," or even to bless the newly organized school. The Lord hearkened and heard when the single petition came from the depths of my soul, "Lord, help." The horse stopped running at once, and I had no further trouble till I got home. "Ask what ye will.".

Some time ago, a friend came to me in great distress. Said she, "There are several persons who are trying to rob me of my good name." She then named the charges that were about to be brought against her. I considered her case well, but could see no way by which she could escape from the clutches of her wily foes. "I will take it to the Lord," said I. Ere I rose from my knees, the case was made so plain that I told my friend she need not fear, for the Lord would not suffer her enemies to take another step in that direction; neither did they.

A lady was bowing at the altar of prayer, seeking Jesus. She could not claim the promise—"I will receive you." After encouraging her to trust the Lord, I turned from her and prayed in her behalf. I felt that the Lord had heard and answered, went to her, and found her rejoicing in a sin-pardoning God.

A "plow boy" was called to preach the word of life. On being called, he left his "plow and his oxen," and began to settle his worldly affairs, that he might give his whole time to the Lord. He and the man for whom he was working were anxious to settle fairly, yet they could not agree. Said the man, "We will consult a lawyer." "No," said the young preacher, "we will take it to our Father." They then bowed on the "threshing floor" together, and laid the case before the Lord. The case was made perfectly clear to both. They settled up their accounts without further trouble. A prayer-hearing God.

I had received "Woman and her Work" for some time, without ordering it, when I read that the publishing committee were in arrears for the paper. I had also received the Crisis, marked "free." When I read from its columns that much was due on subscription, I owed no man a dollar, and had less than five dollars in my possession; but I felt that it was duty to pay for the papers, and trust the Lord for future needs. Accordingly I sent $2.50 to pay for the Crisis, and $1.00 for "Woman and her Work."

I am trying to work for the Lord without any promise to pay from any one but from him. I have always had enough, and sometimes a little to spare. When I purposed paying for the papers, which I would not willingly do without, Satan suggested that I had better keep the money, for I would need it. I told him I would "trust the Lord," and sent the money for the papers. I now have two papers that I can call my own, and the Lord returned the money with interest a few days after I had paid for the papers. God bless the Crisis, and make it a power in the church of our God.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. B. Sevey.

BRO. GRANT:—Since I wrote last for the Crisis, according to appointment I held meetings in Sangerville. Owing to the traveling, I did not get there until Saturday evening. I found Bro. Jere. Carr, with other brethren, laboring to spread the truth. Sangerville is a new field for our faith. Bro. Brown and family have been praying that the people might have the truth presented to them in its simplicity. We had a good hearing. The brethren and sisters were strengthened, and encouraged to let their light shine. Seed was sown that will not return void. I trust it was not sparingly. I preached seven times in S.

I visited Dover and Foxcroft, and found the brethren in rather a low condition. Bro. Samuel Ames lives in Foxcroft. He is one of our preaching Brn. He is dependent on his work for a living, and needs the sympathy and help of those who are blest with this world's goods. Will the time ever come when the church will bear the burden as she ought, and help those that need help? Will its inquiry ever be, Is he a good man? or will it be always, Is he smart? as much as to say, If smart, it is what we want; and if not, it will not amount to much; forgetting what Paul said, that "not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the wise." Men are apt to forget that "it is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord"; trusting more in the means than in God, who giveth the increase.

On my way home, I had a very interesting meeting in Cambridge with a friend. I went to the Baptist meeting Sunday evening, had an introduction to the minister, who gave me a cordial invitation to preach. I declined, for the reason he knew not my views; but after prayers, I felt as though I ought to let my light shine. I arose, told them I believed Jesus was soon coming, and as the Bro. had given me an invitation to preach, a subject had presented itself to my mind on the signs, as brought out in the 24th of Matt.; if there was liberty, I would speak. The minister said, Take the desk, Bro. Then I felt perfectly at home. They gave me attention for one hour. I gave liberty. The minister said a few words, and gave liberty. The deacon said he was prepared to endorse nearly all that had been said, and had no objection to any; and they, as christians, were bound to take the exposition I had given them, if they could not give a better one; and for his own part, he thought Jesus would soon come. Others followed in the same spirit. Much conviction rested on the people. Many were affected. I told them the church was not in the place where she ought to be. The minister requested me to stop longer and hold meetings with him. Thank the Lord for the meeting in Cambridge.

Held a meeting in Hallowell one Sunday. There was most excellent interest. In the evening one confessed. The cause in H. is in good condition. Children will do well as long as they keep humble and obey God. Held meeting in Jay, Kennedy Corner, and found the seventh-day folks to work in that place, giving a course of lectures; but as my appointment was out first, I had the house. There are some faithful ones left yet, who have not bowed the knee to Baal, nor sought to be justified by the deeds of the law, having the seal of the Spirit, whereby they "are sealed unto the day of redemption."

I had an appointment in Dexter. A few Brn. in that village have hired a hall and commenced prayer-meetings. I was not able to get through, the roads were so bad, but it worked well. Bro. Rines was there, and preached to good acceptance. A good interest was awakened. The people wish to hear more. Those that are called infidels, and have been made so by the theology that teaches man's natural immortality, when they hear the plain truth, it takes their infidelity away; as a brother-in-law said to me, when I asked him in meeting if he would go with us? His answer was, Yes, I have something to stand on; namely, the new earth. He lived and died in the faith. When men see the harmony in the Scriptures, they are led to say, If the Bible is true, these folks have got the truth.

Next I attended the conference in Garland Village, a place where a few Brn. live, but have had no preaching on the advent of Christ for many years. Our brethren were disheartened and discouraged. They thought only a few would come out. They obtained the town house for meetings, and commenced Thursday evening with a large attendance. Our meetings were well attended days and evenings. Brn. N. G. Reed and Rines were present to help, and other brethren and sisters came to help. Bro. Carr was sick, and not able to attend. Those having this world's goods would do well to help him after a godly sort. He has been doing all he could for the cause. The interest was so great, I stopped until Wednesday evening. Some were refreshed, and a few made a start for the kingdom. The minister came in to see what was going on, and took some part. He listened with attention. In a conversation with him, he said he was much pleased to hear my remarks on Spiritualism. I told him, with his views he could not do anything with it.

He is looking for the world's conversion. He said the number saved would be much larger than the lost. I referred him to Jesus' sayings: "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." If his doctrine is true, there must be a change in those passages.

I took cold on my lungs, and was obliged to close the meetings when the interest was good, and return home. I have been confined to the house for ten days, still hoping for the kingdom to come, where the inhabitant shall never be sick. Dear Brn., it will not be long. Cannot you go out a little beyond, in that new place, where they have never heard the good news? Get some good brother to carry you away from the railroad track a few miles. It will do you good, and you may benefit others. Lord, help us, is my prayer. All for Jesus.

From Bro. S. Woodruff.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS:—I feel that duty demands that I should acknowledge the Lord this morning, in his goodness and loving-kindness in sparing my life, and the many blessings, temporal and spiritual, which have flown from his bountiful hand to me and mine; for truly the Lord has remembered us as a family in great mercy. Over two years have passed away since I have been able to labor with my hands to earn a penny. I have known what frailty of body was by a hemorrhage, which has long since become chronic, which at many times has threatened to end my days, and that quickly; but God, who is full of life and power, has interposed in my behalf, and I continue unto this present; while some have fallen asleep. Only through God have I been spared through the past winter; and as many are enquiring after my health, would say I am improving but my strength comes slowly. I have been able to preach most of the time for the last three months; and thanks be to God who has given me so many rich blessings to enjoy; thanks be to God and the dear brethren and sisters for the many God-sent blessings I have received through them to cheer me and mine, when I could not help myself. Truly God has had me in everlasting remembrance, and through his children our needs have been supplied. Most of their gifts have been given in secret, and he who seeth in secret can but reward them openly. God bless you dear brethren and sisters for your continued favors upon one so frail and unworthy as myself. Could you but know the feelings of my heart to-day, you could but feel somewhat rewarded for the sacrifice you have made; but a little from this you will have the reward in its fulness. I have been remembered by many who know not the Lord by an experimental knowledge. I do pray such may yet know the Lord; know him by the power of the Holy Spirit. The good Lord remember such in great mercy; and lead them to the fountain of life. Oh meet me where there is no dying. Dear, praying children, may I still have your prayers.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. O. R. FASSETT writes:—"I have been afflicted with conjunctivitis, or inflammation of the lining membrane of the eye ball and lids for three weeks, caused by the coast winds and sand-dust of San Francisco. I have had to retire from the coast for a season to cure my eyes. Am on my way to Bartlett Springs with Mrs. Fassett, who also needs rest from her labors to recruit her general health, and rest her eyes, now troubled with granulated lids for a year this month. The churches of San Francisco and Vallejo have kindly granted us a month's absence. This new affliction has been a great trial to me, and seeing my companion had suffered so long was the greater trial, fearing I also would be troubled for a long period; but the air of the mountains, so different from the cold coast winds, which prevail every day, are rapidly effecting a cure. I have committed my case to the Lord, and anew consecrated my eyes to his service. I have tried to so use them, and think I have not abused them; but I shall the more fully and faithfully devote my restored eyes to his glory. I think often of St. Paul's infirmity, who had to have his letters written by another, while he dictated them, owing to this 'thorn in the flesh.' Pray for us."

[Yes, pray for dear Bro. and Sr. Fassett, that their eyes may be perfectly healed, and that their labors may be abundantly blest on the Pacific coast.—Ed.

Bro. Peter Mitson writes from Elliota, Minn.:—"I am trying, by the help of the Lord, to do what I can to encourage the little ones to cling fast to the 'great and precious promises' that we find revealed in the blessed Bible. I exhort them to step out from under the fear of men, and take the word of God as the man of their counsel. My prayer is, Lord, help every one to feel that it is their reasonable duty, for their individual good, that they serve God. Dear brethren and sisters, let us make one great effort, by the help of the Lord, to swim out from under every influence of men into the deep waters of God's love. I can say from my heart that I never felt more like standing up for the truth of God, regardless of the views of men, than I do now. I feel to say, Lord, here I am, use me to thine own honor and glory. The Lord help you, dear Bro. Grant, in your labors of love, is the prayer of your brother in the Lord."

NOTICE.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—You will see the notice for the tent meeting at North Dana, commencing June 27th, to hold over the Fourth of July. Let there be a rally. This is a new field, and we need help; so we ask you to come, one and all, to the work. The spot for the meeting is within one minute's walk of the depot. There are not many of us of like faith here, but we shall do what we can for the comfort of all. Those who can, had better provide for themselves. We hope to make this meeting effectual. So let all say, "I must go to North Dana to that meeting." For this purpose I have made the following arrangement with the R. R. Co.: All those who come over the Athol and Endfield R. R. will buy their tickets for North Dana, paying full fare, and have a return check free. Also, if any should choose to board, they can procure good board at the hotel near by for seventy-five cents per day. Horse keeping on reasonable terms. Able preachers are expected. Geo. A. Streeter.

How to Preach.—Cotton Mather, in 1860, wrote "Directions for a Candidate," in which he says, "Let your notes be as a quiver, on which you may cast your eye now and then, to see what arrow is to be next fetched from thence; and then with your eye as much as may be on them whom you speak to, let it be shot away with a vivacity becoming one in earnest."

CALL—BAKER. At Sandy Hill, N. Y., June 20th, 1872, by Eld. A. W. Sibley, Mr. Andrew S. Call and Miss E. Jennie Baker, an adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Vaughn, both of Sandy Hill.

Obituaries.

Briggs. Died at Lockport, N. Y., June 6th, 1872, Sr. Frances, wife of Bro. Aaron Briggs, aged fifty-one years.

By this sudden and unexpected stroke, a devoted husband and three sons are caused to mourn, yet not without hope. The church here and neighborhood feel keenly the loss of her sympathizing acts of kindness, and many weary pilgrims will remember the cordial welcome they have received from her in words and acts, while they have been made the recipients of her hospitalities. Though sick only three days, and suffering excruciatingly, she retained her consciousness to the last, and sent messages of love to the church and friends absent, with desires that they should prepare to meet her in the kingdom of God. The writer endeavored to speak words of comfort and hope to a large concourse of people, from 1 Thess. 4: 13. Some had never heard before the blessed doctrine of the resurrection as believed by the apostles. L. M. Stoddard.

Phillips. Died at Henrietta, N. Y., June 11th, 1872, Helen M. R., wife of Mahlon D. Phillips, and daughter of the late Hon. Martin Roberts, aged thirty-one years.

Mrs. Phillips possessed those qualities of head and heart which caused her to be greatly beloved. So far as I know, it could be truthfully said of her—

"None knew her but to love her,
None named her but to praise."

I spoke words of comfort as best I could to the many sorrowing friends gathered at the funeral, and pointed them to the glad reunion that awaited them, if faithful, in the future life, as attained through a resurrection of the dead. 1 Cor. 15. J. H. Whitmore.

Coye. In Rochester, N. Y., May 28th, 1872, of consumption, Joseph H. Coye, aged sixty-five years.

Bro. Coye had been an Adventist since 1843. His faith was strong to the last. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." Funeral from North Street M. E. Church. J. H. Whitmore.

Randall. Died in East Gloucester, R. I., April 25th, 1872, of bilious pneumonia, Sr. Abby Randall, wife of Chas. H. Randall, in the fifty-third year of her age.

Sr. Randall was a kind and affectionate wife, a loving mother, a true Christian, and one of the pillars of the church. She leaves a husband and two sons to mourn, but she sleeps in Jesus. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14. J. S. Eldridge.

ITALY.

THE POPE INDIGNANT.

Rome, June 10. The Pope has addressed a letter to Cardinal Antonelli deploring the approaching enforcement of the law suppressing convents in Italy as a violation of international law. He says that the constant encroachments on the rights of the church by the government of Italy violate morality and justice. Only a regard for the highest interests prevents the head of the Church from leaving Rome. The conflict between the Holy See and the Italian government is inevitable and a reconciliation impossible. The Pope cannot submit to such usurpation, and he requests Antonelli to protest against them to foreign powers.

FRANCE.

CRITICAL POSITION OF AFFAIRS.

Paris, June 24. The political situation is becoming critical. The members of the Right in the Assembly have persuaded a majority of the Ministry to tender their resignation should the members of the Right persist in their demands. A large party among the supporters of the Right are pressing the Duke D'Aumale for the presidency, and are actively working for his success. The greatest excitement prevails in political circles and further developments are looked for in the Ministry. Political affairs are apparently approaching a crisis. The interview of yesterday between the delegates of the Right and Thiers leads to a complete rupture between that portion of the Assembly and the President. The members of the Right, to the number of 350, have since held a meeting, at which speeches were made expressive of great irritation at the attitude of the Chief Executive, and it was resolved to leave Thiers to rely entirely for support upon the Left. During the session of the Assembly to-day the delegates of the Right summoned the Duc d'Aumale in the committee room. The members of the Ministry all tendered their resignations to Thiers before the interview with the Right, but were all persuaded by the President to withdraw their resignations to-day, with the single exception of De Larcy, the head of the Department of Public Works, to whom it appears that the Right have offered inducements to persist in his determination. The delegates left are, in the meantime, quiet spectators of the expected crisis in public affairs, but maintain an observant attitude.

Health of the Pope.—Our Roman correspondent writes:—"Reports are current in Rome that the Pope's health is failing. It is about a month since I had an opportunity of observing His Holiness, and he then had a robust and healthy appearance; in fact, it was very difficult to believe that he was about to complete his eightieth year. He was somewhat corpulent, but his form was erect and his step firm, and his voice was clear and sonorous when he made a short speech in which, with a tinge of bitterness, he denounced the injustice done in this world, and adverted to the possibility that God might yet repair it. In some of his recent speeches he has used very strong language; but this may be explained by the circumstances of the time, and by a not unnatural exasperation, without its being considered to prove that his mental vigor and lucidity are on the decline, whatever may be the state of his physical health.

DOMESTIC.

A Terrible R. R. Disaster has occurred on the Grand Trunk railway, as may be seen from the following:—

Belleville, Ont., June 22. The night express went down past this place at 12.20 this morning, full of passengers, among the number many being ministers of the English church, en route homeward from the Synod at Toronto. About eleven miles below Belleville station the engine jumped the track, carrying death and fearful torture to scores of passengers in the forward cars. The baggage car remained on the track and telescoped the smoking car and second-class passenger cars, leaving them on top of the engine exposed to the escaping steam from the boiler. Here the poor creatures were hopelessly penned in for some time, breathing vapors of death and suffering all the agony of immersion into a boiling cauldron of superheated water. The sight was one to baffle description. The terrible cries of the sufferers rent the ears of the lookers-on. Sixty-five men and women were fearfully scalded and otherwise injured, six of whom died on the spot, and the bodies were brought to this place; four more have died, and others are dying every hour. Not more than one-third of the injured will live. John Hebbert, the engineer, was instantly killed, and the fireman badly injured. H. Neilson, the conductor, and other train hands, escaped uninjured. The wounded and dying are on mattrasses on the floor of the freight shed, so much disfigured as to be unrecognizable. Five of the wounded were able to walk, and left by the express train for Toronto.

Since the previous report this evening, four more have died, making twenty-three dead now, and others dying. Medical men say that not more than six or seven of the sixty-five persons injured will live. The suffering and appearance of the wounded are frightful. The killed and wounded are all second-class passengers. The first-class all escaped uninjured. No New Englanders are among the killed and wounded.

An Employers' Strike.—A new feature was introduced into the New York labor movement in the meeting, night before last, of three hundred employers, who, in ordinary circumstances, give work to about forty-five thousand men. Driven to a last resort by the failure of their contracts and by the rejection of all their offers of compromise, they have formed a union which is likely to be sterner and more unyielding than any Eight Hour League or workingmen's combination whatever. Unencumbered by conflicting interests, of a vastness of numbers, which brings weakness rather than strength, they have chosen the opportune time when the strikes are at their feeblest, to state their own position and their intention to maintain it. Among other resolutions which they adopted was one declaring that they will not hereafter retain in employment any workman guilty of any act looking to the arbitrary establishment of relations between the employer and employed; that they will hereafter pay workmen by the hour, and employ such as are willing to work ten hours a day, and will close their establishments and keep them closed until they can employ workmen on this basis; and that they will no longer submit to the unreasonable and tyrannical demands of the Trades Unions, believing such tyranny to be incompatible with the best interests both of employer and employed. There is nothing of bravado or empty defiance in these resolutions; they are simply the expression of a fixed and determined purpose. The three hundred employers can close their shops—if worst comes to worst they can move their business from the city; but what are the forty-five thousand workingmen going to do about it? The answer must needs come right speedily.—Boston Journal.

The Prophet Elijah as a Colonist.—Rev. (?) Mr. Curry, the leader of the "Elijahites" who were encamped on South Main street, last fall, has colonized on a plantation in Georgia, his community embracing people from Philadelphia, Boston and many other places, with about twenty from Springfield and vicinity. They have all things in common,—that is to say, Curry has title to all real estate owned by the community, and controls all their goods and chattels, dealing out to his people rations of food and clothing according to his own judgment of their needs. Besides, this meek and pious shepherd, has, ostensibly for the good of the community, a snug little bank account of $20,000, which is made up of the sums paid in at different times by the simples under his watchful care, who are beginning to think there is more of the Yankee in his composition than is consistent with the sacred character of the prophet whom he professes to represent.—Springfield Republican, June 13th.

More Strikes.—Belfast, Ireland, is the scene of a most determined strike and lock-out. Only seven or eight of all its numerous mills are working; and it is calculated that at this present time no less than thirty thousand working people are idle. No prospect of a settlement at present appears. The masters will not go beyond an advance of 2s, and the men will not accept less than 3s; so that all this stagnation is caused by a difference as to 1s a week in wages. No demonstration of any kind has occurred.

☞ A convention has assembled at Berlin, to inquire into the organization, etc., of the International Society in Europe. Every European government sends a representative.

☞ Fifty-seven persons are recorded as "having disappeared mysteriously" from New York city during the last year. What a record of crime is probably hidden under this announcement!

In Brief.

—— In spite of the tenacity of faith characteristic of the Jews, Christianity does make some progress among them. Of 30,000 Jews living in London, 2000 are members of Christian churches. Of 18,000 in Berlin, 2000 are said to be converted. The total number of Jews in Europe is reckoned at 3,431,700, and of these 20,000 are reckoned as Christian converts. In the Episcopal church in England, one hundred ministers are said to be of Jewish birth.——Thiers is growing to be very unpopular with all parties in France. His political career seems drawing to a close, if we may judge by the reports.——Protestantism is organizing in Spain. At a recent Synod nineteen churches were represented.——Baptist churches in Prussia are, and have been, enjoying extensive revivals.——Rev. Mr. Malcom, defender of the Open Communionists in this country, reports that the movement is gaining ground everywhere.——The International is again showing itself in force all over the European continent.——Suicides are again prevailing in Paris, being often of such fantastic character as become ludicrous in the extreme.——Suffering under the terrible curses of famine and plague both, alas! for Persia.——A rumor has gained ground in England that the International Society is encouraging the American strikes.——The conversion of an influential Jewish Rabbi in Mobile to Christianity has made some stir in religious circles.——Russia has now thoroughly organized, and under government patronage and supervision, fifteen thousand public schools; a grand token of progress.

Preaching and Prayer.—A faithful pastor saw his preaching extraordinarily blessed. For twelve years he had a revival in his church every year. He was himself surprised at such success, until one evening, in a prayer meeting, one of the brethren stated that for some years he had been in the habit of praying every Saturday until midnight that on the morrow the preaching of his pastor might find its way to the people's hearts. We should, without doubt, see more fruits of the numerous sermons which are preached every Sunday, if every minister had one friend who took really to the heart his pastoral work, and presented it without ceasing at the throne of grace.

For the Brethren, F. A. Baker.

Cox, and others will be present, we expect. Provision will be provided on the ground, without money and without price. All who wish to be carried by team, can be accommodated by writing to R. W. A Word to Colporteurs or Missionaries.—Beloved brethren in the work of Christ, you that feel an interest in spreading abroad a knowledge of the immediate coming of Christ to judgment, and feel a love for the perishing in your heart, and desire to warn them of their danger, and would judiciously scatter my tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending," you can send to the Crisis office for such quantities as you think you can dispose of, to that class of readers that would appreciate them. My plan is for you to sell them to such persons as would be willing to purchase, at eight cents per copy, and give them to the poor, and to such as would read them with candor, that might not feel disposed to purchase; and the money coming from the sale of those purchased to be used in paying your expenses in traveling, or sent to the Crisis office, to help pay the expense of publishing more tracts. Those who are known at the Crisis office as brethren of faithfulness and integrity, will have no difficulty in obtaining said tracts; while others who are not known at said office, can obtain a recommendation from a source that will be approved and accepted. The second edition of said tract is now published and ready. What is done, must be done quickly. Amen.
L. T. Cunningham.

Hoosick Valley Tent.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. Sibley,
S. G. Mathewson, } Tent Committee.
H. K. Flagg,

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

I wish to say we have made arrangements, and bought the timber standing on the Springfield camp-ground, of eight acres, for one thousand dollars, and if any of the brethren wish to help us by taking stock of from $25 to $100, they will be sure of their money back when the timber is cut off. This secures us the ground for eight years, if we need it so long, which is very doubtful; but we have to deal with one of no faith.

There are some three or four good places in the front circle for wooden tents, and there are two families on the ground to watch them. This will be a desirable chance to build since this arrangement, as board can be had on the ground, and any kind of lumber delivered, and help obtained to put them up. H. Munger.

Grove Meeting.—A grove meeting will be held in Boscawen, N. H., near the Gulf school-house, about half a mile from Boscawen Plains, the Fourth of July. Come one, come all, far and near, and work for the Lord. The great Peace Jubilee of God is soon coming. Geo. Clark.

There will be a Grove Meeting held in West Levant, in the Emerson Mills neighborhood, to commence July 4th, at ten o'clock, and hold four days. We invite all the lovers of Jesus to come and celebrate with us, and the preaching brethren who can labor for the salvation of souls in harmony with God's holy prophecy.
Israel Damman.

There will be a grove-meeting in Lowell, Me., near the Tannery, July 4th, the Lord willing. Come, brethren and sisters from the adjoining towns, and let us celebrate the day to the glory of God. Let the preaching brethren that can, come and help us. For the brethren,
J. Ridley.

The New York State Campmeeting will commence Aug. 10th. Notice in next paper.

Conn. A. C. Quar. Conf.—The next meeting of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held at Campville (near Bro. Elliott's), commencing July 3d, and holding over the following Sunday. It is proposed to hold the meeting in the "Mission Tent." Provision will be made for those who attend. Campville is on the Naugatuck, above Thomaston. Per order, B. Hitchcock, Pres.
L. S. Ludington, Sec.

There will be a Grove Meeting in South Newburgh, to be holden on the farm owned by James Farnham, to commence Friday evening, June 28th, in a school-house, and Saturday and Sunday in the Grove. Our preaching brethren are cordially invited to come and help dispense the word of life. Israel Damman.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting on Mayberry Hill, Casco, Me., July 4th, and hold over Sunday. We want all the brethren and sisters to come in the name of the Lord, to work for him.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged,

OF

"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR,"

Or, The Commune.

BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

THE FULLNESS OF JESUS.

I lay my sins on Jesus,
The spotless Lamb of God;
He bears them all, and frees us
From the accursed load.

I bring my guilt to Jesus,
To wash my crimson stains,
White in his blood most precious,
Till not a spot remains.

I lay my wants on Jesus—
All fullness dwells in him;
He healeth my diseases,
He doth my soul redeem.

I lay my griefs on Jesus,
My burdens and my cares;
He from them all releases—
He all my sorrows shares.

I rest my soul on Jesus—
This weary soul of mine;
His right hand me embraceth,
I on his breast recline.

I love the name of Jesus—
Immanuel, Christ the Lord;
Like fragrance on the breezes,
His name is spread abroad.

I long to be like Jesus—
Meek, loving, lowly, mild;
I long to be like Jesus—
The Father's holy child.

I long to be with Jesus,
Amid the heavenly throng,
To sing with saints his praises,
To learn the angels' song.

RESURRECTION vs. REUNION.

GEO. THOMSON.

It is doubtless true that in the literature of every age ideas have been expressed in literal and appropriate terms. Prevailing ideas may not have been so expressed in every instance. The literature of every age abounds more or less with figures and symbols; but these are never employed as a rule in defining ideas. While poetic license may at times clothe ideas in unseemly and ambiguous garb, yet predominant literature is historic and literal. If this were not true, the ideas and theories of the past would be to us simply chaotic. To illustrate: The prevailing religious ideas of the present age concerning man in death, are delineated at times in poetic effusions, as—"drifting away to the blissful spheres"; "wafted off to the balmy plains," etc., etc. Now such statements would fail to give us any clear conception of what the writer meant; but the sober obituary and biographical literature of the day states in plain terms, "He died, and has gone to heaven to his reward"; thus employing appropriate terms for the exhibition of their faith. And should there be a distant future posterity to consult the literature of the present age, they would derive their knowledge of prevailing religious ideas from these plain historical statements. This is also true of Bible literature; and the ideas or truths therein set forth are clothed by the Holy Spirit with appropriate language. If this were not true, we should be floundering in a sea of doubt in reference to its true meaning. This is an important consideration, and a knowledge of this fact will aid us greatly in our search for truth.

These preliminary thoughts will indicate the meaning of the caption of this article. The Scriptures, especially the New Testament, abound with the idea of a resurrection. This subject is spoken of at least one hundred times in the New Testament alone; and I know of no instance where the terms employed would naturally convey any other idea but that of the dead coming to life again. We have "resurrection of the dead," "resurrection from the dead," "I will raise him up at the last day"; "thy brother shall rise again"; "though he were dead, yet shall he live"; "the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live"; "but if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies"; "raised out of their sleep"; "dead raised to life again." This is the way the Scriptures talk on the subject of the resurrection; and if they had designed to teach that dead men were asleep, unconscious, dead, I know of no stronger or more appropriate terms that could have been employed to teach that fact, than those which are invariably employed in connection with the resurrection. How plain—"Thy dead men shall live again." How different the terms employed by many modern theologians, in speaking of the resurrection. The fact of a resurrection is admitted; but the prevailing religious theory of the present day invests it with a character which absolutely demands a new term to describe it; hence we have the term re-union.

Death is regarded as a separation of soul and body, in the sense of the soul being a distinct conscious entity, and the real intelligent man, in whom the identity inheres; and the body a mere tenement, or prison-house, of little or no value. But as the Scriptures tenaciously demand the resurrection of this tenement, modern theology must accommodate itself to the fact; hence provision is made for the re-union of soul and body. I find that the most learned writers of the popular school, in speaking of the resurrection, define it as a re-union of soul and body. I have no disposition to find fault with them for so doing; it is rather commendable, and in perfect harmony with their faith, or theory. Indeed, they could employ no term which would be so consistent with their faith. The words "resurrection," or "raised up," are not at all compatible with the idea of the soul coming down from heaven, and entering the tenement again. "Re-union" is the word. It is appropriate. It expresses the idea so clearly. It removes all suspicion of ambiguity. If the idea it represents is true, then the expression is the true representative.

Yet one cannot help seriously reflecting, how unfortunate that the Savior and his apostles failed to get hold of the expression that was so well fitted and adapted to represent the idea, if the idea is true. But the idea which demands the use of that term as its appropriate representative cannot be true, else the Savior and his apostles would have employed it. That system of religion that repudiates Bible terms, and necessitates the substitution of unscriptural terms to represent its ideas, must, to say the least, be defective. The Bible presents the glorious doctrine of the resurrection as the re-living of dead men; and all its terms are perfectly adapted as representatives of that idea. Modern theology denies that death kills the man; it is only the body that dies. The man lives on, and if the body ever lives again, it will be as the result of the live man entering again the dead body; hence the necessity for an unscriptural term to represent the idea.

If modern theology would expunge its unscriptural expressions, such as "the immortal soul," "deathless spirit," "never-dying soul," "disembodied spirit," "death that never dies," "spirit land," "re-union of soul and body," "eternal misery," and such like, the ideas which they represent would soon cease to have an existence; for it is very certain there cannot be found Bible terms to perpetuate those ideas. We can safely rest upon the fact that Bible truth is clearly represented in literal and appropriate language.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER SEVEN.

But it is not in the doctrine of the immortality of the soul alone that orthodoxy gives support to Spiritualism. In comparing many of the leading points of doctrine, we are reminded of "a distinction without a difference." If Spiritualism robs God of his personality, making him "a rarified gas," "a positive principle," orthodoxy also allows him neither "body, parts, nor passions," claiming that as a spirit he must "pervade all space," having "his centre everywhere, and circumference nowhere." If Spiritualism makes Christ "a mere man," "no more the Son of God than you are"; so does orthodoxy make the following protests: "I know not any scripture, fairly interpreted, that states the divine nature of our Lord to be begotten of God, or to be the Son of God."—Clarke on Heb. 1: 8. "As man, he bore its curse on the tree and endured its penalty."—Manual of Atonement, p. 25. "It was meet that the Mediator should be man."—Buck's Theological Dictionary, Art. Mediator.

Do Spiritualists teach that "there is no such thing as death"? so do the orthodox boldly protest, in the face of a thousand Bible statements to the contrary, that man is immortal, he cannot die. Do the Spiritualists deny that the "same Jesus" will ever come again, but look for another—the Coming Man—a "development of this age of progress"? Orthodoxy encourages this denial by converting his personal coming into a spiritual one, and his glorious kingdom into a world's conversion. Do Spiritualists reject the doctrine that all men are finally to appear before God in judgment? orthodoxy has made the view seem very improbable, by putting God everywhere in general, and nowhere in particular; and very needless, too, by judging all as soon as they die. Do Spiritualists deny the resurrection? so do many of the orthodox; and the rest may as well do so as to say that they are coming back for a body, which was always a clog and a prison to them while they had it. Do Spiritualists deny all future punishment, admitting only different spheres for different characters? orthodoxy may as well do so as to make the punishment consist in mere horror of conscience,—a view which they have lately adopted instead of eternal torture by fire.

And, finally, if Spiritualists oppose the Bible as confused and contradictory in its statements and teachings, I must allow, though with feelings of sadness, that there is a seeming justice in the charge, in view of the habitual twists and turns which orthodoxy must and does give it, in order to sustain such traditions as I have here called attention to in their doctrines. It thus appears, as shown by this comparison of their views, that there is a close resemblance between the more important points in the two systems of orthodoxy and Spiritualism. And hence, if Spiritualism is destined to become a counterfeit for Christ's coming and kingdom, when it shall organize its elements, and assume all power, its current acceptance with the masses will be due very much to the support which it receives from its resemblance to orthodoxy.

It is due, however, that we allow to the credit of orthodoxy that, while Spiritualists do not pretend to draw their doctrines from the Bible, and avow themselves its enemies, the orthodox suppose, with more or less sincere conviction, that their doctrines are supported by the Bible, and they really wish to be known as its friends. We will not question their friendliness to the Bible in fact, though we wish it were more ardent, thorough and practical, in measure and character. But we must believe them mistaken in reference to the support of the Bible on many of their points of doctrine, and especially the points just compared with the Spiritualist views.

How far this mistake is due to mere ignorance of what the Bible says on such subjects, and how far to an unwillingness to receive what it says, rather than popular opinion, we will not attempt to decide; but certain it is, that while they love the Bible, and love to believe their doctrines on all points supported by it, yet they love their doctrines better than their Bible. And since they seem so determined to cling to the errors, and attribute them to the Bible, though so encouraging to Spiritualism, God intends to separate the two, requiring them to decide which one they will have. So he offers them their orthodox views, somewhat modified and popularized in Spiritualism, on the one hand; and the Bible, with its truths, promises, and reproaches, in opposition to Spiritualism, on the other.

Though the issue thus presented is a just one, and orthodoxy cannot complain of it, yet they seem so much more ardent in their attachment to the world and their own ways, that I cannot help thinking they would choose to follow them with the mass in popularity, rather than have the Bible and its promises with the few in reproach. I am the more inclined to think so, from the fact that they are no more in harmony with the Bible in their daily lives than they are in their doctrines. In their dress they consult a worldly taste, and follow the freaks of fashion; in their dealings they follow a worldly policy, claiming that it is their privilege to make a good trade when they can. In raising money for the cause of God, it is all out of fashion with them to give directly of their substance; but, as if the end sanctified the means, they resort to a church spree, where by admission fees, games of chance, and various other petty tricks of speculation, they attempt to provide a suitable offering for the Almighty. Such actions in orthodoxy, though very common, are in direct opposition to the Bible. And when they see how little countenance the Bible gives to most of their doctrine and practice, the most of them will abandon the Bible for a more congenial philosophy in Spiritualism.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, one of the greatest men that America ever produced, gave the secret of success as follows: "Men give me some credit for genius. All the genius I have lies just in this: When I have a subject in hand I study it profoundly. Day and night it is before me. I explore it in all its bearings. My mind becomes pervaded with it. Then the effort which I make, the people are pleased to call the fruit of genius. It is the fruit of labor and thought."

HOW SHALL WE KNOW?

E. E. BROWNE.

BRO. GRANT:—The apostle says—"He that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us; hereby know we the spirit of truth and the spirit of error." It is good to warn our brethren and sisters to be careful not to embrace error; but we should with the warning make an expose of the error, or errors, of which the adversary would strive to ensnare us and lead us to embrace. The warning is of little use unless the errors are pointed out; and we should be careful and know that what we condemned as error was not truth. When I first heard of the doctrine of the state of the dead, as is now advocated by us as a people, I believed it was a snare of the enemy spread for unwary feet; and for five years I warned my brothers and sisters not to embrace it, and was condemning others for embracing the same; not knowing of the "voices of the prophets" and of the "apostles" of our Lord; neither did I examine the Scriptures to see if "these things were so," nor listen to others who would explain the Scriptures in that light.

A good brother in the Crisis says—"Some of the errors are very dangerous. They are adapted in such a way to our infirmities and weaknesses, that unless we are kept by the power of God we are sure to fall into the snare." But he does not tell what those errors are, "so adapted to our infirmities." We may have even now embraced what he believes to be error, and after all prove to be truth. How shall we know? Paul says—"Prove all things." How? By hearing the words of the prophets and of the apostles of our Lord. "He that knoweth God heareth us," says John. The brother's admonition, "Keep close to Jesus," is good. Yes, we must "abide in him." His words must abide in us. He gave his apostles the words of his Father. He says—"For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them." The word of God must decide what is truth; and we should be careful not to censure others for embracing what we believe is error, unless we can prove it to be so by the word of God. It is our duty to "search the Scriptures," and the Holy Spirit will lead us into all truth. And this is the anointing of which John speaks, 1 John 2: 27—"But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you; and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and no lie." This also is the promise of Jesus to his disciples, John 16: 13—"Howbeit, when he the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth, . . . and he will show you things to come."

Hence we see the necessity of knowing what is truth, so that we may not condemn it as error through ignorance. Therefore we should be careful as Paul says—"not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God"; exercising that charity which suffereth long and is kind; is not easily provoked; and when reproof is needed, or rebuke administered, may it be done with "long-suffering," in the spirit of meekness, and by the word of God.

AS IT WAS, IS; AND WILL BE.

A. N. & M. A. SEYMOUR.

Some thirty years ago, while connected with the Free-will Baptist church and ministry, our minds became most thoroughly aroused to the study of the Bible, especially the prophetical part of it; and although our early instruction, impressions and prejudices rose mountain high, and seemed to utterly forbid any progress towards the reception of what we discovered covered up by the traditions of men; yet after battling for months, and we may add years, for the victory over these almost insurmountable obstacles, we succeeded in rending the cloud of mist and darkness of generations past, and emerged into open day, where God's inspired luminaries were shining most resplendently and gloriously. When we exhumed ourselves from this pit, and achieved such a victory over heathen mythology, the spell was broken that had all our lifetime held us so fast. So overjoyed were we to find ourselves enjoying the freedom of thought, freedom of speech and inquiry, we firmly resolved never to make a retrograde movement; and bidding our broken fetters a long farewell, we have been for over a quarter of a century searching for the original foundation, original boundaries, original church, original faith, original practice, hope, joy, and rejoicing; and thank God, we have been paid a thousand times over for our earnest labor and toil.

Our new position, new relation, new surroundings and prospects, have given us such unbounded satisfaction and good cheer, that, with an indomitable energy for years gone by, we have been publishing to the best of our ability to all around our settled convictions of truth and duty; and while thus bearing the "cross of Christ," telling the church and world that Jesus is coming, sectarian baits have been thrown out before us on every hand, but we have refused the hook every time. We enjoy our freedom, as did Paul, thank God; and we do not purpose to allow any human scheme to contract our liberties or energies. God's word is the latitude and longitude of our faith and practice. Within its limits we purpose to steadfastly abide, irrespective of all isms, creeds, and names. Because of our unswerving determinations to stand only on the original gospel grounds, always giving inspired testimony the precedence, we have subjected ourselves to the loss of some professed friends, which has been more or less trying to our naturally sympathizing hearts; yet we can consent to such loss more easily than we can consent to knowingly deviate from the pathway prescribed by the hand that holds us in life, and has proffered us the endless joys of the world to come. Since the glorious light of God's word penetrated our dark minds, and renovated our understanding, and set things in order generally, we have been charged with fault-finding. To this charge we confess judgment, for we do find fault with many, and with many things, with whom and which we come in contact; but we find ourselves not alone in this work. Jesus found fault with many, and with many things, when doing his Father's will. He corrected man's judgment, faith, and practice, and sought to establish them in the truth, and also in righteousness. A wide field opens before us here, and much might be said; but a word to the wise is sufficient.

Paul, in giving his solemn charge to Timothy, imposes upon him the responsibility of preaching the "word," and to "be instant in season, and out of season"; to "reprove, rebuke, with all long-suffering and doctrine." Another extensive field is opened, but we do not purpose to survey it; but it is sufficient for us to say that we find it morally impossible for us to discharge our duties to the church and world, without "finding fault"; although we find many things to commend, yet we do find many things to "reprove and rebuke," and some "sharply, that they may be sound in the faith." We do find fault with the faith and practice of Catholicism, Protestantism, sectarianism, Spiritualism, secret societies, immortal-soulism, the last of which is the soul and centre of all false faith, hope, and practice; and whoever undertakes to "reprove, rebuke" and correct the above combined system of things, will find that "Jordan is a hard road to travel," and will need very much of the wisdom of God, the patience of Jesus, the energy and perseverance of Paul, and the meekness of Moses; and, in addition to this, there must be constant vigilance, watchfulness, and devotion in prayer. Yet notwithstanding all the difficulties, dangers, trials, toils and conflicts that throng the way; and notwithstanding all the perils by sea, land, and among false brethren; we purpose, by the help of God, as in times past, so in the future, to "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints," remaining always "steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord"; adding to the plan of redemption or taking from it nothing that will in any way distract the "body of Christ," cause alienation of feeling, or hinder the salvation of unregenerate men. Those who do, must bear the dangerous responsibility.

We warn all such of their danger, and earnestly entreat them to desist from pursuing such a hazardous course. Paul's charge to the elders, found in Acts 20: 25–32, should often be consulted by every lover of truth and righteousness, and heir of salvation; and this should be compared with Rom. 16: 17, 18. This counsel, if heeded, will save the church of Christ from the snares and tare-bundles of these perilous last days.

Yes, all. O offering mean and poor!—
The labor of these hands, this brain;
I have no more.

Oh, take me, Lord,
Unworthy though I be;
Far more than a king's ransom
Thou hast paid for me.

OUR EXTREMITY GOD'S OPPORTUNITY.

F. SCHELLINGER.

A pious person in Liverpool, whose business was either that of a joiner or mason, was attending to his calling, when he suddenly fell from a high building, and was taken up for dead, though it turned out that the vital spark was not yet extinct. He was carried to his dwelling, where he received medical attendance; and by the use of means, and God's blessing, he gradually recovered. But as he had suffered severely by the fall, it was a considerable time before he could do anything towards supporting his numerous family, who all depended upon his exertions. The little stock of money he had previously saved out of his earnings was at last exhausted, and they had nothing in the house to supply the hungry cravings of the children.

The distressed mother went up stairs one morning to her husband, who was yet unable to rise from his bed, and with tears in her eyes said she knew not what to do, as the children were crying for hunger and she had nothing to give them. The pious husband was overpowered with the address of his partner, and the cries of his children; and turning his face to the wall sent an earnest ejaculation to the Lord for assistance, when it immediately recurred to his mind with considerable force—"Thy bread shall be given thee, and thy water shall be sure." He immediately turned to his weeping partner, and addressed her with those striking words.

While he was yet speaking, there was a knocking at the door, which was from a servant of a pious lady in the neighborhood, who, hearing of the situation of the family, had sent a considerably supply of necessaries for their use, which arrived at so seasonable a time. With gratitude to the Giver of every good and perfect gift they partook of the blessings of providence, and soon after the husband was restored, and the sun of prosperity visited their dwelling.

The above anecdote I heard related by the Rev. Robert Newton, Wesleyan minister, in a most excellent discourse on Heb. 4: 16—"Let us, therefore, come boldly to the throne of grace"—who was personally acquainted with the family, as well as the benevolent lady who had so kindly and seasonably assisted them.

A GOOD APPLICATION.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Several years ago, an Elder, who had embraced the truth on the nature of man in death, and kindred topics, went to the funeral of a lady who had been advertised as dead and to be buried that afternoon. The funeral was to be attended by a minister of one of the denominations, and so the Elder went to hear. He had not been there long, however, as the services had not commenced, when the conductor of the funeral came to him and requested him to act as a bearer. He consented, and took his place with those who were to act in that capacity with him. The minister commenced the services by reading selections of Scripture, then he closed the book and first of all other things said, "Our friend is not dead." The Elder at once turned to the man by his side and whispered, "I am going home." Surprised, the man asked, "Why?" "Oh," said the Elder, ready to make a practical application of the matter, "I came to this funeral to see this woman buried. It has been given out that she was dead, and we supposed she was, but this minister says she is not; and certainly if she is not we do not wish to bury her, and under such circumstances I am going home." It was finally concluded, however, that the woman was really dead, and she was buried.

A few days after the Elder and his friend met. "Elder," said he, "you set me thinking on a new track the other day. I have often heard remarks like that made that day from ministers at funerals, but thought nothing of it; now I see. You have set me thinking as I never thought before. They parted, the man to keep up his thinking, we trust, until he settles down solidly into the truth; and the Elder to meditate about the difference between truth and error.

PROF. F. D. MAURICE.

BRO. GRANT:—I condense, from the letter of a London correspondent of the Christian Union, the following sketch of the late Prof. Frederick D. Maurice, which I think will interest your readers. H. H. TILLEY.

"Perhaps no man has lived among us, J. H. Newman excepted, who has so powerfully influenced the theological thought of this generation as Prof. Maurice. When a great conversion, theological or ecclesiastical, does not make a fanatic of a man—as it sometimes does with weaker minds—it gives him the great vantage-ground of two experiences, and the precious qualification of diverse forms of belief. Mr. Maurice was great enough to be open to new convictions. He was too great to permit him to drive them into the opposite extreme. The son of a Unitarian minister, he embraced a Trinitarian theology; but he did not become either a High Anglican or a Low Evangelical. Educated at Cambridge as a dissenter, he yet fell so far short of the creed of the thirty-nine articles that he was unable to make the subscription thereto, necessary for a degree, and left Cambridge without one. Some years afterward he overcame his difficulties, although subscription was more or less of a burden to him throughout his life, and took orders in the church of England. A few years ago (in 1866) Cambridge appointed him Prof. of Moral Philosophy, and conferred upon him an honorary M. A. degree. He became, successively, Professor of Divinity at King's College, London, Chaplain at Lincoln's Inn, in the chapel of which, to his audience of lawyers, many of his most striking sermons were preached, and were afterward published in volumes, which appeared in rapid succession. He was appointed to the incumbrancy of St. Peter's, Vere street, and resigned his chaplaincy. He left Vere street to accept the Cambridge chair of Moral Philosophy, and died the occupant of it on Easter Monday, at the age of sixty-eight. While Professor of Divinity at King's College, he published an elaborate refutation of the doctrine of eternal punishment, which led to a fierce controversy, that excited much attention and ended in his deposition.

The secret of Mr. Maurice's remarkable influence was the combination in him of great intellectual power and activity—the activity even more remarkable than the power—with the very noblest moral qualities, an intense spiritual life, deep and religious love of truth, uncompromising fidelity, and a fearless witness to it, together with singular purity and loveableness. Except, again, J. H. Newman, no living man has inspired so deep a reverence and so tender and passionate a love. He was a very learned man, in the best sense of that term—that is, he had a wide and profound knowledge of the things of human life, and the ideas of human thought; but his great charm was a Christ-like symplicity and meekness, which suffused every teaching and movement of his life with an indescribable beauty. The power of his teaching was not so much his ideas as his inspiration. He can hardly be called the founder of a school, or even the apostle of one; for what was distinctive in him was negative rather than positive. His positive thoughts were the common property of theologians; his negations were of errors and limitations into which some fall; he inspired a rare enthusiasm, and produced a reverent earnestness, which, however it might affect theological dogma, purified and elevated, and gave a deep religiousness to the life of theological thinkers; and, after all, it is more to work through honesty and religiousness in the hearts of inquirers, than to put before them true ideas. . . .

The combination in him of deep, submissive religiousness with the freest and boldest intellectual inquiry, was very remarkable. His great solicitude was the religiousness of all dealings with truth. He attached the supremest importance to the moral attitude and feeling of the inquirer. Perhaps in no other church but the Established Church could he have held his place. Even in the Church of England his position was a very incongruous one. He studiously avoided dogma; there always seemed to him to be so much more to be known than words could express or thoughts could shape. . . . But in every thing and above every thing he was honest and fearless. Whatever truth appeared to him to be, that he described it, careless about either its congruity with past thinkings, or its harmony with present ones. The man who, in this way, is always true to truth, is never very discrepant with himself. Mr. Maurice did not care much whether he was or not; but he always propounded his views with a singular admixture of strength and modesty. He never contended for them as absolute truths—always as truths so presenting themselves to him. They were his convictions, his experiences; they appeared to him to be part of the moral harmony of things; and, as such, he commended them to the moral candor and conscious spiritual life of men. . . .

His was a grand simplicity and directness of aim and process. He spoke simply and strongly to the heart of a matter, and revealed in his speech not his thought only, but his soul as well. He was a great controversialist; "a man of war from his youth up." He has published upwards of fifty volumes, nearly all of which are, in some form or other, contentious for the faith; and he never minces his words. He is a hard, fearless hitter; he loves truth more than Plato, and he fights for it earnestly, with both hands; but yet, the manifest honesty, meekness, and lovingness of the man hindered personal resentments. . . .

It is difficult to tell how much of the change that has passed upon theological opinion in England, and the tolerance that is now felt for differences of opinion, is owing to Maurice. It is safe to say that no one has contributed to them so much as he, whether it be for good or for evil. Mr. Maurice lived to see the doctrine of eternal punishment, for the denial of which he was expelled his fellowship, renounced by hundreds of the clergy, and subscription so far relaxed in terms that it might be made to square with an uneasy conscience. . . . He had a wonderful fount of thankfulness in him. He was so much of an optimist that he saw good in everything, and was grateful for every school of thought that differed from his own, for every antagonist that assailed him. . . .

But while Mr. Maurice will long continue to influence theological thought, it will be in a spiritual rather than in a dogmatic way. He will found no school, nor be distinctively known after this generation has passed away; but he has been a great spiritual power in it, and he has influenced beneficially and mightily thousands who do not adopt his theories. Like Carlyle in general literature, there are very few of the present generation of ministers and theologians whose life and thought he has not powerfully penetrated and stimulated, as well as attempered. His greatest service to theology generally is in calling attention to the moral and human aspect of the atonement, which has been too much lost in the forensic and divine aspect of it. Thirty years ago, every sermon upon the atonement dwelt almost exclusively upon its justifying virtue. Now, every sermon dwells with perhaps a perilous tendency to the opposite extreme, upon its sanctifying power. Human thought moves pendulum-wise; one extreme generates another; but the truth to which Maurice has recalled us is a very precious one."

"HE HATH DONE ALL THINGS WELL."

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

It seems that some people murmur at the dealings of God. Why is this? In many cases it is simply because of short-sightedness. The complainer does not see the end—the happy result of these dealings; if he did he would cease complaining, and begin to praise the Lord. Afflictions, bereavements, trials, crosses, burdens,—all, all shall "work together" for your good, if you love God. "For whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth; and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." While we cannot see just how all these unpleasant things can have such a good result, we need to believe what is written, and have faith and patience, that we may reap "bountifully" in the harvest day. There is great danger of losing, not only present joy, but all the glorious things prepared for the saints in their final home, by murmuring. Far be it from me to judge harshly, or "before the time," or even to judge at all in the sense in which judgment is forbidden; but it is very plainly stated in Scripture that murmuring is displeasing to God. See 1 Cor. 10: 10. Let us remember that he doeth all things well. Many of these trials would be greatly lessened an lightened by submission. It must be indeed a rare case for a man to be so far gone that there is no hope, no room or chance for repentance and reformation. I trust there is yet mercy in store for you, if you will seek it now. Acknowledge that all the ways of God are right, and that you have (in every case of disagreement between you and him) been in the wrong. Submit to his will in all things, and thus take his yoke upon you, and learn of him. Begin now, at this "eleventh hour," to live and act in harmony with God, and with his people.

GOOD AND BAD APPLES.

One day Robert's father saw him playing with some boys who were rude and boisterous. He had observed for some time a change for the worse in his son, and now he knew the cause. He was very sorry, but he said nothing to Robert at the time. In the evening he brought from the garden six beautiful, rosy-cheeked apples, put them on a plate, and presented them to Robert, who was much pleased at his father's kindness and thanked him. "You must lay them aside a few days, that they may become mellow," said the father. And Robert cheerfully placed the plate with the apples in his mother's store-room.

Just as he was putting them aside, his father laid on the plate a seventh apple, which was quite decayed, and desired him to allow it to remain there.

"But, father," said Robert, "the decayed apple will spoil all the others."

"Do you think so? Why should not the fresh apples rather make the bad ones fresh?" And with these words he shut the door of the room.

Eight days afterward he asked his son to open the door of the room, and take out the apples. But what a sight presented itself! The six apples which had been so sound and good spread a bad smell through the room.

"O, papa!" cried he, "did I not tell you that the decayed apple would spoil the good ones?"

"My boy," said his father, "have I not told you often that the company of bad children will make you bad? yet you do not listen to me. I want you to learn a lesson from these apples. If you keep company with wicked boys, you will soon be like them."

Robert did not forget the lesson. When any of his former playfellows asked him to join in their sports, he thought of the decayed apples, and prayed to be kept from evil.

PRIDE IN DRESS.

How proud we are! how fond to show
Our clothes, and call them rich and new,
When the poor sheep and silk-worm wore
That very clothing long before.

The tulip and the butterfly
Appear in gayer coats than I;
Let me be dressed fine as I will,
Insects and flowers exceed me still.

Then will I set my heart to find
Inward adornings of the mind;
Knowledge and virtue, truth and grace,
These are the robes of richest dress.

NEVER SATISFIED.

Johnny, come here," said Dr. Fry to his little boy, who was playing on the carpet in the dining-room; here is an apple for you."

It was so large that he could hardly grasp it. Dr. Fry then gave him another apple which filled the other hand.

"Here is another," said he, giving the child a third.

Little Johnny tried hard to hold it between the other two, but could not succeed; it rolled away across the floor. On seeing this, he burst into tears.

"See," said Dr. Fry to a lady who was present, "here is a child with more than he can enjoy, and yet not satisfied. My child is just like us all. We are ever seeking to possess more and more of the world's treasures, and yet we are never satisfied. Oh! that we were equally in earnest in 'grasping' the promise of the gospel."

READ AND PONDER.—A muddy stream, flowing into one clear and sparkling, for a time rolls along by itself. A little further down they unite and the whole is impure. So youth, untouched by sin, may for a time keep its purity in foul company, but a little later and they mingle.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

SLEEP, though reckoned involuntary, like many other involuntary things, can, to a certain extent, be brought under the dominion of habit and the will. There is no doubt but that the human will is the strongest power in this world, next to death. A man who says, "By the grace of God I will," and who feels it in his bones, in his muscles, and his whole being, can do almost anything. Now it may seem a little singular, but it is true that if you are possessed of a nervous organization, you will need less sleep than if you are of a phlegmatic temperament. If a man is dull, lethargic and slow, eight or nine hours of sleep is necessary for him. But if he is nervous, lithe, thin, quick, vividly sensitive, so that he is all the time letting out sparks somewhere from him, he will require but from five to seven hours' sleep. That seems very strange, but it is just as simple as anything can be.

Sleep is an active operation, during which the process of assimilation goes on. Now, the nervous man eats quickly, works quickly, and sleeps quickly. He does just as much work while he is sleeping six hours as the lethargic man does in seven or eight. A man who is slow and plethoric, who takes a breath before every word, and who never has a quick motion, can never sleep quickly. He will be an hour in doing up as much work in his sleep as another man will do in twenty minutes. The temperament acts throughout. Never gauge the duration of your sleep by the time any one else sleeps. Some men will tell you that John Wesley had only so much sleep; Hunter, the great physiologist, so much, and Napoleon so much sleep. When the Lord made you (as a general thing) he did not make Napoleons. Every man carries within himself a Mount Sinai, a revealed law, written for himself separately. You must administer sleep to yourselves, according to your temperament, your constitution and your wants. Something you may know presumptively, but, principally, you must learn by experience.—H. W. Beecher.

SUNSHINE IN DWELLINGS.—The time very likely will come when sunshine or sunlight will be so utilized as to be the entire remedy used for very many diseases. That it is a wonderful vitalizer none can doubt who know anything about it. But how many houses are constructed with a view to getting all the sunshine possible, especially when so much is needed as in winter and spring? The living or sitting room, at these seasons of the year at least, should have a full southern exposure, with large windows to let in the sunshine. Sleeping rooms, wardrobes, closets, passageways should receive the cleansing, vivifying influence of the sun. Sickly persons should court the sunshine as much as possible—sit in it, lie in it, luxuriate in it. It doesn't cost anything, only appreciation. A room warmed neither by sun nor fire is unhealthy and not fit for human habitation. It is a poor theory that sends men, women or children off into a cold room to sleep, on health principles, when warmth has been excluded for a day or a week, or perhaps months. The change in the temperature of a room, having both fire and sunshine, after the sun goes down, is exceedingly marked. A perceptible chill is felt.

AIR AND EXERCISE.—That we Americans do not take air and exercise enough is an admitted fact, and it stares us in the face in the shape of pale, debilitated men of forty, and sallow, hollow-cheeked women of thirty. There is a lack of muscle in the men and of bloom in the women. The climate is a trying one, to be sure, but that very fact should only stimulate us to fight with and overcome, not to fly from it, and seek refuge from it in interior atmospheres, fifty times more fatal. Have we reason to fear consumption, that great insidious foe of New England—straightway we house ourselves, muffle ourselves, heat ourselves, and deny the simplest breath of air access to our lungs. We drug our bodies with costly artificial tonics, but we neglect those tonics which nature has provided so bountifully and without cost. One-half of us are faded hot-house flowers; the rest a race of unfortunate overworked bipeds. Out of door exercise is a grand essential to health.

THE BATH IN SMALL-POX.—Dr. Stokes, Regius Professor, of Dublin, says, "We cannot doubt that the mortality in small-pox hospitals would be greatly diminished by the use of the bath." After describing a very severe case of confluent small-pox in which the patient was kept alive only by stimulants, he says the trial of the warm bath was suggested to him by Mr. Smyly. "The effect was instantantaneous and marvellous. The delirium ceased as if by magic. It was the delirium of pain; and the patient exclaimed, 'Thank God! thank God! I am in heaven! I am in heaven! Why didn't you do this before? The fetor immediately and completely disappeared, so that, on entering the ward, no one could suppose that there was a case of small-pox in it. He was kept at least seven hours in the bath." This case, and its singular result, in addition to the experience of Hebra, justify the recommendation of the use of the bath.—Good Health.

MEALS AND HEALTH.—Take them at regular hours; breakfast should be enjoyed soon after rising, and before any laborious exercise. Eat no late suppers. Severe physical or mental labor during the last hour, either before or after meals, should be avoided when possible.

HOT and very cold drinks should be avoided, as either will injure the stomach. Moderately cold water is not unhealthy, and to many is more grateful than warm drinks, but in promoting digestion warm drinks are more serviceable.

PERSONS afflicted with eruptive diseases should not use salt fish.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

HOW LONG?

As a lone watcher by the couch of anguish
Longs for the dawning of another day,
Hoping its light will show that the dear sufferer
Has passed the crisis and may live to pray:

So does the sad heart long for thine appearing,
O Christ, and moans with an unceasing moan;
Thy children moan, and earth's deep lamentation
Is echoed by the cry around thy throne.

"How long, O Lord?" and it is still the cry
Of thy redeemed through all the lingering night,
O that to-morrow's dawn may bring the day
When thou supreme shalt reign by thine own might.

CHRISTENDOM LEAVENED.

O. R. FASSETT.

In a previous article, I gave my interpretation of "the woman and the leaven." Matt. 13: 44. I therein remarked that I would show what "the leaven" was with which she has leavened Christendom. Error in doctrine leads to error in practice. Error is a deadly fruit; it corrupts and kills. Truth is a tree of life; its fruit is healing and sanctifying. I regard "the leaven" corrupt doctrine; and the doctrine is that of which Jesus has warned his church. "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." Here he refers to the doctrine of these sects—"Then understood they how that he bade them beware of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." Matt. 16: 6, 12. These religious sects in the days of Christ and the apostles held diametrically opposite doctrines respecting the future life, neither of which were found in the Scriptures committed to their trust; and by their traditions they made void the word of God, nullifying the gospel of God to the world.

The doctrine of which sect did this "woman" or apostate church adopt and teach? that of the Pharisees, or of the Sadducees? A reference to their sectarian doctrine will readily answer these questions.

THE LEAVEN OR DOCTRINE OF THE SADDUCEES. 1. They believed in no resurrection of the dead. They encountered Christ on a certain occasion, citing Moses' law as against the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, which Jesus taught. Matt. 22: 23–32. Jesus rebuked them with the declaration, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God"; then affirms that Moses did teach the doctrine when he wrote concerning the burning bush, and the words of God issuing from its unconsumed midst—"I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." Strange as it may appear, this is quoted as proof of "the immortality of the soul," instead of the doctrine that these patriarchs "shall rise from the dead" (Mark 12: 24–25), by the evangelical teachers of the day. As though it read, "As touching the immortality of the soul, have ye not read," etc. As says Rev. Wm. McDonald: "Logically, the argument would stand thus—He is not the God of the dead, but of the living. He is the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob; therefore Abraham, Isaac and Jacob must be living."—Annihilation, p. 36. No, sir. "Logically, the argument would stand thus: He is not the God of the dead, but of the living; therefore Abraham, Isaac and Jacob (whom these Sadducees regarded as dead, and never would live again, or have a resurrection) must rise again." Inasmuch as God is not the God of dead men, they must live again. And this silenced them. It was an argument they could not meet. Matt. 22: 34.

Says Mr. McDonald again: "To prove that the soul existed after death was to silence their objections to the resurrection of the dead. It was necessary to prove the separate existence of spirits, in order to prove the resurrection of the dead."—p. 37. Strange, inconsiderate assertion this, in the face of glaring facts to the contrary! Does not the whole heathen world believe in "the separate existence of spirits"? and do they not discard the resurrection of the body? Did not Paul preach to the Athenians the resurrection of the dead? and did not these Platonists "mock" him? Acts 17. Are not all Spiritualists, the world over, believers in "the soul's existence after death"? and have they no "objections to the resurrection of the dead"? Had Christ proved to these Sadducees "the immortality of the soul," he would have had then a more difficult task to prove to them that there would be a resurrection of the dead; for they would then have regarded the resurrection of the body as non-essential, and in fact a hindrance to spiritistic existence. Josephus, and the Hellenistic Jews, endeavored to preach to the Greeks the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, while they themselves had adopted the doctrine of Plato; but how much progress did they make? None at all.

2. The Sadducees believed in no future existence. "The Sadducees say there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit." Acts 23: 8. "The Sadducees did not believe in any future state, nor in any spiritual existence independent of the body."—The Life, Times, and Travels of St. Paul, by Conybeare and Hawson. Introduction by Bishop Simpson. "The Sadducees arose about two hundred years before Christ. . . There will be no resurrection of the dead, nor any rewards and punishments after this life. . . They denied the resurrection of the dead, yea, all future existence."—Enfield, p. 170. "The Anti-Eudoemonism of the Sadducees: Man must do good for its own sake, without the hope of future recompense."—Neander's Life of Christ, p. 36, 37.

Thus we have the doctrine of the Sadducees in the times of Christ and the apostles, of which Jesus warned the church: "Beware of the leaven of the Sadducees"; "no resurrection of the dead"; "no future existence"; "no hope of future recompense." Adventists are called "modern Sadducees." This betrays on the part of those charging us with so being either ignorance, or maliciousness,—ignorance of both Scripture and history, and of Adventists' views; or malice with intent to misrepresent us. We will charitably believe the former. But do not those ministers and writers who are constantly holding us up to ridicule, as "advocating the old Sadducean error," know that we believe in "Jesus as the Resurrection and the Life"; in "the resurrection of the dead," and that there is hope of future recompense? We protest against this gross misrepresentation by our brethren in Christ. There can nothing be gained in this discussion concerning the future life by such misrepresentation, through either ignorance or malice. Brethren, cease this wicked perversion of our views; in the name of our coming Lord, we beseech you.

(To be concluded.)

CLOTHED OR UNCLOTHED.

Clothed or unclothed? Whether of these two conditions, christian reader, is the object of thy desire? We know how the apostle Paul shrank from the notion of a naked defenceless state of being; but how readest thou? We know, on the other hand, how differently the subject has been handled by some of Paul's successors in the chair of divinity; but does not this very fact make a sharp appeal to our individual responsibility? does it not remind us that the psychology of Revelation is a science as immutable as the stars, and that it is at our peril if we misrepresent it or indolently neglect its study? Fancy and imagination are priceless gifts, but they must not be let loose to wanton on enchanted ground or to decorate a phantasma of our own devising, at least on matters of this kind. If we will be sentimental, let us first of all be truthful; let us be quite sure that we are not laying our foundation in cloud-land; and let us exercise sufficient common-sense to believe that the promises of God in our behalf, could we but once ascertain them, would tinge our aspirations with a sublimer poetry than can the wildest conjectures of fallen humanity.

To some minds the unclothed state appears to present considerable attraction; but then it is a condition which their pictorial treatment has contrived to array in all the attributes of resurrection-glory. For example,—are we to accept the following climax of a rhapsody occurring in Dr. Watts's Lyrics as a correct paraphrase of inspired declarations on this head? Is it Pauline or Dantesque?—Biblical or Romanist?

"Here I put off the chains of death
My soul too long hath worn.
Friends, I forbid one groaning breath,
Or tear to wet my urn.
Raphael, behold me all undrest;
Here gently lay this flesh to rest;
Then mount and lead the path unknown;
Swift I pursue thee, flaming guide, on pinions of my own."

That profane writers, so called, should have suffered poetic license to lead them over treacherous ground where Dr. Watts would never have ventured, is what we might naturally expect. Having at their command, by permission of mother-church, the same field of vision, they have not failed to people it with every conceivable chimera. And yet Protestants profess to wonder "where the fancy was bred." All hail the onward march of science which shall hunt theologians, fairy-tale writers, Spiritualists, and mass-mongers, out of the thickets of metaphor, and compel men to the use of words to which they attach some definite meaning.

It is not many weeks since a long forgotten fiction [the work of Leigh Hunt?] was revived in one or more of our literary miscellanies,—a sort of colloquy between Prince Leopold and his deceased consort the late Princess Charlotte. The copy being mislaid, memory can only recall the fact that it contained a species of song in which the survivor was invited to imagine his bridal bed as re-constructed in some pacific locality after Tom Moore's pattern. It would be ridiculous to test the propriety of such a picture by reference to any biblical standard; but even on the common ground of nature it is dishonest. It assumes, which is not true, that the union is indissoluble by death; and it looks with an air of complacency in the direction of those who, from Tertullian downwards, have been wise above what is written and purer than their divine lawgiver, in condemning second marriages.

With far different feelings from those engendered by the above conceit in the quasi-Mohammedan style, let us turn to a performance of more serious character, namely, a funeral oration delivered a few years ago by a man of earnest piety over the body of his friend. The deceased was well worthy of the eulogy expressed; this may readily be accepted. As for the speaker, he has long held and still holds so honorable and effective a position as the advocate of revealed truth among a thoughtful manufacturing population, that any attempt to disturb that influence by the following remarks, is the remotest possible from the writer's intention. It is only necessary further to state that the notes were taken by an unpractised reporter, and consequently fail to do justice to the original speaker; who however has acknowledged their general correctness, and is perfectly well aware of the purpose for which such acknowledgment was sought.

Substance of an address delivered by the Rev. William Barnes of Trowbridge, at the interment of Joseph Grace Smith, Esq., County Court Judge, Bristol district. 1859.

"We are here to lay in its last lowly bed the mortal part of one who was greatly esteemed and loved. In the sundering of the various social relationships which he so honorably sustained, there cannot but be anguish. In his removal from the important sphere in which he moved, there cannot but be a deep sense of loss. Yet there are no slight alleviations. Our dear friend had lived the allotted term of human life, and lived it well. He was spared what seemed to me the most humiliating of all our liabilities, a protracted passage to the grave by a slow process of physical and mental decay. Memory's last image of him is pleasant. The good soldier fell in armor. Besides which, and above all other alleviations, he lived and died in Christ. We have no reserved dread at this burial. The words of hope and assurance come from our inmost hearts. He sleeps in Jesus. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. In this case, what has death done? what victory hath he gained? where are the trophies he hath won? Oh death, thou holdest nothing of our friend but his body, his outward form. Himself thou hast not. He hath eluded thy grasp. In spite of thee, he hath sprung to a diviner life. The soul, the mind, the man, is not with thee; but from heaven he smiles upon the well-worn vestment which thou hast clutched. Not only so; but the life which has been lived survives. That is not extinct with the removal of the bodily presence. It rather, amid the shadows of death, comes out with clearer relief. The king of terrors calls for silence, but that life lifts up its voice notwithstanding; being dead, our friend speaks. That long series of wise and righteous deeds, those years of healthful and stimulating discourse, that graceful public and domestic deportment, death hath not struck dumb. What hast thou then, O death! except the discarded mantle of the christian hero? Nothing else; nothing but the cloak in which he was enwrapped. And even this thou canst not appropriate or destroy. It is held by thee only in pledge, until the time of restitution. Then thou shalt give it back again, renewed, beautified, imperishable, and radiant with honor. Thy advantage then is but shadowy. The real triumph is with the dead. Sorrow not therefore ye bereaved ones, even as others who have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory."

Does it seem like an act of impiety to tarnish or mutilate the chaplet thus lovingly wreathed, or to ask how much of the imagery employed derives its sanction from Old or New Testament phraseology? Taking rank as "Epicedium," or funeral song, so much of it is true in reference to the past career of the deceased, and so ready a response must these utterances have found in the breasts of survivors, that the vision of the unseen state, if sketched according to accepted models, just flashes into the mind and is dismissed again, as furnishing a brilliant culmination but not as awakening any intelligent sympathy. The question, and it is one which the advance of modern thought renders it imperative on us all to be able to answer one way or another, is—Would or could the apostle Paul have offered such terms or consolation? Would he have sought to antedate the triumph of departed saints at the expense of that other oft-stated condition, the absolute dominion of death till the morning of the resurrection? Admitted, that the Pauline solatium is adopted at the conclusion of Mr. Barnes' address, has not this solatium been superseded by the previous declarations? for what necessity can there be for reminding survivors that their friend will rise again, if that friend has already "sprung to a diviner life?" It was all the consolation which the apostle could offer to his fellow-saints; and it was considered enough, and more than enough, in those days. Their departed friends, though dead, had not perished, for the simple reason that it was in Christ that their life was hidden. That life was in perfectly safe keeping, and would one day re-appear, each or any of them, one and all of them. Whereas much of the phraseology to which we are now habituated seems to limit the resurrection-promise only to the body. Has then the "glorious hope" which sustained the primitive confessors dropped down to this? and have we at last discovered that when Paul exulted in his Lord's ability to keep that which he had committed to him, he was contemplating only "the well-worn vestment which death was about to clutch?" Rather, is it not more in accordance with his entire frame of thought that he was calmly and consciously surrendering everything to his Lord's keeping; retaining nothing, absolutely nothing; but being well assured that the interval of time which would elapse between his departure and the hour when he should recover all, would, to his own apprehension, be less than the lightning's flash? Men, brethren, and fathers, "consider of it, take advice, and speak your minds."

What would Martin Luther, the greatest of European reformers, have said to the idea of the man being divided into two parts, one rotting in the tomb, the other gazing on the forsaken wreck and smiling from the battlements of heaven? what would William Tyndale, the greatest of England's reformers, have said of it? what would John Milton, the greatest of the next generation of reformers, have said of it? what would John Wesley have said of it? Does any one really believe that Dr. Watts has acquired new "pinions" since the hour when he abandoned all material aid? The charge of materialism, so often arrayed against the instinctive craving for accuracy of expression, may possibly attach with more correctness to those fancy-flights which, after divesting man of his identity, rebuild his frame, re-clothe him in azure, and invest him with duality; and all for what purpose? that he may thus realize the promise of life? But where is the promise to be found in the Scriptures which offers life through such medium? or indeed through any other medium than that of the perfected man, clothed upon with his house from heaven?

David declared that he would be satisfied when he should awake in his Redeemer's likeness. Mr. Barnes' friend is satisfied before the time of awakening arrives. David has not yet ascended into the heavens, but Mr. Barnes' friend has anticipated him. David says that "the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence"; that when his breath goeth forth and "he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish;" but the experience of Mr. Barnes' friend contradicts all this, for he has acquired new powers and increased susceptibilities of enjoyment. Hezekiah on recovering from his sickness, repeats these thoughts of David, and praises the Lord who had delivered his soul from the pit of corruption; Mr. Barnes' friend could never have joined in this anthem, for his soul was incapable of corruption. Job's conviction was that the dead would not awake or be raised out of their sleep till the heavens were no more; Mr. Barnes' friend must be astonished at Job's ignorance. The testimony of the writers both of the Old and of the New Testament is that death passes upon all men, for that all have sinned. Mr. Barnes' friend has eluded the grasp of death; the soul, the mind, the man, have sprung beyond his reach. Death in this remarkable modern case has "won no triumph and gained no victory." His advantage is shadowy, not actual; for the real triumph lies with him who is—alive?—no, "the real triumph is with the dead;" strange conclusion!

Parallels of this kind might be multiplied indefinitely; and Mr. Barnes' name is not introduced as though he alone were responsible for the difficulties involved in the popular creed, but simply because his oration happens to be the next at hand, and because it affords an apt illustration of the issues of that creed. The public too can better apprehend a man's views from his own mode of setting them forth, than when those views are vaguely attributed to him in a general way by a third party. Following this principle, let us see how the language of another writer sounds in reference to departed friends. It is from the synodical letter of Polycrates, Bishop of Ephesus, to Victor, Bishop of Rome, as quoted by Eusebius, Eccl. Hist. v. 24 [having reference apparently to the keeping of Easter, but this is not the inquiry we are just now pursuing].

"We then celebrate the inviolable day, neither adding to it nor taking from it. For in Asia also great elements have been laid to sleep; which will rise again on the last day of the coming of the Lord, in which he comes with glory from heaven, and shall seek out all the saints, Philip, one of the twelve apostles, who sleeps in Hierapolis, and his two daughters, virgins who have grown old. And his other daughter whose conversation was in the Holy Spirit, rests in Ephesus. Moreover also John who leaned on the breast of the Lord, who became a priest bearing the plate and martyr and teacher; he sleeps in Ephesus. Moreover Polycarp also, both bishop and martyr, in Smyrna; and Thraseas, bishop and martyr of Eumenia, who sleeps in Smyrna. Why need I speak of Sagaris bishop and martyr, who sleeps in Laodicea? Moreover also the blessed Papirius, and Melito the eunuch, whose conversation was wholly on the Holy Spirit; he lies in Sardis, waiting for the overseership from heaven, in which he shall rise from the dead. All these kept the day," etc., etc. Dr. Giles translation.

Now all this reads harmoniously with biblical language. The persons mentioned are sleeping saints, sleeping in the dust of the earth; just as it had been said of a still earlier disciple, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth." They were waiting at Ephesus (or elsewhere as the case might be) "dependent on the overseership from heaven;" and here our old friend Dr. Watts may be quoted with approval—

"God my Redeemer lives, and often from the skies Looks down and watches all my dust till he shall bid it rise."

Whatever errors some of the early churches had engrafted on christianity, they do not appear, at the date of the above fragment, belonging probably to the second century, to have turned dead saints into re-embodied ghosts, however they may have disposed of unbelievers and malefactors. In order to raise the sleeping Lazarus, our Lord repaired to the tomb of Lazarus, at Bethany; and had it been the divine behest in the following age to raise any of these others who had fallen asleep at Ephesus, the spectators would in like manner have expected the scene to take place at Ephesus.

In order to test the meaning of inspired or patristic allusions of this order, let it first of all be distinctly and irrevocably settled whether the writers are referring to the deceased man in his entirety or only to his decaying remains. The pregnant story of the raising of Lazarus, watched carefully from beginning to end, may be adopted as an experimentum crucis. Either assume, firstly, according to the popular theory, that Martha's brother, properly so called, was all the while consciously living in heaven or hades, and that she only spoke of his body as lying in the sepulchre; and see what you can make of it. Or, secondly, assume (as Milton puts it) that "man properly one and individual, not compound or separable; not, according to the popular opinion, made up and framed of two distinct and different natures as of soul and body, but that the whole man is soul, and the soul man; that is to say, a body or individual substance, animated, sensitive, and rational," and then, in this aspect, again make the attempt.

"Abraham is dead," said the Jews, "and the prophets are dead;" and our Lord who stood among them the only Immortal among mortals, well knew that the Jews spake truly. His promise to raise the saints to life in the last day is the one supreme utterance of the Bible. To this, everything points; from this, every flash of light radiates. It underlies every mystery; it dominates every obstacle. It overflooded the early believers with ecstasy, and enabled them to look with contempt upon every intervening condition. But apparently it is not enough for ourselves. Stumbling over a few verbal expressions and similes, whose difficulty lies less in their intrinsic meaning than in our stereotyped use of them, we allow them to obscure a doctrine which permeates the entire record, and have unwittingly despoiled of its beauty the apostolic challenge, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

Does this sound dogmatical? It is not meant to be so. It is rather put forth as tentative and suggestive; an appeal to earnest men to ascertain once and forever, what is, or what is not, the logic of the argument commencing at Luke 20: 27. That logic must be incisive and irresistible; and the attempt to make it prove that for which it is not set forth must be a perilous experiment.

FOLLOWING JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Follow me."—MATT. 4: 19.

This was the command Jesus gave to the fishermen of Galilee, and they immediately left all and followed him. The result of so doing we can read in their future history. They were made fishers of men. When Jesus met with these same disciples after his resurrection, he addressed them in the same language—"Follow me." From that time to this, the Master has ever been saying to his disciples, through his word, his Spirit, and by the dispensation of his providence, "Follow me." Ever and anon, we hear the gentle command, "Follow me." There are multitudes of leaders, and multitudes of temptations to attract our attention, and call us away from Jesus, but our duty is to listen to no voice, and follow no leader but the Son of God. The more closely we follow him, the better it will be for us. If we follow Jesus, we shall walk in love, in faith, in hope, in obedience, in submission. "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk even as he walked." Where will Jesus lead us if we follow him? He will lead us to God. All others, who say "Follow me," will lead us from God, but Jesus always leads his followers to God. This was the object for which he came into the world. God and man were at a distance from each other. Sin had raised a barrier, so that man could not find his way to God, but Jesus came to take sinners by the hand, and lead them to the Father. He did not try to set up a party for himself, but he ever acknowledged that he came to do the will of his Father. There is no other way of approach to the Father, except through the name and merits of Jesus.

If we follow Jesus, he will lead us to glory. When of old God detached a people from the nations for his name, he destined them to inherit the land of Canaan; and after the death of Moses, he placed them under the direction of Joshua. But when he would bring many sons to glory, he constitutes Jesus as the captain of their salvation. Who is better calculated to conduct us to glory than He who himself has gone there, and is fully acquainted with the way? "Follow me," says Jesus. "I am the way, the truth, and the life." "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." When we reach that blissful shore, then shall we realize through eternal ages what John saw in vision. "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." Reader, are you following Jesus? Be not like the one who followed "afar off," but imitate Caleb and Joshua who followed God fully," and then you shall walk with the Lamb in white, and share the joys of the "goodly land."

STEPS TO THE ATTAINMENT OF PRESENT HOLINESS.

Having become convinced that holiness is a state of soul which the Scriptures clearly set forth as an attainment which it is your duty and privilege to be living in the enjoyment of, it is necessary that the intention be fully fixed to live a holy life.

This will require deep searchings of heart, and will not admit of a secret reserve of this or the other thing, when there may be an impression that the object may be prejudicial to the soul's best interests. The matter must be brought to bear the scrutinizing eye of God, and if in any degree hurtful to the soul, must be decided upon, though the surrender be literally painful as that of parting with a right hand or right eye.

Some may be inclined to think this is narrowing the way too much, and with shrinking of heart may solicitously inquire, "Lord, are there few that be saved?" while the Savior, beholding the many hindrances, replies, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many, I say unto you, shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able!" And why not able? Has the command gone forth, "Be ye holy in all manner of conversation?" 1 Peter 1: 15. And has a command, with such an infinite weight of consequences (Heb. 12: 14) pending on its non-fulfillment, been issued from the throne where eternal love, power, and wisdom preside, and yet the ability for its performance not been given? No! it is the Almighty God, boundless in love, goodness, and power, that says, "Walk before me, and be thou perfect."

But the words of our Savior will bring us yet more directly to the point, and will stamp the assertion with the signet of truth, that the intention to be holy, resolutely fixed in the mind, is a necessary step toward insuring the object. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." John 7: 17. This, taken in connection with Heb. 4: 12, "For the word of the Lord is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of the soul and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart," will yet more fully assure us of the necessity of subjecting ourselves to the deep-searchings of the Spirit, with the intention decidedly fixed "to know nothing among men save Christ and him crucified."

We have frequent occasion to observe with the sinner that the last point of extremity, previous to obtaining comfort, is the resolve that, though he seek to the hour of his death, and never obtain forgiveness, he will not go back to the world and seek his pleasures there, but will endeavor to serve the Lord, and seek, in the use of all the appointed means, the knowledge of pardon. So with the believer; he must have all his energies concentrated in the one endeavor and intention of living a life of entire devotion to God.

If you would raise a superstructure that will endure the searching winds, storms, and rains which will inevitably beat against it, it is absolutely necessary that you count the cost. Deem not that hand or that heart unfriendly that would assist you in this duty. How needful for the comfort of the soul, as also for the permanency of the work, that a thorough foundation be laid, so that the distressing temptations, consequent upon the circumstance of this and the other sacrifice not having been before contemplated, may never successfully obtrude. Many are continually vacillating in their experience, and many more are falling, through a failure in this particular. Through this the good way is evil spoken of.

Oh, if you would be holy, and have your name written in heaven with those "who have come out of great tribulation," and on earth with those "who adorn the doctrine of God their Savior in all things;" if you would be "a living epistle," read and known of all men," "count the cost." Say with the apostle, "yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord." No less devotion of spirit will carry you unpolluted through the world than carried the martyrs through the flames to heaven. Though from the present state of Christianity, its claims in many respects may not be of the same kind, yet the devotion of spirit required is precisely the same in nature and extent. And unless it would lead you to an entire renunciation,—a crucifixion to the world,—you have reason to fear that it will not bring you to the same happy heaven which they are now in possession of.

Be assured that unless you are decided on making the entire sacrifice of all your powers to God, and are willing to be sanctified on the terms specified in the word, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing," you have no proper foundation for your faith to rest upon, when you endeavor to believe that God will receive the offering at your hand. Mal. 1: 8: "And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? saith the Lord of hosts." Mal. 2: 13: "And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good-will at your hand."

From these passages you may infer the reason why so many find it so exceedingly difficult to believe. The faithful and true Witness hath said, as illustrative of the requirements of this way of holiness, and also of its simplicity, "The unclean shall not pass over it; the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." Then may not the experience of thousands, who have endeavored by merely believing, without having this essential foundation for their faith, be reconciled in this way, rather than that the truth of God should be questioned?

The experience of a glorious number of living witnesses, who have attested the excellency of this grace, proves that just so soon as they were willing in reality to count all things loss, just so soon they found it perfectly easy to believe. And as it is by believing that we are brought into this blessed state of soul, this is why the writer has spent so much time in what may seem merely preliminary. To prove the point, let me bring two or three, out of the many living witnesses, that have come under my observation.

The first a divine, who has been, for a few years past, publishing to thousands the blessedness of this way. He stated that he had been nine years interested in the subject of holiness, beliving it to be the privilege of all Christ's disciples to be holy. A considerable part of those nine years was spent in much anxiety and perplexity on the subject. "Why, brother," said I, "how can you account for the circumstance of your being so long seeking, without obtaining the blessing, when you were such a sincere inquirer after truth?" Said he, "I think I cannot reply to your question better than by using the words of our Savior, 'How can ye believe which receive honor one from another, and seek not that honor that cometh from God only?' For just as soon as I was willing to give up that honor that cometh from the world,—willing to have my name literally cast out as evil, and to seek that honor that cometh from God only, I found it perfectly easy to believe."

Another had been more than a year earnestly seeking the blessing, and whenever the question was proposed to her mind, Should the Lord give you the blessing, would you be willing to profess it? as often as the question recurred, she mentally replied, that she could not, and yet thought that she was willing to give up all for the attainment of the blessing. She at last felt the necessity of it so deeply that she concluded no sacrifice would be too great. When the Spirit again applied the question, Would you be willing to profess the blessing, should you receive it? her heart replied, "Yes, Lord, confess it, or anything, only let me have it!" The way of faith was at once plain, and her mouth was filled with praises.

Two other cases, coming, as in the instances just mentioned, directly under my own observation, may be instrumental in solving the difficulties in the way of believing with some. Remote from each other, resided two individuals, entirely unaquainted with each other's experience; both became deeply interested on the subject of holiness, the Spirit urging them powerfully to the present attainment of the blessing. Yet the way of faith seemed hard to understand, when we suggested that something must be in the way of believing, as God had declared it easy. Both explained the difficulty by an allusion to such an attachment as is forbidden by the word: 1 Cor. 6. 14. They were told that they would find it utterly impossible to believe under such circumstances; that the object must be given up, and they would then find God true to his word. The surrender was made, and they were made the happy possessors of the perfect love of God. These are only transcripts of the experience of scores of living witnesses.

SWORDS AND FIRES—FIRES AND SWORDS;

OR, GOSPEL-FIRE—FIRE OF THE GOSPEL.

D. F. NEWTON.

Gospel-fire should be first, midst, last, always, in all our religious publications—books, tracts and periodicals—fire on fire.

Parents and teachers need gospel-fire, blazing out. Little folks love fire, and will have it. Ministers and editors need fire, sparkling, soul-kindling, and should have it. What! pray, preach, write, without this heavenly gospel-fire? No marvel we have chaff instead of wheat, cockle instead of barley, dross instead of gold, death instead of life, damnation instead of salvation. Live and breathe without this fire pentecostal in families, schools, pulpits, chairs, editorial, we die the death.

The Waldenses had this fire, wrote it out, preached it out, sung it out, lived it out. Where did they get it? From licentious poets, novels and romances, fictitious tales? or from the Bible—holy inspiration? Their souls were alive in God. The more fire, the more love, the more resolutely we fight against sin. It is love kindles fire, and fire kindles love—fire on fire. Without love no holy fire, no true Bible reform. The Lord give us more of it, a thousand fold.

"Oh! for this love let rocks and hills
Their lasting silence break;
And all harmonious human tongues
The Savior's praises speak."

The holy prophets had fire—fire on fire—blazing out. Where did they get it? From the Bible? Yes, from the Bible. John the Baptist had fire, holy fire. Paul had fire, Peter, James, and John, pentecostal, baptismal—fire on fire—blazing out. Where did they get it? from the Bible? Yes, from the Bible. Luther had fire, Wesley had fire, Bunyan had fire—fire on fire—blazing out. Edwards had fire, Whitefield had fire, the Tenants had fire, Payson had fire, James B. Taylor had fire—fire on fire—blazing out.

Where did all these gospel firebrands get their fire—fire on fire? From the Bible? Yes, from the Bible. O for this fire—fire on fire. "Man in the pulpit," the editorial chair, will you have this fire—fire on fire—blazing out? Go to the Bible, read the Bible, pray it out, search it out, live it out.

"Hail! sacred truth, whose piercing rays
Dispel the shades of night;
Diffusing o'er a ruined world
The healing beams of light."

Fire and sword, sword and fire, go hand in hand, inseparably. No fire, no sword; no sword, no fire. The fire is dependent on the sword, and the sword on the fire. "The sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." Eph. 6: 17. O for these heavenly fires, blazing out—swords on swords; swords that cut, fires that burn—gospel fires.

"O, for the living flame,
From his own altar brought,
To touch our lips, our souls inspire,
And wing to heaven our thought."

Friend, is your soul thus on fire? kindled to a holy flame, while meditating and conversing about God, his Son, his word, the home of the weary, the heavy laden, the rest of God's people? Is the subject of religion your chief delight, always, everywhere?

THE ECLIPSE OF THE SOUL.—The Moon in an eclipse complained to the Sun:

"Why, O my dearest friend, dost thou not shine upon me as usual?"

"Do I not?" said the Sun; "I am sure I am shining as I always do; why do you not enjoy my light as usual?"

"O! I see," said the moon, "the earth has got between us."

"Why, O Savior," says the backsliding christian, "do I not, as in former days, walk in the light of thy countenance?"

"I am sure, troubled soul, I have not changed. The rays of my love are as warm and bright as ever; what can prevent them from reaching thee?"

It is the world, troubled christian, that has got between thee and Christ.—Ex.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT seeing Diogenes looking attentively at a parcel of human bones, asked the philosopher what he was looking for. "That which I cannot find," was the reply; "the difference between your father's bones and those of his slaves."

The World's Crisis
AND
SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, July 3, 1872.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the "Crisis" issued from this time forward are at the rate of $2.00 a year, payable IN ADVANCE.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

THOSE who send articles for the "Crisis," should direct them to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass., and not to the Business Agent.

REMEMBER our great National Campmeeting is to commence at Springfield, Saturday, August 17th, to continue over two Sundays. We expect a great and good meeting. Let there be much prayer that it may surpass all others in its holy influence.

OBITUARIES.—We must ask those who write obituaries to avoid sending long ones. We should be pleased to publish all that the friends of the deceased desire, but should we do so, there would be much complaint among our readers, excepting when the notice was of one quite widely known. It grieves us to grieve the friends we love by cutting short the obituaries of their friends; but we see no way to avoid this painful part of our work. Sometimes a long piece of poetry accompanies the obituary, prepared by some friend, as a tribute to the memory of the deceased; of precious value to the mourning circle, as are all the last sayings of the departed one; but it should be remembered that these are read with interest only by the friends of the one sleeping in death. Then please send us short obituaries, and, as a general rule, omit the poetry. The best sentence to be spoken of the dead, is to be able to say: —— "sleeps in Jesus."

STRIKES.—The striking spirit still continues among the laboring classes on both continents, and is breaking out in new places. It has somewhat abated in New York city, because many have succeeded in accomplishing their object, and now work but eight hours a day, with increased wages. Some others have gone back to work ten hours a day at old prices. New, and more terrible outbreakes may be expected at any time. All is uncertain. This fact is felt by many manufacturers; and they are exceedingly perplexed to know what to do. Men are fast losing confidence in each other. This is a sad state of things, but is only indicative that we are near the end of the present dispensation. "Worse and worse" is the order from now till the coming of the Deliverer. Watch and pray, lest the Tempter gain the advantage. Perils are on all sides.

SENSIBLE REMARKS.—Let all who have occasion to write conference reports for the Crisis, read the sensible remarks of Bro. Sheldon under the head of "Conference Reports." They should be treasured up for careful and practical consideration. No. "2" deserves special attention.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Signs in heaven and earth, Church and State, all indicate that the coming of Christ is an event near at hand. The social condition of the world is becoming alarming. Murder, robbery, drunkness, deceit, fornication, and all other black crimes are multiplying in all directions. There is no bright prospect—no reason to expect any improvement till Jesus comes. The earth itself seems to be groaning for deliverance from the effects of the curse. The following is from the London Telegraph:—

"Something surely must be the matter with the internal and external health of the little planet upon which we live. The earth is apparently out of order, and her malady takes the form of volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, cyclones, and hurricanes in the warmer latitudes; and of damp, wretched weather, or ruinous floods in the colder regions. We Britons have passed a moist, ungenial spring here at home, and our farmers begin to ask each other with anxiety whether the drenched grain crops can be nursed by any amount of future sunshine into a good harvest. Meantime, the sunshine does not come, or will not stay when it does come; and the grass, which has been growing fast, with all this wet, wants bright skies to make it seed and mellow properly. But the state of things upon many parts of the Continent is far more serious.

During the last fifteen or twenty days floods of extraordinary volume have ravaged some of the finest and most fruitful parts of mid-Europe. Bohemia has especially suffered.

A tremendous rain-storm recently broke over the district about Prague; and such torrents have since rolled from mountain and upland, that the rivers of that province are like raging seas, while fully one-eighth of its pastures and arable land lies under water. Houses and farmsteads have been swept away; whole villages indeed have disappeared, with live stock, stacks, implements, and, what is worst of all, scores, nay, it is said hundreds, of the agricultural inhabitants. The Meldau and Eger, thus preternaturally swollen, have poured a monstrous volume into the Elbe, which has in turn flooded its banks with great damage. Other German rivers have similarly burst their bounds, and even steady Father Rhine has gone mad, and submerged the country near Strasburg; while further off the Moselle, near Nancy, presents the aspect of a vast and tempestuous lake. Switzerland has experienced a corresponding visitation. At Berne the Aar has overflowed into the town; Friburg and the Valais are drenched; the pleasant cantons near and far beneath the Bernese and Pennine Alps have seen their bridges swept away, their growing rye and oats laid low, and their hay crops sodden.

But next to Bohemia, the case of North Italy appears perhaps the worst. The lakes and rivers of Lombardy have been gorged with a flood of waters equalling or exceeding that which came down in 1869. The mountain roads of the Simplon and St. Gothard have been rent and blocked by furious torrents, bursting their embankments and leaping through the massive bridges which span them. The Sesia, Maggia, and other Alpine channels which lead the upper waters to the plains, have flung a foaming deluge into the lakes of Maggiore, Lugano and Como, and these, no longer able to discharge it fast enough by the Ticino, Adda and Po, have risen above bank and wall, and laid the flax and mulberry districts of Lombardy under a sea of inundation which stands half-way up the telegraph poles, and is reported to have wrought ruin estimated at many millions of livres. We might lengthen the melancholy catalogue of damages by speaking of the Loire, the Rhone, and many other rivers of France, which have followed the example of the Alta-Italian streams; but enough has been said, no doubt, to prove that while our farmers are soaked, those of the neighboring countries have been deluged, if, indeed, the worst be over yet."

"THE WORLD'S PEACE JUBILEE."

The World's Peace Jubilee still continues at the Coliseum, in Boston, and is probably the most noted musical festival ever held since the creation of Adam. The building covers nearly four and a half acres, and has been exceedingly crowded. The audience has been estimated from sixty to one hundred thousand. Those who have listened, have doubtless heard the best choral and instrumental music that has ever greeted the ears of mortals; but the best of this must be a meager affair when compared with what we shall have in the happy Eden bowers of the coming paradise home of the christian. One of those heavenly songs of the redeemed will eclipse the whole World's Jubilee in Boston. The Jubilee began June 17th, the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, and will close July 4th. Thus far it has been a success.

GEOLOGICAL FACTS.

Semi-occasionally some important Geological facts are received which serve to silence the Geological speculations so often asserted in proof of the great antiquity of the human race. For sometime we have been fully satisfied that are there no facts to prove that man or any other living thing, existed on this earth over six thousand years ago. When the truth is known, it will be found that the Mosaic account of creation of man is correct. The following is to the point:—

"The Abbe Moigus, well known in scientific and literary circles as the editor of Les Mondes, denies emphatically that there is any scientific data for belief in the existence of man upon the earth previous to the data which the Scripture assigns for his creation. According to the Abbe the soils in which human remains have been found, and there have have been very few thus far discovered, are movable, not fixed deposits, and give no decisive evidence. He predicts that the arguments in favor of man's existence prior to the age indicated by the Bible have already reached their maximum, and will decrease hereafter until they are utterly abandoned."—Boston Journal.

SHAKERISM.

Shakerism and Spiritualism are half brothers. They have both one father—the Devil. Both systems are founded on Satan's lie—"Ye shall not surely die." They speak highly of each other, and profess to receive their instruction from departed spirits. We clipped the following from "The Shaker," published by the Shakers:—

SHAKER CEMETERIES.—"Why do Shakers appear to have so little respect for their deceased members? Why do they neglect to furnish them monuments, and bedeck their graves with flowers, shrubbery, etc?" I answer: . . .

"We do not believe in a physical resurrection, nor that our dear departed lie in the ground; neither will they ever have need to use the decaying mortality again—this having subserved its purpose, as an old, worn-out garment, it is laid aside forever." . . .

"Our graveyards are simple, yet unostentatious. They please our spirit friends, who visit us, more than would an intemperate display of marble."

NATIONAL PROGRESS.—The great American Institute announces its forty-first annual exhibition, to be opened in the city of New York, on the fourth of September next. Applications for space to exhibit the best agricultural productions, mechanical inventions, artistic devices, and valuable articles of American manufacture, are now in order. It is intended to make this the most extensive, useful and meritorious exhibition ever held in America.

DESIGN OF SPIRITUALISM.

Mr. J. M. Peebles, a noted Spiritualist, has taken occasion to state the purpose of those who sympathize with Spiritualism. We are most fully persuaded that the whole thing is but the Devil's system of religion; and that it has nothing in common with the religion of Christ, any more than a counterfeit bill has with one that is genuine. Mr. Peebles says, as published in "The Shaker":—

"As Spiritualists, our work measures and overreaches all the reforms of the age. To continue it successfully requires brave, enthusiastic and self-sacrificing men and women; media passive, pure and holy in every aspiration; speakers with tongues of fire, hearts pulsing with prayer, intellects rich in genius and culture, and souls touched with the baptism of the living Christ. We are in the second coming. The angels are already in the clouds of heaven.

There is about to be a religious revival such as the world has not seen for eighteen centuries. Christians will be converted; outsiders will inquire the way to Zion; Christ spirits will lead them; the white faces of martyrs will illumine their pathway. After the cross, the crown.

The very foundations of the old, social, political and theological religions are being shaken. 'I will shake earth and the heavens also,' said God by the prophet. The world is becoming literally a world of Shakers. The sixth trumpet has sounded. The books are open. The world is the stage; nations the actors. The fig tree has put forth. The angels of the spiritual dispensation are calling us to judgment. My soul pleads for you 'yet a little longer,' and the 'spirit and the bride say come.' Are your lamps trimmed and burning? Answer as in the presence of God's angels.

Let us, oh Spiritualists, be true to our convictions; true to our moral and religious natures; true to the principles of purity and right; then should our mortal barks speedily strand, or go down even, they will only sink to rise into those calmer seas that make divinely beautiful the love-lands of the angels."

A PROPHECY.—The following was prophesied in 1848, by Father Morrow, in a monastery in St. Croix:—

"In the last part of the nineteenth century there will be a republic in Switzerland, France and Italy, and signs in the whole world; pestilence, famine, and war; and great cities will be destroyed, and kings and religion be destroyed; and they will seemingly get the victory, but will afterwards be defeated. The Catholic church will be stripped of every thing, and the Pope will be kept in captivity by his enemies, and the Pope's chair will be vacant; but there will be no more Popes, for the Son of God will come, and bring peace with him."

CAMPMEETINGS.

After the close of the Wisconsin campmeeting, duty appeared to point to the Iowa (New Hartford) camp-ground. Bro. Grant had been expected to attend, but could not do so, and urged me to take his place. I complied. Arriving at the camp-ground, I was glad to renew old acquaintanceship, and to form new acquaintances. This is the fifth meeting held on this ground, and it is leased for a term of years in the future, and the brethren are bound to set out one hundred shade trees on the ground this year. This both helps the owner of the ground, and improves the shade of the encampment. Other camp-grounds, where meetings are permanently located, would do well to imitate this practice.

The meeting this year was the largest ever held there, and it is said that the devotional current of the meeting run deeper and stronger than ever before. Many pronounced the social meetings the best they had ever attended. There were twenty tents on the ground, and about two thousand people in attendance on Lord's day. The order was excellent. Several sinners and backsliders sought the Lord, and found peace. Four were baptized. The feeling evinced upon the part of many to live in a higher atmosphere of devotion was commendable. We must place the standard of religious experience higher, not in theory only, but in practice. From the heart let us sing:

"Nearer, my God, to thee."

Well, this meeting is over, and I am on my way to another in Wisconsin, praying that God may bless the effort. W. S.

CONFERENCE REPORTS.

I have long felt impressed to say a few words about conference reports through the press.

1. They should be much shorter than they usually are—less than half their common length—omitting every item of mere local interest, giving only items that will interest readers at large. The conference should keep a book in which the secretary should make a record of many items of interest to the conference, but out of place in the paper.

2. When a brother is arraigned before the conference, whether approved or condemned, there is no need of publishing it from Dan to Beersheba, unless it is evident that the refractory one is determined to impose on other churches. Many are thus driven beyond our reach, who otherwise might have been saved.

3. Conference reports should not be puffs of certain mininters, or documents to display the ability of the secretary as a writer. If there are facts of general interest, state them as briefly as possible, and put the rest only on the pages of the conference book. Let these hints be remembered. W. S.

ELEVATE THE STANDARD.—We mean the standard of holiness. Raise it higher. How can it be done? By having the ministry take the lead—not by saying go up higher, but come up higher; and we cannot say come till we are higher up than those we invite. Let us be ministers of Jesus Christ in very deed, as well as teachers of truth, having Christ formed within us, being ensamples to the flock. W. S.

APOLOGY.—Friends who have written me since the last of May, will please excuse my delay in noticing their communications, as I have been absent from home since then, attending campmeetings, and shall be till about the middle of July. This will explain seeming neglect. W. S.

"WARNING EVERY MAN." Col. 1: 28.

If this was the great apostle's desire and work, how much more so should it be ours who live amid the last-day perils. How shall we most effectually and speedily do this? is the question of every burthened soul. We think the Lord has set an open door before us as follows:—

POSTERS, OR BILLS.—Having got out a thousand, two by three feet, in an attractive form (the contents of which we insert below, ED.), we offer to send them, free of postage, for four or five cents per copy, and free to the poor who will judiciously use them, pasting them up in the most public places. The world must be warned! A bill in each post office and R. R. depot through the land will call the attention of thousands to these things. Who has a heart, a will, and a hand to join us in this work? Send in your orders from Maine to Georgia; from the Atlantic to the Pacific; yea, all are included. Let the banner be unfurled. "One shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." Deut. 22: 30. "The day of the Lord is near, it is NEAR and hasteth GREATLY, even the voice of the day of the Lord." Zeph. 1: 14. Therefore what "thou doest, do quickly." John 13: 27. Address A. BOYNTON, West Batavia, Genesee Co., N. Y.

Give your full address, post office, County and State, that there may be no mistake.

The following is the Poster:—

THE COMING MAN. WHO IS HE?

Jesus Christ the King! Where is the promise of his coming? "And when he (Jesus) had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight; and while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel, which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 9-12. "BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22: 12. "NOW is the accepted time, NOW is the day of salvation." 2 Cor. 6: 12. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, with all thy heart, and thou shalt be saved." Acts 16: 31.

Last day signs: "The chariots (locomotives and coaches) shall be with flaming (or fiery) torches in the day of his preparation; they shall rage in the streets; they shall justle one against another in the broad ways; they shall run like the lightnings ('lightning' trains.) He (the conductor) shall recount his worthies (or passengers); they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste (when the train stops) to the wall (or door) thereof, and the defence (or iron railing) shall be prepared" (for safety and protection.) Nah. 2: 3-5. Our object is to arrest the giddy throng in their rush to death and perdition, and, if possible, induce some to turn their feet into the path of peace and safety, and at last secure eternal life. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6: 23. For more light study God's Bible.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

NEW YORK CITY.

A. W. SIBLEY.

We were permitted a few weeks since, to visit New York city for the first time, and spend the Lord's day with Brn. King's and Cox's congregations. New York is an old field, where the gospel of the kingdom was sounded in the early days of its proclamation, and of course, there ought to be to-day, several large churches as beacon lights in this city, looking for the return of the Nobleman. New York, like many other places where the seed of the gospel of the kingdom has been sown, has had in its midst, those questions of a theological nature, which have a tendency to gender strife and divide, and which have caused many to be dogmatical and exclusive; and consequently there are but few, comparatively, that are watching for the return of the Bridegroom.

We made our headquarters at the Bible Banner Office, 14 Murray Street, during our stay in the city. The Bible Banner is an able monthly, ringing out "the clarion notes of truth on the leading issues of the age," and making prominent the fact that without holiness no man can see the Lord. At the time it was announced that the Banner was to be started, we doubted the propriety of its publication, but have since seen the expediency of its being sent abroad to the numerous ones who are seeking for truth. Bro. King, the publisher of the Banner, is sacrificing and working hard for the spread of Bible truth. May God bless him. We formed a very pleasant acquaintance with the help which Bro. K. has in his office. Bro. Albert J. King, who formally was in company with his brother H. A. in the publication of the Bee-Keeper's Journal, is now chief clerk in the office, and has opened a purchasing agency in the same department for the people. Those who are in want of goods of any kind, would do well to send to Bro. A. J. King for his catalogue of prices, before giving their order to any one else, and thereby save the per cent which merchants must have by having the goods pass through their hands. Address A. J. King, 14 Murray Street, New York City.

CHOICE.

CYRUS MENDENHALL.

We are placed upon this mundane sphere with a perfect freedom to choose life or death. The words of God, as addressed to the Jewish people of old, are applicable to us all—"Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse; a blessing if ye obey the commandments of the Lord, your God; which I command you this day; and a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the Lord your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other Gods." Deut. 11: 26, 27, 28. Sin and death are ever linked, because the wages of sin is death; on the other hand, righteousness and life are inseparable, because the gift of God is eternal life. This gift is only attainable through faith and obedience. By disobedience, and worshiping other gods, be they of wood or stone, or riches, or the gods of sin, of our own selfish desires, and unregenerated dispositions, we are under the condemnation. God will not force men to obey his just laws. The commandment is given, the sacrifice is offered for all; men are pleaded with, but left with their future destiny in their own hands. They may choose the better part, or with the multitude take the beaten track to destruction.

The New Testament is full of pleadings and offerings and inducements for men to turn and live. We read, "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Acts 2: 21); thus verifying the statement found in Ezek. 18: 32, "For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God; therefore turn yourselves, and live ye." And again, in Matt. 18: 14—"Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones should perish." But notwithstanding all this, men will choose the downward road, seemingly blind to any other course.

God has tried to impress upon us that it remains with ourselves which we will choose. He says, "I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." Deut. 30: 19. The means used in order to obtain life and blessing are thus plainly set forth: "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." Phil. 2: 12. "Nevertheless, the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." 2 Tim. 2: 19. "Wherefore, the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1: 10, 11. At his second coming this abundant entrance shall be consummated. Let us, then, lift up our heads, for our redemption draweth nigh.

Wilmington, Del.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

H. MUNGER.

Eighteen years ago was the first time I ever started out on a circuit mission, proposed by Brn. Merriam and Berrick, first editors of the Crisis. Never having preached any before, it was a great cross to call my labor "preaching," although I had been holding public meetings since 1845; and to stop is almost impossible, and to keep up the long trips is hard and trying at my advanced age. On looking over our old Revolutionaries, I find but two or three older, and only one that travels as extensively at my age; that is Bro. Himes, who is a few months the oldest; while Brn. Brewer, Batchelor, Storrs, and Cook, are somewhat broken down from hard labor and sickness, and cannot travel these long trips and preach every day as formerly; but what shall we do without them? their experience and counsel are needed, if not appreciated by the younger ones who have been born this side of the Red Sea, since we left Egypt in 1843. There is another class who are younger, who occupy a more prominent position now, as they are in the prime of life, whom we depend upon as the active managers for these times—Brn. Grant, Couch, Boutell, Ross, Sheldon, Mathewson, and others—who are the main men in our warfare; and if the older ones fall before the battle is ended, God will reward us all according to the work done.

After these reflections, I started off again to visit the different fields of former action, and found many have fallen, and some have deserted. First, at Chelsea, where is a good, consistent church, with some five or six preachers connected with it. It ought to be strong and well fortified. Next to Lawrence. Here is a good, live church, managed by old, tried, christian soldiers. Had a good time with them. Next to Haverhill, where there have been ups and downs for years, but now they have three or four preachers, and things will now take a more favorable stand. Next to Exeter, N. H.,—an old church. Some have fallen, and others are failing; yet they hold together, and are looking for the blessed hope.

Next to Lee. Had a good time with them, a little timber to build with, as all have decided for or against the truth. Like some other places, but little ground left for seed-sowing. Next to Dover. No place was provided for a meeting. Only part of the team work together, as usual. Here I found Eld. Pinkham engaged in business to get a living. He tells me he has not received three hundred dollars a year for the last two years, and could not support his family and horse without falling in debt, and was obliged to go to work, as others have, and preach occasionally. He says Bro. Ross traveled fifty miles during his last trip up in that section to save something for his family. Is there not a reason why Advent preachers are losing their pluck, and are obliged to stop traveling?

Next to South Berwick. Had a good place to preach, and a good meeting. The chapel and the whole church are not worth half enough to build a French-roof house, but God has a house and a people there that work together. Next to Biddeford. Found Bro. Megguire and family, as usual, ready to take care of preachers. This church is prospering. They labor together. We had a congregation of three or four hundred. Had three good meetings on the Sabbath. This is Whit-Sunday with them, June 2nd, as the trees are in full bloom, one week later than usual, but crops look well, especially grass.

An incident took place while fishing for trout with Bro. Allen. A cross bull in a pasture where we were fishing came up bellowing and threatening to attack us. The boy present said he drove people out of the lot. When he got within two or three rods, I took my hat off, put it forward of my face, moving to the right and then to the left once a second, and going toward him. This being something new to him, he stopped pawing dirt and bellowing. I still kept up the sudden movement of my hat, walking steadily towards him. When within about thirty feet of him, he turned to run, and I after him, keeping the same motion with the hat. I chased him till he showed signs of going over the fence. I then came back and went to fishing, and heard no more from Mr. Bull. He looked beaten. I mention this for the benefit of those who may need to know this fact. I learned it thirty years ago. You can drive any bull ever so cross, or a wild steer, by this simple process. Try it. A woman's bonnet, used in the same way forward of her face, will produce the same effect to protect them.

Next to Portland and Brunswick, in the yearly sheep storm, the first of June. There were but few out to meeting. The old eagle's nest is referred to again this year, making forty years on the same tree, watching the fish-hawks' good luck, and taking away their game as usual. Some of the old hawks have learned better than to ascend into the air with their fish, but fly to the woods, and hide until they eat their fish; while the young fish-hawks lose theirs by rising in the air. I saw one of these eagles sailing over, hunting for a hawk that had just taken a fish; but the hawk had hid in the woods, and the eagle, like a disappointed pickpocket, went back to his nest empty. It is now fish time here, and I am helping draw a net. We got fifty-four. Last year Bro. Storer caught a salmon that weighed twenty-seven pounds, and a sturgeon weighing four hundred pounds.

Next to Bath. Here is a good, united church, ready to work. They have had some good additions of late, and are building a new chapel, 50 by 36. We had a good, profitable meeting. Subject, prophetic signs. There was the best of attention. Next to Richmond. It was the eighth rainy day. We had no meeting Saturday. Here is the fifth river I have visited where they were catching shad. They are very plenty and cheap; only $5.00 a hundred, or nine cts. apiece for very large ones. They retail on the Kennebec river for about two cts. a pound. They are very cheap. On the Conn. river they average about ten cts. a pound. Sabbath, June 9th, we had a good gathering at the Reed meeting-house, and another at Richmond Corner in the evening. The common people heard gladly.

Sunday, June 10th. To-day is the first fair day for two weeks in this section. The people are yet planting corn. The curse is heavy on the land and people here. I am told that it takes a day's work to raise one bushel of corn on an average, and wages are two dollars a day. A farm is not profitable at this rate; for one day's work will buy two bushels of corn ground into meal, delivered from the west to their doors. It is hard preaching a new truth to such people, and have it appreciated; yet we went, as the appointment was out for one evening in Gardiner, thirteen miles away. I started, almost sick, over a bad road, got shipwrecked, got another team, got there late, house full, good attention, and a good collection of sixty-two cts. Next day I went fifteen miles to Bowdoin, over four miles of the worst road I ever rode on. I caught a mess of fish for supper, and went to meeting suffering with toothache for the first time. I found the seats full, and house full of mosquitoes. I preached on the curse.

On this trip, I saw an old christian, one hundred and two years old, whose health, hearing and sight are good. His sight is good enough to read without glasses. He splits his own wood. He recollects the "dark day" of 1780, and bids fair to live some years longer. Next to Lewiston. There was a good company out. Some of the tares sown there have died out, or wilted down, giving a better chance for the wheat to grow. Next to Poland. Had a good day and full house. Some came from twelve to twenty-one miles.

Went to Craig's Mills in the evening, and found a good company, loving the hope as first preached by Bro. Whitman. Here I noticed the great six-mile pond, made by a dam of inferior material and construction, liable to fail at any time, which would carry everything off below it, clear to Brunswick, a distance of twenty miles or more. The village of Mechanic Falls would all go off with a rush, and every village below. It so troubled me that I laid awake hours. I consider the people below in more danger than to be located over a volcano. It is strange that a community will sleep quietly below such danger, with the villages full of people ignorant of their danger. I felt so on the subject, I went and informed a prominent man, a representative, and he went to see about it with others; and probably a safer dam will soon be built.

We had a good meeting at Mayberry Hill, but good old Bro. Oliver Mayberry had died since I was there. It was a great loss to the family and town. At Weeks Mills and South Casco the wheat and tares are growing in the same field, but I had good attention. There are plenty of farms for sale in Maine for less than cost of the buildings. It is a hard time for farmers at the present prices. Some farms with fifty to seventy-five acres, and good buildings and orchards, and all the wood they want to burn, can be rented for $75 a year. This is in South Casco, Me., on the stage road to Portland; and other towns have farms to rent as cheap. These are deserted by the heirs after the old people have died off. The young ones go off to cities and villages to work.

There must be a great change soon, or farms will grow up to woods. Such places might be leased by city people for summer residences so cheap, it might be an object to some to know these facts, that have got tired of city life. A few months in the country would improve their health. They could get a living in the summer, and move back in the winter if they wished. There are farms to be sold for from one to two thousand dollars with the above advantages, and it seems to me city life will not be so desirable in a short time, if wickedness increases, which I have no doubt it will, until the Lord comes. One half of the common livers in cities spend more needlessly every summer than would hire one of these summer residences.

Next to East Rochester, after catching some fifty pounds of pickerel for the neighborhood. This exercise keeps my mind in order to preach, and pays for my board in fish. I preached four times on the Sabbath—once in the street, on a shoe-box. Had a good time sowing the seed. Some took effect. Thank the Lord. I again have got where I can get a daily paper, to see what the world is doing. I see you are having in Boston a thundering of music from all nations to keep up the excitement of the times; while for three weeks I have had the music of owls, whippoorwills, and mosquitoes for evening; and the bull-frog, spinning wheels, and the gobble of turkeys, for day-time.

PRAYER.

E. JOHNSON.

"And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you."—JOHN 16: 23.

Dear reader, it is my opinion, that the cause of so much lethargy and dead formality among the professed people of God is from the lack of practical faith in the above, and other similar promises. We may as soon think to live the natural life without the natural breath, as to expect to have spiritual life and power without prayer. Hear again the words of our blessed Savior, Matt. 7: 11:—"If ye, then, being evil know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him." Remember, dear, tempted one, tossed and tried, in Christ there is a balm for every wound, a cordial for every fear. In him you may confide and never be betrayed. Come, then, dear one, ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full. Some tauntingly ask if I expect to change the purpose of the Almighty by my prayers? to such I answer, No, emphatically no. If I did, I never should dare pray again. For God's purposes are all just and holy; and if I should change them, then they would be wrong. But God's purpose is, if I ask he will give; if I ask not he will withhold. To illustrate: God has also purposed to give me eternal life, if I seek for it "by patient continuance in well doing," but tribulation and anguish if I do evil. So the purpose of God is not changed if I seek or forbear.

Do you wish for examples of God's faithfulness in answering the prayers of his children? Time would fail me to speak of Moses, Elijah, Daniel, and a host of others, who had power with God, and were delivered through the prayer of faith. Consider Peter when Herod apprehended and delivered him to sixteen soldiers. See how they tried to make sure of him. They bound him with two chains, and had a soldier on either side as he slept, and keeper's before the door. To all human appearances Peter's doom was sealed. But hearken! Peter's brethren are praying for him. God sends his angel, the chains fall off from Peter, he follows the angel, the iron gate opens of its own accord, and they went out. God heard their cries, and there was not strength enough in all the Roman power to execute Peter.

There are also, in this our day, many witnesses, who can testify to God's gracious answers to prayer, among whom is the unworthy writer. Yes, dear reader, what I write I know by real experience, that God hears prayers. The following are some of the reasons why we are not always answered:—"If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." Ps. 66: 18. We read in Jer. 17: 9—"The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." This being the case, we do well to examine carefully. If we harbor a desire to exalt ourselves, no matter in what way, it is pride; we regard iniquity in our hearts. If we slander our neighbor, or speak reproachfully of any, it shows envy and hatred; we regard iniquity in our hearts. If we in traffic extol our own goods for the sake of getting more than they are worth, it shows avarice and deceit; we regard iniquity in our hearts, and accordingly the Lord will not hear us. James 4: 3. "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lust." Again—"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord." Jas. 1: 5-7. According to this, we may not expect to get an answer to our prayers without faith. Now if you will turn with me to Gal. 5: 22, we shall find that faith is one of the fruits of the Spirit. Now we cannot expect to have the fruit without the tree. Dear brethren, let us with purpose of heart cleave unto the Lord; then shall we be the temple of the living God, as God hath said, "I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people." Thus being filled with the Spirit, we shall have the fruit. But whatsoever ye shall ask, do it in my name, says our blessed Savior. Let our qualifications be what they may, the worthy name of Jesus will alone prevail in the holy courts of heaven. Let us never present our case in our own name. May God bless and preserve both the writer and reader unto his soon coming kingdom. Amen.

AN ARGUMENT.

H. WITCHER.

The Bible is either true or false—either a divine revelation, or a human invention. Now if we take the ground that the Bible is man-made—a mere pretense of divinity, then it will be more difficult to account for its antiquity, and the fact of its preservation during so long a period of time, and in the midst of so many revolutions, fall of nations, and destruction of cities, than it is to account for it as a revelation from God.

2. The Bible is either the product of good, honest, and truthful men, as the channel of its manifestation, or it is the product of bad, lying men. But it cannot be the product of good and truthful men if not divine in origin, for its authors everywhere declare they were inspired to speak and write what we have in this book. They say they "spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Now this position is either true or false; and if false, then Bible men were hypocrites and base deceivers. And it is vastly more difficult to account for the wisdom, goodness, and purity of the Bible, as the product of bad, deceiving men, if it be not divine, than it is to understand it as a divine revelation.

3. If the Bible is a tissue of inventions of men, a jumble of mesmeric cogitations, or fruits of fanatical deceit, then base hypocrites or dupes of ignorance, have given the world the best, the wisest, the most refining, most elevating, and the most happifying rules of life that were ever given! And to believe that such a bitter fountain can send forth such a sweet stream, requires much more credulity and is more difficult than to believe the Bible to be God-given.

4. It would be far more difficult to account for the success of Christianity during the first three centuries, in spite of the hatred of Jews and Romans, than it is to believe it to be divine. And whosoever denies the facts of church history during this period, must also throw away Roman history too.

I freely confess and declare that it is a thousand times easier for me to believe the Bible, and its miracles, and a supernatural religion with all its mysteries, than it would be to account for existing facts on the ground of infidel notions.

5. Either Jesus Christ was divine, "God with us," or the God-Man, knowing all hearts, possessing all power, and an object of worship; or else he was a base hypocrite and deceiver.

A good man he could not be, and at the same time be a mere man, as Unitarians call him. On the ground of Unitarianism I would as soon administer a Communion service in memory of Paul or Peter, as of Jesus Christ. There is as great a mystery in a green sprig, growing out of black earth, and a red flower coming out of this green sprig, as there is in the mystery of the Godhead.—Bible Banner.

Correspondence.

From Sr. S. E. Teeple.

My dear brethren and sisters, in the unity and faith of the gospel:—Not having much chance to meet with you, as in former days, I feel it a blessed privilege that I can write you through the Crisis, our much loved paper, which comes every week with something in it to cheer and comfort us as we toil and struggle on through this unfriendly world. Many of its articles of late have been of thrilling interest to me. I think the paper is improving, or else, as my means of grace are diminishing, I prize it more highly. The article from Sister Weaver, headed, "Be in earnest," is to the point; and how cheering is the one from J. H. Smith, "Hope in Christ"; and I might mention till I should not know where to stop, as many of the dear saints in their epistles do so comfort and encourage this heart of mine in my afflictions.

While looking out on a small rivulet that passes close by, I thought of what the prophet said in Isa. 48: 18—"O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments; then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea." "Peace been as a river." O how many times I have thought of it for the last thirteen years, as I have gazed on that stream as it moves on, and on, and onward in its course. It never stops moving. When there is but little water in its banks, onward it goes. As the passer-by stands and looks at it, it stops not. As the gentle showers fill its banks, still it moves on, winding its way through narrow crevices, and enlarging itself on the plains. In some places it is quite shallow, and then it may be quite deep. It is often very crooked, but still it stops not. Obstructions may be thrown in its way, but it moves on and on; it cannot be stopped. Where and when is it to end? It moves on till it reaches the great ocean. What! thought I; is this little stream, so close to my dwelling, to have no ending till it shall reach the ocean? Many a little lesson have I learned in looking at this stream in days past, and here I may learn a new one.

I started some years ago for the great ocean of eternity, and have kept moving on, on, sometimes nearly ready to sink; like the stream nearly dry, yet still moving on. I have sometimes made crooked steps, but I dare not stop. I could not. I saw the prize ahead. It attracted my view. I must go. Many have gazed at me, and wondered why I stopped not; have thrown obstructions in my way, but I was bound to go on. Yes, "on." There is something most blessed in those two letters. But where am I going, and what will be the result? If faithful, I shall enter the haven of eternal rest, and get immortality and eternal life. Hallelujah to Jesus, we will praise him then; we may praise him now.

"Glory to God, all our dangers are o'er,
We stand secure on the glorified shore;
Glory to God, we shall shout evermore,
We're home at last, home at last."

Won't this pay for taking a long and tedious journey? won't it pay for all we have had to suffer? O yes, yes. It most assuredly will. Then let us double our diligence, and press our way onward toward the haven of rest.

And what shall I say to the poor sinner, should his eye chance to fall on these lines? Get ready; the judgment is nearing. Haste, make no delay. Mercy still lingers; soon it will be too late. O come, come. The Spirit says, Come.

WELLS—DICKISON. June 27th, 1872, in the Second Baptist Church, Rochester, N. Y., by Eld. Wm. A. Fenn, Mr. Jerome B. Wells and Miss Amelia Dickison, both of Rochester, N. Y.

Obituaries.

Burleigh. Died in Concord, N. H., June 13th, 1872, Lucy H., youngest daughter of Henry and Betsey J. Burleigh, aged twenty-three years and fifteen days.

During her sickness she was calm and patient. A few hours before her death, she offered prayer, and expressed an earnest wish for her friends to meet her in the kingdom. She fell asleep in Jesus calmly and peacefully, to await the morning of the resurrection, when father, mother, and sister, if faithful to God, will meet her, never more to part.

B. J. Burleigh.

Locke. Died in East Weare, N. H., May 10th, my mother-in-law, Mary Locke, widow of the late Eld. Benjamin Locke, aged seventy years and nine months.

Mother endured great suffering the last five months of her life. She bore it with patience and christian fortitude, constantly giving testimony to the reality of the faith in the gospel hope of the soon coming of Jesus and the resurrection. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. Hastings, from Ruth 1: 16, 17.

The Floods in Italy. A letter from Florence to the New York Post gives interesting details of the recent disastrous inundations in Northern Italy. The three fertile provinces of Ferrara, Pavia and Novara have been overflowed by the waters of the Po and the Ticino almost at the time when the abundant harvest is ready for the sickle. The province of Ferrara has been especially afflicted. At present it is scarcely more than one great lake. Nearly one hundred miles of territory are overflowed, while more than forty thousand people are reduced to extreme misery. But a few days since these poor creatures were joyful in the anticipation of an unusual harvest; now they are suffering for the most urgent necessities of life. Many who retired to bed rich awoke to find their possessions so completely swept away that not even the site could be approximately indicated; and many who were lately masters are now mendicants. The total loss, so far as yet known, is about thirty millions of francs. To add to this great misfortune, pestilence is likely to follow. When the waters retire the rich crops, decaying beneath the fervid heat of a summer sun, will fill the air with miasma for miles beyond the scene of the inundations. Public subscriptions have been started in aid of the sufferers.

The Cost of Strikes.—A statement, apparently made after careful investigation, of the cost of the New York strikes, gives statistics which are worthy of the most thoughtful consideration. It estimates the total number of strikers at 61,050 of whom there now remain idle 11,493. Of those who have returned to work, over 27,000 are working at ten hours a day, and over 36,000 at eight hours a day—that is, four-sevenths have attained the object of their strike and three-sevenths have not. The total body of strikers comprised about three-fourths of the whole body of men working in the shops of New York city; so that some idea of the extent of the interruption of business will be gained at once, affording a hint of the stupendous costliness of the operation.

We are, therefore, prepared to accept as reasonable the estimates that the strikes thus far have occasioned an aggregate loss to the employers of $2,043,550, and to the workingmen in wages a loss of $1,674,950. The same rate would roll up an annual aggregate of nearly $42,000,000. This it is observed, is merely direct loss, such as there is no difficulty in computing, and it by no means includes the sum of damages and injuries to business flowing from such strikes.—Boston Journal.

Another Terrible Earthquake.—Advices just received from Hong Kong, China, state that a recent earthquake almost completely destroyed the large seaport town of Hamada, in Japan. The number of people killed is estimated roundly at five hundred. Many large fissures and crevices opened up in and about the town, from which sea-water gushed forth in plentiful streams.

A Hot Day.—Yesterday (June 30) was the hottest day we have experienced in Boston this season. The horse-cars were not permitted to move faster than a walk throughout the day, and even with this precaution, we learn that one or two animals died from the effects of the heat.

Strikes.—The London Advertiser, referring to the strike going on in England, says from east, west, north and south comes grave and stirring news. On every hand, crises are impending, and those upon whom we have looked as contented people are "striking" for their "rights."

In Brief.

—— A Chinese temple was recently consecrated in San Francisco. It contains seventy-five gods; two of them eighty feet high.——There are said to be in Switzerland 1,556,000 Protestants, against 1,084,655 Catholics. The Catholics have gained ground so rapidly even at Geneva, the old cradle of Calvinism, that they now number in that canton no less than 47,857, against 43,606 Protestants.——A crisis in the French Cabinet is expected shortly, the members of the Right in the Assembly having resolved to actively oppose the Government. Marshal McMahon is proposed as the successor of Thiers, in case he resigns.

Davis, for the Committee.

New York State Campmeeting.—The undersigned committee, appointed at the recent annual conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But, on account of other meetings being held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided on by conference. It will therefore commence August 10th, the Lord willing, and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind, and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to this feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in this State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

OUR LAST EFFORT.

"The Judge standeth before the door."—Jas. 5: 9.

The evidence points to 1873 as the time when Christ shall come, and we shall be called to give an account of our stewardship. The warning must go forth. Immediate action is demanded to give a distinctness to the cry—"Behold! the Bridegroom cometh!" We are already engaged in this work, and are sending out tracts; also receiving funds for this purpose. Let all who have hearts that beat in this direction, pray to the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest. Send funds or pledges for this purpose to Geo. T. Adams, Agent of the Adv. Chris. Pub. Society, or to L. T. Cunningham.

Hoosick Valley Tent.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. Sibley, S. G. Mathewson, H. K. Flagg, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

I wish to say we have made arrangements, and bought the timber standing on the Springfield camp-ground, of eight acres, for one thousand dollars, and if any of the brethren wish to help us by taking stock of from $25 to $100, they will be sure of their money back when the timber is cut off. This secures us the ground for eight years, if we need it so long, which is very doubtful; but we have to deal with one of no faith.

There are some three or four good places in the front circle for wooden tents, and there are two families on the ground to watch them. This will be a desirable chance to build since this arrangement, as board can be had on the ground, and any kind of lumber delivered, and help obtained to put them up. H. Munger.

Fourth of July Meeting at Kingston, N. H.—The groves in which for many years this meeting has been held, being no longer in existence, and no other good one being accessible, the meeting this year will be in the Chapel, near Bro. Gale's residence. Elders G. W. Burnham, B. D. Haskell, W. Burnham, and C. Cunningham are expected to be present; and it is hoped that some others will be able to attend. We trust that there will be a general rally of the lovers of Christ in all the region to this meeting, and that the "form of the fourth" will be in the midst, as in years past. C. Cunningham, by request.

Fourth of July Meeting in Kingston, N. H., in the new meeting-house in West Kingston, near the great pond, on the main road from Kingston Plains to Haverhill, about two and a half miles from East Kingston station. Cars arrive from Dover ten minutes before nine A. M.; from Boston, fifteen minutes past nine A. M. We hope to see a large gathering. Elders L. T. Cunningham, E. Cox, and others will be present, we expect. Provision will be provided on the ground, without money and without price. All who wish to be carried by team, can be accommodated by writing to R. W. Currier, East Kingston, as soon as Monday before the 4th, so that teams can be engaged and on the ground for reasonable fares.

R. W. Currier, for the Committee.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

DRAWING WATER.

I had drank with lip unsated
Where the founts of pleasure burst;
I had hewn out broken cisterns,
And they mocked my spirit's thirst.

And I said, life is a desert,
Hot and measureless and dry,
And God will not give me water,
Though I pray and faint and die.

Spoke there then a friend and brother—
"Rise and roll the stone away;
There are founts of life upspringing
In thy pathway every day."

Then I said my heart was sinful—
Very sinful was my speech;
All the wells of God's salvation
Are too deep for me to reach.

And he answered, "Rise and labor,
Doubt and idleness is death;
Shape thou out a goodly vessel
With the strong hands of thy faith."

So I wrought and shaped the vessel,
Then knelt lowly, humbly there;
And I drew up living water
With the golden chain of prayer.

AN ADDRESS.

J. E. CLARK.

MY DEAR BRETHREN:—Permit me to address you on the glorious subject which most concerns us all. It is about thirty-eight years since Bro. Wm. Miller first began to publish the doctrine of the advent near. This doctrine I embraced in the yeer 1844. Having passed through nearly thirty years experience in this cause, I am prepared to say a few things that may be of some use to many persons. I have heard the good, honest, old farmer of Low Hampton, N. Y., preach, and I am fully satisfied he was sincere in what he preached, and God was with him. Thousands were melted to tears, and found peace in believing in Jesus, and joy in looking for his coming to give reward to his people. We look back to those days with delight, in calling to remembrance the time when ye endured a great fight of afflictions. We are exhorted by the apostle—"Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." "We have need of patience"; "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." "Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." We have not followed cunningly devised fables in going out to look for God's Son from heaven; although the world and the cold-hearted churches call it all "moon-shine," "a delusion;" yet, we know in whom we have believed, and we are able to meet our opponents with Bible in hand, and say unto them—"Thus saith the Lord." Although our enemies have circulated false reports about us from time to time, yet we freely forgive them, knowing that it is through their ignorance of our faith, or for the want of a better spirit, they do these things. Wherever this subject has been preached to the people, with fairness, it has produced a general reading of the Scriptures, our enemies being the judges. This cannot be called a bad effect.

The fruit has produced a complete revolution with a large number in their faith and hope. Many did not believe Christ was coming again personally to the earth; or if some did, they did not have a distinct idea of his coming soon. They did not see the necessity of watching for and expecting him in this generation. Many such are now anxiously looking for and expecting the Savior very soon to appear. I am sorry to say there are many, even of those who profess to believe in these things, who are slumbering over this important subject—the soon coming of the Son of man, and the day of judgment. Many are contending about disputed points of doctrine, and many have left the simplicity and the all-important part of our blessed hope, and have become cold in their feelings, and indifferent to their soul's salvation and a readiness to meet the Judge of all the earth at his appearing. There is great need of a revival of God's work among us. Many of you, my brethren, can witness to what I am saying. Many doctrines which are being promulgated among us are not calculated to feed the church, and to build us up in the most holy faith. But we have the consolation of knowing that some are holding fast the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus, and of being made like him. The signs of these times are indicative of the speedy coming of our dear Savior.

Now, my dear brethren, I ask of you "one thing," all of you, throughout this wide world: Lay aside every thing that does not tend to purify your souls, and fit you for translation, and to love each other, and the coming of Jesus. We may profess to believe in many theories; but remember, theories alone will not save us. Distracting views tend to divide and cause coldness, ill will, and a low state of grace and christian enjoyment. The devil rejoices to see Christians disputing, and dividing, and their love growing cold. O that the divine Spirit's influence may be heeded—"Grieve not the Holy Spirit." It is "not by might, nor by power; but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Can you not watch one hour? Yea, can we not watch a few days more? Shall we by unfaithfulness lose the kingdom at last? Would you meet the loved ones that sleep in Jesus? Then be faithful a few more days, and it will pay you well. Lay aside the vain fashions of the age, and be a pilgrim and a stranger; travelers to the city of our God. The die will soon be cast. These are important moments, fraught with mighty consequences. The last prophecy is being fulfilled; the last promise of God will be verified, "Surely I come quickly." Who will be saved? Millions will go down to death—an eternal night.

My Bro., let me ask you personally, Are you living day by day as did Enoch of old, walking and talking with God, all ready for translation? This is the only true and safe position to occupy—all ready. "Blessed is he that watcheth." I know you all desire to be saved when Jesus comes; but there must be a great moral change wrought in many of our hearts before we shall be ready to enter in to that pure kingdom and city of our God. We must be free from spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; and our robes must be washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. We must exhort one another daily; and so much the more as we see the day approaching. What a fearful, dangerous period we live in. Destruction will soon come. Let us arouse ourselves, one and all, to the battle of the Lord against the mighty. Let us not mix with the divisions of these times, nor stop to contend who shall be the greatest; but let our conversation be in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior. Let us be like servants, who wait for their Lord, and our work done, and well done.

The moral heavens are gathering thick about us. Can we be unmoved at the sight? The last dreadful plagues are about to be visited upon our world; and shall we hear that voice saying unto us "Depart"? O may we have grace to endure unto the end. "Soon, soon, Jesus will come." Show your love for God, and dying men about you. The time is about out. A few days more only, to do a mighty work, to show your love and faithfulness to God. Shall the blood of neighbors and friends be found upon our garments? God forbid. Then away with your folly and worldly-mindedness, pride, the honors of this world, self-will, and bigotry; and be in that condition to discover the impending danger and ruin so soon to come. Let all the friends of Jesus, who profess to believe in this blessed hope, remember the joy of our souls when we first believed in the precious promises. Why is your love grown cold? Have you neglected duty, or restrained prayer? I have seen your countenances lighted up with a beam of glory as the subject of the soon coming of the Lord was being presented; have you lost confidence in the soon coming of Jesus? We have never had such good Bible reasons to expect the Lord since the first sound was made, as at this present time. Now is the very time to watch and be faithful to God. Go on, my brethren, in well doing; encourage the weak ones around you. The time is at hand. Be watchful, and strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to die. I hope soon to meet you where sighing and sorrowing will have an end.

"Oh when shall we meet again,
Meet ne'er to sever?"

Let me exhort you to faithfulness and prayer, and to hold fast that thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

And now to all men who may read this address, I would ask, What is your prospect after the scene of this short life shall have closed? O speedily haste away to the Savior of lost men, for there is a fountain filled with blood, in which you may wash and be made clean. The Judge of all the earth is at the door. How would you appear, with what sorrow of mind, should he come to-day? O make your peace with God before it shall be too late.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER EIGHT.

It may seem to some, perhaps, that if Spiritualism is to become a counterfeit so plausible, and be supported by miracles so abundant, in order that it may become a strong delusion to its victims, and lead them to believe a lie, they are thereby forced, in some degree, to believe it; and hence should be measurably excused from the guilt of such a belief. But they are led to believe it rather because they love it, than from any necessity, or seeming necessity. Can the miracles of Spiritualism alone convince one who loves God and his word and his ways that that movement is of God, when it comes denying the Bible and offering the philosophy of Satan and the doctrines of devils as the system which its miracles sustain? How loose must be the morals of those professors of religion who can let the question of their acceptance of Spiritualism hang upon the reality of its miracles; as though they have no difficulty with the rest of the system, whether its morals or doctrines. If they think it more likely that God should come to them offering the immoralities and blasphemies of Spiritualism, than that Satan should come supported by the miraculous power of Spiritualism, the fault is theirs, and theirs alone, and shows how little they know or care for the word or ways of God.

In how many instances given in the Bible do we find miracles attributed to Satan and his emissaries among men. Have these would-be-victims of Spiritualism never read of the Egyptian magicians, who wrought greater miracles in opposition to Moses than any we yet find in Spiritualism? Have they never read that "there shall arise false Christs and false prophets, showing great signs and wonders"? and of "the man of sin, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or is worshiped," whose coming is "with all power and signs and lying wonders"? These are a few of the many such passages found in the Bible, the most striking of which refer to the Spiritualist movement; and are given to those who read or hear as the faithful warnings of the Lord, that those who have an ear to hear may not be caught in the snare. If they have never read them, they have not much interest in their Bibles. If they have read them, but do not listen to them, they may not charge God with neglect, if they like to listen to the delusion better than to his warnings against it, though they are thus caught in the snare.

Yet the Lord, far more anxious to save them than they are to save themselves, does not leave them to perish in their heedlessness and stupidity, without further faithful, personal warnings from his servants. But if they will not read the Bible warnings for themselves, nor hear them from those who would call their attention to them, there seems no hope for them. When they thus turn away their ears from the truth so persistently, there seems no hope for them but to be caught in Satan's snare. When it becomes evident that they will not hear God in his word nor by his servants, they are delivered over to Satan to believe a lie through "the strong delusion" of Spiritualism.

THE WATCHMEN'S ALARM IN VIEW OF THESE PERILS. It cannot be expected that God's faithful watch-care over his flock would allow this apostasy to arise and head up in Spiritualism, offering a plausible counterfeit for Christ's coming and kingdom, at a time when the waiting church are expecting the true one, without many earnest warnings and protests from his faithful servants. The warnings which he has revealed concerning this apostasy must be given to the world and a careless church, whether they will hear or forbear. The same God who warned the world of the judgment approaching in the days of Noah, of Lot, of Jeremiah, and of the apostles (concerning Jerusalem's destruction), has given us his estimate of the importance of a warning to this last generation, by devoting to it more of the prophetic word than to any previous thousand years of the world's history.

The Lord's coming and the judgment have ever been preached in the church, with more or less of that solemn interest which pertains to these themes. In fact, nearly all the divines and theologians of note in the past, whose writings have come down to us, were ardently interested in the coming of the Lord. They wrote and talked and preached about the coming of Christ and the judgment, but were not permitted to see the signs, nor hear of their fulfillment in their day. This blessed privilege has been reserved for us, who live in these days of peril. Hence we may say of our privileges, who seeing the signs of the end coming to pass, and rejoicing in hope, feel to look up and lift up our heads, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh. We feel the force of what Christ said of his days, that "many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them." Matt. 13:17.

DR. HOLLAND ON THE SUNDAY QUESTION.

Of the importance of the observance of the Sabbath, in the vital economy of the American people, there is no longer any doubt. With all the periodical rest it brings us, we still find ourselves overworked; and the wrecks of paralysis are strewn around us on every hand. Without it, we should find ourselves despoiled of our most efficient and reliable safeguard in the dangers which beset the paths of business enterprise. As a matter of economy, therefore—as a conservative of health and life and the power to work—the Sabbath, observed strictly as a day of rest from secular labor, is of importance. We cannot afford to give up the day, and we shall never be able to afford to give it up to labor, either in city or country. Experience has settled this point, and yielded upon every hand its testimonies to the wisdom of the divine institution. As a measure of social, moral, and physical health—as a measure of industrial economy—the ordination of a day of periodical rest like that which the Sabbath brings us would come legitimately within the scope of legislation. If we had no Sabbath, it would be the duty of the State to ordain one; and as we have it, it is equally the duty of the State to protect it, and confirm to the people the material and vital benefits which it is so well calculated to secure.

There are certain other facts connected with the observance of the Sabbath in America which are quite as well established as the one to which we have alluded, the most prominent of which is, that the high morality and spirituality of any community depends uniformly on its observance of the Sabbath. We do not believe there is a deeply religious community in America, of any name, that does not observe one day in seven as a day specially devoted to religion. The earnest Christian or Jewish workers everywhere are Sabbath-keepers in their separate ways and days. It is very well to talk about an "every-day Christianity," and better to possess and practice it; but there is certainly a precious little of it where the Sabbath is not observed. The religious faculties, sentiments, and susceptibilities, under all schemes and systems of religion, are the subjects of culture, and imperatively need the periodical food and stimulous which come with Sabbath instructions and ministries. The prevalence and permanence of a pure Christianity in this country depend mainly on what can be done for them on Sunday. If the enemies of Christianity could wipe out the Sabbath, they would do more to destroy the power of the religion they contemn than all the Renans or Strausses have ever done or can do. They understand this, and their efforts will be directed to this end, through every specious protest, plea, and plan.

The most religious and earnest of the Catholic clergy of Europe lament the fact that the Sunday of their church and their several countries is a day of amusement. They see and acknowledge, that without the English and American Sabbath they work for the spiritual benefit of their people at a sad disadvantage. It is this European Sabbath, or Sunday, which we are told is to come to America through her foreign population. We hope not. We would like to ask those who would rejoice in its advent, how much it has done for the countries where it exists. Go to Italy, France, Spain, Ireland—to any part of Germany, Catholic or Infidel, and find, if possible, any people so pure, chaste, truthful and benevolent, as the Sabbath-keeping communities of America. It cannot be done. The theatre, the horse-race, the ball, the cricket-ground, the lager-beer saloon, have nothing in them that can take the place of the institutions of religion. They are established and practiced in the interests of the animal, and not at all in the interest of the moral and intellectual side of humanity. They can neither build up nor purify. They minister only to thoughtlessness and brutality. So much, then, seems obvious: 1st. That we cannot do without Sunday as a day of physical and mental rest. 2d. That either as a consequence or a concomitant, moral and spiritual improvement goes always with the observance of Sunday as a religious day. And, 3d, that Sunday, as a day of amusement simply, is profitless to the better and nobler side of human nature and human life.

Now the questions relating to the opening of parks, libraries, reading-rooms, etc., in great cities on Sunday, are not moral or religious questions at all,—they are prudential, and are to be settled by experiment. It is to be remembered that there are large numbers of the young in all great cities who have no home. They sleep in little rooms, in which in winter they have no fire, and can never sit with comfort. They are without congenial society. They have not the entree of other homes; and they must go somewhere, and really need to go somewhere. Christian courtesy does much to bring them into Christian association, and ought to do a thousand times more. The least it can do is to open all those doors which lead to pure influences, and to the entertainment of the better side of human nature. A man who seeks the society of good books, or the society of those who love good books, or chooses to wander out for the one look at nature and the one feast of pure air which the week can give him, is not to be met by bar or ban. Whatever feeds the man and ignores or starves the brute is to be fostered as a Christian agency. The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath. That is not religion, but pagan slavery, which makes of Sunday a penance and a sacrifice. It is better that a man be in a library than alone all the time. It is better that he wander in the park than even feel the temptation to enter a drinking-saloon or a brothel. The Sunday horse-car is justified in that it takes thousands to church who could hardly go otherwise. The open library is justified in that it is a road which leads in a good direction. The roads devoted to Sunday amusement lead directly away from the Christian church. All pure ways are ways that tend upward, toward God and heaven.—Scribner's for July.

EXPERIENCE AND INCIDENTS.

R. L. BITLER.

"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" is a question often asked by the followers of Jesus as they look out upon the great harvest field—the world. The question is asked in all sincerity, the persons desiring to please and obey the Lord in all things. But when duty is made plain, how our nature shrinks from it, and frequently the prayer is offered, "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me."

After my conversion, I felt an interest in my friends and neighbors, and tried to persuade them to give their hearts to God; and I felt as though I would be willing to do almost anything to bring them to Christ. But after a time, I was put to the test. "Go work in my vineyard," was the command of the Lord. I was willing to work in my own way, but I could not get the consent of my mind to labor in the Lord's way. What a miserable time I had, while the flesh warred against the spirit. Finally, the hand of disease was laid upon me, and I was brought nigh unto death. O how I regretted my disobedience, and in humility repented of the same. In mercy the Lord raised me up, when I started, Jonah-like, to do the work assigned by the Lord. It was then I learned that His yoke is easy, and his burden is light. How grateful I felt to my heavenly Father, and how gladly I obeyed.

I finally felt it to be duty to go South. While there, I tried to labor as the Lord directed; having no human counsellor, I then learned to take everything to the Lord in prayer, and I found in him a ready friend and sympathizer. I found plenty of work to do in that large field. My work was mostly among the colored poor. Prejudice against the northern people in that region was strong; although there were a few who were sociable, but they were not willing to worship with the blacks. Hearing of the sickness of a white man, I went to see him. I was simply asked to be seated after I had read and prayed with him, when I was invited to take off my wrappings and stay all night. I declined the invitation, but promised to call again. Next day he died. I went to the house of mourning, intending to attend the funeral, but was told that it was not customary for women to follow a corpse to the grave. The wife of the deceased with all her female friends remained at the house.

In one of my walks through the country, I met an old colored woman, one hundred and three years old. Her health was good, and her mind was clear, but she was not a christian. When I asked her how so soon she expected to get ready for the coming judgment? she answered evasively, "O, sometime!" I told her the Lord had been very merciful in sparing her life so long, and now she ought to spend the remainder of her days in his service.

After leaving the woman of one hundred and three years, I continued my journey a little further, when I met another aged woman. She was ninety-seven years old. When I introduced myself, and told her what was my object in coming, she rose, crossed the room, gave me her hand and said, "I'm glad to see you. I'll meet you in heaven." Several of her friends were there from a distance, who were christians. We suggested that a season of prayer might be profitable, to which she readily consented, and enjoyed it exceedingly, as she was not able to attend public worship. What a contrast! One ready for the coming judgment; the other expecting to be forgiven, far in the future. One unwilling to speak the name of Jesus; the other loth to cease telling what great things the Lord had done for her.

One Sabbath morning, we were surprised to meet a Baptist minister, who said he had come to preach at our place of worship. He had not been invited to preach there, but as no one objected, we announced an appointment for him in the afternoon. He preached on baptism, and misquoted several passages of Scripture, which I corrected after his sermon was concluded. He also stated that it was not only the christian's duty to be baptized, but they should also assume the name of "Baptist," "as the converts did on the day of Pentecost"! We were also informed the minister had been sent by the "Baptist Missionary Society" to organize a church. All were then invited to join. None, however, responded to his call. He then invited all who wished to be baptized to come forward. None presented themselves, although there were several who wished to be baptized. Disappointed in his first effort, the minister made another appointment for evening, and requested the people to raise the money to pay his expenses. It was a strange request for one to make to those poor people. No one came to hear him in the evening, and he left next morning just four dollars poorer than when he came.

I was particularly interested in a backslider who attended meeting regularly and could talk religion very well; but on being urged to return to Father's house, said—"I must have time to consider." We felt sad at the thought of leaving without seeing her converted. The last morning of our sojourn came, and "Fannie" rose quite early and started out to invite the people to come to meeting, as that was my last Sabbath there. In our afternoon meeting, while we were singing, Fannie fell on the floor, and shouted the praises of God. She afterwards rose and told what the Lord had done for her. On bidding her good bye, she asked an interest in our prayers. We learned some time ago, from a friend, that she was a working christian.

A DREAM OF HEAVEN.

D. N. SMITH.

He "that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully," saith the prophet. About eighteen years since I had a dream, or vision, which I shall never forget, and have no desire to forget. I was in a christian mother's home, stopping for the night, and after retiring to rest, and falling asleep, I thought there were two lovely beings who took and carried me very swiftly until we came to a beautiful place, having beautiful mansions. We associate with the idea of mansions, brick, or stone, or marble, or wood; but there was nothing of this kind in those mansions. There is nothing upon earth to which I can compare them, and I cannot find language to describe them; so I will call them heavenly mansions. Earthly mansions are generally isolated, but these were upon a beautiful street, side by side, surrounded by beautiful foliage of living green. We stopped and entered one of them, and the sensations experienced were extremely delightful.

They then took me to a beautiful plain, on which were rows of trees, dressed in living green; and there was something shone upon them which gave them the appearance of being tinged with gold. In the language of the poet—

"O the transporting, rapturous scene
That rises to my sight;
Sweet fields arrayed in living green,
And rivers of delight."

I thought my powers of vision were greatly increased. I could see much further than ordinarily. After viewing this beautiful scene for a while, they took me and set me down among some wooden buildings, and left me. What a contrast! Transported from heaven to earth. This was but a dream. I don't know but God could make a more beautiful place, but I should be perfectly satisfied with one of those mansions. And I don't know as it was anything like what Christ has prepared for his people; but it has served to wean me from this world. My heart is set upon those beautiful scenes, or something better, that Christ has prepared for them that love him.

I have never spoken of this but once, but I will now give it to you, hoping it will cheer some of the lonely pilgrims to the better country. We are literalists, believing in a literal city, having literal mansions; literal trees, bearing literal fruit; literal river of life; being literally raised from the dead, and having our literal bodies again restored. Seeing we look for such things, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus. In hope of eternal life in God's everlasting kingdom.

WHO IS SUFFICIENT?

E. OWEN.

Who is sufficient for the things
Thy word before us clearly brings?
Who lives for God, if saved or lost?
Who honors Christ, at every cost?

Whose life of Jesus savors sweet?
Who stands in him, entire, complete?
Whose words and actions daily show
They humbly walk with God below?

Who passes, with becoming fear,
The time of their sojourning here?
Who love—more than their daily food—
To do their dying fellows good?

Whose heart is free from all deceit?
Whose actions pure from self-conceit?
Who as himself his neighbor loves?
And knows that God his way approves?

Who has in God that simple faith
To venture all, for life or death?
Who feels, however things appear,
In darkest hour, the Lord is near?

Oh! help me, gracious, risen Lord,
To rest my all upon thy word;
O whisper frequently to me,
My grace sufficient is for THEE.

I fain would feel, my blessed Lord,
All things are working for my good;
That though all men leave me alone,
I am an heir to Jesus' throne.

"FIVE PIZEN PINTS."

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

An elder in the church, now dead and sleeping in Jesus, had come in the process of his investigation of Bible truth to consider some of the things popularly held as truth to be exactly the opposite, and only false. Having become settled, rooted and grounded in the belief, he boldly proclaimed his faith. The friends of other days forsook him. The church excommunicated him, and the people, to whom he preached, except a few, who would not go with him; but he still proclaimed his faith like an honest, God-fearing man. One of his old friends, a staid deacon, met a nephew of the elder, a while after he died, when the following conversation occurred:—

Bro. Q., "Your uncle used to be a good man. He was converted to God and run well for a while; but he got hold of them five pizen pints and they ruined him." One would think that "five pizen pints" would be enough to ruin any man; so fearfully ruinous, that it might be desirable to know what they were, and so we will state them. They were:—

1st. Man is unconscious in death.

2d. The wicked will be destroyed.

3d. The advent of Jesus near at hand.

4th. The kingdom of Christ to be a literal kingdom on the earth.

5th. Jesus Christ "the Son of the living God."

Perhaps the reader may fail to discover anything very "pizen" about them, being able to find abundant Scripture proof to sustain the elder; but that would not satisfy the deacon, as encompassing a doctrine about with Scripture is exceedingly meagre evidence for some people, who would give more for a cherished opinion, than they would for all the Bible in the world, uninterpreted by their philosophy. We can say for ourself, personally, however, that we heartily endorse "them five pizen pints."

THANK God for the big tent! It reminds one of the days when Grimshaw and Wesley made a gospel raid into Roughlee. We want a flashing up of the old-time christian heroes. Saddle-bags preached the gospel very well in olden times; but saddle-bags must be exchanged for railroads, and telegraph wires, and big tents. Instead of taking a whole day to whip up one fish from the water, we must swing out the great gospel-net, and sweep into the kingdom a whole school of them. Oh, for more big tents. Four long stakes and a big piece of canvas, and four or five christians on fire with zeal, have proved themselves able to shake Brigham's tabernacle, that cost one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.—Rev. T. De Wit Talmage.

AN INDIAN'S EXPERIENCE.—"Brothers, I have been long in the warfare; fifty-nine years on my way. I am seventy-six years of age. The winds have blown hard on this old carcass; but the good hope is here. I see you white people brought up at home, able to read, taught arts and sciences; and yet you live without Jesus! Poor me! I grew up wild, no father, brought up in the woods, yet I found him. Some of you have knowed me for years, and I'm a good boy yet. Poor me! couldn't read, knew nothing; yet gave Jesus my heart. The first Bible I ever had I took home, put under my pillow, and slept with it there. This old frame totters, the strong wind shakes it, and it must go down; but I bless Jesus, I'm under way to glory." Not a few wept and praised God, as Mingo gave his testimony.—Foster's Encyclopedia.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HOW TO PURIFY THE BLOOD.

It is pretty generally understood that health depends much upon the purity of the blood. And it is supposed that certain drugs and medicines possess a sort of magic power to purify the blood. It is supposed to be the peculiar office of these medicines to purify the blood; but somehow little is thought of the effect of the food which is eaten, as having a tendency to the purity or impurity of the blood. Food is taken for another purpose, to sustain life; hence it is not intended, or expected, to have any effect upon the blood.

But is not the blood formed from what we eat? And would it not be better to eat such food as will make good blood than to eat such things as must make impure blood, and then depend upon drugs and nostrums vile to purify it? We say, then,

1. Eat such food only as you are sure will form pure blood. If you do not want scrofulous blood, stop eating scrofula. Leave off taking into the system the impurities contained in animal oils, earthy salts, and indigestible condiments; and let your food be of the purest grains, fruits, and vegetables; and let your drink be the purest, softest water you can get. Thus you will cease to add impurity to impurity.

2. Take in large quantities pure atmospheric air, such as abounds out of doors; not of the kind that has been shut up in the house, heated by stoves, and breathed over and over again. Pure air is the best purifier of the blood. It is brought in close contact with the blood in the lungs, and quickens it and speeds it in its proper course.

3. Keep the skin, by bathing and proper clothing, in the best condition to throw off by natural perspiration the impurities that are already in the system. Nature, unobstructed, has a way of her own to cast out impurities. She will do the work well, if not hindered.

Let these rules be followed, and the blood will be purified, if it is not too late to purify it.—Health Reformer.

WEAK BACKS AND HARD SEATS.

The small of the back is the weak or strong point of every person. It is the centre of voluntary motion. Nearly three hundred muscles are directly or indirectly connected with the motions of which the small of the back is the pivotal centre. Hence, while those who are strong, and whose muscular systems are well balanced, know nothing of spinal weakness or vertebral distortion, invalids are forever complaining of this part of the body.

One very prominent cause of weak backs and crooked spines is, the unhygienic and unanatomical seats and benches of our school-houses, churches and halls; nor are the seats and benches provided on steamboats, railroad, or at stations or ferry-houses any better. It is impossible for any person to occupy these seats long without being forced out of shape. And when school children are confined to them for several hours a day for months and years, their backs will inevitably be more or less weakened, with corresponding deformity of body, for life.

If we go into private families, even into palaces of the opulent, we find the seats made more for show than for use. Girls suffer much more by using such seats than boys, for the reason that boys are taught to run, jump and exercise themselves all over and all through, while girls are expected to keep still and be pretty.

It is certainly one of the strange problems of the nineteenth century that no parent, teacher, or mechanic, will give any attention to anatomy or physiology in the construction of seats for the human body. Must our chairs, and sofas, and settees, and divans, and tete-a-tetes, and pews forever be dictated by fashion, and never conformed to nature? Must our tortured bodies forever be compelled to shape themselves to the seats, instead of the seats being adapted to our bodies? Go through all the great chair factories of the country, and you will not find a single article that is not put together in gross violation of the rules of health or comfort. If some Cooper, or Peabody, or Stewart, or Vanderbilt, or Astor, would invest a little million of dollars in establishing an immense chair factory "on strictly hygienic principles," he would do more to improve human health, promote longevity and remedy the back-ache, than any medical college in the land.—From "Back-ache" in Science of Health.

WHAT THE BRAIN FURNISHES.

The brain is the great electrical reservoir of the body, and furnishes electricity to all the nerves, without which not one of the numerous functions would be performed. Every nerve, however small, constitutes a perfect magnet, and in health represents the two forces, positive and negative, in equilibrium.

A disturbance of these electrical forces in the atmosphere is the cause of the convulsions of nature. When it moves according to natural laws, it bids the seed to arise from the earth, to bring forth its flowers and its fruits, to breathe its balmy fragrance over the bosom of nature.

When its equalization is disturbed, we see it flashing in the clouds, and hear its thundering voice roaring above us, and yet that same voice showers down upon us the blessing of the raindrop. It is this same electrical power from whose lips falls the dew when night covers the earth with her sable mantle, and the same agent which basks in the sunbeams, while they impart a fragrance to the flowers, and the luscious taste to the fruits. It is the loss of this power that causes our death. So all the organs of the body are affected, controlled, and acted upon by this subtle fluid.

We know that the nervous fluid and electricity are one and the same, for by severing the hypo-gastric nerve, digestion will cease, because deprived of its vital force from the brain; but if a current from a battery is applied to the nerve below the separation, digestion can be carried on in animals even after this life is extinct, by a proper application of the galvanic current.—*Mrs. S. THE TREE THAT NEVER FADES.

"Mary," said George, "next summer I will not have a garden. Our pretty tree is dying, and I won't love another tree as long as I live. I will have a bird next summer, and that will stay all winter."

"George, don't you remember my beautiful canary bird? It died in the middle of the summer, and we planted bright flowers in the ground where we buried it. My little bird did not live as long as the tree."

"Well, I don't see that we can love any thing. Dear little brother died before the bird, and I loved him better than any bird, or tree, or flower. O, I wish we could have something to love that wouldn't die!"

The day passed. During the school hours George and Mary had almost forgotten that their tree was dying; but at evening, as they drew their chairs to the table where their mother was sitting, and began to arrange the seeds that they had been gathering, the remembrance of the tree came upon them.

"Mother," said Mary, "you may give these seeds to cousin John. I never want another garden."

"Yes," added George, pushing the papers in which he had carefully folded them toward his mother, "you may give them all away. If I could find some seeds of a tree that would never fade, I should like then to have a garden. I wonder, mother, if there was such a garden."

"Yes, George, I have read of a garden where trees never die."

"A real garden, mother?"

"I cannot say how real; but in the middle of it, I have been told, there runs a pure river of water, clear as crystal, and on each side of the river there is the tree of life—a tree that never fades. That garden is heaven. There will be no death, no fading there. Let your treasures be in that life, and you will have something to which your hearts can cling without disappointment. Love the Savior here, and he will prepare you to dwell in those green pastures and beside those still waters.—Sunday School Visitor.

A GOOD REPUTATION TO HAVE.

The little story I am going to tell you happened just before the war, when every one was very, very busy. Soldiers were enlisting and going away from almost every home in the land.

One young man had volunteered, and was expecting daily to be ordered to the seat of war. One day his mother gave him an unpaid bill with money, and asked him to pay it. When he returned home at night, she said, "Did you pay that bill?"

"Yes," he answered.

In a few days the bill was sent in a second time.

"I thought," she said to her son, "that you paid this."

"I really don't remember mother, you know I've had so many things on my mind."

"But you said you did."

"Well," he answered, "if I said I did, I did."

He went away, and his mother took the bill herself to the store. The young man had been known in the town all his life, and what opinion was held of him this will show.

"I am quite sure," she said, "that my son paid this some days ago; he has been very busy since, and has quite forgotten about it; but he told me that day he had, and says if he said then that he had, he is quite sure he did."

"Well," said the man, "I forget about it; but if he ever said he did, he did."

Wasn't that a grand character to have? Having once said a thing, that was enough to make others believe it, whether they remembered it or not.

I wish all the boys in our land were as sure of a good reputation.—Christian Weekly.

LOVE MAKES THE DIFFERENCE.

"Oh, it is just as different as can be!" said one of my young friends."

"What is?" I asked.

"Why, being a christian. Every thing is so different from what I expected."

"What did you expect?"

"Oh, I used to think—'Now, if I become a christian, I shall have to walk just so; I shall have to go to church and prayer meeting; shall have to pray and read the Bible. It is so different from what I thought."

"Why, James, what do you mean?" I exclaimed. "You do go to church and to prayer meeting; you do read your Bible and pray; you do try to walk just right, do you not?"

"Oh, yes, answered James, looking up with a bright smile; "but then I love to do them. That makes all the difference. I love Jesus, and I love to do as he wishes me to."

Yes, love makes all the difference. Love is indeed the fulfilling of the law.—Sunday School Times.

DON'T SAY 'NO' EASY.

How is it you never go with bad boys, or get into any scrapes?" asked a little fellow of his playmate.

"Oh!" said the other, "that is because I don't say 'no' easy."

We thank the boy for his secret. It is worth a great deal more than a bag of money. I have no doubt saying 'no' as if you did not mean it, has ruined many a boy and girl. When any one tries to coax you to do a wrong thing, say "NO" as if you meant "no," and nothing but "no," and no mistake.

When Satan whispers for you to serve him and do wrong, and makes you great promises, as he did to the Lord Jesus in the wilderness, do not say "no" easy, but answer him as Jesus did, "Get thee behind me, Satan." That is a "no" he can understand.

REST.

I rest, I rest; for thou art near,
Forbidding every anxious fear,
Jesus, my Lord, my God.
In every storm my shelter thou,
My hiding-place, my Savior now,
My everlasting aid.

I rest, I rest. Faith keeps me still;
Love only asks that Jesus' will
May evermore be done.
While Christ directs my willing feet,
E'en toil is rest, and pain is sweet;
My heaven on earth's begun.

I rest, I rest, yet daily prove
New wonders in this scheme of love,
That bids sin's turmoil cease;
That purifies my sin-stained soul,
And gives me, every whit made whole,
This broad and lasting peace.

I rest, I rest, while hope still sings
Of joys beyond these earthly things,
In climes of bliss untold.
My home, sweet home, when toil is o'er,
There waits my crown on that blest shore,
My palm and harp of gold.

CHRISTENDOM LEAVENED.

O. R. FASSETT.

NUMBER THREE.

It is not "the doctrine," or "leaven" of the Sadducees which the mother church adopted, and with which she has fermented the whole of Christendom. May it not be, then,

The Leaven or Doctrine of the Pharisees?

What was their doctrine concerning the future life?

1. They believed the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, professedly at least, which is not THEIR doctrine, but the doctrine of the Scriptures. Paul, when apprehended and brought before the Jewish council, took advantage of this fact, when perceiving before him the two opposing sects; and "cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee; of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." Acts 23: 6. Thus he commits himself to the scriptural faith and doctrine of "the resurrection of the dead" with the Pharisees of his times, against the doctrine of the Sadducees, and Sadducees themselves.

2. The Pharisees had an added doctrine to that of the scriptural doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, which was brought from the heathen philosophy of the ancients, and that was "the immortality of the soul, or spirit, and a state of conscious rewards in death under the earth." This was "the leaven" or "doctrine of the Pharisees," and was not found in the Scriptures, either in Moses or the prophets. When Paul affirmed his faith in the resurrection, "then arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees; for the Sadducees say there is no resurrection, neither angel or spirit; but the Pharisees confess both." One thing too much they confessed; and that was the added doctrine to that of the scriptural doctrine of the resurrection. With this doctrine of spirit or ghost existence, as believed by the heathen world, they also adopted that of spirit communication with the living. "If a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God," say the Pharisees. Acts 23: 6–9. And in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, where the Pharisees' doctrine is set forth, the rich man is represented as desiring Lazarus to be sent to warn his brethren. Luke 16.

A certain writer remarks:—"Paul here publicly professes to be of those who held the anti-materialistic view of soul and spirit; turning a cold shoulder to those who advocated the doctrine of materialism."—McDonald. Not quite all this. "He professes to be of those who held to the" materialistic view of the resurrection of the dead; and no further. Never did he advocate the doctrine of "the soul's immortality," or a state of rewards under the earth, or of spirit communications, which was the faith of the majority of that sect in his day. Therefore he was subsequently rejected by them as a heretic. He appeals: "After the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust." Acts 24: 14, 15. This was all the faith he contended for—"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"—the hope of our twelve tribes—to which we "hope to come." Acts 26: 6–8. "I continue unto this day, witnessing . . . none other things than . . . that Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first to rise from the dead." Acts 26: 22, 23. In this respect, and only so far, he was a Pharisee in faith and doctrine, adhering closely to "Moses and the prophets," and what "they did say should come"; discarding tradition. It may be considered as certain that the family of St. Paul, though Hellenistic in speech (could speak Greek), were no Hellenizers in theology. The manner in which St. Paul speaks implies the most uncontaminated hereditary Judaism. "Are they Hebrews? so am I." "Hebrew of the Hebrews" is used for an Aramaic Jew, as opposed to Grecian, or Hellenist. The pious Hebrew was always in the attitude of expectation of the Coming One. "There was no lack of Hellenistic synagogues at Jerusalem, which at the season of the festivals would be crowded with foreign pilgrims, and become the scene of animated discussions."—The Life and Times of St. Paul, Conybeare, and Howson, by Bishop Simpson.

This historic fact sets St. Paul in a true light. His only hope of future life was through Jesus and the resurrection from the dead; discarding the Platonic or Hellenistic doctrine of the Pharisees. Without such a resurrection from the dead, he regarded that those who had "fallen asleep in Christ" have "perished" everlastingly. And if the dead rise not at all, there was no advantage to be gained in his life of toil and jeopardy. See 1 Cor. 15th chapter.

Says Gibbon: "To the authority of Scripture the Pharisees added that of tradition, several speculative tenets from the philosophy or religion of the eastern nations; and as the Pharisees, by their austerity of manners, had drawn into their party the body of the Jewish people, the immortality of the soul became the prevailing sentiment of the synagogue under the Asmonean princes and pontiffs."—vol. 1, pp. 530, 531. "The Pharisees (says Enfield, pp. 177, 178) arose soon after the return from the Babylonish captivity, in consequence of the introduction of hereditary institutions and allegorical interpretations. They maintained that "the soul of man is spiritual and immortal. In the invisible world beneath the earth, rewards and punishments will be dispensed. The resurrection of the body is to be expected. They hold to the migration of souls from one body to another."

"Some Jews embraced the Hellenistic culture not to speak of the Jewish school of Egypt, in which attempts to amalgamate Hellenism and Judaism had been continued for nearly two hundred years. Josephus furnishes us with a Jew completely Hellenized." M. Renan's Life of Jesus, p. 74. Below is found Josephus' faith, which expresses that believed by the Hellenistic Pharisees of his day.

"The Pharisees believe that souls have an immortal vigor in them, and that under the earth there will be rewards and punishments according as they have lived virtuously or viciously in this life." To the Greeks he writes:—"God hath determined the rising again of those very bodies which you Greeks, seeing to be dissolved, do not believe [their resurrection]; for while you believe the soul is created and yet is made immortal by God, according to the doctrine of Plato, and this in time, be not incredulous; but believe that God is able, when he hath raised to life that body," etc., etc. The intermediate state in a "subterraneous region," "a place allotted for souls," in "the bosom of Abraham," and in flames of torture, where there is a "chaos deep and large between" the souls of the good and bad, so that souls of just men that hath compassion cannot be admitted to the presence of the damned, nor one that is unjust, if he were bold enough to pass over it," is given as "the doctrine of the Pharisees" in Josephus' "Dissertation on Hades." Read it and compare with the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, spoken by our Lord to the Pharisees, in which you have the Pharisees' doctrine set forth both to rebuke and shame them.

Important Extracts.

The following extracts are of value in determining "the doctrine of the Hellenistic Pharisees" in the times of Christ and his apostles, to which I call special attention:—

"The Hebrews, Greeks and Romans located the souls of all the dead under the ground. Were it either desirable or necessary to demonstrate that the receptacle of human spirits was understood by the ancient nations—Egyptians, Jews, and Pagans of all superstitions—to be deeper than the ground, a very long induction of authorities could be introduced. We might fill a documentary evidence incontrovertibly clear and definite."—Alexander Campbell. He further adds—"We may dissent from their notion of place and other circumstances, without impairing the weight of the evidence in favor of such a state as was indicated by the word hades."—Ib. I think not, if Jesus intended to teach the Pharisees' doctrine respecting the intermediate state in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. He confirms their doctrine received from the pagan world, and there is no avoiding the conclusion, and "the place for the custody of souls is in a subterraneous region in the earth from the foundation of the world." Thus Jesus would be guilty of the inconsistency of warning his church against "the doctrine of the Pharisees," and teaching them in accordance with that doctrine, when he has them record a parable spoken to those Pharisees!

Dr. Campbell, in his "Sixth Dissertation," says—"From the time of the captivity, more especially from the time of the subjection of the Jews, first to the Macedonian empire, and afterwards to the Romans, as they had a closer intercourse with pagans, they insensibly imbibed many of their sentiments, particularly on those subjects wherein their law was silent, and wherein by consequence they considered themselves as at greater freedom. On the subject of a future state, we find a considerable difference in the popular opinion of the Jews in our Savior's time, from those which prevailed in the days of the ancient prophets. As both the Greeks and Romans had adopted the notion that the ghosts of the deceased were susceptible both of enjoyment and of suffering, they were led to suppose a sort of retribution in that state for their merit or demerit in the present. The Jews did not, indeed, adopt the pagan fables on the subject, nor did they express themselves entirely in the same manner; but the general train of thinking in both came pretty much to coincide. The Greek hades they found well adapted to express the Hebrew sheol. This they came to conceive as including different sorts of habitations, for ghosts of different characters."

Dr. Good confirms the same facts—"The popular tradition believed in most countries that this hell, hades, or invisible world, is divided into two very distinct and opposite regions by a broad and impassable gulf; that the one is a sort of happiness, a paradise, or elysium; and the other a sort of misery, a gehenna, a tartarus; and that there is a supreme magistrate, and an impartial tribunal belonging to the infernal shades, before which the ghosts must appear, and by which he is sentenced to the one or the other, according to the deeds done in the body. Egypt is generally said to be the inventress of this important and valuable part of the common tradition, and undoubtedly it is found in the earliest records of Egyptian history."—pp. 377–8.

Thus Dr. Good clearly and distinctly regards and states this doctrine to be "the common tradition." Of course, imbibed by the Jews of the Pharisaic school, it becomes the traditionary "doctrine of the Pharisees," and there is no avoiding the conclusion.

Macknight, in his note on the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, admits that our Lord's description is "drawn more from the descriptions" of the heathen, than "from the writings of the Old Testament." "It must be acknowledged that his descriptions of those things are not drawn from the writings of the Old Testament, but have a remarkable affinity to the descriptions which the Grecian poets have given of them. They, as well as our Lord, represent the abode of the blest as lying contiguous to the region of the damned (this perhaps is necessary to increase the joys of the righteous, as advocated by certain writers); and represented only by a great and impassable river, or deep gulf, in such a sort that the ghosts could talk with one another from its opposite banks." (That is social, surely.) "In the parable, souls [parable don't say anything about souls], where bodies were buried, know each other, and converse together, as if they had been embodied. In like manner the pagans introduced departed souls talking together, and represent them as having pains and pleasures, analogous to what we feel in this life; it seems they thought the shades of the dead had an exact resemblance to their bodies. The parable says the 'souls [not so] of wicked men are tormented in flames.' The Grecian mythologists tell us they lie in Pyriphlegethon, which is a river of fire, where they suffer the torments they would have suffered while alive, had their bodies been burnt."

Now shall we thus make Jesus to teach "the common tradition" of his times, and the doctrine of the heathen world, in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus? Nay, verily. Not we. We know the intent of that parable. It is to give his people a knowledge of the Scriptures and of history; as well as to rebuke the Pharisees for "making void the word of God by their tradition," not believing "Moses and the prophets"; and show contempt of "their doctrine" by personifying their "place in hades," they called "the bosom of Abraham" to be "Abraham's bosom" in fact.

So, according to the parable, as interpreted after "the common tradition," immaterial spirits and angels carried the immaterial spirit of Lazarus to "a subterraneous region in the earth, not regularly finished," and placed him in the spirit bosom of immaterial Abraham. The rich man died, and his body was buried, but his immaterial soul lifted up its immaterial eyes in flames and torment, and saw the immaterial soul of Lazarus in the immaterial bosom of the immaterial Abraham; and believing in the invocation of saints, he cried to the actual immaterial Abraham to send the immaterial spirit—Lazarus—to dip the tip of his immaterial spirit finger in (immaterial) water! is it? to cool his immaterial tongue, etc., etc. Thus does Jesus, by personating their place "the bosom of Abraham"—see Josephus in "Hades"—and making it actually Abraham, show them that they nullified Moses and the prophets.

The moral of the parable is—(1) A rebuke to the covetousness of the Pharisees. Luke 16: 13, 14, 19. (2) No conscious intermediate state in "hades" and "Abraham's bosom." Vers. 22–26. (3) No spirit communication with the living or the dead. Vers. 24, 27, 29, 30; Acts 23: 8, 9. And lastly, that their "doctrine" nullified and made void "Moses and the prophets" respecting the resurrection from the dead. "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." Ver. 31. While these Pharisees believed what was put into the mouth of the rich man—that the living would believe "if one went unto them from the dead" (v. 30); that a "spirit" might have "spoken unto Paul" (Acts 23: 9); Jesus teaches them the resurrection from the dead alone was the only means of the communication of the dead with the living: "Neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." Ver. 31. And how more effectually could he show contempt of their tradition than by personifying their "bosom of Abraham" in "hades," and making all souls or spirits of the righteous dead going into "Abraham's bosom" actually? And also that they did "not believe" and "hear Moses and the prophets?"

Let us show up this doctrine by the necrology of Moses. "Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years; and he died,"—"and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom" (the doctrine of Hellenistic Jews makes these patriarchs to be conveyed to "Abraham's bosom" centuries before Abraham was born); so of Seth, Enos, Methuselah, etc. "And Sarah died in Kirjath-arba"; "and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom." Thus, according to "the doctrine of the Pharisees," Sarah was "carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom" as soon as she died, and before the death of her husband and lord!! "Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years"; "and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom." Thus Abraham had the unspeakable felicity of being conveyed by angels at his own death into his own blessed bosom!! If this does not make nonsense of the Scriptures, I do not know what "doctrine" will. "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees."

MORE LOVE TO THEE, O CHRIST.

More love to thee, O Christ,
More love to thee!
Hear thou the prayer I make
On bended knee.
This is my earnest plea—
More love, O Christ, to thee.

Once earthly joys I craved,
Sought peace and rest;
Now thee alone I seek—
Give what is best.
This is all my prayer shall be—
More love, O Christ, to thee.

Let sorrow do its work—
Send grief or pain;
Sweet are thy messengers,
Sweet their refrain,
When they can sing, with me,
More love, O Christ, to thee.

Then shall my latest breath
Whisper thy praise;
This be my parting cry
My heart shall raise,
This still its prayer shall be—
More love, O Christ, to thee.

A NAMELESS NATURE.

C. GOUD.

While some writers freely admit that Adam was not created immortal, yet they claim that there are irrefutable objections to the idea that he was made mortal; hence they assume that he had a kind of nondescript nature, neither this nor that, but about half way between a nature, which, it seems, they are unable to name or define; but one which could have lived on unlimitedly, just as do the angels who kept not their first estate, and yet not death-proof; and they might add with equal propriety, just as Adam who kept not his first estate, but fell and was driven from his own habitation, lived nine hundred and thirty years, yet was not death-proof. For it is mere assumption to claim that those angels, as also Adam, were not created with a nature susceptible of dying, and needed foreign aid in order to live on unlimitedly; for the angels sinned, as also Adam, and were sentenced to die, and were removed from their former habitation, the former to (tartarosas) hell, the latter to till the ground for his life until the sentence should be executed upon them. 2 Pet. 2: 4; Jude 6; Gen 3: 23.

In Adam's case, we know that God had provided in the tree of life that very aid which his nature needed, in order to keep him from dying; not by giving him a new nature, but by sustaining his original or mortal nature, not being, in itself, death-proof. And by a parity of reason, we may argue that God had provided in the habitation of the angels, who sinned and fell, an ample antidote for the tendency of their mortal nature while on probation, just as he did for Adam in his; yet both, being shut out from that antidote because of sin, were doomed to die.

We propose to examine some of the irrefutable (?) objections to the idea that Adam was created mortal, or susceptible of dying. (1) If created mortal, says the objector, God's statement, that death would be incurred by eating of the forbidden tree, was incorrect, because he would have certainly died without eating of it. This objection is refuted and falls to the ground, when brought to the light of facts; for we are informed that the Lord God provided the tree of life, whose leaves, John says (Rev. 22: 2), were for the healing of the nations. Mortal nations, therefore, were contemplated in the creation of this tree; nor do we find the first intimation that it was designed to give a new kind of life, or change man's original nature to immortality; but to sustain the life of mortal nations while on probation. See Gen. 2: 9; Rev. 22: 2.

The second commandment given by the Lord God to man was to freely eat of the tree of life. Gen. 2: 16. Disobedience to this command would have been sin, and have exposed them to die as really as disobedience to the third commandment—"But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it," for both were God's commands, and therefore law, and sin is the transgression of the law. John 3: 4. And if, as we argue, Adam was mortal, and needed the tree of life to sustain him in life, and heal him of sickness, to abstain from eating freely of the tree would expose him to death, so death would have been the result of disobedience in either case. After he had sinned, there was no necessity of his dying; though not in his nature death-proof, if he could still have free access to the tree of life. See Gen. 3: 22. Thus the objection, that if man was created mortal, the statement of the Lord that death would be incurred by eating of the forbidden fruit was incorrect, is refuted.

Again, (2) it is claimed that when God told Adam if he ate of the forbidden fruit, he should die, it was tantamount to an assurance that he would not die unless he did eat thereof. This would be true on the supposition that he obeyed the second commandment, viz., to freely eat of the tree of life, to sustain his life, and used its leaves to heal him of disease, not otherwise. It is a well known fact, that ancient names were given to indicate the nature, object, design, or future history of the person or thing named. That this was the case in the names given to the two trees, now under consideration, is clearly proved by the reference to them in Gen. 3: 22—"And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us to know good and evil; and now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever." This fact of itself goes to show that man was created mortal, and must have food and medicine, or sicken and die, as other animals would; and therefore, to refuse or neglect these would seal his fate as really as being shut from the tree of life, with the earth curse against him.

Again, (3) the objector further claims, that if Adam was created mortal, he would just as certainly have died without eating of the forbidden tree as by eating, which would make God's instruction deceptive or meaningless, and Adam might have replied—I am already mortal, and therefore must die, whether I eat or not. With Gen. 2: 9, 16, and 3: 22, 23, before me, I can but marvel at this singular claim. Let us read them—"And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food, the tree of life also (for food and healing, Rev. 22: 2); in the midst of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil." . . . . "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying—Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it. . . . . And now lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever, therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden."

In the foregoing Scriptures, we have the following facts:—(1) Adam being mortal, liable to sickness and death while on probation, God provided the tree of life as a perfect antidote for these liabilities. (2) God commanded him to freely eat of it. (3) By so doing, he would live forever, even though he became a sinner. And (4) that to prevent his living forever, it was necessary to send him "forth from the garden of Eden" to deprive him of the tree of life. With what propriety then, may we humbly ask, is it claimed that Adam, if created mortal, would just as surely die without eating of the forbidden tree as he would if he did eat thereof? So far from this being the fact, if he had not been deprived of free access to the tree of life, he would be alive to-day, a mortal sinner.

I argue, therefore, from these facts, that Jehovah's warning to Adam, that by disobedience in eating of the forbidden tree, he would incur death ("the wages of sin" Rom. 6: 23), was neither deceptive nor meaningless, but of the highest import as the sequel has shown. And if Adam had claimed that being mortal he must die, whether he obeyed God or not, the Lord God could have replied—Adam, I have directed you to eat freely of the tree of life, which will sustain your life forever, and its leaves are an antidote for sickness; if you obey me, therefore, you will live forever; but if you turn from my commandments, and eat of the tree of which I have "said thou shalt not eat of it," I shall deprive you of the tree of life, and you will "surely die." Is it just to call this trifling on the part of God? Remember, kind reader, that man was never death-doomed until he disobeyed God, and was shut out from the tree of life.

It was sin, not physical poison, that produced this dreadful result. Rom. 5: 12. The claim that the tree of life possessed a property which, if partaken of once, would produce an entire change in man's physical and organic nature, from that in which God made him, and which he declared to be very good, to an immortal nature; and that the tree of the knowledge of good and evil possessed a native physical poison, which would poison man's nature, producing death in all the race, are, to my mind, entirely foreign to the word of God; for in Gen. 3: 22, we are informed what the nature of those two trees were, as we shall endeavor to show.

It is claimed that the forbidden fruit planted the seeds of death in man's physical system, who otherwise would have lived on until he had gained access to the tree of life, and become deathless; whereas the Scriptures teach that he was placed in immediate access to it on entering the garden of Eden, and the first commandment received from God on entering the garden was to freely eat of it. Gen. 2: 16.

Again, it is claimed that death is not the direct punishment for sin, but the result of physical poison, which God provided in the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, before man sinned, for the purpose of killing him if he ate of its fruit; thus virtually making sin and death a part of God's original plan; but where in the Bible do we find any authority for this singular claim? What is the testimony of Scripture on the nature of these two trees?

It is a well known fact, that the ancients, following the example of the Lord God himself, as in the case before us, gave names to indicate ideas; hence the names of these two trees indicate their nature and design, and are so explained by their author. But we find not in either of them the most remote indication of the idea set up in this claim. The name tree of life cannot signify to give life, for this Adam received direct from his Maker; it must then signify the preservation of life, not by changing man's original nature, but as food to nourish and sustain that nature in life, and this it would do though the eater be a vile transgressor, hence we read—"And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden (among which was the tree of life in the midst of the garden, see ver. 9), thou mayest freely eat" ("eating thou shalt eat," Mar.) Gen. 2: 16. "And now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever." Gen. 3: 22. In these two texts we have (1) the name by which this tree is designated; (2) man's relation to it while in the garden, and (3) its nature and effect upon him as a life-preserver, clearly stated by the Creator himself.

We come now to the forbidden tree. We find nothing, says the objector, in the prohibition, intimating that God threatened to kill Adam for eating. O no. He only deposited the poison in the tree for the purpose of killing him, if he ate of its fruits, (?) and that too, without giving him direct notice of the fact. (?) The tree looks pleasant, and is good for food, in their view, only the prohibition and its penalty stood in the way. Would this be deceptive? Does the name of this prohibited tree indicate that its fruit is to poison the eater to death, as set up in this claim? I think not. All the facts are against it. It is "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" (Gen. 2: 9) (or of right and wrong, not of poison, and death). The nature and object of this tree, then, to correspond with its name, must be to give the knowledge of good and evil to intelligent, accountable beings, not to poison their physical nature, as we shall see; a knowledge which he needed and must have to be a moral agent. No right government would hold a man accountable to its laws, who had no possible means of knowing them, or of knowing right from wrong; hence the publication of laws; nor would we suppose it necessary to transgress a right law, and incur its penalty, to learn what was evil, or wrong; but we should commend the man who, by a strict attention to such law, studied its authority, and his obligation to obey it; however crossing and trying it might be to his inclination, and thus obtain the knowledge of good and evil, or right and wrong. This was the Bible mode of obtaining it. Heb. 5: 14.

The forbidden tree, with the commandment, presented the law of God in its germ. It would give the knowledge of good and evil in two ways. (1) By trying and testing man's obedience and fidelity to his Creator, as the only law-giver, bringing his mind into trial, use, exercise, reasoning, on God's government, and his relation and obligation thereto. Hence Paul says—"Strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of USE have their senses exercised to discern both GOOD and EVIL." Heb. 5: 14. Isaiah also, speaking of the second Adam, Jesus Christ, who must pass the test of discipline, as did the first, speaks of his being restricted to certain kinds of food, "that he may know to refuse the EVIL, and choose the GOOD." Also of a time when he did not have this knowledge. Isa. 7: 15, 16.

Or (2) this tree would communicate the knowledge of good and evil by eating its fruit, in violation of God's command—"Thou shalt not eat of it." This the serpent well knew, so he tempted them with the idea of being gods, knowing good and evil, through disobedience, while he denied the penalty (Gen. 3: 4, 5), perhaps pointing to the tree of life in support of his lie—"Ye shall not surely die." Under this temptation, the first Adam chose the later mode of obtaining the knowledge of good and evil, sinned, and fell. By the former, the second Adam obtained the knowledge, and triumphed over the tempter and bore off the palm of righteousness in the law. See Heb. 1: 9. Thus we read of the first Adam: "And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us to know good and evil." Gen. 3: 22. By what means did he become so? by eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, surely. This is the Lord's explanation of the name given to this tree, and the serpent so explained it (Gen. 3: 5), and the woman so understood it. All agree that its name gave its nature and design, but not one intimation do we find of a physical poison in the tree or its fruit; unless it can be proved that the knowledge of good and evil is such.

Adam followed the serpent's mode of obtaining the knowledge of good and evil, which was by disobeying God. This was the crime, the transgression of the law, the sin, that brought death into the world; not by physical poison in the tree, but by transgressing God's law, whose penalty was death, of which Adam had full notice before the act. Hence we read—"When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death." James 1; 15.

Thus, when tempted by the serpent, our first parents lusted after the forbidden fruit. This lust, when yielded to, brought forth the sin of transgression by one man, that brought death into the world. Rom. 5; 12. It was by one man's offence death reigned. Rom. 5: 17. This was the judgment upon the race (verse 18), because in him they all sinned (verses 12, 18). He being the unit of the race, whatever was his fate was the fate of all. It was the disobedience of one man that made the many sinners, and sin brought death. Why? because the wages of sin is death. Rom. 6; 23.

Thus death is shown to be the direct penalty, or punishment, for sin; and not the result of a physical poison deposited in the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, for the purpose of killing Adam, if he ate of its fruit (see Rom. 7: 7, 13); but by being shut out from the tree of life, which alone could preserve his life forever in his original nature, mortal with no healing balm as an antidote for sickness, except such as was contained in the herb of the field, and these were cursed against him, as an incidental evil; he was to eat his bread by the sweat of his face till the penalty of the law, which had been denounced against his act, was executed upon him. See Gen. 3: 17, 19. I have dwelt upon this point because I consider it important, and in accordance with the foregoing is the entire testimony of Scripture from Gen. to Rev.

In further proof of man's original mortality, we refer to the incarnation of our Lord. (1) He must be the seed of the woman. (2) He must be made under the law. Gen. 3: 15; Gal. 4: 4. Why? because he had undertaken to redeem them that were under the law (Gal. 4: 4); and therefore must be tried and qualified under and by that very law which held the race. (3) He must have a body of flesh and blood. Heb. 10: 5, and 2: 14. Why? that he might be susceptible of dying. Heb. 2: 14.

Now Jesus took upon him our fallen nature, or he did not; if he did not, then he took Adam's original sinless nature. Which was it? if the former, then he was under sentence of the law as we are, and could not "by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him, . . . that he should still live forever and not see corruption." Ps. 49: 7, 9. Was he physically poisoned? But if the latter, then all is plain; for he had a body of flesh and blood like his brethren (sin excepted), that was susceptible of dying, hence mortal. How was Adam made "a little lower than the angels"? Ps. 8: 5; Heb. 2: 7. How was Jesus made? "A little lower than the angels." For what? "For the sufferings of death." Heb. 2: 9. Ergo, Adam was originally made mortal, susceptible of dying.

Our argument then stands thus: (1) Man's original nature was mortal, susceptible of death. (2) The tree of life, of which "God commanded Adam" to "freely eat," possessed the property necessary to nourish, heal and sustain him in his original nature, while on probation. (3) The name of this tree, as also the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, signify their nature and object, and are so explained by the Lord God in Gen. 3: 22. (4) It was disobedience to God's commands that brought death on Adam and his race. (5) Death was and is affected by his and their being shut out from the tree of life, and the earth being cursed against them (Gen. 3: 17), and not by physical poison received in the fruit of the forbidden tree. And (6), that the incarnation of Jesus Christ in man's original, sinless nature of flesh and blood, that he might suffer death to redeem us, is proof positive that man's original nature was susceptible of dying, though sinless. May faith and love control our tongues and pens, while we try to spread God's word from pole to pole.

OUR THOUGHTS.

L. A. WHEELER.

A thought is a very little thing. What of it? Have we not a right to think as we please? By no means, not if we are God's children. Let us see. A thought is a little thing, a very little thing; but look at some of the results. God thought, and the world came into existence. Eve thought upon the tree of good and evil, and it resulted in the fall of the human family. Noah thought, and an ark was prepared; the result—the world is peopled to-day. Abraham thought, and obeyed, and thereby became the father of the faithful. All the mighty inventions of our age once existed only in thought. No sin, however great, but was first a thought, and all righteousness has its beginning in the thoughts. The thoughts are the medium through which all propelling power acts, whether demoniac, human, or divine. Holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. Satanic influences operate upon our thoughts. Christ had to resist them, saying, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

We might influence each other. We are not always aware how much of our thoughts show themselves in our countenance. Others read them, more or less, whether we wish it or not. How needful, then, that the thoughts be pure, be right. All the nutriment the new man can receive is through the thoughts. It is by girding up the loins of the mind, that we turn ourselves, like the horse, this way or that, for "as a man thinketh, so is he." David said, "I thought upon my ways, and turned my feet into thy commandments." Listen to what the prophet Malachi says—"Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name; and they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him." Are our thoughts and words going into the book of remembrance to meet us at the judgment? Yes, and they will place us at the right hand or the left, when the decision is made. Isaiah says—"Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts." But how can we control our thoughts? Let Paul answer—"For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds, casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

What are these weapons, Paul? "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil; for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, praying always, with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints.' Then if we have the love of God to constrain us, our hearts will be where our treasure is.

NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

It is time to begin to think, talk, and arrange about the coming National Campmeeting at Springfield. It is now but little over a month to its commencement. We are expecting one of the most heavenly meetings we have ever held. Those present last year will remember the precious feasts which the Lord provided for his friends. The early morning "Tabernacle" meetings for those interested in the subject of holiness left hallowed associations, and their blessed fruits have lasted till the present hour. It is purposed to resume those meetings again this year. The time has arrived when all who wish to be ready for the coming of Christ should be making special preparation. As a people, we are settled in relation to the doctrinal points; and what each now needs most is a clean heart; without which we shall not be ready to meet Jesus.

We find the Lord is impressing his people more and more with the importance of this subject; but we fear many are shrinking back from it, because the enemy tells them they cannot live in harmony with the spirit of christian holiness; and, consequently, would bring a reproach upon the subject. This is the same story the deceiver tells the awakened sinner—"you can't live religion if you make a profession." One thing is certain: the Lord does not make such suggestions by his Spirit. Others may refuse to step into the "highway of holiness" lest they should become objects of remark, and perhaps be shunned by some of their former friends. The one first seeking Christ has the same temptations. Is it wise to listen to such whisperings of Satan? At our coming National campmeeting we hope to see a host who will give up all to Jesus,—make an entire consecration—and receive perfect love and peace.

We are anxious to have all come who have had experience in the "higher life," that they may be instrumental in helping others to find the pearl of great price. Let us come together for the special object to get nearer to Christ; to learn to live just right everywhere. We all need a christianity that will enable us to overcome all evil thoughts, words and deeds; a religion that allows no dishonesty, no backbiting, no evil speaking, no deceit, no impatience, no unkindness to any one; no joking, no fretting or scolding; in short, no unclean thing of any kind; a religion that makes emphatically a "new man." Let us not rest till we all have pure hearts; indeed, we cannot rest till we are entirely consecrated to Christ, so that it may be said without the least reserve, Lord use me for thy glory, just as seemeth good in thy sight. What is called "the blessing of santification" is the result of this entire consecration. Many mistake the good feeling for sanctification itself. The sanctification precedes the "great peace" and "perfect love;" but the change is as marked, as definite, as great, as the one at conversion. None but those who have experienced it are aware of the blessed results of entire consecration to the Lord.

Dear Brn. and Srs., we are most fully convinced that the time has come when this subject should be made specially prominent; (1) because it has been much neglected; (2) because it is necessary to fit us for the coming of Christ, which is an event now close at hand. Let us keep it in mind, then, that we must "follow PEACE with all men; and HOLINESS, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. 12: 14. We hope this subject will receive more than its usual prominence at all our compmeetings this year. Let special meetings be held at some hour each day, when those who are interested in this subject can feel free to express their feelings, and interchange their thoughts in a familiar manner. Such meetings will be found unusually interesting and profitable. The most disagreeable thing in the sight of God is sin; therefore the most pleasing to him is holiness. He says "be ye holy, for I am holy." Let us come up cheerfully to the standard. Let our daily prayer be—Lord, help me to live just as a christian should in every particular.

Bro. and Srs., come up to the great feast of tabernacles at Springfield, beginning Aug. 17th. Let us all rally around the standard of holiness, expecting great blessings from our coming King.

NORTH DANA, MASS.

We spent the Fourth of July pleasantly at No. Dana, Mass., in the tent-meeting, near the residence of Bro. Geo. A. Streeter. No. Dana is on the Athol and Enfield R. R., about ten miles from Athol. On our way, we stopped a night with Bro. James Hemenway, at Athol Depot. He is pleasantly situated in a romantic village, abounding in hills and vales, and a variety of inviting scenery. Bro. H. is one of the true men, and his judicious labors in Athol are being blest by the Lord. He intends to pitch a tent on the Common, and hold union meetings in it during the summer months. We think his plan is a good one, and will produce desirable results.

The meeting at No. Dana was held eight days in the old missionary tent, which was first pitched in Washington, D. C., in May, 1867. Brn. E. Morrill, J. Hemenway, Geo. A. Streeter, and Sister A. M. Barnes, were present at different times to declare the word of the Lord. We felt assured that our 4th of July meeting was more profitable and pleasant than any of the excursions, picnics, or celebrations, where people seek enjoyment on this anniversary day. We enjoyed our independence, in the Lord, and freedom from a desire to mingle in the fashionable pleasures, where aching, burdened hearts seek rest and find none. Jesus affords perpetual rest to those who trust their all in his hands. He is a satisfying portion. He is all in all.

No one can have sweet peace till they are united to Christ. All outside of him is void of true comfort. We know this to be true from experience. Those who seek to be satisfied with worldly pleasures are like those who chase bubbles to secure gems. They soon burst, leaving nothing but empty disappointment. It was not so with our meetings at No. Dana, July 4th. They left a hallowed influence to be remembered with pleasure. The heavy showers kept many from being present, and somewhat interrupted our exercises.

At six P. M. we met at Bro. Streeter's, and had a profitable season. This gave our deeply afflicted Sr. Luthera Weaver an opportunity to enjoy the occasion with us, which she esteemed very highly. She has now lain upon a bed of suffering about seventeen years. She has not been able to be moved from her bed but three times in five years, and at those times was thrown into fits by her extra sufferings. She loves Jesus and his appearing, and it affords her much comfort to receive letters from his friends. We would suggest that many write her, and inclose something to help secure the comforts of life.

BAPTISM.—Sr. Bruce was baptized in East Boston, Sabbath, July 7th. She is the one who was a Spiritualist lecturer for some eighteen years. She is now devoted to Christ We commend her to all the friends of Jesus. She intends going to Oswego, N. Y. May the blessing of the Lord attend her efforts to lead others to the Savior. She is in needy circumstances, but goes forth trusting in the Lord. She has a sick daughter to support. Let those who can, send her something to make her heart glad.

SR. INGHAM.—Sabbath, July 7th, we had the pleasure of seeing Sister Ingham at our meeting in Chelsea. Her husband, Bro. Wm Ingham, is still unable to do anything. His case is a sad one. Many remember his faithful labors in the Lord; but in consequence of an injury upon his head, he has been laid up for several years. We hope his christian friends, and all others who love Jesus, will remember the necessities of his family, and send them means to make them comfortable. Direct to Mrs. S. A. Ingham, Clementsport, N. S.

"MEETING KILLERS."—Some excellent things are said by Bro. Sheldon in this paper concerning "meeting killers." Let them be read with care, and treasured up for practical benefit. We have found the classes named to be great obstacles in the way of good conference meetings. Please turn and read again what Bro. Sheldon has said. It would make a valuable circular to put into the hands of all who attend prayer-meetings; but at least, let it be treasured up by all who read it; especially by ministers.

PHONETIC SHORT-HAND.—One of the most valuable arts which should be learned by every school child is Phonography. Graham's standard system is the best. The Synopsis, price 50 cts., and the Hand-book, price $2.00, may be ordered from this Office. Leading phonographic reporters—among whom we may mention our friend "C."—are unqualified in their commendation of Mr. Graham's system; which is claimed to be a great improvement upon the original or Isaac Pitman's Phonography.

GOOD BOOKS.—We have received two good books from Bro. H. L. Hastings. One is entitled, "Ebenezers, or, records of prevailing prayer"; the other contains Samuel Sharp's translation of "The Proverbs"; Charles Ellicott's translation of "Paul's Epistles to Timothy"; Henry Craik's translation of the Epistle to the Hebrews; and Samuel P. Tregelles' translation of the Revelation. These works can be had of Bro. Hastings, at 19 Lindall St., Boston, or at the Crisis office. Tregelles translates Rev. 1: 5, 6—"Unto him that loveth us, and freed us from our sins by his own blood,—and he made for us a kingdom." Price, single, 25 cts.; postage 2 cts.

A VALUABLE BOOK.—We have just received a new and valuable book, entitled "The Destiny of Man," by Wm. Erwin, of Painted Port, N. Y. It contains three hundred and twelve octavo pp. Bro. Erwin is a Methodist, and has been examining the subject some twenty years; and was not aware of what we, as a people, have been doing to spread light on the nature of man. Bro. Erwin endeavors to bring forth all that he finds in the Bible relating to the destiny of the wicked. He begins with Genesis, and takes the Bible through by course, and brings out the plain teaching of the Scripture in a very clear and forcible manner. The book is unanswerable. He shows beyond all controversy that man is not immortal, and that the wicked will be utterly destroyed after the judgment. We see but one fault in the work; and that is, the author may be a little too severe in his expressions against those who uphold the doctrine of eternal torment; but if there is any dogma that deserves to be treated severely, it is that of eternal misery; for we believe there is no other doctrine that is more dishonoring to God and his Son.

This book is well calculated to make a stir in the theological waters, and should have a wide circulation. It is neatly bound. Price $1.50, gilt $2.00, postpaid. For sale at the Crisis Office.

SPOILING MEETINGS.

Meeting killers are too numerous, and a few hints to prevent their ruinous depredations may not come amiss to the cause. They are not always a bad class of men, but are often found among our best brethren; and the worst feature about the matter is, they keep on killing meetings, and do not know that they have done any harm, and so kill another, and still another. Let me particularise:—

1. A social meeting is in full blast, and everything seems melting before it, when a brother gets up and introduces something entirely foreign to the current of the meeting, and tries to turn the meeting into another channel. All he says may be well upon a proper occasion, but under the circumstances, it is like throwing a cake of ice into the fire. When will brethren learn to keep in the current of the meeting?

2. Perhaps several ministers are present, and they must lengthen out a speech because they are ministers, and though all they say is good in its place, they kill the meeting. When will they learn to place themselves on a level with common brethren in a social meeting? Be just as short as any brother. If the heart is full, let it boil over, but do not monopolize the time because you can speak long, or love to speak long. It is no place for speech-making, or display of talents. Some seem to fear that it will not be understood that they are ministers unless they talk long. Well, better let it remain unknown than to make a meeting-killer of yourself. You are robbing your brethren, and that is not honest. I have seen more social meetings killed by preachers than by any other class of people. Let this thing be stopped. Half minute speeches in a large social meeting will do more good than long exhortations. There is a proper time for exhortation, and sermons, but not in a social meeting. Let us be patterns of brevity and promptness in such meetings.

3. Another class who cannot have their own way in spoiling social meetings by long speeches, or by introducing themes contrary to the current of the meeting, adopt another plan. They sit still, say nothing, and pull back like a balky mule. But I never knew one of these meeting mules to get blest. They generally have a hard time after meeting. Now, brother, which class of meeting spoilers do you belong to? Do you talk out of the current of the meeting? Do you talk long, and rob others? Or do you sit and hold back? Let us be in such meetings, earnest, prompt, and brief. When all act on this principle, we are sure of a good meeting. W. S.

EGYPT'S DESOLATION.

BRO. SHELDON:—A friend of mine wants to know when Egypt was desolate forty years, spoken of in the 29th of Ezek., 11th and 12th verses. Will you please give your views through the Crisis, and oblige your brother in Christ, NATHANIEL PHILLIPS.

No. 33 Ford St., Prov., R. I.

The passage referred to reads thus:—"No foot of man shall pass through it, nor foot of beast shall pass through it; neither shall it be inhabited forty years. And I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate forty years; and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries."

By reading from the 17th verse of the same chapter and onward, we learn that (1) this calamity was to overtake Egypt after the 'twenty-seventh year' of Israel's captivity; and (2) that it was to be in the days of "Nebuchaddezzar, king of Babylon." Prophecies must be fulfilled at the right time, as well as in the right manner; and the right time for this calamity to come upon Egypt was in the life time of Nebuchadnezzar. And it did come then, and the forty years commenced then. On this passage, Cooke's Bible has the following expository note:—"No foot of man," in the kafile or caravan, for purposes of trade—'no foot of beast,' driven from one part of the country for sale in another. . . . The 'forty years' of desolation determined upon Egypt bore a probable reference to their contempt for the forty years' sojourn of Israel in the wilderness. The return of the captivity took place in the reign of Cyrus, who, though a heathen, exemplified a desire to loose the bonds of the slave."

Not only did this prophecy begin to receive its fulfillment at the right time, during the life of Nebuchadnezzar, thus ending the "forty years" during the reign of Cyrus, but it is also true, as predicted in the 14th and 15th verses of the same chapter, that Egypt subsequently became a "base kingdom;" "neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations." The forty years here mentioned just covered the time that elapsed between the telling stroke of Nebuchadnezzar against Egypt, and the toleration granted the same people under Cyrus. W. S.

"ENSAMPLES TO THE FLOCK." Why is the religion of Jesus Christ—pure and undefiled religion—at so low an ebb? Is it not because ministers themselves lack a fullness of enjoyment? With hearts filled with the spirit of consecration, ministers will raise the membership to the same level, being "ensamples to the flock." But if ministers have but little relish for devotion, and turn all their energies to theorizing, the flock will drink in the same spirit. The "belief of the truth" is all right, but should not be disconnected from the "sanctification of the Spirit." Let us all drink from the fountain of "perfect love," as well as the fountain of truth. W. S.

TENT-MEETINGS.—After the close of the Iowa campmeeting, I pitched the big tent in Mifflin, Wis., where Bro. Philo Hitchcock has been sowing the seed of truth. Up to the present (July 1st), we have had a candid hearing. Baptism was administered yesterday. After we close here, we pitch in Wingville, Wis.,—a new field. W. S.

THE JUDGMENT.—In the bank of England is a curious machine into which sovereigns are poured, like grain into a mill. As they pass on one by one, all that are light weight are put one side, those of full weight to another; so that the distinction is made with unerring certainty. So will it be at the last day. No sin will pass the great Judge undetected. He knows the secrets of all hearts. Whatever has lain undiscovered by men will stand forth in naked reality then. Counterfeit christianity and spurious philanthropy will be exposed.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

SANCTIFICATION.—No. 1.

GEO. THOMSON.

WHAT IS IT?

I am rejoiced in witnessing the prominence that is being given to this theme at the present time. I think it indicates the nearness of the Bridegroom's coming; for when he comes the bride will be all ready; and it seems that she is now putting on her best robes. There have been differences of opinion existing, and no doubt still are, even among our own people, concerning the nature of sanctification. This need not be. There may be, we think, perfect unanimity on this subject. I have made this subject a matter of study for some years, and I purpose in this article to give the results of that study.

1. Sanctification is a Bible doctrine. This, as far as the term is concerned, none will presume to deny. Either that term, or one of its many equivalents meet us at almost every page of the gospel. Its prominence there, and frequency, certainly indicate its importance. "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification. 1 Thess. 4: 3. Now, we reason that God would not will anything unnecessary; therefore, it is necessary that we be sanctified, whatever it be. And the same inspired apostle, who made this statement, manifested a considerable anxiety on the same subject: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly." 1 Thess. 5: 23. Sanctification, then, seems to be not only desirable and necessary, but absolutely essential to salvation, according to the following statement:—"But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." 2 Thess. 2: 13. These few quotations are sufficient to show that it is a Bible doctrine; consequently it is worthy the consideration and reception of all Bible Christians.

2. What is sanctification? In seeking the true answer to this, perhaps it would be better, in the first place, to consider it negatively, and show what it is not. (1) It is not a distinct blessing received from the hand of God. Here is where many have erred in this matter, supposing that the blessing of justification or pardon of sins must of necessity precede sanctification, and that it belongs more exclusively to an advanced experience; thus many pray, "O Lord sanctify me," looking upon it as being a distinct blessing to be received exclusively from the Lord. When we see this subject in its proper light, we shall se no reason why a person should not be sanctified when they are justified; and furthermore, no reason why there should be any period in a christian experience, when they should not be sanctified. Paul, in his letter to the Romans (8: 30), introduces nothing between justification and glorification. (2) It is not good feeling. A person may feel very good while sitting under a good sermon, or in a good prayer-meeting; or other circumstances may combine to exhilarate, but this is not sanctification. Good feeling is one of the results of sanctification; but we may feel good and not be sanctified. I think it was Wesley who tested a claim of this character. A brother got exceedingly happy in prayer, jumped up, and clapped his hands, exclaiming, "O I'm sanctified, I'm sanctified!" Just at that moment Wesley dashed a glass of water in his face, and the old man was up in a minute, and wanted to show fight. Different causes may produce the same effect. If the brother's joy had been the result of genuine sanctification, a sudden provocation would not have produced sudden anger. Yet he, with thousands of others, no doubt, was sincere in believing good feeling was sanctification.

3. It is not holiness of life. Probably at first glance, my readers will feel disposed to rise up and rebel against this position; but I think we will agree when we understand each other. Sanctification and holiness of life are closely identified; indeed, we shall be safe in affirming that they are inseparably connected. "Holiness of life" cannot exist without "sanctification." Sanctification cannot exist without producing holiness of life. We must discriminate between cause and effect. Holiness of life is a result of sanctification; it is an inevitable consequence, a natural outgrowth. The sun shines; the result is light and heat; but light and heat are not the sun. So genuine sanctification leads inevitably to holiness of life; but we must not confound the effect with the cause.

But what is it? We now propose to consider it in the affirmative. After a careful examination of the subject in all its bearings, we have come to the following conclusion: It is a compound idea, or truth, made up of these two ingredients: consecration and purification. Neither of these alone can express what is embraced in the term "sanctification"; consequently, neither of them can substitute the term. And although the term "sanctify" is frequently used to express these ideas separately, yet their combination is always implied, or recognized. The first place we find the word occur is in Ex. 13: 2—"Sanctify unto me all the first-born, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast. It is mine." Here we have the idea of consecration, or, giving unto the Lord. We find the definition in the twelfth verse of the same chapter, in the following words: "That thou shalt set apart unto the Lord all that openeth the matrix." These first-born that were "sanctified" were to be given unto the Lord, offered in sacrifice, wholly and unreservedly the Lord's. The firstling of an ass, being unclean, was to be redeemed with a lamb, or the alternative was to break its neck. The first-born of men was to be redeemed with a certain sum of money. Here, then, we have the primitive idea of sanctification, or, at least, the primary element of it; and we know of no genuine "sanctification" that is devoid of this element: an unreserved surrender to the Lord, an entire consecration to his service.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

H. MUNGER.

After visiting the churches at Seabrook and Lynn, which are doing well, I arrived in Boston, just as the great "Jubilee" was about to close, and was doing its best to make people happy or peaceable; and as the world had for the first time united to cry peace, I felt it was an opportunity I never could have again to look into the great "World's Peace Jubilee." Accordingly, I went into the gallery and took a survey of a congregation of some thirty to forty thousand people, all seeking for peace, or something to satisfy the natural mind.

After the performance began, I found the country music I described in my last, of hoot owls, frogs, and gobbling of turkeys, etc., was all put in the shade for noise; for such a thundering of music I never heard before. The great organ made the whole air tremble; then the army of instruments commenced, and seventeen thousand voices; then a twenty-four pounder was fired off in time with the music; then came the noise of the "Anvil Chorus." And yet all put together failed to satisfy, or give peace; for such a great noise strung up the nerves to that pitch that no one seemed satisfied. Some wanted a different seat, others were tired and thirsty; some fainted, many looked wild with excitement, and yet no peace appeared.

On the 4th, at three P. M., a shower arose just as the great Jubilee was trying every way to afford peace. All were anxious, in doors and out, to get peace, or make it for others, when the shower came up, the wind blew, the rain fell in torrents, the glass broke in on the roof of the great Diana, and a block of wood fell from the upper part of the building. With the falling glass, the flashing of sharp lightning, and terrific thunder, all together created such a panic that the music could not control. Peace was gone, and safety doubted, and a general rush for the doors ensued. Those who for their peace and safety got out of the building met the storm, and a crowd screaming, fainting and crying, outside as well as inside. The wind split the great balloon into four parts, and ordered it to come down on the ground and be still; while the rain wet it down flat, like many fine, fashionable dresses, showing that the starch of this world would not stand God's storms. The great fire-works also fared the same. The storm spoiled the peace of thousands, thus ending the great effort of the world to give peace, as they promised, when God says there is no peace, or rest, until the Prince of peace comes. The world will fail to give it before.

I give these facts for the benefit of such as wanted to be present and could not. I was providentially there, and had a chance to know what I say; and you who staid at home quietly had the most peace after all. We will wait a little while and see God's great and grand jubilee, where the music will surpass that, and there will be no fainting at thunder storms, nor fear lest the building should fall on us. I am expecting soon to see this world in the awfully prophetic trouble spoken of by the prophet. When the nations are crying, "Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." Let us all be patient. The coming of the Lord draweth near. Signs are numerous in every movement. The wheat and tares are getting ripe. The harvest is near. I mean to be ready.

DOCTRINE.

E. SHEPHERD.

Having heard a church member, not long since, make the remark that she did not care much about doctrine, if Christ was only preached, as she seemed to think it was of no consequence what doctrines were believed or preached. I have desired to collect a few passages, which seem to make it vastly important as to what we believe; hoping thereby to open the eyes and understanding also of others, who may have fallen into the same error. In the parable of the sower, Luke 8: 18, the Savior gives this command—"Take heed therefore how ye hear"; and in Matt. 16: 6—"Then Jesus said unto them, take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." At first, they thought he had rebuked them for not taking bread with them; but the Savior reminds them of the miracle of the five loaves and the five thousand, and the seven loaves and the four thousand, showing them that he had the same power to provide food, if needful, as he had done before. "Then understood they how that he bade them not to beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." Paul also gives us many cautions against believing all teachers; and to the Galatians he says—"But there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ;" "but though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." And in the next verse he adds—"If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." And to Timothy he says—"Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." And again—"Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine;" continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." Then if we are to continue in the right doctrine, in order to save ourselves and others, and as we cannot be saved by believing a lie, is it of no consequence what doctrine we believe?

Dear readers, please consider. Hear Paul again to Timothy—"Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." Why? "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Now let us notice what Paul says the Scriptures are profitable for—"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Then they are profitable for doctrine as well as for instruction in righteousness. Let us heed the doctrine. Again to Timothy Paul says—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." God forbid that his professed followers should give heed to the doctrines of devils, instead of his own inspired word. But let us see if we have not done it. When his word informs us that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die," have we not given heed to the teachings of that old serpent who told Eve, "ye shall not surely die"? I think we have, and therefore can say with Paul that we have been "more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of our fathers," than we have for the word of God.

In our Savior's prayer for his disciples, he prays, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth"; then let us have the truth, and be sanctified, and leave traditions to fall and perish. And do we not read that "God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie"; "that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness"? Now if any one will read carefully all of Paul's writings, they cannot fail to see that his only hope was in the resurrection, and that at Christ's coming; for he says, "If the dead rise not," "then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished," which would not be the case if they were already with him.

HAVE YOU THE CORRECT TIME?

J. RIDLEY.

This is a question of importance. It is not to know if those who are studying to know the time of the Lord's return are correct in their reckoning, however important that may be; but it is a question of much more importance. And, reader, it is to you. Have you the correct time? If you have, you have reason to rejoice; but if you have not, you are in great peril. Beware! A few years ago I was in Concord, N. H., at work, and I wanted to go to Portland, Me. I left my boarding-house in season to take the morning train; but I wanted to make a few purchases, and so I stepped into a store and did my trading, and then looked at my watch and saw by that that there was no necessity for being in haste. So I stopped in the store a few moments, and then started for the depot; but as I came near it, I saw that the cars were moving slowly out. I quickened my pace. I ran, but when I got to the end of the platform the cars were ahead of me, and I was too late. My time was not railroad time.

The Lord calls upon men everywhere to "repent and believe the gospel," and says—"Now is the accepted time, behold, now is the day of salvation." Are you saying in your heart "there is no hurry," "there is time enough yet," 'bye and bye I will seek salvation?" Then your time is not correct; it is not like the Lord's. His time is now. Yours is in the future. And if you once miss this train it will be forever too late, for there is

"No signal for another train
To follow on the line;
O, sinner, you're forever lost,
If once you're left behind."

Be in time.

UNITY OF ACTION.

A. POMEROY.

How important it is that the followers of Jesus should be united; not only in love and charity towards each other, but in word and action. How urgently our divine Redeemer taught that oneness of spirit and unity of purpose were necessary to enable his disciples to fulfill the great mission which he had intrusted to them. How earnestly he prays that they may be one, "even as we are one." And in looking through the teachings of the apostles, we find this same doctrine of unity and oneness pervading all their works. Paul says, "For we being many are one body in Christ," and exhorts us to "be of the same mind one toward another." "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," and we should endeavor "to keep the unity of the Spirit" and the body so closely that if "one member suffer, all the members suffer with it"; and if "one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it."

Now, I suppose this body to mean the church of Christ. And we see how indispensable to spiritual growth is unity of faith and action. If the members of our natural body were constantly warring against each other, we should pull down with one hand as fast as we could build up with the other, and therefore accomplish nothing. And so it is in the church; if the members are not united to Christ, they must be on the other side. There is no common standing ground for the two parties; "For he that is not with me is against me"; and where the majority are against him, spiritual declension must be the result.

Again, we see that unity of action is necessary in order to obtain divine blessings. If the apostles, after being commanded to tarry at Jerusalem a certain time, had each gone to their own house, and occupied their minds about worldly business, I have no idea that that great revival would have taken place at that time. But they did not do so, for "they were all with one accord in one place," and they were of the same mind, and praying for the same blessings, and by so doing were preparing and fitting themselves to receive the gifts of the Holy Ghost, which their Lord had promised to send to them. And it has been so ever since the days of the apostles. When God designs to accomplish a great work among his people, he commences that work by first arousing them from their lukewarmness, and throwing around them a bond of love, and faith, and charity, and unity, and thus fitting them to receive what he purposes to bestow.

It is an encouraging thought that while the good Father is preparing his children to receive divine blessings, he is also working in the minds of the unconverted, and preparing them to receive the "word" gladly. That while your hearts and mine are filled to overflowing with the power of the Spirit, there are some unconverted persons to whom we may extend our influence with the blessing of God, even to their salvation. Let us, then, pray that we may be united; that we may be baptized into that oneness of spirit which the apostles taught so faithfully, and which our blessed Savior desired so earnestly when he prayed that they may be one even as we are.

Somers, Ct.

It is not until we have passed through the furnace that we are made to know how much dross is in our composition.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

THERIA B. WEAVER.

Dear pilgrims in Jesus, greeting: May the peace of Jesus ever be yours; his love abound more and more in your hearts; his loving image be more and more reflected in your countenances and lives; and may He whom our souls love be all and in all to you who may read these imperfect lines, is the earnest and heart-felt petition of one who loves Jesus with all the heart, soul, mind, might, and strength; and who is daily sighing for the redemption of the promised possession, and is waiting in earnest expectation for the coming of the Savior, who will crown us his in that day.

We are almost home. How blessed and sweet the sound to my ear. I long to see Him as he is, for I know, if I am only faithful to the end, that I shall then appear with him in glory. I am looking, waiting, and watching with eager eyes to see the first glimpse of his dear loving face. O, how it fills my heart with joy to contemplate these things. "My soul with rapture waits for thee." Glorious day. Sweet rest. Heavenly home. Eternal joys. Immortal bodies. No tired, weary, aching heads or hearts. No weary, tired limbs. No pain-racked bodies, till life seems a heavy burden. No death-bed scenes. No watchers there around the sick and suffering. No, no, for no sickness can reach that country. O, how I long to be there. No shadows fall upon the brow, no harsh or unkind words; no look of scorn or hate; no cold formality; no lack of love, for all is love in that sweet land of eternal sunshine and endless glory. No pride, no deceit, no false friends, no backbiting, none trying to injure another.

I am so glad that there is one place (and soon to be gained too) where no deceit, nor false-heartedness, nor anything of the kind, can have admittance. Praise God that nothing but what is pure and holy and lovely can ever dwell there. Here in this world of sin we can hardly tell who are our friends. To-day perhaps friends; to-morrow our bitterest enemies. O how good Jesus is to permit us, poor, weak, worthless worms, to have such a home, if we will. O hasten the glad day. We are tired, and long for home. We are truly heart-sick and home-sick. We want to get home. Jesus, let thy kingdom come. Savior, give us grace and patience to bear all patiently till our change shall come. Give us courage to fight manfully the fight of faith. O to be all ready every moment of the time. There is no safety elsewhere. Nothing can give us a passport into the kingdom but a perfect and holy life every hour, every moment of the time. Lord, help us so to live that we may know we are thine; thine now, and forevermore. Truly I can say—

"Humbly at thy cross I bow;
Jesus saves me, saves me now."

The Lord bless all his dear ones; keep them blameless and harmless, unspotted from the world. Dear ones, don't now, right at the end of the race, get entangled with the world. Keep aloof from its vanities, its follies, and all. There is not the least satisfying thing to a heart that has once been renewed by God's grace. It is poor food for a child of God to live upon. I can say, and say truthfully too—

"Let worldly minds the world pursue,
They have no charms for me;
Once I admired its trifles too,
But God has set me free."

Yes, thank God, he has. Let us all cling closely to Jesus, and forsake everything that is worldly.

God bless the dear brother who so kindly sent me one dollar, and wished it acknowledged through the Crisis. May you never lack for the necessaries of life. The letter was cheering. Never could a dollar come when more needed. The letter was dated at Dummer, and mailed at Milan, N. H. God bless you. Letters do me so much good in my lonely situation; but I would rather know the names of the dear ones, if they would give them. Also one dollar from R. L. Henderson, Santa Clara, Cal. I received it in May, and acknowledged it in a letter to the Crisis, but it has not been published. God bless you, dear sister, and give you an eternal reward at last. It was much needed. God bless all who have been so kind to me. Also in January last, Sr. Churchill wrote me from Lawrence, and wanted to know if I got her letter? I did, and answered it, and it was returned to me again. I wrote a second letter, and that was returned; so I can do no better than to here say, the letter came all right, and was very cheering to my sad heart. Write again. I think if the dear ones could know what my life is, I should receive more letters from them; for their words of sympathy and love are so cheering and highly appreciated by me. I pray for you, dear ones, in the lone, sad, long hours of the night. When others are lost in sweet rest and quiet repose, I am in such pain that I cannot sleep; and how often does my mind go to this and that dear one, and I offer up fervent, heartfelt prayers for them.

Dear ones, pray for poor me. God bless you, one and all, is the earnest prayer of one who sighs for home.

THE HOUSE OF GOD AT MILO.

"The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."

Milo is a large and growing village, on the Piscataquis river, in the county of Piscataquis, in the State of Maine. On Saturday, March 18th, 1871, seventeen disciples, of the Advent faith, covenanted together to walk before God and men as a church of Christ. Since then seven more have been added to the company, and now there is an Advent church of twenty-four members. The little branch of believers have felt from the beginning the need of a suitable place for public, conference and social meetings. Last February, though poor and few, they commenced to build. They have put up a house, thirty by forty, posts seventeen feet, and have finished the outside. The cost, so far as they have gone, is seven hundred dollars. Six hundred of it are paid, and one hundred unprovided for. It will cost four hundred dollars to finish. It will be seated with pews, seats free.

Now, brethren, this little church in Milo is weak and poor in this world, and they have a heavy load on their hands. They are daily praying to God for means to pay their present indebtedness, and to finish. Are not some of God's stewards in the county of Piscataquis, to whom he is saying, "Bear ye one another's burdens"; "Remember them that are in bonds as bound with them"? Do you not love Jesus and his cause well enough to help that little church? Are there not some

NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

It is time to begin to think, talk, and arrange about the coming National Campmeeting at Springfield. It is now but little over a month to its commencement. We are expecting one of the most heavenly meetings we have ever held. Those present last year will remember the precious feasts which the Lord provided for his friends. The early morning "Tabernacle" meetings for those interested in the subject of holiness left hallowed associations, and their blessed fruits have lasted till the present hour. It is purposed to resume those meetings again this year. The time has arrived when all who wish to be ready for the coming of Christ should be making special preparation. As a people, we are settled in relation to the doctrinal points; and what each now needs most is a clean heart; without which we shall not be ready to meet Jesus.

We find the Lord is impressing his people more and more with the importance of this subject; but we fear many are shrinking back from it, because the enemy tells them they cannot live in harmony with the spirit of christian holiness; and, consequently, would bring a reproach upon the subject. This is the same story the deceiver tells the awakened sinner—"you can't live religion if you make a profession." One thing is certain: the Lord does not make such suggestions by his Spirit. Others may refuse to step into the "highway of holiness" lest they should become objects of remark, and perhaps be shunned by some of their former friends. The one first seeking Christ has the same temptations. Is it wise to listen to such whisperings of Satan? At our coming National campmeeting we hope to see a host who will give up all to Jesus,—make an entire consecration—and receive perfect love and peace.

We are anxious to have all come who have had experience in the "higher life," that they may be instrumental in helping others to find the pearl of great price. Let us come together for the special object to get nearer to Christ; to learn to live just right everywhere. We all need a christianity that will enable us to overcome all evil thoughts, words and deeds; a religion that allows no dishonesty, no backbiting, no evil speaking, no deceit, no impatience, no unkindness to any one; no joking, no fretting or scolding; in short, no unclean thing of any kind; a religion that makes emphatically a "new man." Let us not rest till we all have pure hearts; indeed, we cannot rest till we are entirely consecrated to Christ, so that it may be said without the least reserve, Lord use me for thy glory, just as seemeth good in thy sight. What is called "the blessing of santification" is the result of this entire consecration. Many mistake the good feeling for sanctification itself. The sanctification precedes the "great peace" and "perfect love;" but the change is as marked, as definite, as great, as the one at conversion. None but those who have experienced it are aware of the blessed results of entire consecration to the Lord.

Dear Brn. and Srs., we are most fully convinced that the time has come when this subject should be made specially prominent; (1) because it has been much neglected; (2) because it is necessary to fit us for the coming of Christ, which is an event now close at hand. Let us keep it in mind, then, that we must "follow PEACE with all men; and HOLINESS, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. 12: 14. We hope this subject will receive more than its usual prominence at all our compmeetings this year. Let special meetings be held at some hour each day, when those who are interested in this subject can feel free to express their feelings, and interchange their thoughts in a familiar manner. Such meetings will be found unusually interesting and profitable. The most disagreeable thing in the sight of God is sin; therefore the most pleasing to him is holiness. He says "be ye holy, for I am holy." Let us come up cheerfully to the standard. Let our daily prayer be—Lord, help me to live just as a christian should in every particular.

Brn. and Srs., come up to the great feast of tabernacles at Springfield, beginning Aug. 17th. Let us all rally around the standard of holiness, expecting great blessings from our coming King.

NORTH DANA, MASS.

We spent the Fourth of July pleasantly at No. Dana, Mass., in the tent-meeting, near the residence of Bro. Geo. A. Streeter. No. Dana is on the Athol and Enfield R. R., about ten miles from Athol. On our way, we stopped a night with Bro. James Hemenway, at Athol Depot. He is pleasantly situated in a romantic village, abounding in hills and vales, and a variety of inviting scenery. Bro. H. is one of the true men, and his judicious labors in Athol are being blest by the Lord. He intends to pitch a tent on the Common, and hold union meetings in it during the summer months. We think his plan is a good one, and will produce desirable results.

The meeting at No. Dana was held eight days in the old missionary tent, which was first pitched in Washington, D. C., in May, 1867. Brn. E. Morrill, J. Hemenway, Geo. A. Streeter, and Sister A. M. Barnes, were present at different times to declare the word of the Lord. We felt assured that our 4th of July meeting was more profitable and pleasant than any of the excursions, picnics, or celebrations, where people seek enjoyment on this anniversary day. We enjoyed our independence, in the Lord, and freedom from a desire to mingle in the fashionable pleasures, where aching, burdened hearts seek rest and find none. Jesus affords perpetual rest to those who trust their all in his hands. He is a satisfying portion. He is all in all.

No one can have sweet peace till they are united to Christ. All outside of him is void of true comfort. We know this to be true from experience. Those who seek to be satisfied with worldly pleasures are like those who chase bubbles to secure gems. They soon burst, leaving nothing but empty disappointment. It was not so with our meetings at No. Dana, July 4th. They left a hallowed influence to be remembered with pleasure. The heavy showers kept many from being present, and somewhat interrupted our exercises.

At six P. M. we met at Bro. Streeter's, and had a profitable season. This gave our deeply afflicted Sr. Luthera Weaver an opportunity to enjoy the occasion with us, which she esteemed very highly. She has now lain upon a bed of suffering about seventeen years. She has not been able to be moved from her bed but three times in five years, and at those times was thrown into fits by her extra sufferings. She loves Jesus and his appearing, and it affords her much comfort to receive letters from his friends. We would suggest that many write her, and inclose something to help secure the comforts of life.

BAPTISM.—Sr. Bruce was baptized in East Boston, Sabbath, July 7th. She is the one who was a Spiritualist lecturer for some eighteen years. She is now devoted to Christ We commend her to all the friends of Jesus. She intends going to Oswego, N. Y. May the blessing of the Lord attend her efforts to lead others to the Savior. She is in needy circumstances, but goes forth trusting in the Lord. She has a sick daughter to support. Let those who can, send her something to make her heart glad.

SR. INGHAM.—Sabbath, July 7th, we had the pleasure of seeing Sister Ingham at our meeting in Chelsea. Her husband, Bro. Wm. Ingham, is still unable to do anything. His case is a sad one. Many remember his faithful labors in the Lord; but in consequence of an injury upon his head, he has been laid up for several years. We hope his christian friends, and all others who love Jesus, will remember the necessities of his family, and send them means to make them comfortable. Direct to Mrs. S. A. Ingham, Clementsport, N. S.

"MEETING KILLERS."—Some excellent things are said by Bro. Sheldon in this paper concerning "meeting killers." Let them be read with care, and treasured up for practical benefit. We have found the classes named to be great obstacles in the way of good conference meetings. Please turn and read again what Bro. Sheldon has said. It would make a valuable circular to put into the hands of all who attend prayer-meetings; but at least, let it be treasured up by all who read it; especially by ministers.

PHONETIC SHORT-HAND.—One of the most valuable arts which should be learned by every school child is Phonography. Graham's standard system is the best. The Synopsis, price 50 cts., and the Hand-book, price $2.00, may be ordered from this Office. Leading phonographic reporters—among whom we may mention our friend "C."—are unqualified in their commendation of Mr. Graham's system; which is claimed to be a great improvement upon the original or Isaac Pitman's Phonography.

GOOD BOOKS.—We have received two good books from Bro. H. L. Hastings. One is entitled, "Ebenezers, or, records of prevailing prayer"; the other contains Samuel Sharp's translation of "The Proverbs"; Charles Ellicott's translation of "Paul's Epistles to Timothy"; Henry Craik's translation of the Epistle to the Hebrews; and Samuel P. Tregelles' translation of the Revelation. These works can be had of Bro. Hastings, at 19 Lindall St., Boston, or at the Crisis office. Tregelles translates Rev. 1: 5, 6—"Unto him that loveth us, and freed us from our sins by his own blood,—and he made for us a kingdom." Price, single, 25 cts.; postage 2 cts.

A VALUABLE BOOK.—We have just received a new and valuable book, entitled "The Destiny of Man," by Wm. Erwin, of Painted Port, N. Y. It contains three hundred and twelve octavo pp. Bro. Erwin is a Methodist, and has been examining the subject some twenty years; and was not aware of what we, as a people, have been doing to spread light on the nature of man. Bro. Erwin endeavors to bring forth all that he finds in the Bible relating to the destiny of the wicked. He begins with Genesis, and takes the Bible through by course, and brings out the plain teaching of the Scripture in a very clear and forcible manner. The book is unanswerable. He shows beyond all controversy that man is not immortal, and that the wicked will be utterly destroyed after the judgment. We see but one fault in the work; and that is, the author may be a little too severe in his expressions against those who uphold the doctrine of eternal torment; but if there is any dogma that deserves to be treated severely, it is that of eternal misery; for we believe there is no other doctrine that is more dishonoring to God and his Son.

This book is well calculated to make a stir in the theological waters, and should have a wide circulation. It is neatly bound. Price $1.50, gilt $2.00, postpaid. For sale at the Crisis Office.

SPOILING MEETINGS.

Meeting killers are too numerous, and a few hints to prevent their ruinous depredations may not come amiss to the cause. They are not always a bad class of men, but are often found among our best brethren; and the worst feature about the matter is, they keep on killing meetings, and do not know that they have done any harm, and so kill another, and still another. Let me particularize:—

1. A social meeting is in full blast, and everything seems melting before it, when a brother gets up and introduces something entirely foreign to the current of the meeting, and tries to turn the meeting into another channel. All he says may be well upon a proper occasion, but under the circumstances, it is like throwing a cake of ice into the fire. When will brethren learn to keep in the current of the meeting?

2. Perhaps several ministers are present, and they must lengthen out a speech because they are ministers, and though all they say is good in its place, they kill the meeting. When will they learn to place themselves on a level with common brethren in a social meeting? Be just as short as any brother. If the heart is full, let it boil over, but do not monopolize the time because you can speak long, or love to speak long. It is no place for speech-making, or display of talents. Some seem to fear that it will not be understood that they are ministers unless they talk long. Well, better let it remain unknown than to make a meeting-killer of yourself. You are robbing your brethren, and that is not honest. I have seen more social meetings killed by preachers than by any other class of people. Let this thing be stopped. Half minute speeches in a large social meeting will do more good than long exhortations. There is a proper time for exhortation, and sermons, but not in a social meeting. Let us be patterns of brevity and promptness in such meetings.

3. Another class who cannot have their own way in spoiling social meetings by long speeches, or by introducing themes contrary to the current of the meeting, adopt another plan. They sit still, say nothing, and pull back like a balky mule. But I never knew one of these meeting mules to get blest. They generally have a hard time after meeting. Now, brother, which class of meeting spoilers do you belong to? Do you talk out of the current of the meeting? Do you talk long, and rob others? Or do you sit and hold back? Let us be in such meetings, earnest, prompt, and brief. When all act on this principle, we are sure of a good meeting. W. S.

EGYPT'S DESOLATION.

BRO. SHELDON:—A friend of mine wants to know when Egypt was desolate forty years, spoken of in the 29th of Ezek., 11th and 12th verses. Will you please give your views through the Crisis, and oblige your brother in Christ, NATHANIEL PHILLIPS.
No. 33 Ford St., Prov., R. I.

The passage referred to reads thus:—"No foot of man shall pass through it, nor foot of beast shall pass through it; neither shall it be inhabited forty years. And I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate forty years; and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries."

By reading from the 17th verse of the same chapter and onward, we learn that (1) this calamity was to overtake Egypt after the 'twenty-seventh year' of Israel's captivity; and (2) that it was to be in the days of "Nebuchaddezzar, king of Babylon." Prophecies must be fulfilled at the right time, as well as in the right manner; and the right time for this calamity to come upon Egypt was in the life time of Nebuchadnezzar. And it did come then, and the forty years commenced then. On this passage, Cooke's Bible has the following expository note:—"No foot of man," in the kafile or caravan, for purposes of trade —'no foot of beast,' driven from one part of the country for sale in another. . . . The 'forty years' of desolation determined upon Egypt bore a probable reference to their contempt for the forty years' sojourn of Israel in the wilderness. The return of the captivity took place in the reign of Cyrus, who, though a heathen, exemplified a desire to loose the bonds of the slave."

Not only did this prophecy begin to receive its fulfillment at the right time, during the life of Nebuchadnezzar, thus ending the "forty years" during the reign of Cyrus, but it is also true, as predicted in the 14th and 15th verses of the same chapter, that Egypt subsequently became a "base kingdom;" "neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations." The forty years here mentioned just covered the time that elapsed between the telling stroke of Nebuchadozzar against Egypt, and the toleration granted the same people under Cyrus. W. S.

"ENSAMPLES TO THE FLOCK." Why is the religion of Jesus Christ—pure and undefiled religion—at so low an ebb? Is it not because ministers themselves lack a fullness of enjoyment? With hearts filled with the spirit of consecration, ministers will raise the membership to the same level, being "ensamples to the flock." But if ministers have but little relish for devotion, and turn all their energies to theorizing, the flock will drink in the same spirit. The "belief of the truth" is all right, but should not be disconnected from the "sanctification of the Spirit." Let us all drink from the fountain of "perfect love," as well as the fountain of truth. W. S.

TENT-MEETINGS.—After the close of the Iowa campmeeting, I pitched the big tent in Mifflin, Wis., where Bro. Philo Hitchcock has been sowing the seed of truth. Up to the present (July 1st), we have had a candid hearing. Baptism was administered yesterday. After we close here, we pitch in Wingville, Wis.,—a new field. W. S.

THE JUDGMENT.—In the bank of England is a curious machine into which sovereigns are poured, like grain into a mill. As they pass on one by one, all that are light weight are put one side, those of full weight to another; so that the distinction is made with unerring certainty. So will it be at the last day. No sin will pass the great Judge undetected. He knows the secrets of all hearts. Whatever has lain undiscovered by men will stand forth in naked reality then. Counterfeit christianity and spurious philanthropy will be exposed.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

SANCTIFICATION.—No. 1.

GEO. THOMSON.

WHAT IS IT?

I am rejoiced in witnessing the prominence that is being given to this theme at the present time. I think it indicates the nearness of the Bridegroom's coming; for when he comes the bride will be all ready; and it seems that she is now putting on her best robes. There have been differences of opinion existing, and no doubt still are, even among our own people, concerning the nature of sanctification. This need not be. There may be, we think, perfect unanimity on this subject. I have made this subject a matter of study for some years, and I purpose in this article to give the results of that study.

1. Sanctification is a Bible doctrine. This, as far as the term is concerned, none will presume to deny. Either that term, or one of its many equivalents meet us at almost every page of the gospel. Its prominence there, and frequency, certainly indicate its importance. "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification. 1 Thess. 4: 3. Now, we reason that God would not will anything unnecessary; therefore, it is necessary that we be sanctified, whatever it be. And the same inspired apostle, who made this statement, manifested a considerable anxiety on the same subject: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly." 1 Thess. 5: 23. Sanctification, then, seems to be not only desirable and necessary, but absolutely essential to salvation, according to the following statement:—"But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." 2 Thess. 2: 13. These few quotations are sufficient to show that it is a Bible doctrine; consequently it is worthy the consideration and reception of all Bible Christians.

2. What is sanctification? In seeking the true answer to this, perhaps it would be better, in the first place, to consider it negatively, and show what it is not. (1) It is not a distinct blessing received from the hand of God. Here is where many have erred in this matter, supposing that the blessing of justification or pardon of sins must of necessity precede sanctification, and that it belongs more exclusively to an advanced experience; thus many pray, "O Lord sanctify me," looking upon it as being a distinct blessing to be received exclusively from the Lord. When we see this subject in its proper light, we shall se no reason why a person should not be sanctified when they are justified; and furthermore, no reason why there should be any period in a christian experience, when they should not be sanctified. Paul, in his letter to the Romans (8: 30), introduces nothing between justification and glorification. (2) It is not good feeling. A person may feel very good while sitting under a good sermon, or in a good prayer-meeting; or other circumstances may combine to exhilarate, but this is not sanctification. Good feeling is one of the results of sanctification; but we may feel good and not be sanctified. I think it was Wesley who tested a claim of this character. A brother got exceedingly happy in prayer, jumped up, and clapped his hands, exclaiming, "O I'm sanctified, I'm sanctified!" Just at that moment Wesley dashed a glass of water in his face, and the old man was up in a minute, and wanted to show fight. Different causes may produce the same effect. If the brother's joy had been the result of genuine sanctification, a sudden provocation would not have produced sudden anger. Yet he, with thousands of others, no doubt, was sincere in believing good feeling was sanctification.

3. It is not holiness of life. Probably at first glance, my readers will feel disposed to rise up and rebel against this position; but I think we will agree when we understand each other. Sanctification and holiness of life are closely identified; indeed, we shall be safe in affirming that they are inseparably connected. "Holiness of life" cannot exist without "sanctification." Sanctification cannot exist without producing holiness of life. We must discriminate between cause and effect. Holiness of life is a result of sanctification; it is an inevitable consequence, a natural outgrowth. The sun shines; the result is light and heat; but light and heat are not the sun. So genuine sanctification leads inevitably to holiness of life; but we must not confound the effect with the cause.

But what is it? We now propose to consider it in the affirmative. After a careful examination of the subject in all its bearings, we have come to the following conclusion; It is a compound idea, or truth, made up of these two ingredients: consecration and purification. Neither of these alone can express what is embraced in the term "sanctification"; consequently, neither of them can substitute the term. And although the term "sanctify" is frequently used to express these ideas separately, yet their combination is always implied, or recognized. The first place we find the word occur is in Ex. 13: 2—"Sanctify unto me all the first-born, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast. It is mine." Here we have the idea of consecration, or, giving unto the Lord. We find the definition in the twelfth verse of the same chapter, in the following words: "That thou shalt set apart unto the Lord all that openeth the matrix." These first-born that were "sanctified" were to be given unto the Lord, offered in sacrifice, wholly and unreservedly the Lord's. The firstling of an ass, being unclean, was to be redeemed with a lamb, or the alternative was to break its neck. The first-born of men was to be redeemed with a certain sum of money. Here, then, we have the primitive idea of sanctification, or, at least, the primary element of it; and we know of no genuine "sanctification" that is devoid of this element: an unreserved surrender to the Lord, an entire consecration to his service.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

M. MUNGER.

After visiting the churches at Seabrook and Lynn, which are doing well, I arrived in Boston, just as the great "Jubilee" was about to close, and was doing its best to make people happy or peaceable; and as the world had for the first time united to cry peace, I felt it was an opportunity I never could have again to look into the great "World's Peace Jubilee." Accordingly, I went into the gallery and took a survey of a congregation of some thirty to forty thousand people, all seeking for peace, or something to satisfy the natural mind.

After the performance began, I found the country music I described in my last, of hoot owls, frogs, and gobbling of turkeys, etc., was all put in the shade for noise; for such a thundering of music I never heard before. The great organ made the whole air tremble; then the army of instruments commenced, and seventeen thousand voices; then a twenty-four pounder was fired off in time with the music; then came the noise of the "Anvil Chorus." And yet all put together failed to satisfy, or give peace; for such a great noise strung up the nerves to that pitch that no one seemed satisfied. Some wanted a different seat, others were tired and thirsty; some fainted, many looked wild with excitement, and yet no peace appeared.

On the 4th, at three P. M., a shower arose just as the great Jubilee was trying every way to afford peace. All were anxious, in doors and out, to get peace, or make it for others, when the shower came up, the wind blew, the rain fell in torrents, the glass broke in on the roof of the great Diana, and a block of wood fell from the upper part of the building. With the falling glass, the flashing of sharp lightning, and terrific thunder, all together created such a panic that the music could not control. Peace was gone, and safety doubted, and a general rush for the doors ensued. Those who for their peace and safety got out of the building met the storm, and a crowd screaming, fainting and crying, outside as well as inside. The wind split the great balloon into four parts, and ordered it to come down on the ground and be still; while the rain wet it down flat, like many fine, fashionable dresses, showing that the starch of this world would not stand God's storms. The great fire-works also fared the same. The storm spoiled the peace of thousands, thus ending the great effort of the world to give peace, as they promised, when God says there is no peace, or rest, until the Prince of peace comes. The world will fail to give it before.

I give these facts for the benefit of such as wanted to be present and could not. I was providentially there, and had a chance to know what I say; and you who staid at home quietly had the most peace after all. We will wait a little while and see God's great and grand jubilee, where the music will surpass that, and there will be no fainting at thunder storms, nor fear lest the building should fall on us. I am expecting soon to see this world in the awfully prophetic trouble spoken of by the prophet. When the nations are crying, "Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." Let us all be patient. The coming of the Lord draweth near. Signs are numerous in every movement. The wheat and tares are getting ripe. The harvest is near. I mean to be ready.

DOCTRINE.

E. SHEPHERD.

Having heard a church member, not long since, make the remark that she did not care much about doctrine, if Christ was only preached, as she seemed to think it was of no consequence what doctrines were believed or preached. I have desired to collect a few passages, which seem to make it vastly important as to what we believe; hoping thereby to open the eyes and understanding also of others, who may have fallen into the same error. In the parable of the sower, Luke 8: 18, the Savior gives this command—"Take heed therefore how ye hear"; and in Matt. 16: 6—"Then Jesus said unto them, take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." At first, they thought he had rebuked them for not taking bread with them; but the Savior reminds them of the miracle of the five loaves and the five thousand, and the seven loaves and the four thousand, showing them that he had the same power to provide food, if needful, as he had done before. "Then understood they how that he bade them not to beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." Paul also gives us many cautions against believing all teachers; and to the Galatians he says—"But there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ;" "but though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." And in the next verse he adds—"If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." And to Timothy he says—"Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." And again—"Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine;" continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." Then if we are to continue in the right doctrine, in order to save ourselves and others, and as we cannot be saved by believing a lie, is it of no consequence what doctrine we believe?

Dear readers, please consider. Hear Paul again to Timothy—"Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." Why? "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Now let us notice what Paul says the Scriptures are profitable for—"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Then they are profitable for doctrine as well as for instruction in righteousness. Let us heed the doctrine. Again to Timothy Paul says—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." God forbid that his professed followers should give heed to the doctrines of devils, instead of his own inspired word. But let us see if we have not done it. When his word informs us that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die," have we not given heed to the teachings of that old serpent who told Eve, "ye shall not surely die"? I think we have, and therefore can say with Paul that we have been "more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of our fathers," than we have for the word of God.

In our Savior's prayer for his disciples, he prays, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth"; then let us have the truth, and be sanctified, and leave traditions to fall and perish. And do we not read that "God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie"; "that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness"? Now if any one will read carefully all of Paul's writings, they cannot fail to see that his only hope was in the resurrection, and that at Christ's coming; for he says, "If the dead rise not," "then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished," which would not be the case if they were already with him.

HAVE YOU THE CORRECT TIME?

J. RIDLEY.

This is a question of importance. It is not to know if those who are studying to know the time of the Lord's return are correct in their reckoning, however important that may be; but it is a question of much more importance. And, reader, it is to you. Have you the correct time? If you have, you have reason to rejoice; but if you have not, you are in great peril. Beware! A few years ago I was in Concord, N. H., at work, and I wanted to go to Portland, Me. I left my boarding-house in season to take the morning train; but I wanted to make a few purchases, and so I stepped into a store and did my trading, and then looked at my watch and saw by that that there was no necessity for being in haste. So I stopped in the store a few moments, and then started for the depot; but as I came near it, I saw that the cars were moving slowly out. I quickened my pace. I ran, but when I got to the end of the platform the cars were ahead of me, and I was too late. My time was not railroad time.

The Lord calls upon men everywhere to "repent and believe the gospel," and says—"Now is the accepted time, behold, now is the day of salvation." Are you saying in your heart "there is no hurry," "there is time enough yet," 'bye and bye I will seek salvation?" Then your time is not correct; it is not like the Lord's. His time is now. Yours is in the future. And if you once miss this train it will be forever too late, for there is

To follow on the line;
O, sinner, you're forever lost,
If once you're left behind."

Be in time.

UNITY OF ACTION.

A. POMEROY.

How important it is that the followers of Jesus should be united; not only in love and charity towards each other, but in word and action. How urgently our divine Redeemer taught that oneness of spirit and unity of purpose were necessary to enable his disciples to fulfill the great mission which he had intrusted to them. How earnestly he prays that they may be one, "even as we are one." And in looking through the teachings of the apostles, we find this same doctrine of unity and oneness pervading all their works. Paul says, "For we being many are one body in Christ," and exhorts us to "be of the same mind one toward another." "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," and we should endeavor "to keep the unity of the Spirit" and the body so closely that if "one member suffer, all the members suffer with it"; and if "one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it."

Now, I suppose this body to mean the church of Christ. And we see how indispensable to spiritual growth is unity of faith and action. If the members of our natural body were constantly warring against each other, we should pull down with one hand as fast as we could build up with the other, and therefore accomplish nothing. And so it is in the church; if the members are not united to Christ, they must be on the other side. There is no common standing ground for the two parties; "For he that is not with me is against me"; and where the majority are against him, spiritual declension must be the result.

Again, we see that unity of action is necessary in order to obtain divine blessings. If the apostles, after being commanded to tarry at Jerusalem a certain time, had each gone to their own house, and occupied their minds about worldly business, I have no idea that that great revival would have taken place at that time. But they did not do so, for "they were all with one accord in one place," and they were of the same mind, and praying for the same blessings, and by so doing were preparing and fitting themselves to receive the gifts of the Holy Ghost, which their Lord had promised to send to them. And it has been so ever since the days of the apostles. When God designs to accomplish a great work among his people, he commences that work by first arousing them from their lukewarmness, and throwing around them a bond of love, and faith, and charity, and unity, and thus fitting them to receive what he purposes to bestow.

It is an encouraging thought that while the good Father is preparing his children to receive divine blessings, he is also working in the minds of the unconverted, and preparing them to receive the "word" gladly. That while your hearts and mine are filled to overflowing with the power of the Spirit, there are some unconverted persons to whom we may extend our influence with the blessing of God, even to their salvation. Let us, then, pray that we may be united; that we may be baptized into that oneness of spirit which the apostles taught so faithfully, and which our blessed Savior desired so earnestly when he prayed that they may be one even as we are.

IT is not until we have passed through the furnace that we are made to know how much dross is in our composition.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

THERIA B. WEAVER.

Dear pilgrims in Jesus, greeting: May the peace of Jesus ever be yours; his love abound more and more in your hearts; his loving image be more and more reflected in your countenances and lives; and may He whom our souls love be all and in all to you who may read these imperfect lines, is the earnest and heart-felt petition of one who loves Jesus with all the heart, soul, mind, might, and strength; and who is daily sighing for the redemption of the promised possession, and is waiting in earnest expectation for the coming of the Savior, who will crown us his in that day.

We are almost home. How blessed and sweet the sound to my ear. I long to see Him as he is, for I know, if I am only faithful to the end, that I shall then appear with him in glory. I am looking, waiting, and watching with eager eyes to see the first glimpse of his dear loving face. O, how it fills my heart with joy to contemplate these things. "My soul with rapture waits for thee." Glorious day. Sweet rest. Heavenly home. Eternal joys. Immortal bodies. No tired, weary, aching heads or hearts. No weary, tired limbs. No pain-racked bodies, till life seems a heavy burden. No death-bed scenes. No watchers there around the sick and suffering. No, no, for no sickness can reach that country. O, how I long to be there. No shadows fall upon the brow, no harsh or unkind words; no look of scorn or hate; no cold formality; no lack of love, for all is love in that sweet land of eternal sunshine and endless glory. No pride, no deceit, no false friends, no backbiting, none trying to injure another.

I am so glad that there is one place (and soon to be gained too) where no deceit, nor false-heartedness, nor anything of the kind, can have admittance. Praise God that nothing but what is pure and holy and lovely can ever dwell there. Here in this world of sin we can hardly tell who are our friends. To-day perhaps friends; to-morrow our bitterest enemies. O how good Jesus is to permit us, poor, weak, worthless worms, to have such a home, if we will. O hasten the glad day. We are tired, and long for home. We are truly heart-sick and home-sick. We want to get home. Jesus, let thy kingdom come. Savior, give us grace and patience to bear all patiently till our change shall come. Give us courage to fight manfully the fight of faith. O to be all ready every moment of the time. There is no safety elsewhere. Nothing can give us a passport into the kingdom but a perfect and holy life every hour, every moment of the time. Lord, help us so to live that we may know we are thine; thine now, and forevermore. Truly I can say—

"Humbly at thy cross I bow;
Jesus saves me, saves me now."

The Lord bless all his dear ones; keep them blameless and harmless, unspotted from the world. Dear ones, don't now, right at the end of the race, get entangled with the world. Keep aloof from its vanities, its follies, and all. There is not the least satisfying thing to a heart that has once been renewed by God's grace. It is poor food for a child of God to live upon. I can say, and say truthfully too—

"Let worldly minds the world pursue,
They have no charms for me;
Once I admired its trifles too,
But God has set me free."

Yes, thank God, he has. Let us all cling closely to Jesus, and forsake everything that is worldly.

God bless the dear brother who so kindly sent me one dollar, and wished it acknowledged through the Crisis. May you never lack for the necessaries of life. The letter was cheering. Never could a dollar come when more needed. The letter was dated at Dummer, and mailed at Milan, N. H. God bless you. Letters do me so much good in my lonely situation; but I would rather know the names of the dear ones, if they would give them. Also one dollar from R. L. Henderson, Santa Clara, Cal. I received it in May, and acknowledged it in a letter to the Crisis, but it has not been published. God bless you, dear sister, and give you an eternal reward at last. It was much needed. God bless all who have been so kind to me. Also in January last, Sr. Churchill wrote me from Lawrence, and wanted to know if I got her letter? I did, and answered it, and it was returned to me again. I wrote a second letter, and that was returned; so I can do no better than to here say, the letter came all right, and was very cheering to my sad heart. Write again. I think if the dear ones could know what my life is, I should receive more letters from them; for their words of sympathy and love are so cheering and highly appreciated by me. I pray for you, dear ones, in the lone, sad, long hours of the night. When others are lost in sweet rest and quiet repose, I am in such pain that I cannot sleep; and how often does my mind go to this and that dear one, and I offer up fervent, heartfelt prayers for them.

Dear ones, pray for poor me. God bless you, one and all, is the earnest prayer of one who sighs for home.

THE HOUSE OF GOD AT MILO.

"The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."

Milo is a large and growing village, on the Piscataquis river, in the county of Piscataquis, in the State of Maine. On Saturday, March 18th, 1871, seventeen disciples, of the Advent faith, covenanted together to walk before God and men as a church of Christ. Since then seven more have been added to the company, and now there is an Advent church of twenty-four members. The little branch of believers have felt from the beginning the need of a suitable place for public, conference and social meetings. Last February, though poor and few, they commenced to build. They have put up a house, thirty by forty, posts seventeen feet, and have finished the outside. The cost, so far as they have gone, is seven hundred dollars. Six hundred of it are paid, and one hundred unprovided for. It will cost four hundred dollars to finish. It will be seated with pews, seats free.

Now, brethren, this little church in Milo is weak and poor in this world, and they have a heavy load on their hands. They are daily praying to God for means to pay their present indebtedness, and to finish. Are not some of God's stewards in the county of Piscataquis, to whom he is saying, "Bear ye one another's burdens"; "Remember them that are in bonds as bound with them"? Do you not love Jesus and his cause well enough to help that little church? Are there not some saints in Maine, or in the United States, or in the world, who will lend a helping hand? "God loveth the cheerful giver." "He that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." Five hundred is needed; needed for God's precious cause. Those who will help, can send to Charles E. Livermore, Clerk; or to David Livermore, Treasurer of the church, Milo, Maine.

I write these things because I am acquainted with this church, and know their zeal, and I sympathize with their burdens. May God make all grace abound towards you forever. Your Bro. in Christ, F. A. Baker.

TENT MEETING.

The Advent Mission Tent is pitched on the Common, at Marblehead, Mass. Our meeting commenced Saturday evening. Yesterday, July 7th, was a good day for the cause of truth; good order and good attention, and a blessed good heavenly time to the disciples of Jesus. Our brethren came over from Lynn, and rendered efficient aid in the services. The meeting will continue afternoons and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, the 14th. It may continue longer.

Brethren from abroad are solicited to come and help in the work of God. Come and stay through the week. Bring a quilt and lunch, and stop with us in the tent. We are close to the salt water. This is a new field, and but few of like precious faith.

Death of Prof. Whiting.—We learn that Prof. N. N. Whiting is dead. The following notice appeared in the Herald of Life June 26th:—

"It becomes our painful duty to record this week the falling of another beloved father in Israel. Prof. Nathan N. Whiting, whose funeral took place in Williamsburgh, L. I., on Saturday of last week, died at the ripe age of seventy-eight years.

Bro. Whiting removed to Williamsburgh in the spring of 1838. In early life he associated himself with the Baptist church, and having consecrated himself to the gospel ministry, he long labored in that capacity; and though he never severed his connection with the Baptist organization, he became prominently identified with the cause of the second advent of the Savior, preaching regularly for a number of years on that absorbing theme in what was known as the 'Tabernacle,' in Williamsburgh; and while he never but once, we believe, adopted what is termed definite time, he always consistently cherished and finally fell asleep in the faith of the nearness of those great and glorious events, the return of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, which have ever been the true hope of the Christian church.

The last fifteen years of Bro. Whiting's life were devoted to the work of a new translation of the Scriptures, under the auspices of the American Bible Union, a work for which his great attainments in biblical knowledge eminently fitted him. It was always, seemingly, a pleasure to him to converse on Bible themes, and we have had occasion to admire the readiness and unreserve with which, as a scholar, he expressed his conceptions of the meanings of the original languages in certain disputed texts.

Our deceased brother has lived a long and useful life, one devoted to the glory of God and the honor of Christ. His sleep will be short, and his future indeed glorious."

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. M. Post.

Dear Crisis and readers:—My heart is so filled this afternoon, whilst reading from the dear ones, that I feel moved to make an expression to them, one and all. God bless you, and lead you understandingly into all truth. I could but shed tears of gratitude that so many faithful witnesses had been raised up to proclaim in these last days God's everlasting truth. My heart sickens at times, that so many, who profess to be the friends of Jesus, oppose the message—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh." God pity them. I praise his name for the privilege of reading the Crisis from week to week. It is good preaching. God bless its Editor.

This part of the State is rather destitute of Advent preaching. We have almost wondered at times, whilst other States have such a large number of preachers, that some of them do not find their way into these parts. Opposition will find its way wherever God's truths take root, but it is no less important that they should be faithfully proclaimed. We have enjoyed the labors of Bro. McKinstry and wife some part of the past winter. We trust there has been some good effect. A number have indulged hope. One young man in particular, who has been a Catholic, has become interested in the truth, and vindicates it. May he not only be blest himself, but prove a blessing to others. May the Lord bless us all in a faithful discharge of duty, is the prayer of your unworthy sister.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. P. G. Bowman writes from Lydia, Darlington Co., S. C.:—"I feel very much obliged to you and Bro. Himes for publishing the extracts from Mr. Warleigh's book. All such extracts from works written by clergymen of other denominations will do good. I wish a copy of Constable's and Warleigh's works were in the hands of every Episcopal minister in the United States. They certainly would open their eyes to see how far they have departed from the doctrines of the church of England, in regard to immortal-soulism and the final end of the wicked. If we depend entirely on the love of God and the merit as it is in Jesus, and in his blessed word, for the spread of these views, and stop our soul-inspiring doctrines, we shall see human creeds and traditions and heathen fables, which now to a great degree bind the mind of Christendom, fall like Dagon before the ark of God. So mote it be."

Bro. J. C. Smith writes from Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas, June 26th, 1872:—"I am sorry to write you I have the billious fever. I have been sick nearly two weeks, and have experienced many aches and pains. Will the dear brethren and sisters east pray for me, that I may be raised up to glorify God? The climate here, I think, will be too much for me to endure this summer. I shall be very glad to receive a word of advice or encouragement. The Lord bless you in all things. I am hungering and thirsting after the living bread and water. My soul pants after God, the true God. I long to see the King in his beauty, and be made like him. O may the church soon be gathered home from sorrow, tears, and death."

Bro. A. W. Bryant writes from Lynn, Mass.:—"I have commenced taking your paper. I do not regret it, but am sorry I did not subscribe before. It awakens considerable interest in me, and if I could do any thing to help it along I should be pleased. I am trying, with the light that God has given me, to shed it abroad. I have given away the paper, and if I had the means, I would scatter your tracts about. I am working in a gang of men with three church members, and they are very hard against me, excepting one, who asks me questions now and then, and Jesus or the apostles always afforded an answer for him. I was careful to let my interpretation go, and take the Bible meaning of it. He sees truth. My prayer is that they all may see it."

Bro. A. W. Sibley writes from Sandy Hill, N. Y., July 4th:—"My little son, Austin T. Sibley, was this day picked up in the cold embrace of death. O when will the dark wave of death cease to roll, and life's fair waters be a calm? Pray for us in this afflictive dispensation."

FRANCE.

IMPERIALISM.

Paris, July 5. It is reported here and obtains much credit that the Republicans are the prime movers in the scheme which has been recently developed to displace Thiers from the office of chief executive and secure the appointment of Marshal Mahon as his successor. It is generally believed that McMahon, if not actively co-operating with the Royalist factions in the Assembly for this end, could not at least decline the honor of being elected to the presidential chair. Much unpleasantness is caused to well-wishers of the republic in consequence of the increasing strength of the imperial influence in the Assembly, and in view of the danger to which the election of McMahon with his well-known imperialistic tendencies to the Presidency would subject the country. It is not improbable that a coalition of the Republican elements in the Assembly may be formed, which will ultimately have the effect of crushing the scheme.

THE CRISIS.

The probability of an early government crisis is absorbing public attention here at present. Marshal McMahon has informed the members of the Right in the Assembly that he will not accept of any interim government, or consent to hold the office of chief executive unless the nation's wishes in the matter are consulted through the medium of a plebiscite. The members of the Right refuse to entertain the suggestion of a plebiscitum under such circumstances, and this difference will, it is thought, have the effect of greatly weakening the coalition against Thiers.

EXCITEMENT ABATING.

The excitement caused by the fears of a Presidential crisis is abating. Thiers' determined stand has weakened the coalition formed against him by the faction of the Right in the Chamber. Marshal McMahon has expressed his objection to entering a triumvirate unless such form of government receives the sanction of a plebiscitum.

CONSPIRACY DEFEATED.

A threatening conspiracy of the royalists, under the leadership of the Duc de Broglie, for the overthrow of the Republic, has been recently discovered. Thiers at once took energetic action for its suppression, and it is believed that the dangerous movement is defeated.

TURKEY.

TERRIBLE FIRE.

Constantinople, July 5. The town of Scutari, situated on the Bosphorus, immediately opposite this city, has been ravaged by a terrible conflagration. The entire lower district of the city, the residence of the poorer classes, has been destroyed. Over one thousand dwellings have been consumed and many lives have been lost in the flames, which are believed to have been caused by incendiaries. The destruction of property is immense and has entailed the greatest destitution upon a large proportion of the inhabitants.

GERMANY.

BISMARCK AND THE CATHOLICS.

Berlin, July 7. Premier Bismarck, in order to have a perfect understanding with the cardinals of Europe, has addressed a communication to the four powers having a right to veto the election of a new Pope of Rome, to make the necessary arrangements and conditions for a future conclave of cardinals to be held in Rome. To this communication three of the powers have answered, announcing their consent to the meeting, at which their representatives of the church will be present.

THE STRIKES.

The last few days have been remarkable for the various strikes in mechanical employments. Also among the miners. The strike now embraces over fifty different mines. No excesses have taken place by the strikers, though the demands are extreme in character, and the number engaged are increasing daily.

ITALY.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED.

Rome, July 7. The Italian Parliament has been prorogued by order of the government.

Foreign Gossip.—We do not always hear the details of elections in foreign countries. In Hungary, for instance, latterly, there was a famous battle over the polls, and the soldiers were called to interfere. As the result, one hundred dead and nine hundred wounded were left on the field. The Hungarian prisons are filled with men who served as agitators of the crowd during the elections. In one case, the director of the post-office in one large city declared to all his employees that unless they voted the Ministerial ticket they would lose their places, and they were forbidden, under heavy penalties, to refrain from voting.

☞ It is possible that President Thiers may accomplish much good for France simply by his obstinacy. Although the Right continues intriguing the President firmly announces that he will not resign, and that the Left may rely upon him to sustain the Republic. It is reported that in case Thiers should be pushed aside he will be replaced by a triumvirate composed of Marshal McMahon, General L'Admirault and the Duc de Broglie. This is a new and strange leaning toward monarchy.

In Brief.

——The Archbishop of Madrid is dead.——The International is constantly gaining ground in Europe.——Two men were killed by lightning at Louisville, Ky., Wednesday afternoon, July 3d.——It was reported to the health authorities of New York yesterday that a sailor, just landed, had died of Asiatic cholera.——There were thirty fatal cases of sunstroke in New York on Wednesday, July 3d, and forty-seven not fatal. The total number of deaths for the last four days is 945.——The Erie and New York Central Railway Companies have consolidated, and elected Commodore Vanderbilt President, with unrestricted powers. The freight and passenger tariffs west and north are to be raised.——A call is published for a Liberal Convention at Des Moines, Iowa, on the 1st of August, for the nomination of an electoral and State ticket, and to concert measures for consolidating all the elements opposed to the present administration.——Four young men went down the harbor on Thursday afternoon, July 4th, at two o'clock in a lap-streak boat, and seeing the shower approaching, put in at Governor's Island (Fort Winthrop), and took refuge in an old building known as the "carpenter's shop." They had barely got inside when a bolt of lightning struck the building, just over the door, instantly killing three of the men. The third only spoke once, saying, "I am killed by the lightning."——Ocean waves, "mountain high" as landsmen would call them, are generally much less than fifty feet high. Wilkes, in 1839, made a measurement which showed a height of thirty-two feet. An observation once made by the captain and officers of British ship Inconstant, placed the height at seventy-seven feet and over, and waves have been known to reach the top of Eddystone Lighthouse, one hundred and six feet! The height of waves in the Mediterranean is in general from fourteen to eighteen feet.

At the quarterly meeting of the Rhode Island and East Connecticut Advent Conference with the Escoheag Church, R. I., July 5th, the following resolution was passed, with but one dissenting voice: That those women who preach with us in the gospel be invited to become members of this conference, be ordained, and have a right to act on all business and questions coming before this conference. After which Mrs. Ellen L. Crumb, of Dorrville, Mrs. Hattie B. Hastings, of Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Anna E. Smith, of New York city, became members of the conference by a unanimous vote. Mrs. Crumb was ordained to the Gospel ministry.

Those who can bring tents with them are requested to do so. Bro. Bellows will be on the ground with his large tent. All who are interested in the blessed hope and soon coming of the Lord, who can, are requested to attend this annual feast, where the Lord has so signally manifested his power. Come in faith and the power of the Holy Ghost, that we may enjoy one more heavenly gathering, and secure the salvation of some poor lost souls, to share with us the heavenly inheritance. Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves. Particulars hereafter.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, } Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Riffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, Committee.

Conn. Campmeeting.—The Lord willing, the Conn. Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Aug. 31st, and continue till Monday, Sept. 9th. Particulars hereafter.
O. D. Woodruff, for Committee.

New York State Campmeeting.—The undersigned committee, appointed at the recent annual conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But, on account of other meetings being held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided on by conference. It will therefore commence August 10th, the Lord willing, and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind, and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to this feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in this State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, one mile and a half north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (direct) R. R., ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens agree to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground. Further particulars soon.

The A. C. Church of Honeoye, N. Y., will hold its third quarterly meeting Saturday and Sunday, July 13th and 14th. Sr. E. S. Jennings and others are expected. Brethren and sisters in adjoining towns are cordially invited to attend.
H. H. Brown.
O. B. Brown.

Hoosick Valley Tent.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. Sibley, S. G. Mathewson, H. K. Flagg, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

I wish to say we have made arrangements, and bought the timber standing on the Springfield camp-ground, of eight acres, for one thousand dollars, and if any of the brethren wish to help us by taking stock of from $25 to $100, they will be sure of their money back when the timber is cut off. This secures us the ground for eight years, if we need it so long, which is very doubtful; but we have to deal with one of no faith.

There are some three or four good places in the front circle for wooden tents, and there are two families on the ground to watch them. This will be a desirable chance to build since this arrangement, as board can be had on the ground, and any kind of lumber delivered, and help obtained to put them up. H. Munger.

"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR,"

Or, The Commune.

BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

COMPENSATION.

After the night, the morning's dawn,
 Paling and blushing with pearl and rose;
The greenest, sunniest fields are born,
 Fruit of the high-piled winter snows.
After the storm, the rainbow gleams,
 Filling with beauty the heavenly dome;
'Neath lowering clouds the sunlight streams;
 After the voyage, is rest at home.

There is no sorrow, no pain of life,
 But bears from its anguish something sweet;
Past the long hours of weary strife
 Comes victory, with her snowy feet.
Through death is life; each pain and loss,
 Each grief we bear is a heavenly prize;
By his long anguish on the cross,
 Christ won our rest in paradise.

Then count not lost the hopes that fall
 Like leaves in autumn, one by one,
Nor deem the light is vanished all,
 As the dark, dreary night wears on;
You shall know at last that loss was gain,
 That through your weary, toilsome way,
As you saw the stars in your life-sky wane,
 The night was leading to heavenly day.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER NINE.

During the last hundred years or so, Europe, and especially England, has produced a large number of writers on the prophecies, and chronology also. The eloquent Edward Irving, the "Spurgeon" of his day, made the fulfillment of prophecy and the Lord's coming at hand, prominent themes in his discourses; and Wolfe, the converted Jew, traveled over a considerable portion of Europe and Asia, preaching the coming of the Lord to Jew and Gentile. While Dr. Cumming and others are sounding the alarm still, Luther in his later writings, taught that Christ would come in about three hundred years, or 1840–50. Whitefield said that in his day they were in "the dregs of time." Fletcher thought the time would run out in "the next generation." Wesley set its end in 1836; while Dr. Scott, Newton, Faber, Bickersteth, Cunningham, Elliot, Cumming, and others, have terminated the periods between 1863 and 1868. And we may add that all the chronologists of note, except one or two, end the 6000 years in or before our day; while many living witnesses are warning the people of England, and other portions of Europe, that the end of all things is at hand.

Though the interest in England has been supported generally by men of learning and ability, it was never made a distinct cause by its friends, nor pressed upon the people with zeal; hence it has never made any great stir nor progress among the masses. But in this country the case is quite different. The Adventists, starting with Bro. Miller's labors, have pressed the message of the judgment at hand with a zeal, activity and self-sacrifice corresponding to its importance; and hence, though poor and uneducated generally, they have been blest with a success in numbers, distinctiveness, and general effect upon the masses, far overshadowing the prosperity of the cause in England.

It is no mean recommendation of the Advent people that, while nearly all the members of other churches have turned their backs upon the Lord's coming and the prophecies generally, they feel like sounding the alarm more earnestly in the ears of a sleepy, backsliding church. They feel that, since this last generation must get nearly all their preaching and warnings on the approach of the judgment from them, it is their duty to make these things very prominent, and lift up their voice like a trumpet, that those who have ears to hear may hear, and that others may be without excuse. They receive but little credit from the careless for their attempts to arouse them, and prevent their slumbering so near the judgment, but their duty remains the same, so long as now and then one can be saved from the worldliness and unbelief which is carrying nearly all professors of religion in the broad way with the world.

But God's faithfulness to the world, slumbering on the brink of ruin, could not allow the judgment to overtake them unwarned; and if he had no watchmen in his service willing to give the alarm, he would raise up men that would do it, though he had to bring them from the stones under our feet. What if the popular churches do not believe in the signs of the end so manifest? Shall their unbelief make the word of God of none effect? Never! His word does not fail because the proud and worldly reject it. Christ thanked the Father because "it seemed good" in his sight to hide his ways "from the wise and prudent, and reveal them unto babes." Matt 11: 25. What if nearly all the educated and the popular among the ministry have ceased to preach the Lord's coming and the judgment, and scoff at such as do not join with them? Is Jehovah's arm shortened thereby? Nay, verily. If he is left to the use of only "the "foolish things of the world to confound the wise," it is not his necessity, but his choice; and no less so in this last gospel message to the world, than it was in giving them the gospel at the first, by apostles chosen from uneducated fishermen.

The Advent message is not only a gospel message, as being clearly and abundantly taught in the Bible, but it is also called "the everlasting gospel," and very clearly pointed out in prophecy as to be preached at this time. This scripture occurs in Rev. 14: 6, 7. We have, in this connection, three messages by as many angels presented to John in vision. These angels are evidently symbols; and what they symbolize will appear from the character of their work. They are represented as giving to them that dwell on the earth gospel warnings in relation to the dangers approaching them; and hence they must be intended to represent the faithful church, which sounds the alarm as these dangers are drawing nigh. The last of these three warnings is an admonition not to worship the beast and his image, nor receive his mark. The character of this warning determines the time of it, as, when they are requiring them, or about requiring them, to thus worship and receive the mark. It seems from the fact of the Lord's coming soon after this (verse 4), and also from the nature of the warning itself, that it closes up the labors of the church in warning the world of the last-day perils. And while this third angel's message closes the last-day warnings, it seems equally evident that the first angel's message (vers. 6, 7) commences them, as we will now proceed to show.

The first angel is represented as "saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come." The word "hour" here must mean, as it usually does, season or time; and hence the warning is, that the season or time of his judgment is come. And since John gives the divine sanction to the message by calling it "the everlasting gospel," he has thus endorsed it as a proper and timely gospel message, which settles also the time of its proclamation, as the time when the judgment is just upon us. Hence, as it agrees so completely in character with the Advent message, and in time with the Advent movement, it is definitely fixed in its application to the proclamation of the judgment near, by the Adventists and others, during the last thirty-five years.

It may be objected that the Adventists have often set the time and been mistaken. This is true; but it only settles more definitely the application, since the setting the time so frequently, in connection with preaching the end near, is the most emphatic way possible to be saying, "The hour [or time] of his judgment is come." But many others, not called Adventists, have been mistaken on time in our day, as I have shown. Yet it seemed they were not much disappointed, and I fear it was because they had not expectation enough to make it a disappointment. So, while the application is to the general proclamation of the judgment near, it is rendered still more emphatic by frequent instances of many saying, by setting the time, He is coming just now. And as to the mistake of setting the wrong time, it is a greater mistake to oppose all interest in time. Which is probably worse in the Lord's sight, to look for him at a date a little earlier than the time appointed, in their ardent desire for him to come, or not to look at all? Most professors of religion pride themselves in their indifference or opposition to his coming, and treat us with scoffs and derision because of our interest in it. But we can afford to bear the frowns of the world for that which brings the smiles of the Lord.

THE GAIN AND THE LOSS, AND THE LOSS AND THE GAIN.

WM. SHEPHERD.

"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"—MATT. 16: 26.

The question here propounded by the Savior is one of the most important which could possibly engage the attention of every fallen son and daughter of the human family. The Savior knew full well the natural disposition and tendencies of the human heart; that it was prone among other things to covetousness ("which is idolatry," Col. 3: 5), a sin which will certainly cut men off from eternal life, and exclude them from the kingdom of God (Mark 10: 17–52, Gal. 5: 14–21); and hence on many occasions we find him warning mankind against it.

This desire of acquisition, to "lay up treasures upon earth," perhaps is the most universal of all others, and especially was it to become so "in the last days," as foreseen by our Lord, and predicted by the prophets. But while this disposition so fearfully prevails, and the love of the world is so deeply rooted in the "hearts of the sons of men," there perhaps is no evil so frequently spoken of and of which we are so repeatedly cautioned against as this.

It is here that the devil plays upon men at his will, and with the least opposition. We venture to assert that in no other way does Satan prove more successful in decoying men from God and his truth, drowning them in woe and perdition, than this.

First the love of gain is so strong, and the desire to accumulate so great, that every opportunity offered to acquire it is seized upon with avidity, utterly regardless of consequences, and perfectly heedless of the many cautions thrown out in God's word against it.

Secondly, the enemy is well aware that this is one of the weakest and most assailable points in man; hence he plies his powers here, and succeeds with the least difficulty.

But to return to the question, "What will it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world?" What will it avail him? What real benefit will he derive from it ultimately, if in his intense desire after these earthly baubles he should "neglect so great salvation" as offered in the gospel, and consequently, at last lie down in sorrow, "lose his own soul," or life, or as it reads in Luke 9: 25, "lose himself?*

What comfort, or real consolation, will the wealth of the whole world afford poor man in the approaching hour of dissolution, or "day of judgment," if he have lived all his days "having no hope and without God in the world?" All the gold of Ophir, the precious things of India, the riches of California. cannot purchase that "gift of God which is eternal life. Says David—"They that trust in their wealth and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches, none of them can by any (of these) means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him." They are represented here as secretly harboring the thought that their "houses shall continue forever, calling their lands after their own names," but as dying and carrying "nothing away," descending with all their glory into perpetual darkness "like the beasts that perish." Psa. 49. "Riches," says Solomon, "profit nothing in the day of wrath, but righteousness (alone) delivereth from death."

Again: "He that trusteth in his riches shall fall, but the righteous shall flourish as a branch." Prov. 11: 4–28. "There is that maketh himself rich yet hath nothing; there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches." Prov. 13: 7. This passage contains the idea of our caption, showing how the great game of life should be played. How that a man may gain all this world, and lose all in the next; and lose all in this world and gain all in the next, if he only plays well, adhering to the rules laid down in the inspired word, and conforming to its precepts.

Again, to show the emptiness of all wordly possessions, and how differently men will estimate them in the great day of reckoning unto which we are fast hastening, the prophet says, "They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be removed. Their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the wrath of the Lord." Ezek. 7: 19. Comp. Isa. 2: 20; Zeph. 1: 18.

Says the apostle James—"Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl, for your miseries that shall come upon you; your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth eaten (for want of use); your gold and your silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days."

The Savior declares in most emphatic manner—"Ye cannot serve God and mammon;" and then positively informs us—"That a rich man shall hardly enter the kingdom of heaven," and "that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

In Luke 12: 15–21, he gives us a very interesting parable, strikingly illustrating the folly of men who seek to become wealthy, and are strangely infatuated with the desire to enlarge their possessions, sitting down and trusting in "uncertain riches." Here we have an individual described as having his riches to increase to such an extent, and whose possessions multiplied to such a degree, that he was at a loss to know where to bestow all his goods, and concluded to "pull down" his old "barns," being too contracted, and build greater and "there," he says, "will I bestow all my fruits and my goods;" after which he is represented as congratulating himself on his good fortune, and with the thought that now, having everything comfortable, and all that the "natural man" could possibly desire, "for many years" to come, he would now take his "ease, eat, drink and be merry." But mark! Just when he has arrived at this apparent condition of peace and plenty, God is represented as addressing him thus—"Thou fool, this night (or at such a time when all should seem secure) thy soul (or life) shall be required of thee; then whose shall these things be, which thou hast provided?"

Now listen to the important lesson drawn from this parable; and oh, dear reader, may it sink deep down into your heart, for who knows but what it may be with you as Nathan said to David, "Thou art the man." If so, take warning in time. Listen—"So is he that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God."

This man here, we see, had played the game of life foolishly; for in gaining all he had lost all, and died like Abner of old, as a fool dieth," for such he is designated by God himself.

We see from the description of the events transpiring under the sixth seal that worldly honors, greatness, riches, will afford us no aid in that day. See Rev. 6: 12–17. That though we have gained the "whole world" it would not profit us in the least, nor secure us a place of refuge from just condemnation before God. That unless we have played the game of life well—been willing to lose all, forsake all things for Christ, take up our cross daily and follow him, and with the apostle "count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, the Lord," and esteem them but "dung, that we may win Christ," and thus have gained all worth gaining; it were better that we had never played the game, nor made one move on the checkered scene of life, than thus to have bartered away eternal wealth and joys for a few fleeting baubles of wealth and its vain pleasures. Luke 14: 33; Phil. 3: 9.

Let us see how the apostles played their part. "Behold, we have forsaken all and followed Thee; what shall we have therefore? Jesus answers—"In the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life." Matt. 19: 27–28. Here we see the principle laid down, by which we must abide in order to lose all that we may gain all.

In conclusion, observe the words of the apostle—"But they that will be rich fall into temptation, and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil, which, while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." And then He instructs Timothy to "charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God; . . . that they do good; that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate, laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life."

Oh, then, in view of these things, dear reader, what will you do? Still persist in the silly course of the man in the parable, and miss the great object of existence—eternal life? Or will you by the strength of proffered grace resolve to consecrate all you have and all you are upon the altar of divine service, and "by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor, and immortality, eternal life," thus winning the great "prize," having lost all and thereby gained all? Rom. 2: 7; 1 Cor. 9: 24; Phil. 3: 14; Rev. 21: 7.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
 In a grand and awful time;
In an age on ages telling,
 To be living is sublime.
Hark! the waking up of nations—
 Gog and Magog to the fray.
Hark! what soundeth? Is creation
 Groaning for its latter day?"

* Which is the true idea, this being a parallel passage, the word (psuke) soul being used here, as in many other places in Scripture, to denote the entire man "himself"; hence it does not teach the pagan notion of an immortal entity separate from the physical organism. The same word in the original is translated "life" in the very verse preceding our text, as also in the corresponding passage, in Mark 8: 35.

WISDOM IN JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge."—COL. 2: 3.

Jesus is the repository of divine knowledge. In him "are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." This storehouse is accessible. Here we can come freely, and receive such instruction as will make us wise unto salvation." The knowledge that Christ imparts is absolutely necessary. Without it, we wander in darkness and perish. All the wisdom of the world does not have the weight of a feather when placed beside the wisdom of God. Men may study, and wreck their eyesight and brains to learn the arts and sciences, but after their greatest researches and acquirements they will still be fools, if they lack the knowledge of God. How strange it is that many parents should take the course they do. They teach their children about almost everything excepting that which is of the greatest importance. They seem to think that if their children can only acquire what they call an "accomplished education," they will get along through life all right. Most young people, in these days, as soon as they have made fair attainments in knowledge, become proud and vain. The first thing, the best thing, the one thing needful, is overlooked through their pride and self-conceit. Would it not be wise, when the mind is tender and young, to impress it with the seal of God's truth? Is this not in harmony with the command of God? "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Again—"Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Was not this the way young Timothy was trained? "And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus." "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work."

Is not a knowledge of salvation through Jesus Christ of more importance than all the wisdom of the world? Many a man has studied years for the ministry, who knew nothing about the wisdom which is in Christ Jesus. Education is good. I value it as much as any one; but I say the first thing to be attended to is a knowledge of God and his word. If I cannot have but one teacher, give me Jesus. Men may know grammar, and not know grace; they may know Hebrew, and not know the Holy Ghost; they may know Greek, and not know God; they may know the arts and sciences, and never know how to win souls to Christ. The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God; "but of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Lord, give us this knowledge.

COMING SUDDENLY.

"Watch ye, therefore; for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping."—MARK 13: 35, 36.

When Christ comes again to this earth, the announcement of his approach will be as sudden and unexpected to the great mass of the world, as was the sweeping deluge in the days of Noah. So callous will men have become through the "cares of this life," and the nonfulfillment of foolish predictions, that, even the day before, there will perhaps be less faith in the Savior's coming than there was one hundred years ago.

It was sudden and unexpected when God rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed the "cities of the plain. None of the inhabitants, save righteous Lot, were fully apprised of the fact the evening before. Suddenly and unexpectedly in the days of Belshazzar, did the hand-writing appear on the wall, foretelling the doom of that proud monarch, and the overthrow of the Babylonish kingdom. It was sudden and unexpected when the passover-angel took his solemn and awful flight over the land, when he smote all the first-born of Egypt, from the first-born of the captive in the dungeon, to the first-born of the king on his throne. It was sudden and unexpected when the waters returned and swamped the proud hosts of Pharaoh in the Red Sea. "They sank as lead in the mighty waters." It was sudden and unexpected, when the angel of the Lord unveiled his mighty power in the destruction of the grand army of Sennacherib. One hundred and eighty-five thousand lay dead in the morning. Suddenly and unexpectedly did the army of Titus withdraw from encamping around Jerusalem, which was the sign given by the Savior to his followers to flee from the city, as that portended its speedy overthrow.

It is our duty therefore, as christians, to study prophecy and observe the "signs of the times," lest the day of the Lord come upon us unawares; "for as a snare shall it come upon all them that dwell upon the face of the whole earth." (Luke 21: 35.)

At the time of the first advent, there was a general expectation amongst the Jews that the Messiah was about to appear. Likewise also, in these last days, there is, at this moment, a generally concurrent opinion amongst prophetic writers throughout the world, that the grand crisis of the Lord's second advent is close at hand.—Prophetic Times.

CONFESS JESUS.

MINNA WALKER.

He has told us in his word, that—Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father." This is but one among the many promises to the children of men, made by their crucified and risen Lord. Yet in all the world there is nothing equal to it. To be confessed before God! What an incentive to duty! What an honor will be conferred upon the finally faithful! We have seen him in his works, wonderful in their beauty and grandeur; we have known him in his infinite love for the lost, and our hearts go up in adoration for all the mercies shown to the children of men; but to be confessed by the Son to the Father, —before whom angels bow, saying Holy, holy, and seraphim veil their faces, is beyond all other honors. Who would not confess him before his fellow mortal? It would seem that all that have named the name would ever do so gladly. But this is not the case. There are the Peters to-day. When the multitude cry Hosanna, they are there; but when they cry crucify him, by their works, if not by words, they say—"I know not the man."

Again, there are others that would not really deny their Lord, yet they do not love to confess him, or they would not sit silent while the prayer-meeting is in its death agony. It is not enough to confess Jesus at the anxious seat, or at the watery grave, or occasionally at the prayer-meeting. Mankind are lost. Something must be done, or they will be involved in irretrievable ruin. Will you do that something? Don't wait for others. Confess Jesus yourself. Says one, we cannot all preach. True enough, but you can tell the disciples that the Lord is risen. Some stranger may hear the good news and learn to tell it too. Sometimes the most powerful preaching is on the floor of the house. Don't let the preachers do it all. Nothing disheartens them so much as to have to push in a prayer-meeting. They have to work hard enough, where they have to do all the singing, praying, and preaching. When there is a church to work, they like to listen and rest. Says another, It is a cross. Says the Master—"He that taketh not his cross and followeth after me is not worthy of me." Sit down and contemplate Jesus' dying love for you. See if you do not soon delight to run in the way of his commandments. If this were all that is required, it would be comparatively easy to confess Jesus; but this is but a small part; nor can we enter into the details in this short article, but one other is worthy of mention.

We must confess him in private. This has been sadly neglected; so much so, that the unconverted use it in their opposition to christianity. Many confess him in public, who never mention his power to save to their shopmate by their side. Many want to be missionaries and preachers. That is well; but shop-missionary work, and parlor-preaching, is not to be overlooked, if we would confess Christ. How many times, when I was without hope, have I sat whole afternoons in the company of professed christians, and listened to the usual amount of talk about fashion, and almost anything, except of Jesus, the Savior of sinners. In time of revival, there was interest enough taken, but it was not consistent; it only hardened me. But while riding on the cars, a sweet-faced lady came and sat beside me, and told me of Jesus and his love. My callous heart was touched, I had passed through revivals unsoftened; listened to pulpit eloquence without effect; but here was something that reached me,—Jesus' love, her love for Jesus. I began to thirst for the same. After a week's struggle between hope and despair, I found him precious to me, and have been trying to confess him ever since. The more I tell the story, the more I love to.

"I'll give him all the glory,
Because he took me in."

Confess him to your neighbors and associates. It will be harder than in the public meeting. They may sneer at you, and revile your Master, but it is duty. Learn to suffer for Jesus' sake. It is the best part of the christian course. It is so near the Master; besides, the result who can tell? They may catch the flame and confess him to assembled multitudes. Jesus revealed himself to one woman at the well; she confessed him to all Samaria, is not this the Christ? Confess him at home, abroad, in public, in private, in daily walk and conversation. Let the mind of Christ be in you. Confess him in dress and deportment. When asked why you appear so mean, confess Jesus. It is his teaching that bids us "be not conformed to this world." If asked to engage in sinful pleasure, confess Jesus. Go where he can go with you, and nowhere else. Many confess with their mouths, but deny with their works. Let both accord. The one without the other is dead. Buy and sell with an eye to the glory of God and lost men. They look for example. Live as though you believed what you talk, then the world will take knowledge that you have been with Jesus, and know whereof you affirm; and when he comes down the shining pathway of heaven with his retinue of angels, to gather his jewels, he will fulfill his promise, and confess you before his Father.

DOCTRINAL PREACHING.

The gospel can not be preached without doctrinal statements. Sensible people do not expect it to be done. Hearts imbued with the spirit of Christ feast on the doctrine of Christ, and gather new strength for duty and trial as they treasure the truth. But somehow or other an unaccountable prejudice has made headway in the church against doctrinal preaching. It is, however, a mere prejudice, the offspring of thoughtfulness, and should not deter any minister from holding forth the word of life, as he understands it.

Rhetorical splurges on moral questions should not be allowed to take the place of bold, faithful descriptions of human guilt and danger; nor should scientific lectures displace the exposition of the sacred text. The age of "itching ears" has come. Young men and maidens frown the moment the preacher launches into theology. Their frown is sometimes potent. Its influence too often reaches the pulpit, and he whose face should be flint to defend the right, feels strange misgivings when visions of coming remonstrances, flit before his imagination. It is laudable to wish to please. He who does not please, can scarcely hope to profit his hearers. Such reasoning leads to compromises, and these to further concessions, until the glow of manhood fades, and spiritual independence succumbs to the imperious mandates of worldly prudence. And then indeed is the pulpit muzzled. The preacher reflects the mind of the people. He fears to do otherwise. Unpalatable truths are shut out. The gospel is mutilated. Instead of the "sincere milk of the word" to nourish babes in Christ, or the "strong meat" for those whose spiritual senses are exercised so as to need it, the juiceless husks of human learning, or the tinsel of rhetoric, or the flowers of a beautiful style, are dealt out to souls famishing for the bread of life. There is too much of this in the church. It is laying waste the fairest fields of the Lord's heritage.

The church needs doctrines. Without them she will perish, in spite of wealth and numbers and culture. We do not mean disputes and wrangling, but doctrines. What God says of man, of sin, and of the devil, must be repeated and enforced. The office, and mission of Christ must be explained and defended. The work of the Holy Ghost, as it relates to the penitent, the seeker, and the believer, must be kept before the mind. The dread realities of retribution in eternity must be held up for warning and reproof. Can he be faithful who speaks lightly of these things? Can the church prosper where they are distasteful? Will not God hold both ministers and people to account if truth falls in the streets, because the flippant outcry against doctrinal preaching has been raised?—Western Christian Advocate.

SELECTIONS FROM "AMERICAN ANTIQUITES,"—No. 1.

BY JOSIAH PRIEST, ALBANY, 1833.

"A gentleman who was living near the town of Cincinnati, in 1826, on the upper level, had occasion to sink a well, who persevered in digging to the depth of eighty feet without finding water; but still persisting in the attempt, his workmen found themselves obstructed by a substance, which resisted their labor, though evidently not stone. They cleared the surface and sides from the earth bedded around it, when there appeared the stump of a tree three feet in diameter, and two feet high, which had been cut down with an axe. The blows of the axe were yet visible."

"Reflections on this discovery are these; first, that the tree was undoubtedly antediluvian. Second, that the river now called the Ohio, did not exist anterior to the deluge, inasmuch as the remains of the tree were found firmly rooted, in its original position, several feet below the bed of that river. Third, that America was peopled before the flood, as appears from the action of the axe in cutting down the tree." Page 125.

"In Morse's Universal Geography, first vol., page 142, the discovery of this stump is corroborated. 'In digging a well in Cincinnati, the stump of a tree was found in a sound state, ninety feet below the surface; and in digging another well at the same place, another stump was found, at ninety-four feet below the surface, which had evident marks of the axe; and on its top there appeared as if some iron tool had been consumed by rust.'" Page 131.

"The remains of former dwellings, found along the Ohio, where the stream has in many places washed away its banks, hearths and fire-places are brought to light, from two to six feet deep below the surface. Near these remains are found immense quantities of muscle shells, and bones of animals. From the depths of many of these remnants of chimnies, and from the fact that trees as large as any in the surrounding forest were found growing on the ground above those fire-places at the time the country was first settled by its present inhabitants, the conclusion is drawn that a very long period has elapsed since these subterraneous remnants of the dwellings of man were deserted." THE hardy oak grows where the storms have free play among its branches. So the disciples of Christ, who become strong to do and to endure, are the men and women who bear patiently the afflictions of the gospel; those whom opposition does not daunt, nor disappointments discourage.

FIGHT AND CONQUER.

PHEBE A. GIFFORD.

To you, dear children, one and all,
I now address my letter;
And thinking if it be in rhyme,
That you may like it better,
The gentle muse I now invite
To aid me while I try to write.
Now fairly started, I would say,
Fight all the evil in your way;
All inclinations to do wrong,
And, though temptation should be strong,
Resist it with an iron will;
And if enticed to practice ill,
Let your response be firmly—No.
Onward, with courage, bravely go;
Fear not the lions you may see,
Frightful though they appear to be;
When reached, you find them firmly chained,
O'er fear, then, you'll have vict'ry gained.
With hope all difficulties view,
Be bound they shall not conquer you;
With all your might the battle press,
Till they grow beautifully less.
As there's a time for every thing,
Should any this inquiry bring—
When shall we fight? I would reply,
Fight now. While young the conflict try.
Though you should fail, keep trying still,
Men are made giants by their will.
"Be sure you're right, then go ahead,"
Wisdom begins by fearing God;
Read and obey his holy word.
He gave you life and parents dear,
O children, cause them not a tear.
Obey your parents in the Lord,
For this is right; so says the word.
The farmer in the spring, you know,
Is careful many seeds to sow;
His crop, if he had planted corn,
Would not be melons, sure's you're born.
Now is your spring-time; sow with care,
If you would reap a harvest fair.
Would you have learning, which, you know,
Does not, like weeds, spontaneous grow,
Sow persevering study now,
Till its fresh laurels wreathe your brow.
Love from your fellows would you ask?
To gain it is a pleasing task;
Scatter its gentle, loving seeds,
Go lend a hand, do kindly deeds;
Speak gently, saddened hearts to cheer,
Repeat the echoes you would hear.
Would you have friends, then friendly be,
Love has a secret; be lovely.
Would you be wise, then fear the Lord,
Practice the dictates of his word.
In wisdom's pleasant ways pursue,
Seek to win souls to walk with you.
The wisest is the narrow way,
It leads to happy, endless day;
Away from wickedness and strife,
To reaping of eternal life.
Now we are weak, but God is strong;
Seek help from him to fight the wrong;
Repent of sin, and humbly pray
To him, through Christ the living way.
In forming habits take great care,
And of the first wrong step beware.
'Tis by repeating o'er and o'er
The acts which we have done before,
Habits become like chains at length,
Holding us captive by their strength.
Now form good habits, children dear,
The strength of evil habits fear.
Obedient, kind, from murmuring free,
Look on the bright and hopeful side,
In wisdom's dwelling e'er abide;
All that intoxicates refuse,
And in no form tobacco use.
 And to the girls here let me say,
Do not be slaves to fashion's sway;
Ever be orderly and neat,
In disposition truly sweet.
Prize more than any thing of earth,
Jesus, the pearl of greatest worth.
Seek him and his blest Spirit too,
And when its fruits are seen in you,
'Twill render you more truly fair,
Than gayest clothing you could wear.
Beauty of heart and life admire,
Be this the beauty you desire.
Conquer, young friends, by doing well,
And then with Jesus ever dwell.

A GODLESS HOUSE.

Children, a little boy three years old, whose father was irreligious, spent several months in the dwelling of a godly family, where he was taught the simple elements of divine truth.

The good seed fell into good and tender soil, and the child learned to note the difference between a prayerless and a christian dwelling. One day, as some one was conversing with the little fellow about the great and good God, the child said:

"We haven't got any God at my papa's house."

Alas! how many such houses there are in our world and land—houses where there is no prayer, no praise, no worship, no God! And what homes are they for children? ay, and for men and women, too? How much better is the pure atmosphere of christian love than the cold, selfish wordliness of a godless home.

Said an ungodly man, "I never was so near heaven, and probably never shall be again, as when I spent a day in the house of Ebenezer Brown," a godly Scotchman, who guided his household in the fear of the Lord.

Would that there were more such homes, the memory of which might shed a holy savor over many a wanderer's heart, and lead the sad and lonely sons of sorrow and of tears to look forward to the gladness of the eternal gathering beyond the tears and toils and trials of this weary pilgrimage. To such homes the weary come for consolation. The Son of Peace is there. Blessed be such homes, and may ours ever be of this number!—British Workmen.

CARE FOR SPARROWS.

A little girl, seeing the servant throw crumbs into the fire, said, "Don't you know that God takes care of the sparrows?"

"If God takes care of them," was the careless reply, "we need not trouble ourselves about them."

"But," said the little girl, "I had rather be like God, and help him take care of the little birds, than scatter or waste the food that he gives us."

So she carefully collected what was left of the crumbs, and threw them out of the window. In a short time several little birds flew eagerly to the spot, and picked up the crumbs she had scattered. After this, she every day collected in a little basket the crumbs and bits of bread that had fallen around the table, and threw them under the window for the little birds; and during all the winter these little creatures came regularly after each meal to partake of the food thus provided for their support.

THE TRUE COMPASS.—"Well, my boy, so you are going to try your fortune in the city. I tell you it is a dangerous ocean to launch your craft on," said a man to his neighbor's son. "Yes, sir," answered the lad, taking his Bible from his pocket; "but, you see, I've got a safe compass to steer by." "Stick to it! stick to it!" cried the man, and the devil cannot hurt so much as a hair of your head."

TRAINING CHILDREN.

A gentleman, being accidentally thrown upon the hospitality of a christian family for a few weeks, was favorably impressed with the result of an influence in that happy home to which he was a stranger, and which he desired to understand. So he requested the parents to disclose to him the secret by which their home was made so cheerful. The mother, therefore, complied with his wishes by saying that they started out with three fixed principles.

"The first was to study and endeavor to understand the different temperaments and disposition of our children, and to treat them accordingly, since a course which would prove beneficial to one, might be injurious to another differently constituted.

"The second was never to overlook a fault, however trifling, which implied moral obliquity, or which might, if neglected, pervert the soul. Errors which arise from the exuberance of animal spirits, or the thoughtlessness incident to childhood, should not, I think, be too strictly scanned; but falsehood, disobedience, selfishness, and their kindred vices, are moral plague spots, which, if not eradicated, must destroy their victim.

"The third was to guard our children from the approach and contact of moral evil, even more anxiously than we would seek to guard them from an infectious and fatal disease. To this end we watch the associations they join, become acquainted with their young friends, that we may know whether they are safe companions or not, and are careful never to admit a servant into the house without being sure that her moral character is such as to render her a safe inmate of a virtuous family. It is not enough that she is honest and capable; for what avails it that our silver is safe, if our children are in danger of being corrupted by her teaching or example?"

To these three principles the father added a few words.

"I was about to say that from infancy, as our children have been healthy and vigorous, their mother has followed the plan of letting them alone. They have never been handled and dosed and worried into a fever of fretfulness by mistaken kindness; but when their wants were supplied, they have been left very much to themselves, and suffered to be happy in their own way. As they grew older, she has taught them self-reliance and self-control, by throwing them as far as possible on their own resources. Instead of leading them to depend on us in all things as a kind of external conscience, they have often been left to act for themselves on known principles which we have sought to inculcate from the word of God."—Ex.

SITE FOR A HOUSE.

The position of a house affects very much its sanitary value—how it fronts, where it stands, and what are its surroundings. If the house stands free, and is not pressed into a "block," of course one side of it will face the north, and one side will face the east. But we may say that, even when there are windows on all sides, and the light comes in from all sides, the rooms most used should be where they can receive the direct rays of the sun at all seasons. Sunshine in the rooms is just as salutary as sunshine in the heart. Let the carpet fade, let the flies come in, but do not keep out the sunlight. A house that has no sunshine will be half of the time a hospital, and a bad hospital too, where there is more malady than cure. A healthy home will not be placed where anything obstructs the light.

It is not commendation that one can gather his apples from his chamber windows, or can study pine cones on the tree without leaving his chair. One would not cut down a great elm or oak because its spreading branches have reached the windows or the roof. But when the shade is sombre, and the sun refuses to pierce its canopy, the house itself ought to be moved into the light, or another built in a better place. As a general rule, we may say that no tree ought to stand within fifteen feet of a house, and no shrubbery that will make any of the rooms dark, or damp, or dismal. There are reasons of health, not less than of beauty, why a house should not be hidden by a grove, and why a lawn with flowers is more satisfactory than clumps of pine or cedar.

A dry site for a house, too, is of the highest importance—that there be no marsh before the windows, no stagnant pools around the doorway. The margin of a pool is not the proper site for the dwelling of a prudent man, however it may suit such a genius as Thoreau. The best landscape is not a fair equivalent for the danger of malaria. A well drained city street is better for residence than a house which looks proudly down upon the bay and islands, yet draws in poison from damp lawns and pastures.—Ex.

SUNSTROKE.

Dr. Geo. H. Hope, M. D., gives the following directions for the treatment of sunstroke until medical aid can be obtained:—"This is a sudden prostration due to long exposure to great heat, especially when one is much fatigued or exhausted. It commonly happens from undue exposure to the sun's rays in summer, but I have seen the same effects produced in a baker from the great heat of the bake room. It begins with pain in the head, or dizziness, quickly followed by loss of consciousness and complete prostration. Sometimes, however, the attack is as sudden as a stroke of apoplexy. The head is often burning hot, the face dark and swollen, the breathing labored and snoring, and the extremities cold. Take the patient at once to a cool and shady place, but don't carry him far to a house or hospital. Loosen the clothes thoroughly about his neck and waist. Lay him down with the head a little raised. Apply wet cloths to the head, and mustard or turpentine to the calves of the legs and the soles of the feet. Give a little weak whisky and water if he can swallow. Meanwhile let some one go for the doctor. You cannot safely do more than I have said without his advice."—Home and Health.

A WELCOME.

Hail, bright millennial morning!
Hail, happy day of rest,
When we shall dwell forever
With Him we love the best;
When fairest flowers shall blossom,
And richest fruits shall grow,
And all who love the Savior
His boundless love shall know.

Hail, bright millennial morning!
When peace shall ever reign,
And shed a quiet glory
O'er valley, hill, and plain;
When love shall sweetly govern
Throughout the happy land,
And songs of joy and triumph
Resound from strand to strand.

Hail, bright millennial morning!
We hail thy coming near;
Though clouds are in the distance,
We know we need not fear.
As travelers benighted,
We look towards the sky,—
Behold, the morning dawneth,
The day-star draweth nigh.

Hail, bright millennial morning!
How happy we shall be
When Jesus in his beauty
And glory we shall see;
When all the saints united,
Each friend, each brother greet,
And join the glorious circle
Who worship at his feet.

GOD'S PROMISES TO ABRAHAM.

J. RIDLEY.

After God commanded Abraham (then called Abram) to leave his country, and his kindred, and his father's house, and go to a land that he would show him, he made unto him certain promises. The first promise was made at the time that the command was given: "I will make of thee a great nation." Gen. 12:2.

And after Abraham had left his country, and had come into the land of Canaan, as the Lord commanded, and was still without seed, the Lord makes the same promise to him again, and said, "Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them; and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be. And he believed the Lord; and it was counted to him for righteousness." Gen. 15:5, 6. And after Abraham had been some time in the land, and was getting old, the Lord reaffirms the same promise, and tells him how it shall be brought about, saying, "Thy name shall no more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. . . . As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be. And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her; yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her. . . . And Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac." Gen. 17:5–19.

This promise has been fulfilled. Isaac has been born, and "many nations" have sprung from Abraham. This is the promise spoken of by Paul—"And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise." Heb. 6:15. And not only was the promise fulfilled in Isaac, but in us also if we are the Lord's; for "we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." Gal. 4:28.

Now what benefit is it to us to be "children of promise," or to be Christ's ("for if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed"), if there is no other promise to Abraham but that of being the father of an innumerable seed? But is there nothing promised to Abraham which he, with all that become his children by faith in Christ, is to receive in the future? I believe there is, praise the Lord. There is a glorious promise yet unfulfilled; for after the promise that we have been considering was fulfilled, we read—"These all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise." Heb. 11:39. Here we find an unfulfilled promise. What is it?

Why is it that so little is said, or known, about this glorious promise? First, because men have followed the teachings of an apostate church, that has "darkened counsel," and so immaterialized everything that the word of God has been made void "through her tradition." Second, because the command of Christ to "search the Scriptures" has not been obeyed. The promises of God have not been examined separately.

We have noticed the first promise, which is of but little importance to us, if there is nothing more promised so Abraham; but if there is a promise to Abraham and his seed which is not fulfilled, then it is of much importance that we be Abraham's seed. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." But before we notice this promise, which is not yet fulfilled, we will notice another which has been fulfilled, promised to or through Abraham.

Turning to the history of Abraham after he had left his father's house, and had come to the land of Canaan, we read, "And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. . . . And the Lord appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land." Gen. 12:6, 7. Now Abraham was not mentioned in this promise; but it was "unto thy seed." Neither does he tell him when they shall receive it, nor how long they shall possess it, nor how much is included in "this land"; nothing except the naked promise, "Unto thy seed will I give this land." But as we follow Abraham in his sojournings, we find that God makes the same promise again, and also how much is included in "this land," and when it is to be received. "And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; and afterward shall they come out with great substance. And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age. But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again. . . . The same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates; the Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites." Gen. 15.

Here we are informed (1) How much is included in "this land"; viz., that which lies between the two rivers mentioned, and possessed by these ten tribes. (2) That they are to come into possession after four hundred years. And the Lord told Moses how long they should possess it, and that was as long as they would "do his commandments"; but if they refuse to obey his law, then the Lord said, "Ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it." Deut. 28:63.

This promise was fulfilled, according to the testimony of the Lord, when they came into the land of Canaan, after their wanderings in the wilderness; for when Moses had finished his journeying with the children of Israel, "he went up to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the Lord showed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan, and all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, unto the utmost sea, and the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, the city of palm trees, unto Zoar. And the Lord said unto him, This is the land which I sware unto Abraham, saying, I will give it unto thy seed." Deut. 34:1–4. And the people in the days of Nehemiah so understood the promise, and while standing before the Lord said—"Thou art the Lord the God, who didst choose Abram and gave him the name of Abraham, and foundest his heart faithful before thee, and madest a covenant with him to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hivites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites; to give it, I say, to his seed, and hast performed thy words; for thou art righteous." Neh. 9:7, 8. O how plain are the promises of God when explained by the word of truth.

Now if we turn again to the word of God, we may find the promise that has buoyed up the church in ages past, and for which Moses was willing to suffer affliction; for he claimed the promise by faith in Christ.

After Lot had left Abraham, and had gone down to the plain of Jordan, the Lord said to Abraham, "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, forever. . . . Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee." Gen. 13:14–17.

The Lord mentioned this promise again the same day that he made the promise to Abraham's family, and the day that he promised him a seed, saying, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it." Gen. 15:7. How unlike the promise to the family of Abraham is this great and glorious promise. That, as we have shown, was a temporal one; this is an eternal one—an "everlasting possession." That was to his seed, the Israelites; this, Paul tells us, is to him and "his seed as of one, . . . which is Christ." Gal. 3:16. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed." Verse 29. That promise was the land of the ten tribes, between the two rivers; but this, is all the land that he could see from the four quarters of the earth. And Paul, an inspired commentator, when speaking of this promise, says that it was "that he should be heir of the world."

Has this been fulfilled? The Bible says it has not. Will we believe the Bible? Then if it has not been fulfilled, will it ever be? Most certainly. "God is not slack concerning his promise," "and what he has promised that he is able also to perform."

Let us now examine the proof that the promise has not been fulfilled, that all may be plain.

(1) One of the proofs that God gave to Abraham that he would fulfill this promise was—"Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age."

(2) When Sarah died, Abraham said to the sons of Heth, "I am a stranger and a sojourner with you," and he bought of them the field Ephron and the cave that was therein for a burying place. And Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the same cave. Gen. 23, and 25:9.

(3) Stephen, just before his death, when speaking of this promise, said—"And he gave him [Abraham] none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child." Acts 7:5.

(4) His "seed, which is Christ," did not get the land; for when a certain scribe came and said unto him, "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest," Jesus said unto him, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Matt. 8:19, 20. He lived as a pilgrim and stranger here, and when at last he gave up his life, he did not receive of the Father a burying place; but Joseph, a rich man, begged his body and laid it in his own new tomb. And many of Christ's people, who are heirs of the same promise, can say—

"No foot of land do I possess,
No cottage in this wilderness."

Nevertheless God has promised, and his promises never fail. We may die, and like Abraham be buried, but we believe with him that God is able to raise us "up again from the dead." And though the earth may reel to and fro like a drunken man, and be removed like a cottage, and though it may be shaken "once more," as the Scriptures say, yet the things which cannot be shaken will remain. God's promise cannot be shaken—"The earth abideth forever." Eccl. 1:4. And though in the fires of the last day "the heavens [atmosphere] shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also," still with Peter we look for a "new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The curse shall be removed, and the earth shall be "more beauteous than at first"; for God has declared, "Behold, I make all things new." Rev. 21:5. Not all new things, but "all things new." The earth made new; the New Jerusalem resting majestically upon it; Christ reigning King of kings, and Lord of lords; the glory of God filling the earth, as the waves fill the sea. Abraham and all the faithful ones (for such are blessed with faithful Abraham) will have been raised from their dusty beds to immortal life, and receive the fulfillment of God's promise, "The land for an everlasting possession." Sin with its long train of evils will be past. Death, the "last enemy," and "him that had the power of death, that is the devil," will be destroyed; and there shall be no more curse. Glorious prospect! No wonder Moses esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt when he expected such a glorious possession as this for his reward.

Shall I be there? Reader, will you be there? Let us abide in Christ, and be led by his Spirit, that we may be his; "for if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

"BEHOLD THE MAN!"

MINNA WALKER.

What a volume of meaning in that one short sentence, uttered by Pontius Pilate, the Roman Governor of Judea, in the judgment hall, where priest and people, once the chosen of God, were clamoring for blood. Behold—look at the man; the man who had been taken the previous night by armed men, and brought thither to be tried like a criminal. Surely it is the man of Galilee that for three and a half years had passed in and out of the city, taught in the synagogues, sat at meat with them, tarried under their roof; the same one that opened the eyes of the blind, unstopped deaf ears, bade the dumb speak, and the lame leap for joy. It is he that came to the little city of Bethany to find his friends, Mary and Martha, in tears for the death of a brother beloved; he who spake the word, and he that was dead lived again. The same that comforted the heart of the lone widow of Nain by giving back to her from the dead her only son and support; he that went about doing good, scattering light and gladness in all the countries of Judea and Galilee, on the hills and in the vales, in the humble abodes of the down-trodden of earth, pillowing his head upon the dewey hillsides through the silent watches of the night; quiet, unassuming, a man of sorrows.

Now, suddenly, he is arraigned before Pilate; tried by a mock court; witnessed against by men who sold their truth for money, yet there was no fault found in him; and when the soldiers had crowded him with a crown of thorns, and "put on him a purple robe," Pilate said—"Behold, I bring him forth unto you, that ye may know that I find no fault in him." "Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe. And Pilate said unto them, Behold the man." They led him away to be crucified and buried, to rise again and ascend on high to finish the plan for which he came and suffered.

The words of Pilate invite the attention of all the world. "Behold the man," from his manger-cradle to his rock-hewn tomb. He was the acme of perfection. All that was good, pure, peaceable, gentle, kind and true, in him were embodied. He had dignity with great meekness and humility. When reviled, he reviled not again. He was without guile. When arraigned and accused, he opened not his mouth. "Behold the man"; and like the builder, who, by following the pattern, produces like results in all the work of his hands, let us assimilate our character to his. Behold him until wrath, clamor, and evil speaking, with envy, and strife, and vain glory, are purged out; until pride and egotism, self-love and love of the world shall find no place. Behold him until no path will be too thorny, if he hath trod the way before; until no self-denial will be too great, since he hath denied himself for us. Behold him until no cross will be too heavy to be borne. Thus will purity of heart be attained unto a spotless life, the result here; and in the end, so soon to come, eternal life in the kingdom of God, where, in the society of the Man of Calvary, we may walk the golden streets, and eat the fruit of life's fair tree, and go no more out forever.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER TEN.

But the Scriptures have several times intimated that the waiting church will be disappointed in reference to the end of time, by expecting the Lord at a date earlier than he will come. Nor does the Lord allude to this disappointment with chidings, but with evident approval of the ardor of their expectations and desires. This mistake is definitely marked in the parable of the ten virgins, Matt. 25:1–13. The preceding chapter (Matt. 24th) is a continual discourse, which Christ gave to his disciples on the signs of his coming and the end of the world, with a brief allusion to the destruction of Jerusalem. When he has brought us down in his discourse to the end, and dwelt there for a while on the signs that shall immediately precede his coming, he introduces two classes of servants, distinguished according to the use they make of the Lord's coming. One class he calls a "faithful and wise servant," giving meat to the household "in due season," and destined to be made a "ruler over all his goods" when the Master comes. The other class he calls "that evil servant," who "shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming," and shall begin "to eat and drink with the drunken," and "shall smite his fellow servants" (those who do not join with him, but give meat in due season). "The lord of that servant," he says, "shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall appoint him his portion with the hypocrites."

These things are being fulfilled before our eyes every day. We see the evil servants everywhere, and often hear them saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming," when they declare, "He will not come in my day." We also see them "eating and drinking with the drunken" at their levees, festivals, oyster suppers, and other church sprees, in which the professed servants of God are giving to the thoughtless crowd frequent variations in worldly entertainment, for the sake of their quarters. We see the same evil servants smiting those who are giving meat in due season; not indeed with their hands, or other physical weapons, as yet, but with the tongue, as the ancient backsliders did Jeremiah. "Come," said they, "let us devise devices against Jeremiah; for the law shall not perish from the priest," etc. "Come, and let us smite him with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words." Jer. 18:18. And since they neither look for the Lord's coming, nor intend to, and protest that his coming will be as a thief, to the church as well as the world, they are destined to have him come to them "in a day when they look not for him, and in an hour they are not aware of," and how can they escape a "portion with hypocrites"?

Amidst all this waywardness of the evil servants, we behold the faithful servants also raising their warning voice against these iniquities, and giving meat in due season to the household of God. Instead of saying in their hearts, "My Lord delayeth his coming," they declare that "the hour [or time] of his judgment is come." Instead of "eating and drinking with the drunken," they are warning all that this would be showing ourselves "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." Instead of living so that he must come in a day that they look not for him, they are ever watching, waiting and longing for his coming, with ardent desire and expectation; and when they behold the signs fulfilling, they look up and lift up their heads in hope, knowing that their "redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21:28. It is in the midst of these scenes that Christ places the fulfillment of the parable of the ten virgins, saying—"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the Bridegroom." "The kingdom of heaven" here must mean the church, as she is destined to become an important part of the kingdom, when it is set up. "The Bridegroom" must denote Christ, as the church is "the bride, the Lamb's wife." Their lamps must be their Bible, as the Psalmist has said, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Ps. 119:105. And, as this movement of the virgins in the parable was to meet the Bridegroom, in expectation of the marriage, it must denote that the church in fulfillment will make a move in expectation of Christ's coming; for when he comes the marriage supper of the Lamb will take place. Such a move, with such an expectation, has been made by Adventists, as all our opponents will allow. Nor do they claim that they have ever taken such a step, neither intend to. Hence Adventists—our opponents being judges—must be allowed to have fulfilled the parable thus far.

But now comes the disappointment, as we read—"But while the Bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept." Hence he did not come as they expected; but they did not return back to the place from which they started. They remained out there in a waiting position, although they "slumbered and slept," as it was late in the evening, and approaching midnight. "At midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps." This last move is the final move of the church into the kingdom of God; for according to this cry, "the Bridegroom came, and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut."

Let us now recapitulate. The Adventists took their lamps (Bibles) some thirty years ago, and casting away their worldliness, traditions, and church fetters, they went forth "like a strong man armed," expecting to meet the Lord in 1843 or 1844. But he did not come as they expected; he has tarried nearly thirty years beyond the time when they then expected him. In this tarrying time some of the Advent body have gone back to their traditions and church fetters; but the mass are still out waiting for the Bridegroom to come. It must be confessed, however, that we have lost much of that lively expectation that characterized the body before the time passed; or, in the language of the parable, have "slumbered and slept." Not slept unconsciously, but "slumbered and slept." We are in this waiting position to-day, still expecting with a growing desire to hear the long expected sound, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." When this cry is made, the slumbering and sleeping time ceases, the church arises, and the foolish virgins appear. I have purposely passed them by, as their development is yet future, and a consideration of them is not essential to my purpose in examining this parable.

I think it must be allowed that this parable is a clear, full and decisive testimony in proof that a disappointment of the waiting church on time was foretold in prophecy. And, in view of what has just been said, I think it must be allowed, too, that it has been completely fulfilled by Adventists down to the last move into the kingdom. Nor need we look for it to be fulfilled by others. Once fulfilled is enough. Besides, Adventists are the only people inclined to do such a thing. But should others do it, it would make Adventists of them. Hence we must allow Adventists to have done it.

Another passage that we will consider in proof on this point is in Hab. 2:1–4. We are here introduced to the language of the Lord to the watchman, who, standing upon his tower, seeks to know what he shall say when he is "reproved," or, as the margin reads, "argued with." The Lord answers—"Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

The practice of the Advent preachers in using large charts illustrating the visions which reach to the end, as they go far and near instructing and warning the people concerning the end of all things, seems in perfect harmony with the instruction here given to the watchmen to "write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it." The vision which he is talking about is one that is to speak, that is, be fulfilled, at "the end." It is also quite definitely intimated that it will appear to tarry as they are looking for it to be fulfilled; but we are exhorted to "wait for it," for "it will surely come, it will not tarry." A comparison of the third and fourth verses here, and of Heb. 10:37, 38, will show that Paul understood this of Christ's coming.

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

A. F. BROWN.

I long for the coming of the Just One. I trust that his coming is near. That soon the trump will sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. What a glorious prospect! There will be no more sin, no more sorrow; for the former things will be passed away, and all things will become new.

How different will his coming seem to the righteous and the wicked, to those that love his appearing, and those who say—"My Lord delayeth his coming." What a joyful event it will be to those who have kept their lamps trimmed and burning; who have proclaimed the glad tidings—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh." They have been scoffed at, for to believe that the coming of Christ is near is to bring upon one's self the scorn and contempt of the world. Not so with the wicked. They love not his appearing, and in vain will they try to fly from the presence of the Lord. They have the blackness of darkness reserved unto them forever. There is no hope for them, unless they repent and turn unto the Lord.

O sinner, repent and turn unto the Lord before it is too late. Delay not. Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation. You know not how long you will live. To-day may be your last on earth. O prepare for the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Lord Jesus, come quickly.

LOST BENEATH THE CROSS.

The cross of Jesus has been lifted up so that all may behold it. Christ was not crucified within the walls of a jail, but in plain view of all the multitude. The record of his life and death is an open page before us, so that he who perishes amid this gospel light has no one to criminate but himself. I have read of those who are lost in snow storms, that often their bodies are found at the gate of their own dwelling. Although Christ has made an all-sufficient atonement, so that all who will look to the cross of Christ may be saved, I fear that beneath the very cross itself shall be found thousands upon thousands of the unredeemed, and forever lost, because they will not so much as look away from their sin unto him, who from the cross is looking upon them.

Many have planted beneath, and trimmed around the cross, so many fruitless earthly hopes, that it is impossible to see the bleeding body of him that hangs upon the cross, crucified, that they may receive into their hearts that blessed and sure hope of immortality which the world can neither give nor take away.

Many have builded about the cross such a high wall of sectarian animosity, that neither do they themselves touch the hem of the healing garment of King Jesus, nor do they permit others to do so. For shame, for shame! Tear down those walls of division, and let the victim on the cross be seen as the victor over death and sin, to all who will look upon him. Reader, be careful to make your salvation sure, that at last you may not be found under the cross of love and light, under the flowing stream of redeeming blood, beneath the cross of the loving Son of God, lost! lost, LOST!—Words for Jesus.

TRUTH SPREADING.

An able article has been published in the "Masonic Tidings," by Jared C. Brown, on the subject of the immortality of the soul, which we present to our readers, who will feel well paid for a careful examination. It shows that the light and truth of the Scriptures on this subject are spreading far and wide. Let us rejoice and thank the Lord.—Ed.

Masonry does not teach the immortality of the soul; it does teach the advent into life, death, and the resurrection, and that the Bible was the inestimable gift of God to man.

The Bible does not teach the immortality of the soul—not in a single instance or verse, from Genesis to Revelation. It does teach, after the new heavens a new earth and the resurrection; then life immortal, or death eternal.

Webster defines soul as "the immortal part of man;" yet the Bible teaches that man is mortal, and has no immortal part; and that man and soul are synonymous terms to represent the body of man. Gen. 2:7—"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Let me ask, if man's immortal soul was floating in space prior to his creation; after creation without the breath of life, was man a dead soul or was the breath of life that was breathed into his nostrils the soul? If so, "the breath of life," and the "soul" are synonymous terms, and as dieth the brute so dieth man—for the breath leaves the body and the Bible teaches that nothing leaves the body at death but the breath of life, which vanishes away and returns to him who gave it. For instance, Luke 7:12—"Now when he [Jesus] came nigh to the gate of the city behold there was a dead man carried out." Prior to death the breath of life causes man to live, or as God says, he was "a living soul; so without life, a dead man was a dead soul. David, in speaking of man, Ps. 146:4—"His breath goeth forth, he returneth to earth, in that very day his thoughts perish." Again, Ps. 104:28—"Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to dust." Eccl. 12:7—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit unto God who gave it;" proving that spirit and breath are synonymous terms. Gen. 7:22—"All in whose nostrils was the breath of life of all that was in the dry land died." Living man and living soul are often met with in the Bible, having the same meaning, while immortal soul is never met with as referring to man, and I have failed to find the words "immortal soul" more than once in the Bible, and then it was applied to the great Jehovah. 1 Tim. 1:17—"Now unto the king eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen."

In the Bible, everything is called a living soul, and we find that every living thing dieth, as God said to Adam "thou shalt surely die." Which is true, God or Satan? Satan said, "Thou shalt not surely die." Job says, 14:12—"So man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more; they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep"—so says Masonry.

God said to Abraham, Gen. 15:15—"Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace. Thou shalt be buried in a good old age." Again, we find that Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead. John 11:14—"Then said Jesus unto them, Lazarus is dead." If he was dead how could he have an immortal life distinct and separate from the body? If he had, Jesus perverted the truth, for if his soul or spirit, was immortal he was not dead. Lazarus could not be dead and alive at the same time, showing conclusively that Jesus taught not the immortality of the soul. Lazarus died, did stink, and began to see corruption, therefore did Jesus merely recall the wandering immortal soul; he says that Lazarus was dead.

Acts 13:36—"For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God fell asleep, and was laid unto his fathers and saw corruption." The same, verse 37—"But he whom God raised again saw no corruption." Showing no immortality in corruption. And when will man be raised from the sleep of death? Job says not "till the heavens be no more;" they shall not awake or be raised out of their sleep; so teaches Masonry. Paul says that if there is no resurrection from the dead "they also which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished." What means perished? Does it mean immortal soul on its flight to heaven? Webster defines perished, "to waste away, to disappear." Question asked by Job 4:17—"To them who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life." We find in Job 14:10—"Man dieth and wasteth away, yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" Is ghost the breath of life, or immortal soul?

The Bible teaches that Adam was driven out of the garden of Eden, and that he tasted not of the tree of life. Immortality was forbidden him and he died. Rev. 2:7—"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." In Revelations, chapters twenty-first and twenty-second, there is a description of the new heavens and new earth, with the paradise of God, in which is represented the tree of life where this mortal body or soul will not appear until after the resurrection. David says in Ps. 59:3—"For lo, they lay in wait for my soul; the mighty have gathered against me." Did the mighty want his immortal soul, or his life? Again in Ps. 35:13—"I humbled my soul with fasting." Can an immortal soul that can exist without an organism be humbled by fasting, or was it the personal man David humbled by fasting?

We find that the sea has souls therein. Rev. 16:3—"And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea, and every living soul died in the sea." Proving conclusively that the body constitutes the soul, and the breath of life therein constitutes a living soul, or else the inhabitants of the sea have immortal souls. We find that Adam died, Seth died, Enos died, Rachel died, so died Abel; but no record that they are still alive, either in the body or by immortality. Gen. 1:24—"And God said let the earth bring forth the living creatures [nephesh chaiyah—living soul] after his kind, cattle and creeping things, and beast of the earth after his kind."

Dr. Clark says that nephesh chaiyah is a general term for all animals having life. Mc Cullo says there is no word in the Hebrew language that signifies soul or spirit, as implying something distinct from the body. Cred. of Scrip. vol. 2, p. 471. Bishop Tillotson says that immortality of the soul is rather supposed, or taken for granted, than expressly revealed in the Bible. Gibbon says (vol. 51, pp. 530–1), that the immortality of the soul is omitted in the law of Moses.

Eccl. 3:19—"As the one dieth, so dieth the other. Yea they have all one breath; so man hath no pre-eminence above a beast." Eccl. 3:21—"Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" Eccl. 9:7—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." No mention of an immortal soul going to God, but the breath, or spirit, a synonymous term as expressing life. Isa. 2:22—"Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?" Psa. 115:17—"The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."

The Bible teaches that the great Jehovah is a personal being, and that his kingdom is peopled with personalities, not with spiritual or invisible things; for God talked with Adam and with Cain; nothing can talk without an organism. Enoch was not an organized being, and God took him bodily. God talked with Moses on Mount Sinai. When requested by Moses to let him look upon his face, he said no mortal could look upon his glory; but Moses did behold his hinder parts; he wrote the commandments on tablets of stone with his own finger. Elijah went up as a personal being, not as a spirit. Christ was resurrected, and went up as an organized being; he saw not corruption. The messengers of God are organized beings; they are shown to have walked and talked with men, and even to eat with them; only an organized being has need to eat. The martyr Stephen saw the heavens open, and saw the Father, with his Son Jesus Christ sitting on his right hand. Was it an illusion, or were God and Christ personal beings? God will come in all his glory, with all his holy angels, and in their personal natures; then man will be resurrected, and start forth from the sleep of death, to be judged for immortality or eternal death.

Nothing teaches immortality this side the grave, nor on the other, except as organized beings. Let our brethren study the great light of Masonry, the Holy Bible, and they will find that it teaches a simple, common sense doctrine, that requires no great amount of inspiration to understand; that God is a personal organism; that he made man in his own likeness; that his kingdom is peopled by organized beings; that man was made of the dust of the earth and must see corruption; that "the breath of life," "spirit," and "ghost," are synonymous terms; that no immortality exists in anything this side of the grave of a corruptible nature; that at the coming of Christ all of the saints then in life will be caught up into the air, and changed in the twinkling of an eye from a corruptible to an incorruptible organism, and "put on immortality."

For the kingdom of God is peopled with organized beings, having hands and feet, and an organism that can sing the praises of the great Jehovah.

Can anything without organism hold converse with organized beings? It is a delusion that found its origin in the secret recesses of the Egyptian mysteries in ages past and has found lodgment in the brains of our modern theologians.

THE SERPENT LIFTED UP.

J. F. C. BROWN.

A brazen serpent. Why lifted up? Behold the people looking upon it with anxious gaze. What means it all? Why lifted up? Because the people had sinned, and murmured against God, he sends among them fiery, biting serpents. The murmuring people are bitten. They die. What now? They repent and cry to God for mercy. A brazen serpent is erected on a pole. The people look and live.

But what means the picture? "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness even so must the Son of man be lifted up." What for? "That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. The serpent-bitten people died; were not eternally tormented. If they looked on the brazen serpent they escaped death and lived. "Even so," in the same manner, for the same purpose, the Son of man is lifted up, that those bitten by the old serpent, the devil, by looking, believing, may have eternal life and not perish. The serpent-bitten people's doom was death; so in the antitype it is perish, not torment. O sinner, believe and live.

There are campmeetings to be held in various parts of New England within the next three months. We purpose to have Agents at the several meetings with a supply of our publications for sale, who will also receive subscriptions for the Crisis and the Pilgrim. We hope that those who are in arrears will make it a point to avail themselves of these good opportunities to settle their accounts.

PRECIOUS HOURS.

We spent some "precious hours" at the "Sea Cliff Grove" campmeeting, on Long Island, about twenty-six miles from New York City. We left home Monday, July 8th, at four P. M., and at Providence took a steamboat for New York, arriving about 7½ A. M. We went directly to 14 Murray St., where we met Bro. H. A. King, and Bro. A. A. Phelps, whom we found well and very busy in preparing matter for the press. At 9.15 A. M. we took a steamer for Sea Cliff Grove, and had a pleasant ride up the East river to the camp-ground, which is on an elevated piece of land, one hundred and fifty to one hundred and ninety feet above high water, containing two hundred and forty-three acres, costing $108,680, with one mile of sea front on Long Island Sound. The place gives a delightful sea view of passing shipping, and is fanned by the soft ocean breezes, affording a delicious, refreshing sensation in the warm summer days. The campmeeting Association intend to spare no pains necessary to make Sea Cliff Grove the most inviting camp-ground in America. They have already expended about one hundred thousand dollars in fitting up a wharf, streets, two large, well-arranged dining halls, two nice lodging-houses, a bookstore, post-office, telegraph office, and other conveniences, including soft water from some twenty-eight springs, which are forced by steam power to deliver their contents into a reservoir, forty feet square, from which it is taken by pipes, and deposited in large tanks in various localities for the convenience of the encampment; also into the neat cottage houses. The water arrangement is the best we have ever seen for a campmeeting. A large tabernacle has been built one hundred and fifty feet long, and one hundred feet wide, with a rear projection sixteen feet wide, and forty feet long, for the preacher's stand, which will probably seat one hundred. The tabernacle is brilliantly lighted with four blazing, hanging lights, in the main building, and a smaller one over the preacher's stand. The tabernacle is surrounded on two sides by a shady grove, and the other two by a canvas awning, attached to posts and a railing twenty feet from the building, so that the whole covered area will seat six thousand persons. The tabernacle is an easy place for speaking, and is surmounted by a tin-covered dome. It has a delightful ventilation, produced by the constant ocean breeze. Their two dining halls will each seat five hundred persons.

THE MEETING.

Those having charge of the ground invited the National Campmeeting committee for "holiness" to hold the first meeting on the ground, to which they consented, and commenced July 3d. The meeting has been a very happy success. We have been most richly paid for attending. If any one wishes to see old-fashioned Methodism in earnest, let him go to one of the National campmeetings for holiness. These meetings are held ten days, and everything is brought to bear on the one grand, sublime thought and work of entire consecration to the Lord, in order to be ready for usefulness in this life, and prepared for the life to come. The preaching, praying, singing, and talking, were all in that one direction; so that any one who loves purity and holiness, could have a heavenly feast. It was a pleasing sight to behold intelligent, accomplished women, who have moved in the first circles of society, all consecrated to the Lord, attired in modest apparel, destitute of the foolish, worldly ornaments, so common now among professors of religion. Their christianity shone out in sweet harmony with their profession of a pure heart, and sent one's thoughts back to the days when the Methodists were known by the simplicity of their dress and manners. Among the preachers were numbers from the Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Baptist, and other evangelical churches, who were all one in the spirit and work of the meeting. It was a blessed sight to see these ministers from the various denominations so sweetly united to each other and to Christ. It was in harmony with the prayer of Jesus, that we might all be "one" as he and the Father are one. This looked more like the preparation of the bride for the coming of the Bridegroom, than any thing we have ever seen during the past thirty years of our christian experience. We are sure that the Spirit of God was in the meeting, and that the Lord smiled upon us in a special manner, thus approving the spirit of devotion, consecration, and unsectarian feeling that pervaded the encampment. Yet, notwithstanding all this, those who are holding these National meetings for holiness receive bitter opposition from many of their professed brethren. One Methodist presiding elder was heard to say of those devoted men, who are conducting the meetings, that they were a "pack of fools." They receive as cruel opposition from their own professed Brn., as we have from other churches for the blessed hope we love so well. We expect yet to see those self-denying Brn., who have consecrated all to Christ, rejoicing in the same glorious hope we prize so highly, and with us, waiting for the coming of Jesus; while on the other hand, we have reason to fear that some who profess to believe in the speedy coming of Christ will stand opposed to the doctrine of holiness of heart, and be found unprepared when the Master comes.

Dear Brn., a clean heart is essential as a preparation to meet our holy Savior at his appearing. All things show that his second advent is at the doors. We would entreat every one to be thorough, very thorough in his preparation for eternal life. Our all is at stake. "The pure in heart" are certainly on the safe side. They are promised a special blessing. Sin is from the Devil, and holiness from the Lord. Let us cultivate an utter abhorrence of all that is evil, and an earnest longing for every thing that will make us more like Christ. If we hunger and thirst after righteousness, we have the promise of being filled.

We can truly say they were "precious hours" that we spent at the Sea Cliff Campmeeting. We have no words to express the worth of the sweet, heavenly blessings there received from our dear Savior. It is truly a "peace" that "passeth all understanding." How we do wish all might experience the same. O it is so blessed to live near to Jesus, and feel that he is our friend and lover; and then sing:

"My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time, and voice;
Myself, my reputation,
The lone way is my choice."

HOW TO BE CLEAN.

Said Jesus—"Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." John 15: 3. There is nothing so desirable as a clean heart in the sight of Jesus. It is a question of interest, How can a clean heart be secured? There are two steps necessary: (1) entire consecration to Christ; (2) the subsequent cleansing. The consecration, or sanctification, is our first work. No one can reasonably expect a clean heart till after he has made a complete and full surrender of his all to the Lord, without any reserve; having done this, and thrown himself into the hands of the Savior, he has only then to wait in perfect submission till the cleansing process is complete.

The very first work of the Lord may be to give a sorer trial than we have ever had before. We read that Jesus was made "perfect through sufferings." Heb. 2: 10. There is no way so well adapted to subdue the old man as by sufferings, trials, abuse, temptations, cheatings, slander, and persecution, all quietly and meekly borne for Jesus' sake. There are many who are anxious to enjoy perfect love, and yet are so determined to have their own way, and carry out their proposed plans, that they are stirred up and feel and say hard things as soon as any one stands in their way. If such wish to be clean, and will consent to put all into the hands of Jesus, he may at once put them into the furnace of affliction, and then sit like the purifier of silver, and watch us with special care, till the dross is all extracted, and he can see his own heavenly character impressed upon our hearts. Let us ever remember that if "we suffer with him," we shall "be also glorified together." So long as we murmur at our trials, we are not fully submissive to the Lord; hence cannot have perfect peace and love. When a lover murmurs against the loved one, then there cannot be perfect satisfaction in each other. The Scripture is very severe against "murmurers."

He who wishes to enjoy perfect peace and love must submit all to Christ, reserving nothing, with the full understanding that the remnant of his life shall be devoted to his blessed Master, as the loving bride unites herself to her affectionate bridegroom. We may feel the same sweet, familiar union with Christ that the fondest lover ever felt with the dearest object of his affections; only the union with Christ is far more precious, satisfying, perfectly meeting the longings of the human heart for an abiding friend and lover. This is just the position that fits us for the coming of Christ. When he shall appear, we ought to be in the same state of mind in relation to his appearing that a loving bride feels towards the dear one for whose arrival she is longingly waiting, that the happy moment may come when she can be in the fond embrace of the object of her affections. There is a crown of life for all those who "love his appearing."

It is our privilege to enjoy daily all the freshness of our "first love," greatly intensified and enlarged, so that it completely fills our hearts, leaving no room for the abiding of any unhallowed emotion. In such a condition, there remains no desire for anything that does not please Jesus. There is no bondage. All is done with delight. The yoke is easy, and the burden is light. No tongue can describe the peace that fills the heart. From morn till even such can sing, "All is well." None but those who have experienced it can appreciate the delicious sweetness of this perfect peace and love. Truly, it "passeth all understanding." Glory to God for such heavenly peace. All earthly treasures are but dross when compared with this blessed fruit of the Holy Spirit. All who will sanctify themselves entirely to Christ, to be his for ever, will receive this pearl of great price, and find complete rest in the arms of a loving Savior. Try it. Delay not. Be all ready to meet Jesus at his coming.

PERSONAL.—When in New York, July 12, we met Bro. P. G. Bowman at Bro. H. A. King's office, 14 Murray St. We found him in good health and ready for earnest work in his Divine Master's vineyard. We were much pleased with his intelligence and devotion. He is a dangerous foe to the enemy of all righteousness. We hope the friends of Christ will make his heart glad by their warm sympathies and their hearty support. He may be expected to fill the appointments made for him in different places. He has made noble sacrifices for Jesus' sake, and stands ready to continue in the same direction.

"JESUS CHRIST."

This name, so often used, is significant. "Jesus" signifies Savior, while "Christ" means the Anointed One, being equivalent to Messiah of the Old Testament Scriptures, "which being interpreted is Christ," or the Anointed One. This Messiah is styled "Messiah the Prince"; that is, the heir to a throne; and he is the Anointed One before he begins his reign, just as David was.

When the Lord sent the prophet Samuel to the house of Jesse, to anoint a king over Israel, and when he anointed David, though David did not begin his reign till long years afterward, yet from the time of this anointing David was the Lord's anointed one—anointed to become king. So Christ—meaning the Anointed—has been anointed to become King. Being "Messiah the Prince," or an heir to a throne, and being anointed to become King, the only point to be settled is, What throne is he heir to? and where is he to reign?

To assume, as theologians do, that he was heir to the throne of heaven, and destined to reign above the skies, is to ignore the testimony of the angel Gabriel to Mary at the time of conception—"The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1: 32, 33. This proves that the Anointed One is to reign on David's throne. So every time we use the word Christ, it carries with it the thought of one anointed to reign on David's throne. That reign is still future, for although this Anointed One is now sitting on the throne of God as an honored guest, he is there as "a Prince and a Savior," being still an heir to a throne, having gone there "to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return," even to the very realm where "his citizens hated him," and said, "We will not have this man to reign over us." But at his return he will issue this edict—"But those mine enemies, that would not that I should reign over them, bring hither and slay them before me." Luke 19: 27.

So Christ is hereafter to "reign" in the very realm where his enemies have defied him. Christ, then, is anointed to reign on David's throne, over a realm once filled with enemies.

"THE HIGHER LIFE."

That sounds good. It sounds like getting out of the chilly shades of formality, where many people endure religion as an unwelcome yet necessary antidote of coming wrath. It sounds like getting into the warm and exhilerating sunshine of "perfect peace" and "perfect love," where we have an ardent relish for the work of God. Let us all leave this low stratum of luke-warmness for a life of sweet trust in Christ, where we shall not have to struggle so hard to keep religion that we have only a partial hold upon, but have so much of it that it will keep us in Christ. Why not live where we can constantly feel the heavenly breezes from the holy throne? Why not live where "the fruit of the spirit"—"love, joy, peace"—may fill our hearts continually? Why live in the low marshes where spiritual fever and ague chill the heart, when we might live on the high grounds of gospel health?

"And shall we ever live
At this poor dying rate?"

Let us, as a people, strike for the higher life of devotion; for a closer walk with God; for a stronger affinity to Christ; for a fuller consecration of our affections to our precious Savior. Let us cut loose from carnality in all its forms and phrases, and live in sweet communion with God. Who will strike for the higher life?

A FRUITLESS DODGE.

The advocates of the first death as the penalty for sin—thus making ordinary death eternal in the case of sinners—are sorely puzzled over the following text—"It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." Heb. 9: 28. If the "judgment" comes "after" men die, it is certain that ordinary death cannot be the result of the judgment, or the execution of the judgment penalty; for the execution of the penalty is the last feature of judgment; and if that comes in the article of ordinary death, it certainly cannot come "after" it; nor can any other feature of judgment come after the execution; investigation and sentence always precede the execution. Then what is it that comes "after" death, on the supposition that ordinary death is the penalty?

To escape the force of this point, the following fruitless dodge is resorted to: It is said that the text does not assert that the judgment is after death, but only that the appointment of the judgment was after the appointment of death. This dodge is fatal to the theory it was invented to save, for if only the appointment is referred to, that was made for death but "once," and consequently the appointment for judgment, being made "after" the appointment for death, must be distinct from death, else death would have been appointed twice instead of "once." Who can fail to see this point? If the sense of the text is that death was once appointed to men, and after that appointment judgment was appointed, it positively follows that death is no part of the judgment, for death is appointed but "once," and judgment was an "after" appointment; and if ordinary death is no part of the judgment, it cannot be the penalty.

The sickly supposition that ordinary death is the real judgment-execution, and that a subsequent judgment will be held to investigate and decide that sinners have already been executed, is too shallow a speculation to blind the eyes even of unwary novices.

The efforts to dodge the force of this text remind me of the remark of General Taylor to his soldiers who were trying to dodge the Mexican bullets—"Don't dodge, boys; in dodging out of the way of one ball, you dodge into the way of another." So in trying to dodge the fact that the judgment comes "after" death, by setting up the claim that only the appointment of the judgment was after the appointment of death, they have dodged into the equally fatal position that death is not the judgment-execution. Certainly this text proves that ordinary death is not the sinner's judgment-penalty, let it be turned either way. The "dead" are to be "judged," but not till the Judge comes; and execution is the last feature in the judgment.

OUR GREAT WORK.

We hardly need to ask, What is our work? It is evident to all, that unless we are a deceived people, our work is to proclaim the coming of the heavenly King, and kindred truths. But are we doing that work faithfully, and doing it in the right spirit?

There is a right way and a wrong way to do a right thing; and it always has the best impression on community to do it in a right way. We can proclaim the great message due this generation in such a sour, pugilistic, braggadocio spirit, as to repell a certain class of candid men, and spoil their inclinations to investigate.

There is no concealing the fact that we have an element of this kind in our midst, who curse Israel even in their efforts to bless them. We want reform. We want the "all fight" element taken out of these men by plunging them into the waters of perfect love. They want more inward enjoyment. They need another touch of the purifying spirit. Then they can carry the message of truth in the melting spirit of Jesus, instead of the wrangling spirit of censoriousness, and win men instead of driving them away.

Will we consent to do our work in the right way? And to this end will we strike for reform? Will we lay aside the spirit of pugilistic strife, and "speak the truth in love"? Let us do our work in the right way.

W. S.

WORK HALF DONE.

Some preachers leave their work half done, and consequently it never amounts to anything. It is better to do a little, and have it finished than to do a great deal to leave in a half-finished state, to soon all disappear. There are two classes of ministers that only half do their word, and consequently, though at times they seem to be doing great things, they are really doing but little good; while other men of less noise, who finish their work as they go, and seem to be doing but little, are really doing more good of a substantial nature than several of the other two classes referred to. We will briefly specify:—

1. One class will stir up the emotional element of human nature, producing a great excitement, and it passes as a revival; but they are left without gospel instruction—do not "understand the word of the kingdom," have nothing to hold on to, and are soon flattered into some pen to be starved to death, or pine away on fables. Finish the work, and give them the truth.

Another class merely feast the intellect, and enlighten the understanding, which is all right as far it goes, but they never enlist the affections for God; so their work is only half done. Let us never fail to reach both the understanding and the affections. Both must be enlisted if we would do our work permanently.

W. S.

WITTICISM.

I am often pained at the clownish efforts of ministers to spice their sermons with low witticism, to produce a wave of unsanctified merriment on the congregation. This effort to ape the politicians of the day, by arousing a spirit of levity among the people, savors too much of carnality, and should be guarded against, instead of being cultivated.

A minister of Christ should not act the part of a clown in saying something amusing to human nature, to make the people laugh. If you cannot interest the people without interspersing your sermons with low witticism, stop preaching till you can obtain grace sufficient to overcome carnality, and love enough to sanctify the affections of your mind, and then you will care more about preaching to please Christ than to tickle human nature.

The cause of Christ suffers from this mixture of carnal witticism with sacred things. The gospel of Christ needs no such spicing. It eats out the vitality of the church. Ye ministers, stop it—stop it—STOP IT!! It is enough to make angels weep. It lowers the dignity of a minister of Christ to a religious jester. It feeds carnality, and starves sacred sobriety. If other clergymen ape politicians in dealing out laughable witticisms, let us refrain. Let us have the mind of Christ.

WINGVILLE TENT-MEETING.—I pitched my tent, for the third time this season, at Wingville, Wis., at the request of Bro. Philo Hitchcock, who has helped me through the meetings; also received help from Bro. Huyck. Meetings began on the fourth of July, and continued over the following Lord's day, with good results. Several rose for prayers at different stages of the meetings; some found peace in Christ; some received new light; the saints were strengthened, and five were baptized on Lord's day. Bro. Hitchcock is to settle in this village, and will water the seed already sown, and will sow more.

NO BIBLE—THEN WHAT?—Take away the Bible, and you take away all the angels. Not a single cherub, or seraph; not a single throne or dominion, or principality or power; not a single morning star, or son of God is left. Gabriel vanishes as a phantom, and Michael melts into air, and is seen no more. Take away the Bible, and you take away the elect succession of inspired men. Not a single patriarch, or priest, or prophet, or apostle, or evangelist remains to proclaim or record a single superhuman oracle. Moses and his law, Isaiah and his visions, dissolve together. Matthew and his gospel, Paul and his epistles, perish in the same fire. Nay, more; take away the Bible, and you take away the Lord Jesus Christ. No longer may disputes be held in regard to the nature, person, or office of Christ, his history, condition, or destiny! All the magnificent apparatus in preparation for his coming is gone! The cross crumbles, and the sepulchre sinks, and the throne, symbolized by the rainbow that adorns it, like the rainbow vanishes away. His pre-existence, his current existence, his whole existence is nothing. And so of the Father; take away the Bible, and the Father retires into an impenetrable seclusion infinitely more oblivious than was ever imagined before.—Ex.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

LETTER FROM SR. CAROLINE TULLER.

DEAR CRISIS:—I have had a sweet Sabbath of rest to-day, in conning the rich thoughts with which thy pages and kindred papers are filled. So cold and meagre do my own thoughts appear in comparison, that I would not dare to offer a word, but for the duty of acknowledging the gifts of friends, and the kind words accompanying. Both are appreciated. They seemed as the voice of the Master, saying—"teach my word faithfully, and all else that is needed for mental discipline, and I will see to thy hire." So strong is the feeling that each gift is ordered, that I earnestly ask prayers that I may have wisdom and grace to direct. I labor under a feeling that is really troublesome, for fear I shall appropriate something for my own need that was not designed for that purpose, but for the poor around me. It would suit my natural feelings far better to receive a salary, such as my labor would command in other places. I might then feel right to enjoy what comforts my daily labor could give. As it is, I feel that only my barest necessities should be supplied. However, this manner of living has proved a rich blessing in the way of discipline. It has taught me lessons of economy and sweet trust in providential care, such as I never learned before, so that I suffer fears for nothing, only lest I fail to perform my whole duty. An ordinary tuition fee would meet every need. Only a few can bring me a dime per week, in all not exceeding one dollar. But all that come receive the same care. Some come four miles, others three every day, and so scattered they could not otherwise be taught. Such is the interest manifested, and the improvement visible, that the work is ever inspiring, and I never tire of it.

The young man and wife, of whom I wrote in my last, are with me, and are treasures. Humble, teachable, and desirous of being useful, they apply themselves with much diligence. My Sabbbath school at the Point I have given into his charge, and he conducts it with much ability. It is a tiresome walk there, but he delights in the hope of doing some good. He reads our papers, and we have a Bible lesson every day, which interests them both, and they are ever ready to pray, either in school or at family worship. He feels that God directed him hither; if so, the food and raiment while it is needful for them to remain, will be sure. We all labor hard in the garden nights and mornings, to raise vegetables, so as to save expense. The two families under my care are comfortable from their gardens, fowls, fruit, etc., except clothing; that is the hardest to obtain. The curse upon their land is very deep, and poverty abounds; so unlike our own free North.

The old man who needs the cabin is poorly, but hopes to get at his house soon. His brethren will give him a lift, and the money, which is sacredly kept, will furnish material, so he can have a comfortable home. There is a good degree of interest in religious matters, and as the children learn to read, the Bible is prized. To be able to read the Testament is considered a rare acquisition. An old Quaker friend keeps me supplied with Bibles and Testaments to give to each, as soon as they can read a little A part of the closing exercises each day is repeating verses, from one to four each, and I hope good seed will thus be sown.

I am out of Young Pilgrim papers, and would say to those who have sent, that they have done good, and I must believe will continue to exert a good influence, and if you will send me a fresh supply, I will distribute faithfully. The poor whites share also. I can now present reading matter to the more intelligent class. Prejudice seems slowly wasting away. In the Baptist church just opposite me, where my entrance formerly called forth a sneer or scornful smile, now I am invited to take part in the Sabbath school, and for several weeks they have received tracts and papers, and last Sabbath the Superintendent came and thanked me cordially. This causes my heart to bound with hope. Owing to a lack of general intelligence, our publications containing rich, matured thought, will not reach the mass. They can digest only milk. There are but few that can appreciate or understand the most that is contained in the Crisis, or Banner. To that few I present them. The Christian is better understood, and is liked. The idea of women preaching is ridiculed. Only now and then can I find a reader for Woman and her Work. Our simplest tracts concerning the coming kingdom will do good.

I fear I have failed to acknowledge all tracts and papers sent. But letters containing money I am very particular about. If any have not seen their letters noticed, for a particular reason, I wish they would drop me a line.

Acknowledgements. C. Green, tracts and 20c. A friend, Lockport, N. Y., a friend, New Britain, Ct., S. G. Otis, and Mary Moody, each $5. A friend in Gilmanton, $3. A stranger, $1.25. S. T. Palmer, $2.

I would love to acknowledge each kind letter separately, but constant labor in school and out, together with needful care for my own child and those about, often causes my heart to reel. It would take a stronger faith than mine to do more. Should any brother or sister be passing up or down the Ohio, I beg them to stop and see me. There is a packet from Louisville. Inquire at the Point for Mrs. E. A. McCoy. She will contrive a conveyance out. An experienced pedestrian would enjoy the walk. Two miles of the road run through the most beautful ravine I ever saw, enclosed by "rocks, and rills, and woods, and templed hills." A remembrance in prayer I humbly crave.

THE TWO CLASSES OF SERVANTS.

C. DAGGETT.

One is the Lord's wholly. All they have and are—soul, body, mind, talent, heart, affections, and will—are swallowed up entirely in the Lord's. They seek no honor or applause, but that which comes from God only. They have no ways, runnings nor plannings of their own; but in all things make their requests known unto the Lord, who careth for them, and the peace of God that passeth all understanding fills their souls; and like brother Enoch of old, they walk and talk with God, and have the daily testimony that their ways please their Master, whom they serve. They have no trouble about the future, or their daily bread, for their faith is strong in the promises of God, knowing they never fail, and they always are yea and amen, just as he says; there is no want to those that fear him, and no good thing will he withhold from those that walk uprightly, and their bread will be sure.

On those promises they stand secure, even if the Lord tries them, as he always will. We hear them saying, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." They feel their nothingness so much, and know they can do nothing without him, for he has said, "Without me ye can do nothing." They believe his every word, and, like a wise man, will not dare to venture, but will abide in the Vine, whence they can draw sap and nourishment, so that they can "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." They abide in him, and his word abides in them, and they have the things they ask him for, because it is in his will; for their wills and the Lord's are one, so they do not pray for anything but what will be for their good, and the glory of God. They have no begging to do, for they make his service their delight, and he makes their wants his care. All they have to do is to say, Speak, Lord; direct me, teach me, and make duty plain; mark out the way; let the light shine clearly upon my path. Let me know thy will and voice, and I will obey. Lead, and I will follow. They are the voice, he the speaker. They know where to go only as he directs and when he directs. It is very different from their own ways and plannings.

They know not what to say unless the Lord tell them; and when he gives them the word, it is so different that they are surprised, but always find that it is just what the people need to comfort, strengthen, support, sustain, convict, convert,—meat in due season,—and it is watered and backed up by the Holy Ghost. Thus the church is fed, strengthened and built up in the most holy faith. The Lord opens their hearts and fills them with his peace, and they love to give as they have received. They love to impart their earthly treasures, as the servant of the Lord gives them heavenly treasures, or the bread of life.

The second class of servants is the one that works for money. Money is in his thoughts in the morning, in his study, in his sermons and prayers. He works hard to make his sermons eloquent and pleasing to the ear, so that he shall be highly esteemed among men, be called a great preacher, draw out large congregations; while he will be very careful not to lay the axe at the root of the tree, and tell the whole truth, but keep back the straight, cutting sayings of Jesus. He cares more for the fleece than the flock. He trusts in himself and in uncertain riches.

The Lord will bless and take care of his own servants, and give them an abundant entrance into the kingdom: While in this life they will have a hundred-fold, with persecution, and eternal life in the kingdom of God. The Lord help us all to be faithful while living in the time of his judgments, and declare the truth while we see the sword coming, lest the blood of souls be found in the skirts of our garments, and we be lost on their account. The Lord is at the door, and the saints will soon be called home to receive their great reward. Let us be ready to hail him with joy.

SOCIAL REVOLUTIONS OF THE LAST DAYS.

In a former article I referred to the social revolutions connected with labor and capital, which apparently are opening upon this country—and not this country alone, but upon the world. I desire now for a moment to turn attention to the religious phases of this problem.

In New York city there are only three hundred and eighty Protestant churches, and not more than two hundred thousand persons in these churches on any one Sabbath day. Where, then, are the eight hundred thousand who are outside? And why is it that the gospel of Jesus finds not more hearts that love to hear of him? Extravagant church buildings, costing too much money to admit any but paying members or attendants (as every seat must pay, to keep up expenses—interest, taxes, insurance, etc.) have something to do with the case, causing many of the poor to absent themselves from where the gospel is preached.

Let us look where the multitudes may be found: Thirty thousand children in New York are vagrants; and in four thousand houses there are ninety-five thousand inhabitants, who cannot dress in a manner suited to these fine churches; and if they go to meeting as they are, in their best attire, in many of them they would not be bidden welcome.

Then there are seven thousand grog-shops, mostly open on the Sabbath. Suppose we allow twenty owners and customers to each shop, we would then have one hundred and forty men and women, who, of course, will not go to church, nor be attracted in that direction. If they are reached, the gospel must go to them. We may next reckon six thousand houses of ill-fame, occupied and frequented by at least from twenty to fifty each Sabbath. Suppose thirty to each, and we have one hundred and eighty thousand more to whom the gospel must be carried. Add to these two hundred and fifty thousand theatre-goers, and one hundred thousand people of German and French nationality, who go to the woods and parks, and lager beer gardens outside of the city to spend their Sabbaths.

Now what is true of New York is true in the whole world—multitudes are destitute of the gospel. The population of the globe is estimated at twelve hundred millions; of these two hundred millions are reputed christians, including Roman Catholic and all other churches; but, alas! how few even of these give good evidence of being real christians. What, then, is the duty of those who are genuine christians? We answer, work, WORK—carry the gospel far and wide to everybody. "Go preach the gospel to every creature," and not sit in a finely-cushioned church, like an exhausted receiver, forever taking and never giving. To all good christians, I would say, Watch the signs of the times, and the preparations for a coming Jesus, and you may see that there is a storm brewing between politics and religion which will send these church buildings, with all their fine appurtenances of selfishness, towards heaven on wings of fire. My present impression is that there will yet be a religious war—a hand to hand fight for political power between the Roman Catholics and Protestants, which will blot out monasteries, cathedrals, churches, nunneries, etc., on both sides of the strife. But I wait and watch. Go thou and do likewise.—Advent Herald.

HE IS COMING.

JOSIAH BATHRICK.

A christian ought at all times to be ready to speak, pray and sing the truth; but I have in my mind the ministry in these last days. The Jews refused to believe in the line of prophecies that led to the first coming of Jesus, because he came in a humble way; they wanted him to come in power and great glory, and said, "we will not have this man to reign over us." Now this heartless manner of receiving our Lord Jesus stirs up in me, as I meditate on the lovely character of our blessed Redeemer, to say something to magnify his character or name while thousands are ready to dethrone him; but, praise the Lord, he is called Christ, which means no less than the annointed King of all the earth. O this thought sets the blood to passing quickly through my veins, in view of his having dominion over all the earth. O how noble-hearted we ought to be, seeing it is about the time for his second glorious appearance in the clouds of heaven. When he comes it will be that same Jesus that left those Galileans looking up and wondering at such a glorious sight. O Jesus, quickly come!

Now what minister of the gospel will be so heartless as to shun to declare so dear and heart-cheering a truth? I must say I am surprised to see the extent of this neglect by the Methodists to declare this truth, because the Advent people have preached it and have been disappointed. How can these things be? Is not the event large enough? It ends this dispensation and brings something better. It is my opinion the Lord will not be pleased with such a lack of christian courage. Let not the feats of some great warrior take up the attention of the people of our cities, and other assemblies of people; but let us go in front of the battle, and Jesus will be our Captain. O ye watchmen on the walls, why are you sleeping in view of so striking and glorious a truth? Brethren and sisters, let us be ready. O I want the christians in all the churches to make one noble start and come together. Let us be honest men, and be able to hold up our heads, seeing our redemption draweth nigh.

REPORT.

Agreeable to notice, the Vermont Quarterly Conference was to have been held under the canvas at Post Mills in Thetford, but through the neglect of those in charge of the tent at Bethel, it was not forwarded in season, and the conference met at West Fairlee, June 18th. The attendance was rather small, yet the Lord was present to bless, and the interest was good. Preaching brethren present H. F. Carpenter, A. A. Hoyt, Z. T. Wood, H. Howard, J. H. Harding, and O. Beckwith. Delegates were present from Rutland, East Roxbury, Bethel, Vershire, and West Fairlee. Others reported by letter, and still others by preaching brethren, who were best acquainted with the condition of the churches, not otherwise represented. The reports were encouraging, and told of an increasing interest and growth since the last conference. Many of the churches are without regular preaching, and others have had none for months, and are making earnest demands for help. Meetings are kept up in most places, and a strong determination manifested to go through to the kingdom. A goodly number have been added to the Lord in various places since last conference. May the Lord send forth faithful laborers into his harvest to strengthen the things that remain, and help those feeble churches scattered abroad. Dear brethren, let us be up and doing while the day lasts, for soon the night cometh wherein no man can work.

O. BECKWITH, Clerk pro tem.

REPORT OF TENT-MEETING. The meeting under the tent at Post Mills, Vt., commenced Thursday evening, June 20th, and continued with increasing interest until Sabbath evening, June 30th. The people came out to hear, and the Lord was present to help his servants preach the word. Brn. H. F. Carpenter, H. Howard and Z. T. Wood remained until Tuesday, and Brn. A. A. Hoyt and Bro. Wm. Kellaway remained until the meeting closed. Conviction rested upon those gathered. A large number here believe with the heart, and a goodly number have come out and confessed with the mouth unto salvation. Some who were halting between two opinions have decided for God, and are strong for the truth. The Spirit was present to convince of sin, of righteousness, and of a judgment to come. The seed has been sown on good ground, and we trust the result will be much fruit to the glory of God.

O. BECKWITH.

WORK AND WATCHING.—"In every soul there should be the sisters of Bethany—active effort and quiet thought—and both agreeing in mutual love and help. But Mary no longer sits at the feet of Christ and looks in his face; she stands at the door and gazes out into the open sky to watch the tokens of his coming, while in this hope her sister in the house still works. In due time he will be here to crown every humble effort with overflowing grace, to satisfy the longing soul that looks for him, and to raise all the dead for whom we weep."—Rev. John Ker.

BIBLICAL INSTITUTE.

On the afternoon of Friday, June 21st, '72, several leading members of the Province of Quebec and Vermont Evangelical Advent Conference assembled at the residence of W. O. Lawrence, Esq., Waterloo, P. Q., Canada, to take into consideration the practicability of making arrangements for the formation and establishment of a Biblical Institute, wherein young men might receive the instruction needful to prepare them for the gospel ministry. It was voted without a dissentient to proceed at once with the undertaking. A conviction rested upon the minds of those present that the Institute is demanded by the cause of Christ. The annexed constitution was presented by Dr. J. Litch, and unanimously adopted:—

CONSTITUTION.

1. This Institution shall be called the Biblical Institute of the Province of Quebec and Vermont Evangelical Advent Church.

2. The object of this Institute shall be the preparation of young men for the Christian ministry.

3. The officers of this Institution shall consist of a Board of Directors, whose duty it shall be to provide instructors, place of instruction, and direct as to the course of study, with text books and such other interests as may be required to promote the success of the Institute.

4. The following persons shall constitute the original Board of Directors:—Dr. J. Litch, Dr. G. O. Somers, W. G. Lawrence, Esq., Rev. D. Bosworth, Rev. B. S. Reynolds, Rev. W. B. Kinney, S. Foster, Esq., Rev. J. M. Orrock, J. Powell, Esq., and Dr. F. A. Cutter.

5. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in this Board by death, resignation or removal to such distance as to be unable to act with efficiency, it shall be filled by the surviving members of the Board.

6. The number of members may be increased at any regular meeting of the Board by a majority of those present. This Board shall also have authority to declare any place vacant for sufficient cause, such as gross immorality or apostasy from the Evangelical Christian faith.

7. This Board shall appoint its own chairman and other necessary officers, and when they deem it advisable obtain an act of incorporation.

8. This Board shall have authority to make their own by-laws and to amend this constitution whenever they may think it expedient, at any regular meeting which may be called by the Executive Committee.

At this meeting the Board elected Dr. Litch, Chairman; Rev. W. B. Kinney, Secretary; W. O. Lawrence, Esq., Treasurer.

Dr. Litch, Dr. G. O. Somers, Rev. W. B. Kinney, were constituted an Executive Committee by appointment.

The Board further voted that Rev. W. B. Kinney should act as Principal; and that Waterloo, Province of Quebec, shuld be the place of instruction; that the first term should begin the first week in September next. Instruction will be given in those English branches that may be considered necessary, in Latin and Greek, and Theology—the faith of the Evangelical Advent Church being the basis.—Advent Herald.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. S. P. ELDREDGE writes from West Chester, Pa.:—"I was in the city of Philadelphia on the first Sabbath in April, and listened to a subject on the resurrection of the dead, from one of the most popular Baptist ministers of that city. He denied the literal resurrection of the dead, from the fact that they could not find standing room upon the earth; and if they could, by standing close together all over the earth, that they could not be judged at one time, for but one half of this globe could be presented toward one point of the heavens at one time; and therefore it was contrary to reason. He took the ground that there is nothing in the Bible that is contrary to the reason of man; so he spiritualized the whole matter, even the translation of Enoch, Elijah, and Christ, and stated that all of them that was material was buried in the air.

I thought of some facts that I saw in the World's Crisis a few months ago, which stated that the State of New York had ample room for all the dead and living to stand upon at one time, from Adam to the end of six thousand years, which I cut out and sent to a skeptical friend at a distance. I wish I had another copy, I would like to send it to that minister. I think it might lead him to make a deeper investigation of this subject. I do not think it was his design to mislead the people, and hardly dare impute it to ignorance, in such an intellectual mind as his."

SR. J. F. BISHOP writes:—"The World's Crisis is a paper that I value above all other religious papers, as it has been the means, under God, of giving me a correct understanding of God's holy word; and through belief of the 'truth' I have been led to give my heart unreservedly to God. I first became interested about the middle of April, 1871, and for a few weeks my happiness and joy were perfect; and then Satan made me believe I had committed the 'unpardonable sin;' and for four long dreary months I was in such agony and despair that at times I longed to die, and be out of my misery. But the dear Lord, by degrees, delivered me from that 'deception of Satan,' and since that time I have been permitted to rejoice with joy unspeakable, and my faith is now strong in the Lord. I feel as though I should like to send the Crisis to every relative I have on earth, and I am sure the most hardened sinner could not peruse its blessed pages without receiving a little benefit."

BRO. D. N. SMITH writes from New York, July 15th:—"I went over to Newark yesterday, to hear Bro. Bowman, and was much pleased at what I saw and heard. He is a remarkable man, possessing superior eloquence and force. Forty-nine dollars were contributed to his mission. The churches which he visits may expect a treat when they hear him."

PULLEN. Died in Boston, June, 1872, Bro. William Pullen, aged sixty-three years.

Bro. Pullen was a consecrated, self-sacrificing, devoted christian. He waited with earnest, prayerful expectation for immortality at the appearing of Jesus, and died as he lived, in Christ.

J. COUCH.

HOWES. Died in Bridgewater, Vt., June 29th, 1872, of heart disease, Sister Mahala P., wife of Bro. I. B. Howes, aged fifty-nine years and five months.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Ps. 116: 15. She glorified the Lord in her life and in her death. H. F. C.

HUBBARD. Died in Bridgewater, Vt., July 4th, 1872, Sister Angeline, wife of Chester Hubbard.

She died "looking unto Jesus." Heb. 12: 2. In these two deaths the youngest son of Bro. Howes, and his wife, have each buried a mother within one short week. Surely we "dwell in the land of the shadow of death." H. F. C.

DENNETT. Died at Dorchester, June 14th, 1872, our loving mother, Elizabeth Dennett, aged eighty-nine years and four months.

She lived a consistent christian for seventy years, and her faith in Jesus' near coming consoled her in her declining years. The last moments of her life were spent in prayer for her children and the church. Words of sweet comfort were spoken by Bro. Couch, on the rest that God giveth his beloved, and prayer was offered by Bro. Boutell, and we felt comforted to know that the grave will not hold dear mother but a little while. E. A. D.

COMMOTION.

ROME, July 12. There is considerable commotion in ecclesiastical circles over the recent circular addressed by Bismarck to the powers invested with the right of vetoing a papal election, asking them to co-operate with Germany in arranging for succession to the Holy See. It has transpired that Austria agreed to join in the exercise of the veto right, provided France did likewise. M. Thiers, however, refused to consent. The college of Cardinals are determinedly opposed to any interference on the part of the powers, and should an attempt be made to set aside their choice they will hold an election in Malta.

FRANCE.

THE SITUATION.

PARIS, July 15. The impending crisis in the government engrosses public attention. President Thiers proposes to provide against the interregnum the national government by the appointment of a temporary triumvirate, consisting of the president of the Assembly, the senior deputy of that body and the commander-in-chief of the army.

THE CHOLERA IN EUROPE.—We quote from our latest European files that Cholera is steadily on the increase at Kieve in European Russia. From the 14th of May to the 1st of June the number of cases in that city amounted to 1,301, the number of dead to 532. On the 1st of June alone 204 cases and 189 deaths were recorded. The disease is said to be spreading southward in the direction of Bessarabia.

☞ It looks as if war was not only threatened but almost inevitable in South America between Brazil and the Argentine Confederation. The Brazilian government, according to letters just received in London is preparing for hostilities, and is daily awaiting large quantities of munitions of war from Europe.

DOMESTIC.

New York, July 13. A gang of strikers attacked and beat a carpenter named William Gough, while at work this morning, injuring him so that he cannot live. Mr. Gough states that he was at work on the new hotel in 5th Avenue, between 46th and 47th streets, this morning, with another man, when about twenty-five strikers came in and ordered them to quit work and leave the place. At first they refused to comply with this modest request, but were finally compelled to do so for fear of their lives, as the strikers threatened to kill them if they did not yield. They stopped work, but this did not satisfy the strikers, who ordered the two men to leave the building, and were remonstrated with, as the building would be left open with all their tools inside. The strikers stated that they did not care for that as they came there with the intention of driving them out, and they were going to do it or kill them. Gough put on his coat and started towards the door, where he was stopped by some of the strikers, who insisted on his taking his tools away. He remonstrated with them about doing so, as they were too heavy to carry. He states that as he was talking to those at the door a couple of others came behind him, and with pieces of boards that they picked up, struck him on the head, arms and body, cutting a few severe scalp wounds. As he was running from the building he saw his fellow workman being kicked about the floor as though he was a bundle of rags, and he found that they had killed him, as nothing had been heard of him since. The police of the 19th precinct are busily engaged in hunting up the parties who were concerned in the outrage, and it is believed that they are on the track of the principals.

ANOTHER "ISM."—It is a common fling at New England, and especially Massachusetts, that all "isms" there originate, leaving one to draw the inference that everywhere else people think alike. That may possibly be the rule, but we have now before us a brief statement which proves that there are exceptions. Near the delightful city of Augusta, Ga., is a place called New Canaan, equally delightful, no doubt, and fortunate as the locality chosen for occupation by the people of a new sect, the leader of which is a man named Curry. Exactly what this people believe in the religious line is not definitely stated, but we learn this much, that Curry is accepted as the temporal as well as spiritual ruler of the settlement, and his disciples are required to place all their money and property in his keeping. One might suppose that by this time, if his followers were of any account, Curry would have made enough out of the apostle business to retire gracefully; but, instead of that, although he is said to have spent nearly everything confided to his hands and mortgaged the remainder, he finds it difficult to meet his current grocery expenses. A few days since, tired of the monotony of being only a 'representative," he announced that he was the Deity himself, a dogma which was at once accepted by all save one, a Yankee named Hall, who allowed that though Curry might be, and probably was, a little above the angels, he couldn't make his belief stretch any further. Curry had sufficent acquaintance with history to understand how to treat schismatics, and he turned to in hot haste to build a jail. He could'nt get trusted for the nails, however, and had to abandon the idea. Hall was banished from the colony, and forbidden to return under the direst penalties, and is now probably wandering round Georgia prospecting for some eligible locality for a settlement of dissenters.—Boston Globe.

In Brief.

—— Nearly five hundred Mormons arrived by the steamship Nevada, Wednesday, July 10th, on the way to Utah.——Yawning caverns, thousans of feet deep appear in the track of the recent California earthquake.——The sale of the ex-Empress Eugenie's jewels which took place in London during the latter part of last month realized 244,500 dollars (gold).——A new attachment is now being made at Colt's armory, in Hartford, Conn., for the Gattling gun. It is known as the "drum-feeder," by which four hundred shots are discharged per minute.——The news from Pope county, Mo., is still exciting. It is said that the militia is disarming everybody, and a general state of uneasiness and terror prevails.——There is a society of Mormons in Paris, who in all respects conform to the social and spiritual habits in vogue at Salt Lake City.——The strikers in New York have cut down the amount of new building going on there nearly one-half, as compared with last year.——The census of the population is terminated in Paris. A dimunition is shown since 1866 of about 5,600 inhabitants—an insignificant number in comparison to the total of 1,800,000.

E. MORRILL.

TO NEW YORK ADVENTISTS.—Dear Brn. and Srs., shall we not have a general rally at our next campmeeting? You now have an excellent opportunity to do good and get good. By your personal presence, prayers, and labors of love, much good may be done. We should be a consecrated people. Let not ease, love of money, or other selfish considerations, prevent us from throwing the whole weight of our moral and personal influence on the side of the cause we profess to love. What we do, rather than what we say, is the true test of our religious earnestness. Come, then, to this meeting armed with faith and winged by prayer. Its location is central, beautiful, and convenient. Let all remember, too, that at this meeting our first quarterly conference for the year is to be held. The New York State tent will be pitched in the grove, and smaller tents can be procured of James Field, Rochester, at the following prices:

All who are interested in the blessed hope and soon coming of the Lord, who can, are requested to attend this annual feast, where the Lord has so signally manifested his power. Come in faith and the power of the Holy Ghost, that we may enjoy one more heavenly gathering, and secure the salvation of some poor lost souls, to share with us the heavenly inheritance.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

THE CHRISTIAN Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. F. Denton, J. Riffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, Committee.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPMEETING.—The undersigned committee, appointed at the recent annual conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But, on account of other meetings being held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided on by conference. It will therefore commence August 10th, the Lord willing, and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind, and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to this feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in this State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, one mile and a half north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (direct) R. R., ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens agree to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cents will be charged. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground. Further particulars soon.

WM. E. BROWN.
SAM'L H. WITHINGTON.
PERRY M. GRINNELL.

CONN. CAMPMEETING.—The Lord willing, the Conn. Campmeeting will commence Saturday, Aug. 31st, and continue till Monday, Sept. 9th. Particulars hereafter.

O. D. WOODRUFF, for Committee.

GROVE MEETING.—There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, July 28th, by Eld. A. Ross. If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Refreshments will be furnished by Mr. Smith, the proprietor, to all who wish.

S. O. WELCH.

HOOSICK VALLEY TENT.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—JOHN B. WHITE, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. SIBLEY, S. G. MATHEWSON, H. K. FLAGG, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

KANSAS TENT.—Dear Brn., our subscription for "Tent for Kansas" is far advanced. We want now a few friends to promptly bring up the rear; that is, close the requisite amount, and we shall be able to get the tent into the field. Friends who have subscribed for the tent, should prepare themselves for prompt payment when notice is given, that there may be no delay. We also need a good supply of tracts. May the Lord continue to bless, and raise up a people here who shall "love his appearing," and be purified when the Master comes. Address H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co., Kansas, or Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co., Kansas.

H. J. MUNSON.

MEETINGS are held every Sunday, and Wednesday evenings, in Gardiner city, Me., at the old place, Temperance Hall, corner of Brunswick and Water streets. Class meeting at Bro. Wm. M. Graves' house on Water street, Friday evenings. Preaching brethren are invited to come and labor for the salvation of souls. Correspond with A. H. Littlefield, or Wm. M. Graves.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged, OF

"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR,"

Or, The Commune.

BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

AN EVENING THOUGHT.

The twilight falls, the night is near,
I fold my work away,
And kneel to One who bends to hear
The story of the day—
The old, old story; yet I kneel
To tell it at thy call;
And cares grow lighter as I feel
The Father knows them all.

Yes, all, the morning and the night,
The joy, the grief, the loss,
The roughened path, the sunbeam bright,
The hourly thorn and cross.
Thou knowest all—I lean my head,
My weary eyelids close;
Content and glad awhile to tread
This path the Father knows.

And he has loved me. All my heart
With answering love is stirred;
And every anguished pain and smart
Finds healing in his word.
So here I lay me down to rest,
As nightly shadows fall,
And lean confiding on his breast,
Who knows and pities all.

SANCTIFICATION.—No. 2.

GEO. THOMSON.

WHAT IS IT?

We have seen that the primary element in sanctification is a setting apart for a specific purpose, or use. And in the Bible it means a setting apart for the specific and exclusive use, or service of the Lord. So we find in harmony with this idea, that the tabernacle was sanctified, the altar was sanctified, the vessels and furniture were all sanctified, the priests were sanctified; that is, primarily, they were set apart, consecrated, for the specific and exclusive use of Jehovah. When God gave the law to Moses from Mount Sinai, the mountain was sanctified, and no one but Moses was permitted to tread the consecrated spot. Sometimes a man would sanctify his "house," and sometimes his field, that is, he would voluntarily set it apart, or consecrate it to the Lord. All the value, or product of that field would be held sacredly inviolate to the Lord, unless redeemed by a money value. Our blessed Savior was sanctified—"And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth." John 17: 19. Now there was only the one sense in which Jesus could be sanctified, that was, to be set apart to the Father's work; for he says—"I came not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." He "knew no sin," therefore he did not need to be purified.

We shall now notice the second element in sanctification; namely, purification. As already indicated, this must follow consecration, and for the following reasons:—God will not reject a sincere offering, and he cannot accept an impure one; consequently, if the offering is impure, it must be purified. I will present a simple illustration:—Here is a pail, originally very beautiful, made of nice cedar wood, and bound with beautiful brass hoops; but it has been prostituted to base uses; sometimes filled with slops, sometimes with filthy swill, and sometimes clean water is put into it, but the clean water always becomes soiled and impure, because of the filthy deposits left by the swill. A very clean and pleasant-looking gentleman comes along, and, supposing the pail could reason and talk, it might say—"Well, I wish I was in that gentleman's service, I have been serving a very dirty master, and I'm about tired of this filth." The gentleman then says—"I'll take you into my service, if you will come." "But, what do you want me to do," says the pail? "I want you to hold and carry nothing but clean water," says the gentleman. "O dear, I'm not fit for that. I've had clean water in me sometimes, but it always become soiled and impure." "Very true; but if you will yield to me, I will cleanse and purify you." Now two things are necessary in order to fit the pail for holding clean water, "consecration," and "purification." No doubt but the pail would find itself in hot water, and get some scaldings before it was purified. The clean water represents holiness of life. Holiness is not sanctification, but one of the results thereof. This seems to be very clear. Here is Paul's description of a sanctified person—"And such were some of you; but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." 1 Cor 6: 11.

3d. How to become sanctified. Having learned the nature of sanctification, and its importance, if we are not already sanctified, we shall feel anxious to know how to become so. The Savior on one occasion prayed for his disciples as follows:—"Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word in truth." John 16: 17. How can the word of truth sanctify us? By instructing us in reference to the modus operandi of sanctification. If it were not for the word of truth, we should know nothing about such requirements as the following:—"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow me." "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." It is from scriptures of this character that we learn what is necessary to be done on our part, in order to sanctification. We learn from the record what the apostles learned from the Master's lips; namely, that he requires our supreme affection and an undivided service. And when this lesson is learned, with them we can say—"Lo, we have left all and followed thee." If we would be sanctified, we must come to Jesus without any mental reservations. There are, no doubt, many Ananiases and Sapphiras, though their judgments be not so sudden. The experiment is a dangerous one. All on the altar. Everything for Jesus. Time, talents, voice, means, reputation. A full, free, and unconditional surrender to Jesus. This will lead us to give up many practices and habits, which we might not deem absolutely sinful in themselves. Tobacco is an offence to many, and its use by christians causes many to offend. A brother stepped into a schoolhouse a little while before meeting time, and found a number of young converts there smoking their pipes, when remonstrated with, they replied—"Why, Eld. —— smokes; would he set us a bad example?" A Sunday school teacher finds one of his pupils on the street puffing away at a cigar. He tries to tell him it is wrong. "Why, how can that be?" says the boy, "father smokes, and Deacon F., and most all the members of the church eat it too." One brother recently lost a whole night's sleep, because he had to lie with a tobacco-chewing brother, and he crowded the wall very closely at that. Another brother says he would like to carry out the apostolic injunction—"Greet ye one another with a holy kiss," but he declares he would never kiss Bro. F., and Bro. C., for he would certainly faint before getting near enough to them. When the sisters in their zeal for cleanliness and purity attempt to clean out the hall, or meeting-house, they know what brother sits in this corner, and what brother sits in that corner, and it's hard for them to keep from thinking thoughts about those brethren that they would rather avoid if they could. Now let us hear what good old Paul said—"But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ; wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." 1 Cor. 8: 12, 13. Now that is just the conclusion every one comes to when they want to be sanctified; I'll give up all for Christ.

When the gates of the will are unlocked, and all we have and all we are is consecrated to the Lord, then comes the purifying. Here we find reference both to the type and antitype—"For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God?" Heb. 9: 13, 24. Here we have purging, or purification, identical with sanctification. The fountain is prepared, the cleansing stream is flowing; it is the blood of Jesus. But we must go to the fountain and wash. "Wash you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil, learn to do well." Isa. 1: 16, 17. If any fail of sanctification, it is not God's fault. He stands pledged to perform his part of the work at any time. The result of an neglect of this matter on our part is fearful to contemplate; yet we fear that many who profess to be looking for the coming of the Lord, are treating this subject with indifference, if not with scorn. With some it may be because they have not had a clear comprehension of the subject; let such weigh the matter now.

COST OF THE GOSPEL.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

HOW MUCH DOES THE GOSPEL COST YOU?

This is, we know, a plain, practical, home question. It is not asked of heathen, who have never heard the gospel, nor of sinners who care nothing for it; but of those who profess to be of "the household of faith." The gospel costs something to those who appreciate it. To some it is more expensive than to others, and the expense is not according to the pecuniary means one has at disposal, but according to the degree of appreciation one has of its value. Some, like the "poor widow," giving in the fulness of their love for Christ all they have, even all their "living"; while others, out of the penuriousness and parsimoniousness of their want, not of means, but of appreciation, give no more, often not as much, as others who have less means but more heart to give. It is perhaps not possible to so affect the world of professed christians as to equalize this matter; but we hope, at least, to set all to thinking, so that humbly on their knees they may examine themselves, and before God ask themselves the solemn question, Am I doing all I can with my pecuniary means for Christ and his gospel?

There is never any deficiency in giving for the gospel on the part of those who appreciate it; and there are many souls that yearn over the cause of Christ, when they have given all they can, even to the uttermost farthing, and long earnestly for the ability to give more; while the others settle down as though conscience were perfectly quiet, when they have doled out of their thousands a few cents, or two-cent pieces, bearing the motto—"In God we trust," while their faith's weakness is strikingly exemplified in the little they give.

There are some people in the world who run heedlessly by beauties, among which others will stand wrapt in wondrous delight, chained by the strange spell which so fascinates them; and their whole being feels the thrill of pleasure they experience. The earth, air, and water, the woods, the rock, the flower, the sky, are full, to some, of most wondrous things; while to others they are nothing; and sun and stars, those myriads of shining, glorious things, and all else, are unattractive, or only of value as they contribute to their sordid gain, or to gratify their love of ease and supine indolence. So with the gospel. There are those who find it full of beauties and excellences, whose hearts the Lord has opened, whose eyes have been unclosed, whose ears have been unsealed, and who therefore are full of joy as they contemplate its scope and design.

"Transported with the view they're lost
In wonder, love, and praise."

To them Jesus, "the Captain of their salvation," is "the chiefest among ten thousand," and the "one altogether lovely." They admire the

"Love that first began,
The scheme to rescue fallen man,
The matchless, free, eternal grace,
Which gave them such a hiding-place."

They cannot lightly estimate the gift of pardon for sin so graciously given them, and so they love much, and their religion is the all-controling principle of their lives, so that whether they eat or drink, or whatsoever they do, they "do all to the glory of God"; hence their piety runs pocket-deep, and their interest in the cause is as broad as this round earth, because they love Jesus and his appearing. The other class is not half converted. The glorious wonders of Christ's love are nothing to them, although they profess to hold something of reverence for it. Christ is a "root out of dry ground," and his cause is not worth but a few cents any how, all because they have but little sense of it. Such ought certainly to have a deeper dip, and a better appreciation of the value of the gospel, then they would not know how to be stingy.

When a question like the one heading this article is put to those who appreciate the gospel, they are willing to answer it. They love to know that all they have is the Lord's; that they are only stewards, and are ready to do all they can for so good a cause; and that whatever they do is done heartily as to the Lord, and is only, after all, but giving the Lord his own. The other class, perhaps, will take offense. They think it is no one's business what they give, and so are much like the miser who thus rather ambiguously expressed himself—"What I give is nothing to nobody." It is however clearly evident that he told a simple truth, as he never gave anything to anybody. So it is with pious niggards. How much any really DO, is known only to themselves and the Lord, unless they give much for ostentation and the praise of men; but often a close observer can discover who the really liberal ones are, and who are the opposite; and these latter often think they are doing wonders, when they do but little, and would be surprised if they knew how much more God's poorer children, who have the cause more at heart, give than they do themselves; not only comparatively, but really, dollar for dollar.

Some liberal ones give one tenth of their income, and some would think they were nearly killed if they thought they were expected to give a fifteenth, or a fiftieth, or any portion of their substance. It is often true, however, that these close ones are not as close in everything. They have plenty of money for the purchase of farms and government bonds,—no harm in having money in these, we contend; any man can give more for Christ who preserves a capital, than he who has none. The trouble is in keeping the property so closely that only a few straggling cents get loose and drop into the Lord's treasury. As such people often have means for the purchase of luxuries in food and dress, they of course spend more loose change foolishly every week (perhaps every day) than they give to the Lord in a whole year; perhaps smoking, or chewing and spitting it away. They forget that they owe the Lord everything they have, and more; and so feel often quite complacent at the thought that they have been so liberal as to give, perhaps, the sum of twenty-five cents, all at one time, to support that which is able to make them rich and at home, where there is "fulness of joy and pleasures forevermore," in the city of gold. Some of these are somewhat isolated, perhaps, and in their isolation act somewhat on the commercial principle,—only to pay for what they get themselves, and to get that as cheaply as possible. They forget that the means they have will help others to hear what they have heard and professed to believe, even if they cannot hear it always; so they need not withhold when they ought to give.

Now we have a few practical questions to aid any who may desire to answer this question aright, but who fail now to do their whole duty.

1. Do you give as much for the gospel, as you spend uselessly, say for tobacco, etc.?

2. Do you give as much as you would if you knew you were putting your money out at ten per cent interest? (Note. Remember, the Lord pays better than that—even "a hundred-fold.")

3. Do you give liberally, when you give so little, even as liberally as you would have Christ give to you? The poor widow gave liberally, although she gave but little. One may give more than that and not be liberal.

4. Do you care as much for the welfare of Christ's cause as you profess to, and does your interest for souls compare favorably with His who, "though he was rich," yet for our sakes became poor, that we "through his poverty might be rich"?

5. Do you believe that Jesus is coming soon, and that the hoarded treasures of this world are to be burned by the fires of the last day; and are you not heaping up something to help make that fire burn?

6. Do you feel that you have closed your hand too tightly, and so have withheld more than was meet, and it hath "tended to poverty"? Then open it to-day, and see the good that will come of doing so.

7. Do you feel willing to have the reckoning day come at once, and are you ready to render up your account of what you have done for Christ with your money and means? And if the day should come, would you be obliged to go to some spot of earth and drag out an old mouldy bag, in which you had hidden away your Lord's money, and say, "Lo, there thou hast that is thine"?

All these questions we propose, and many more we might, but we only pray, Lord, help us all to be ready to give all we can for thy cause—if nothing more, ourselves, our "friends and time and earthly store," and then we shall hear the "Well done"; but not otherwise.

THE MIND OF JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."—PHIL. 2: 5.

Jesus was humble. No vain, egotistical, swelling thoughts of vanity ever found a place in his mind. If he had been a depraved, sinful mortal, doubtless he would have been "puffed up" through the wonderful success attending his ministry; but he was the Son of God, and hence he did not seek for vain glory. He certainly had occasion to glory after the flesh, if he had been so disposed, for his position was higher than the angels, and his power mightier than the kings of the earth. With a word he could hush the raging of the sea and quiet the fury of the tempest. He could cast out devils, and heal all manner of diseases; he could raise the dead and banish the gloom of the grave; he could feed the hungry multitudes with a handful of bread; he could foretell future events and read the hidden thoughts of the human heart. Never was there a character before like him. He was the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. Surely, if pride were commendable, such a being as this would have exhibited it in his life and conversation; but no. Behold the humility of Him—"who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men. And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus. He did not seek for a great name, for a great position, or to be thought well of before men. He did not flaunt and make a great display with costly apparel. He was satisfied with plain and common things. His was an every day religion. The common people heard him gladly, and to the poor he preached the words of everlasting life. Everywhere, and on all occasions, he exhibited a meek and lowly spirit, and it was upon the humble that he pronounced his benedictions. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Have we the mind that was in Jesus? Do we imitate him in meekness and humility?

Jesus was bold. Humility is not laziness, neither is boldness, brass. There are many who manifest a brazen-faced audacity; they fear neither God nor man; but this was not the boldness Jesus manifested. His was a boldness based upon right principles, right motives, and right doing. He knew that he was right; hence he could meet his enemies with unblanching confidence. He could rebuke iniquity, and expose hypocrisy, and put to shame and silence those who came to catch him in his talk. Looking in the face of the Pharisees, who persecuted and sought to take him, he could say—"Which of you convinceth me of sin?" Jesus had a consciousness of purity within; hence he moved onward with unyielding and unflinching courage through his earthly career, despising the shame, until at last he experienced the bitter agony of Gethsemane and Calvary. He did not fail or become discouraged. He triumphed over all his foes, and became the Captain of our salvation. Have we this mind? Are we bold for Jesus? Can we stand for God though we stand alone?

Jesus was patient. His life was one of toil, of suffering, of conflict, of perplexity, of persecution, of temptation, of sorrow, and of tears. He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; yet no murmuring or repining ever escaped his lips. The storm gusts of earth never raised a ripple upon the placid waters of his mind. In him all was calm, clear, serene, and tranquil, as a midsummer sunset. There was nothing hasty, impetuous, or fretful about him. In patient, lamb-like submission, he received the scourge and the crown of thorns. No feeling of anger or revenge rankled in his bosom. Even amid the darkness and solemnity of Calvary's tragic scenes, the rainbow of peace hung about his gentle brow. Was there ever patience like his? "When he was reviled he reviled not again; when he suffered he threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." Have we this mind? Are we patient under the provocations of life? Do we never murmur nor repine? Are our minds calm and clear as the waveless bosom of a moonlit lake? Do the muddy waters of strife and envy never rise to the surface? When disappointments come, are we calm then? when adversity approaches, can we kiss the rod? when loved ones are snatched away by the hand of death, are we quiet and submissive? When laid upon a sick bed, do we calmly trust in Jesus? Do we take pleasure in infirmities, and rejoice in the midst of earth's keenest sorrows? If so, all is well.

Jesus was benevolent. In him there was a fulness of love, compassion, sympathy, and goodness. It was impossible for him not to do good; it was a part of his nature. From his heart and hands flowed a constant stream of blessings. He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich. Gaze upon him yonder by the temple gates, as the rays of the setting sun fall upon him. See the multitude throng to him, bringing the halt, the lame, the maimed, the blind, and the sick of every description. How he heals and blesses them all, and asks not a penny. How he forgives the penitent, binds up the broken-hearted, and bids the captives go free. How gently he reproves the erring and restores the fallen. O was there ever love like the love of Jesus? What has he not done for the comfort and salvation of sinners? He gave his life for his enemies. Have we this mind? Are we benevolent? Is it our chief delight to do good? Do we deny self to bless others?

Jesus was holy. He was born holy, but this holiness was maintained by a strict conformity to his Father's will. He was obedient in all things. There were no rebellious thoughts in his heart His language was—"I delight to do thy will, O God; yea, thy law is within my heart." His obedience was cheerful and affectionate. He loved to keep his Father's commandments. Have we this mind? Are we holy? Have we been transformed by the renewing of our minds? Do we delight to obey God? Are we obedient in all things? Only the obedient have the promise of eternal salvation. May we have the mind of Jesus.

SELECTIONS FROM "AMERICAN ANTIQUITIES."—No. 2.

BY JOSIAH PRIEST, ALBANY, 1833.

"It is not impossible but America may have seen the country where Noah builded his ark, as directed by the Most High. . . . Now, if it had been built anywhere in the country called Armenia, where the mountain Arrarat is situated, and as it is found the waters had a general eastern direction, the ark, in going on the face of the waters, would have during the time the waters of the deluge prevailed, gone in an eastern direction, as far perhaps as to the region of the islands of Japan, beyond China, east, a distance of about six thousand miles from Arrarat, which would be at the rate of about forty miles a day; or if it had floated faster, would have carried it into the Pacific Ocean. But if we may imagine it was erected in North America, or somewhere in the latitude of the State of New York, or even further west, the current of the deluge would have borne it easterly. And suppose it may have been carried at the rate of forty or fifty miles a day, it would during the time the waters prevailed (in which time we may suppose a current existed) have progressed as far as to Arrarat, . . . where it did actually rest."

"More than sixteen hundred years had elapsed when the ark was finished, and it may fairly be inferred that as Noah was born about one thousand years after the creation of the world, that mankind had from necessity, arising from the pressure of population, gone very far away from the regions about Eden; and the country where Noah was born may as well be supposed to have been America as any other parts of the earth, seeing there are indubitable signs of antediluvian population in many parts of it. Unite this circumstance with that of the ascertained current of the deluge from America, and with the fact of the ark's having rested in an easterly direction from this country, we come to a conclusion that here, perhaps in the very State of New York, the miraculous vessel was erected, and bore away, treasured with its enormous capacity, the progenitors of the human race renewed. So, that if America has not the honor of being the country where Adam was created, as is believed by some, it has nevertheless the honor, as supposed, of being the country where the ark was erected."—Pp. 130, 131. ABRAHAM OFFERING UP HIS SON.

AIR—"Bonny Doon."

BRO. GRANT:—As I have had the poetry I send you nearly forty years, and have never seen it in print, nor do I know the author, I would be pleased to have it published in the Crisis. THOMAS FOOTE.
Salisbury, N. H.

The morning sun shone bright and clear,
On Abraham's tent it gaily shone,
And all was joy and gladness there,
All save the patriarch's heart alone.
When God's command arose to mind,
It forced into his eye a tear;
Although his heart was all resigned,
Yet nature fondly lingered there.
The morning's simple feast was spread,
And Sarah at the banquet smiled;
Joy o'er her face its lustre spread,
While near her sat her only child.
The grieving father turned away,
And walked the inner tent apart;
He felt his fortitude decay,
While nature whispered in his heart—
Ah! must the son to whom was given
The promise of the heavenly land,
Heir to the choicest gift of heaven,
Be slain by a fond parent's hand?
But shall a feeble worm rebel,
And murmur at a Father's rod?
Shall he be backward to perform
The known and certain will of God?
The Lord is able to perform
The righteous promise he hath made;
His power can rescue me from harm,
Or raise my darling from the dead.
My son in haste the cruises fill,
And store the scrip with due supplies,
For we must seek Moriah's hill,
And offer there a sacrifice.
The mother raised an anxious eye,
And all a mother's heart was there;
She feared the desert drear and dry,
She feared the savage lurking there.
Abram beheld, and made reply,
On him from whom our blessings flow,
Dear Sarah, we by faith rely,
'T is God's command, and we must go.
The duteous son in haste obeyed,
The cruises filled, the mules prepared,
And with the third day's twilight shade
Moriah's hill appeared in sight.
The servants at a distance wait,
Alone ascends the son and sire;
The wood on Isaac's shoulder laid,
The wood to build his funeral fire.
The cheerful son upraised his head,
While filial love shone in his eyes;
And to his father smiling said,
Where is the Lamb for sacrifice?
They gained the mountain's summit high,
An altar built of native stone;
The father saw the moment nigh
When he must offer up his son.
Abram moved on at God's command,
With love as fond as parents know;
He bound his son, put forth his hand,
And took the knife and aimed the blow.
An angel stood and viewed the scene,
And viewing cried, Abram, forbear;
Thy love is known, thy faith is seen,
And then renewed the promise there.
But let no pen profane, like mine,
In holiest things too rashly dare,
Turn to the book of God divine,
And read the precious promise there.
Ages on ages rolled away,
At length the appointed hour arrived,
When on the mountain Calvary,
God did himself a lamb provide.

MUSIC-MAD.—We hear, see, and read so much about music these days as to be reminded of the remark of Dr. H. Bonar, of Scotland, when referring to what is now being largely done by professed christians—"The fine arts—music, painting, sculpture—are all made to minister, not to religion, but to the production of religious sensations, which make men believe that they are religious, when they are mere admirers of the beautiful and solemn in sight and sound." And he adds—"It is said, that in the last days of the old Roman empire, when its 'decline' was passing into its 'fall,' everything was paralyzed by luxury save music, which was cultivated to utter intoxication. Old Rome died music-mad." These are suggestive words. Reader, pause and ponder them.—Advent Herald.

KEEP THE GATE SHUT.

An English farmer was one day at work in his fields when he saw a party of horsemen riding about his farm. He had one field that he was specially anxious that they should not ride over, as the crop was in a condition to be badly injured by the tramp of horses. So he dispatched one of his workmen to the field, telling him to shut the gate, and then keep watch over it, and on no account to suffer it to be opened.

The boy went as he was bidden; but was scarcely at his post before the huntsmen came up, peremptorily ordering the gate to be opened. This the boy declined to do, stating the orders he had received, and his determination not to disobey them. Threats and bribes were offered, alike in vain; one after another came forward as spokesman, but all with the same result; the boy remained immovable in his determination not to open the gate. After a while, one of noble presence advanced, and said, in commanding tones—

"My boy, you do not know me; I am the Duke of Wellington,—one not accustomed to be disobeyed; and I command you to open that gate, that I and my friends may pass through."

The boy lifted his cap, and stood uncovered before the man whom all England delighted to honor, then answered firmly—

"I am sure the Duke of Wellington would not wish me to disobey orders. I must keep this gate shut, nor suffer any one to pass but with my master's express permission."

Greatly pleased, the sturdy old warrior lifted his own hat, and said—

"I honor the man or boy who can neither be bribed nor frightened into doing wrong. With an army of such soldiers I could conquer, not only the French, but the world."

And handing the boy a glittering sovereign, the old Duke put spurs to his horse, and galloped away; while the boy ran off to his work, shouting at the top of his voice—"Hurrah, hurrah! I've done what Napoleon could not do,—I've kept out the Duke of Wellington."

Every boy is a gate-keeper; and his Master's command is, "Be thou faithful until death." Are you tempted to drink, to smoke or chew tobacco? Keep the gate of your mouth fast closed, and allow no evil company to enter. When evil companions would counsel you to break the Sabbath, to lie, to deal falsely, to disobey your parents, keep the gate of your ears fast shut against such excitements. And when the bold blasphemer would instil doubts of the great truths of revelation, then keep the gate of your heart locked and barred against his infamous suggestions, remembering that it is only the fool that hath "said in his heart, there is no God."—Ex.

THE ACCURATE BOY.

There was a young man once in the office of a western railway superintendent. He was occupying a position that four hundred boys in that city would have wished to get. It was honorable, and "it paid well," besides being in the line of promotion. How did he get it? Not by having a rich father, for he was the son of a laborer. The secret was his beautiful accuracy. His leisure time he used in perfecting his writing and arithmetic. After a while he learned to telegraph. At each step his employer commended his accuracy, and relied on what he did because he was just right.

And it is thus with every occupation. The accurate boy is the favored one. Those who employ men do not wish to be on the look-out, as though they were rogues or fools.—President Tuttle.

SENSIBLE ADVICE.—A great many boys, as well as men, complain that they cannot get employment. Perhaps it is hard to get such a place as you like, but when you get a place, make yourself useful in it; make yourself so necessary, by your fidelity and good behavior, that they cannot do without you. Be willing to take a low price at first, no matter what the price is, if it is honest work. Do it well—do it the very best you can. Begin at the very lowest round of the ladder, and climb up. The great want anywhere is faithful, capable workers. They are never a drug in the market. Make yourself one of these, and there will always be a place for you, and a good one too.—Ex.

A LITTLE BOY nine years old, a member of the "Band of Hope," was at a dinner party a short time ago, and those present wanted to test the strength of his principles. A half-sovereign was put into the bottom of a tumbler, which was then half filled with ale.

"Now," said they, "if you'll drink that, you shall have what is at the bottom."

"No," replied the noble little fellow, "not a dozen half-sovereigns shall make me break my pledge."—Ex.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

MY EXPERIENCE IN HEALTH REFORM.

When we placed our son under hygienic treatment, his mother and myself decided that we would undertake at home, so far as habits of life were concerned, to carry out precisely the same course that he would follow at Dansville. Our reasons were, first, that it seemed to be the only consistent and right method of living, to abstain from every hurtful thing, and to use such things only as should be best adapted to sustain life; thus avoiding all waste of vital force, and, so far as possible, securing all the benefit that could be realized from wholesome food, and from sufficient and refreshing sleep. But our special reason that moved us to immediate action, was the desire to benefit our son. We knew that it could be but a brief period before he should return to us; and we realized that if he was to be permanently benefited, he must continue to live in a hygienic manner.

And so we commenced in good earnest to live strictly according to the principles of hygiene. We did not do this with any particular expectation of benefit to ourselves, but because it seemed plainly right, and because we hoped that it might do good to our lame boy. I certainly had no idea of any manifest personal advantage in the recovery of my own health.

We adopted the two-meal system, and have strictly adhered to it till the present time. We put away from our table spice, pepper, vinegar, etc. We also put away butter, meat fish, and substituted graham for fine flour But we endeavored to secure plenty of good fruit, and, with our vegetables and grains, we have always used some milk and a very little salt. We have strictly abstained from eating anything, except in connection with our meals, and have taught our children to act on this plan. For a space of time, we took a brief season for rest each day before the second meal. This plan of rest-hour, however, we have not regularly followed for several years, but have occasionally regarded it as necessity has demanded. But we have tried faithfully to follow the hygienic system in every essential point. And now to state its consequences in my own case:

1. One of the first results which I observed upon the change made in my diet was, that my food had once more the keen relish which I can remember that it possessed in my childhood, but which it had long since lost.

2. That headache, dizziness, nausea, and the like, were gone.

3. But several months elapsed before I found any increase of strength. Nor is this strange when I state that, though I made so great a change in my living, and withal omitted the third meal, I did, nevertheless continue my labors before the change. But after some months I became sensible of an increase of strength, and this continued to be the case till I could say in strict truth that I possessed greater strength and powers of endurance than at any former period of life.

4. One of the immediate consequences of omitting my third meal was entire freedom from morning faintness. When I dispensed with suppers, I did also close my acquaintance with what seemed to be a living creature gnawing in my stomach each morning before breakfast. I thus found that it was not the lack of food of which my stomach complained each morning, but quite the reverse. It had toiled all night to dispose of the supper when it should have rest.

5. And as to the strength derived from a hygienic diet I have this testimony to bear, that whereas I often suffered faintness under the common method of living, I have no recollection of one case of this kind in my own experience for the whole period of my present course of life. I have, often remarked that I can omit one of my two meals with less inconvenience than formerly I could one of the three.

6. As the direct consequence of omitting un-hygienic articles from my diet, my salt rheum has totally disappeared. Boils used to be frequent with me but I have not had one in eight years. And the painful sores which came upon my under lip every few weeks in former years, have absolutely discontinued their visitations. These things I attribute largely to the entire disuse of butter.

7. When I adopted the health reform, I had, as I supposed, an incurable catarrh. I was ignorant of the fact that it was caused by an inability of the liver to keep up with its work while its owner was continually taking into the stomach substances which would vastly increase its work beyond the design of the Creator. But after some months of correct living, especially in the matter of diet, I found some intervals of relief from that terrible scourge. Then it seemed as bad as ever. Then after a time there came a longer period of relief. Then again a relapse, and then a still longer season of freedom. So it continued for nearly two years, when to my great joy it ceased to come back at all. I have never mourned its absence.

8. One thing which I learned from rest hours, when I took them regularly, was to go to sleep whenever I felt the need of it. This has been an incalculable blessing to me. I cannot lie down regularly for rest hour, but when I feel that nature requires it, I lie down, if possible, and sleep comes to my immediate relief.

9. I owe to God a debt of gratitude for the health reform which I can never repay or even fully express. It is to me something sacred, constituting, as christian temperance, an essential part of true religion. In one respect only do I knowingly allow myself to transgress, and that is in the endeavor to discharge the responsibilities of the work which sometimes requires a large part of the twenty-four hours. Yet with the strength derived from correct living in other respects, I hope not to destroy myself by thus laboring at times beyond what I would approve in secular business.—J. N. Andrews, in Health Reformer.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?

GEO. THOMSON.

Air.—Ring the bell, watchman.

What means the tidings that fall on the ear?
What is the message the watchman doth bear?
Omens are filling the earth and the air;
Rouse up the people! O prepare, O prepare!

Cho.—Send out the message—loud let it ring;
This is the anthem the pilgrims will sing;
Loud let it echo o'er mountain and plain—
Jesus is coming, and he's coming to reign.

What makes the nations excited and vexed?
What ails the people, so sadly perplexed?
Why are they looking for something to come?
Do they see the tokens of the soon coming One?
Cho.

What mean the rumblings of earth all around?
"Sea and waves roaring," a terrific sound?
Fire, hail and tempest, famine and sword?
Is old earth groaning, and groaning for her Lord?
Cho.

What ails the Devil that he is so spry,
Marshalling his hosts for the last battle cry?
See how they rally at their leader's call,
Is it not a presage of the old usurper's fall?
Cho.

What means the echo that thrills o'er the land?
Legions are marching at Jesus' command,
Shouting and singing in unmeasured strain—
Jesus is coming, and he's coming to reign.

LOVING CHRIST'S APPEARING.

"Henceforth there is a crown of righteousness laid up for me, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4: 8.

In every instance where a blessing is promised in the word of God, with conditions attached thereunto, none will receive the promised blessing except such as comply with the conditions named. In the text quoted, the blessing promised is a crown of righteousness, to be given at the appearing and kingdom of Jesus Christ. (See verse 1.) The condition on which all are to gain this crown is, to love his appearing. If Paul is correct in this statement, if he is not "mistaken," none will share the crown of life save those who possess the quality of heart here named. This of course includes all who have died in a like condition in the past; but it embraces no others. To suppose that it does, is to charge Paul with writing foolishness. All theorizing concerning the future of those who are dead, contrary to this rule, must be fallacious.

But Paul is always in harmony with himself. Hear him again: "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus 2: 11-13.

The grace of God, in this Scripture, is the favor which God has granted to a lost race, in devising a plan through which to give them life. This favor is offered to all men; and, when accepted, it teaches us, the church, all the lessons named. It just as certainly teaches us to look for the appearing of Christ as to deny ungodliness. Every man, therefore, who really receives this grace that bringeth life will, as a necessary consequence of receiving it, look for Christ to come from heaven the second time. And a second time, without sin, will He appear for the salvation of them who expect him. Heb. 9: 28.

All the Scriptures that speak on this point, convey the one idea that when our Lord shall come the second time, he will give salvation to those only, whose hearts, being controlled by the grace of God, are thereby softened into an ardent love for the great event that shall bring the consummation of all promised good, send forth most earnest longings for his return.

This state of feeling has been that of all the truly good in all the years of the past. Job breaks out in the midst of sore afflictions: "Oh, that my words were now written! Oh, that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever; for I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job 19: 23-27. Israel's Psalmist uses this language: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15. The evangelical prophet exclaims—"Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come, . . . He will come and save you." Isa. 35: 3, 4.

It shall be said in that day—"Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Isa. 25: 9. Christ taught his children to pray, "Thy kingdom come."

Paul, in all his epistles, tells of the coming of the Just One. Peter points forward to that day as the only time of coronation, and fulfilled promised glory of the church; and John, the prophet of Patmos, when brought down in vision through a series of prophetic events to the time when the glorious epiphany is actually near, heard the voice from heaven proclaiming, "Behold, I come quickly," responded, "Amen! even so, come, Lord Jesus." And indeed, through all the history of the past, the intuitive yearnings of every sanctified heart have taken up the cry, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." No wonder a Watts wrote—

"How long, dear Savior, oh how long,
Shall this bright hour delay?
Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

No wonder that the ardent soul-longings of a Wesley prompted him to write—

"We hear thy rumbling wheels, and pray, Triumphant Lord, appear."

As well might we suppose that a hungry man would loathe wholesome food as that a truly christian heart would be indifferent concerning the coming of Him who is, to his waiting bride, "the chiefest among ten thousand, and altogether lovely." The grace of God that bringeth life has implanted in every heart that has known its renewing power an earnest love for the appearing of our Lord. If there is one item of truth that is greatest in the affections of a consecrated, believing, loving heart, it is that Jesus will come again from heaven.

Every part of the one great system of truth is important; but take out of the great fact that Christ will come the second time, and all other parts of that system are reduced to mere abstractiveness. What does it amount to that we learn other doctrines from the Scriptures, if Christ never comes? Practically nothing. Indeed, then is our whole being a blank oblivion for the future. What practical good can come to us to know that there is no future bliss except through Christ, if he never comes to that bliss?

The second coming of our Lord is the one door that opens to admit the entire multitude of God's sons and daughters to the realization of all of good that is promised them in the Scriptures of truth. No wonder that the good of all ages have looked forward to that event with the most ardent longing, and joyful expectation. And we too, if we are animated by the same spirit that dwelt in them, shall sigh for the day of his coming more than for all things else.

But just in proportion as our affections have become cold toward Him who is to come, and have been alienated from him, and placed on other subjects, shall we lose our interest in that coming.

If we love the appearing of our Lord, we shall rejoice in all real evidence of the nearness of that event. Nothing else can be true on this point. And even honest radicalism on unreal evidences of the immediate coming of Christ is less reprehensible in a professed child of God than an utter indifference to, and a dislike of all evidences of its approximate nearness. "Watch, lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all, watch."—Ex.

ALL IN JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Wisdom, and righteousness, and santification, and redemption."—1 Cor. 1: 30.

Wisdom. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." The human family is blinded through ignorance and unbelief. Left to ourselves, we know not God, and are without hope. Had not Christ appeared, men would have had no correct knowledge of God and the way of salvation They would have groped in darkness until the grave closed upon them, and the future would have been an eternal starless night. But Christ came as the "light of the world." He was the great teacher. Looking round upon the ignorant multitude who thronged him, he said, "Learn of me." He was full of grace and truth. He hath revealed the character of the Father as a God of love. His words are pure and right. If we give heed to his instructions, we shall be made wise unto salvation. He is the way, the truth and the life. In him is no darkness at all. If we follow him, he will give us a mouth and wisdom that all our adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

Righteousness. We need this. "There is none righteous, no, not one." By nature all are sinners. Our righteousness is as "filthy rags." We have nothing to cover us in the day of storm. How shall we appear before God? Ah! Christ has become our righteousness. He came to seek and to save the lost. He died the just for the unjust. Our sins were laid on him. His righteousness is imparted to us. God hath made "him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." Is not this good news? "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Then we are clean.

Sanctification. What is this? To be set apart for a holy work How can we obtain it? Give all to Christ and recieve all from Christ. Anciently there was an altar upon which sacrifices were offered to the Lord. The altar sanctified the gift. It became an acceptable offering when placed upon the altar. Christ is our altar. By faith and self-dedication we are to give ourselves entirely to him. If by faith we are united to him, we become as he is. Christ is sanctified, and if we are in him then we are sanctified. There is no sanctification aside from him. What meaneth this? "For both he that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." How long can we continue in a sanctified condition? Just as long as we abide in Christ. We are to live and walk in holiness by virtue of oneness with him. He is "the vine," we are "the branches." "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine," no more can we except we abide in him. Without him we "can do nothing." He is the fountain from which we must daily drink. Are we "at the fountain drinking?"

Redemption. From death? Yes. This completes the work. Christ is the Redeemer. He has conquered death, and torn assunder the gates of the grave. In a little while he is coming to deliver his people. It is blessed to have wisdom, righteousness, and sanctification; but this is not enough. We need something more. Thank God, our hope supplies it. Hear the prophet—"I will ransom them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death. O, death, I will be thy plagues, O, grave, I will be thy destruction." Glorious day, soon to dawn. Lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh. "Eternal redemption." Glory to God. Soon we'll sing the new song: "Thou art worthy," for thou "hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, ... and we shall reign on the earth."

NEW AND OLD.

J. B. COOK.

PALPABLY PLAIN AND YET PROFOUND.

I. The grand executive of God's good will to men is the promised "seed—Jesus the Messiah." Gen. 3: 15; Gal. 3: 16, and 26-29; John 5: 17-47; Acts 4: 12; Heb. 8; Rev. 1: 4; 20: 1-6.

II. The mighty deliverance and abounding blessing assured in the oath and promise to Abraham by this seed, belong to his future coming and kingdom. The throne of power, the righteous judgment, the kingdom of heaven, are associated with him. Hence the coming of Christ, in all the glowing visions, is his (to us) "second" coming; but never the first, excepting as it is embraced, incidentally or subordinately, to the ulterior "reign."

III. In Jesus' birth, baptism, bloody sweat, death and burial, he was passive. But "in his times" he will show himself "the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords." 1 Tim. 6: 15. "The times of refreshing" (reviving) come from "His presence." The "restitution" is by the Restorer's return. Acts 3: 19-21. "He shall possess the gate of his enemies"—the seat of judgment and throne of power; and thence the blessing proceeds. Gen. 22: 17, 18; Ps. 22: 26-28; 72: 12, 20; 102: 13-21; 132: 13-18; Isa. 9: 6-7; 16: 5; 59th, 20th and 60th chapters; Jer. 93: 14-16; Matt. 2: 6; Luke 1: 31-33; Rom. 11: 26-29; 15: 8-13; Rev. 15: 4.

The prayer of faith and the anchor of hope reach this royal triumph of the great King, every time and in every example, from Abel the first martyr to the last apostle. Heb. 11, Rev. 22.

IV. The Christian world, in apostasy, has been mis-educated, to identify the royal power and reign of Messiah with his past martyr-advent, and in our martyr-age. The "crown" is thus subordinated and compounded with the cross, and the life everlasting is (in terrible mystery) indistinguishable from death—the wages of sin.

V. For over four thousand years the Messiah's work was grouped together, perhaps in a word, so as to seem one. Thus also his coming was set forth as one. But it was that one sketched "in the law, the prophets and the psalms" as yet future; and known only to few as "the second time to salvation." Heb. 9: 28.

VI. The matter of fact form of all past fulfillments should confirm this doctrine, and lead us to look for the precise fulfillment of divine promise at the coming specified to take "the throne, and execute justice and judgment in the earth." Jer. 23: 5-6; Rom. 15: 8-13. The entrance of sin; the reign of death; the creature subjected to vanity, briars and thorns; the four beastly kingdoms; the first advent; the gift of the Spirit and the calling of the Gentile church, are realities that fulfill "the word." Therefore, the kingly coming of Christ, the resurrection and reign of the saints with him, and the heavenly "restitution of all things spoken," will be as much more notable, and real, and historical, by so much as they belong to his royal "presence" and power, to consummate the great "salvation."

VII. This Bible view compels us to look for the Restorer, Judge, King, to come "according to the Scriptures." No history records such royal coming as having yet transpired. Hence, all such Scriptures "remain to the people of God," and will be accomplished (not in the absence, but) in "the presence of the Lord." Acts 3: 19-21.

This advanced view demands faith in this unfulfilled coming of Christ; but always to fulfill "the exceeding great and precious promises" in their God-given fulness, richness, and glory.

As certainly as Christ will come, so certain is it that he will do just what is revealed at and after such coming. Amen. "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill"—"every jot and tittle." Matt. 5: 17, 18. The past is the pledge of what remains to be achieved by "the great King."

Note. This "nail in a sure place" seems driven home and clinched by the proclamation of the kingdom which is to follow "the seventh trumpet." Rev. 11: 15-18. Has this judgment trump sounded with no note of the first resurrection or kingdom? No, indeed. It would seem insane to accept this text, which teaches the kingdom to come while yet (as oft assumed) it did come one or two thousand years ago, without "salvation," resurrection, or judgment; nay, more, without filling out the prophetic picture of Messiah's people's coming in any one primal passage in any part of the Bible. See quotations above.

This should, I think, awaken thought. The glowing visions of prophecy belong to "His time," the times of restoring, reigning, and refreshing from his "presence." Hence it cannot transpire in his absence.

This lifts the veil that hides a large portion of truth from our eyes of faith, and gives distinctness to our apprehension of the principal proper and crowning coming and kingdom of our Lord, the Messiah, in both the Old and New Testaments. Amen.

SANCTIFICATION.—No. 3.

GEO. THOMSON.

4. What is the present result of sanctification? The results are varied, grand, and glorious; and when known, ought to be a sufficient inducement for all to enter that glorious condition. One of the blessed results is settled peace. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee." Isa. 26: 3. Even a transient peace is good and desirable; but how much more a permanent, settled peace. A sanctified person is fixed. There are no alternations of peace and turmoil. Peace flows on uninterrupted, like the mighty river.

Another result is humility. A sanctified person does not seek to exalt self. The big "I" is brought down to little i, and the little u is elevated to big U. "In honor preferring one another."

Another result is love. Not a mere transient love, but "perfect love, which casteth out fear"; a love that takes out all the hate, all the malice, all the revenge, all the strife, all the cross words. "The fruit of the Spirit is love." A sanctified person loves God supremely; loves his neighbor as himself; loves the brotherhood, and loves his enemies.

Another result is joy, or good feeling. This will inevitably follow, when we are found in harmony with the divine will. The sanctified person experiences a fulness of joy, because he lives in close and intimate relationship with Jesus. "Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name; ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." All christians like to enjoy a good state of feeling; and many estimate their standing in christianity by the degree of feeling they possess from time to time. Now the sanctified person not only possesses a fulness of joy, but it is permanent. "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love; these things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." John 15: 10, 11.

The sanctified person is not dependent on camp, or quarterly, or revival meetings, to get up a good feeling. The fire is always in flame. These are the burning torches that usually kindle the camp and revival meeting fires. Would that we had more of this character; then the interest at such meetings would begin at the right end—at the beginning.

Another result is holy living; not merely a sanctimonious demeanor, but a strict application of the principles of holiness in every department of life. Right doing and honest dealing in little things as well as great things. A sanctified person utterly repudiates the maxim—"Honesty is the best policy." He is honest because it is right. It matters not whether his customer watches him or not; he can only rely upon getting a just weight or measure; and what he sells by sample will turn out just as good at the bottom, as at the top; and if there are any articles of merchandise calculated to injure his fellow man, articles which God has made contraband, he will not sell them, even if they do pay a larger profit than honest merchandise. He will not attempt to depreciate the value of his neighbor's property, for the purpose of making a good bargain. "It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer; but when he hath gone his way, then he boasteth." Prov. 20: 14. When he undertakes a piece of work for God or man, he does it faithfully, without the need of an overseer. He will not owe four or five years subscription for his newspaper, or feel too poor to take it at all, while he spends at least ten dollars a year for tobacco. In short, the Bible is his standard, by which he squares the whole minutia of his life, and these things do not require a mighty effort on his part. As a result of sanctification, he loves to do right. These are some of the present results of sanctification. The future results will be immortality, a home in the kingdom, and eternal life.

5. How shall we know when we are sanctified? There are evidences, both of an internal and external character. The Spirit of God bears witness with our spirit. In this sense we are said to be "sanctified by the Spirit," as well as by the blood of Jesus. "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 1: 2.

Again, we may know that we are sanctified when we have a relish for divine things. There is a difference between merely partaking of food, and having a relish for it. Children usually want the pie or pudding first, because they have a relish for it. The little boy may consent to eat his bread and milk before going to bed if he is not hungry, because it is customary; but if he has been fishing and comes home hungry, he will not need much persuasion to go at it. So with the sanctified christian; he "hungers and thirsts after righteousness." He is often found in the closet, because he loves to be there. He faithfully maintains family devotions, because he delights in it. He is always present at the weekly prayer-meeting. Like one of old, he "esteems it more than his necessary food." He would much rather miss his dinner, than to miss the prayer-meeting. He longs for it; he hungers for it. O, I do desire to meet with my dear brethren. I wish to take sweet counsel with them. I long to talk about Jesus. If the Lord has any little job for him to do, such as visiting the sick, the poor and needy, and administering to their necessities, he does it most cheerfully. If the Lord says unto him as he did to Philip, Go join thyself to such a sinner, and tell him about Jesus, he goes without any hesitancy whatever. If the Lord requires a portion of his means for the advancement of his blessed cause, his reply is, "My all is on the altar." If the Master says, "I want some of your time to do a little errand for me," his response is—

"I've given all for Jesus,
My talents, time, and voice."

These evidences are reliable. Whoever possesses them need have no doubts about their sanctification.

6. How we may know when we are not sanctified. It will do no harm to look at this from a reversed stand-point. It may serve to bring out the truth more prominently. If we are destitute of the results, such as settled peace full and constant, holiness, etc., etc., we may be sure we are not sanctified. Right here we must guard against one mistake, which some may be liable to fall into; that is, if we have trials, temptations, and tribulations, to regard such as evidences that we are not sanctified. These are the christian's common lot, and no sanctified person may expect to be exempt from them, but he "glories in tribulation also." We may know that we are not sanctified when we engage in any christian duty reluctantly; when it is a cross to attend meeting; when it is a cross to speak in meeting, especially if strangers are present; when it is not very difficult to find or frame an excuse for staying away from the prayer-meeting—"I could n't find that bow I meant to wear to meeting"; "a neighbor or friend called in to visit just at meeting time"; "the cows did not come home in time"; "I have been so busy to-day"; "I am so tired"; I've got a touch of the headache." But who ever knew a touch of the headache to keep any one from their own business? but the Lord's business with such is not so important. When we detect selfishness in ourselves, we may be sure we are not sanctified; for that condition is as far removed from selfishness as we can possibly conceive. When we are possessed of a spirit of fault-finding, we may know that we are not sanctified. The preaching is n't right; the singing is n't right; everything is wrong. I met one of this character once, and he was full of complaints. The church had grown cold, had become too formal, had lost its spirituality, every thing was going wrong. On inquiry, I ascertained that the church was in a flourishing condition, and said brother had not been to prayer-meeting or the Lord's table for more than six months.

We may know that we are not sanctified when we are disposed to give the Lord the poorest we have; when we are willing only to give the Lord our superfluity. "Yes, I guess I can attend that meeting, because I have nothing else to do." "Yes, you may put me down for a dollar; I can spare that and not feel it."

I was once steward in a church, where it was customary to take up a collection every Sunday. The collections were a curiosity. Coppers battered, and currency tattered, brass buttons, etc., etc. Anything was good enough for the Lord. I knew a good brother; he was a mechanic; he invariably had a new bank bill for the Lord's treasury. He laid such aside for that purpose. I believe he was a sanctified man. Deacon Brown was a well-to-do farmer, and kept quite a number of cows. He had a poor neighbor, called John, who was in the habit of calling every morning for some milk. One morning the deacon picked out a cow, and said, "John, drive that cow home." As may be expected, John was glad and thankful; but he hadn't gone far before the deacon called out, "John, drive that cow back." John obeyed, not knowing what it meant; but he soon found out, when the deacon said, "John, take your pick out of these cows. I am not going to lend the Lord the poorest cow I've got." I believe the deacon was a sanctified man.

I'll give my best to Jesus,
Because I love him best;
I know, though poor the offering,
He'll accept it with the rest.

"For this is the will of God, even your sanctification."

LITTLE THINGS.

Perhaps as we pursue our daily avocations, and are engrossed with the perplexing cares of this busy world, we lose sight, in a measure, or attach no value to the many little deeds, or words, which form such a large part in the happiness or misery of human existence. When we read of some great exploit, or heroic act, we are struck with admiration for one, who, rising above his fellows in the scale of disinterestedness, sacrifices himself for the good of others. But who amongst us can estimate, the value of one little word or deed of kindness. It has soothed many a weary, troubled heart, and caused the eye to brighten, dimmed with tears, inspiring with fresh courage the despairing one, as he toils on in his pilgrimage through this wilderness of woe. We see that poor invalid lying day after day on a bed of suffering, longing so wistfully for the rest, which comes not to him. Perhaps at this moment a little child enters the room, and places in his hand only a flower; but as he gazes upon it, his mind reverts to the years that are gone, when in the joyousness of youth, he rambled among green fields and gardens filled with flowers of many tints, scattering their fragrance all around. For the time, the affliction and pain are forgotten, and the heart is made to rejoice, and the spirit is calmed to rest. It was a little act, and yet methinks not too small to escape the eye of that great and mighty One, who has said that not a sparrow can fall to the ground without his notice, and who numbers the very hairs of our heads.

Then, again, the word spoken in season, to one bowed down it may be with some trial, known only to himself, or his Father in heaven; a grief too sacred to be revealed to human ears. How little we know, as the word of sympathy falls from our lips, what a blessing it confers to that burdened heart; and how it will be treasured up in the memory while life lasts. Could we realize, indeed, what great results may spring from little acts of neglect, would we not endeavor to watch for every opportunity to scatter along the pathway of life, those words and deeds of love which will cheer the heart, and lighten the burden of earth's sorrowing ones, and be a source of rejoicing to ourselves as we are nearing the borders of the tomb? We have a friend separated from us by hundreds of miles. We wait patiently for some word to reach us of his welfare; but time passes on, and yet not a line has been received. We wonder at his silence, and sometimes the thought crosses our minds that he has forgotten us, or thinks lightly of our friendship. The old adage, "out of sight out of mind," seems to be true in our case. This, some may deem of trivial importance; but how many friends have become estranged, and now look coldly upon each other, by this little act of neglect. We should indeed prize highly a true friend, and not in any way grieve or wound him, knowing that a brother offended is harder to be won than the taking of a city. How small are the raindrops; and yet as they descend in gentle showers upon the parched earth, who does not bless the great Creator for his goodness towards the children of men. The little streamlet, as it flows silently on till it reaches the great waters, is performing a mission of love not surpassed by the mighty ocean. So shall eternity alone reveal the vast importance of little things, to which few in this life scarcely ever give a thought. But as we reflect seriously on the subject, may it be our constant aim, in our homes, among our friends, and also with those we meet in our daily walks, ever to be ready to do an act of kindness, or speak a word of consolation, giving heed to that which we in our blindness or ignorance call "little things."

COMMENTS OF MATTHEW HENRY.
2 PET. 3: 1-5.—No. 2.

(4) There is the falshood of their argument detected, whereas they confidently had said, there had not been any change from the creation; the apostle puts us in remembrance of a change already past, which in a manner does equal that which we are called to expect and look for, which was the drowning of the world in the days of Noah. This these scoffers had overlooked. They took no notice of it, though they might have known it; yet this they willingly are ignorant of. Verse 5. They choose to pass it over in silence, as if they had never heard or known any thing of it. If they knew it, they did not like to retain it in their knowledge. They did not like to receive this truth in the love of it; neither did they care to own it. Note, it is hard to persuade men to believe what they are not willing to find true. They are ignorant in many cases, because they are willing to be ignorant. They do not know, because they do not care to know. But let not sinners think that such ignorance as this will be admitted as an excuse for whatever sin it may betray them into. They who crucified Christ did not know who he was; for had they known, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. 1 Cor. 2: 8. But though ignorant, they were not therefore innocent. Their ignorance itself was a sin—willing and willful ignorance; and one sin can be no excuse for another. So it is here. Had these known of the dreadful vengeance with which God swept away a whole world of ungodly wretches at once, they would not only have scoffed at his threatenings of any after equally terrible judgment. But here they were willingly ignorant. They did not know what God had done, because they had no mind to know it.

Now, therefore, we shall proceed to consider the representation which the apostle here lays down, both of the destruction of the old world by water, and that which does await this present world at the final conflagration. He mentions the one as what God has done to convince and persuade us the rather to believe, that the other both may be and will be.

And first, we begin with the apostle's account of the destruction which has once already come upon the world. Vers. 5, 6—"By the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water, whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished." Originally, the world was otherwise situated. The waters were most wisely divided at the creation, and most beneficially for us. Some of the waters had proper repositories above the firmament, here called the heavens, as it is also in Gen. 1: 8; and others under the firmament, gathered together unto one place. There was then both sea and dry land; a commodious habitation for the children of men. But now, at the time of the universal deluge, the case is strangely altered. The waters which God had divided before, and assigned to each part their convenient receptacles, now does he in anger throw together again in an heap. He breaks up the fountains of the great deep, and throws open the windows; i. e., the clouds of heaven (Gen. 7: 11), till the whole earth was overflowed with water, and not a spot upon the highest mountain but what was fifteen cubits under water. Gen. 7: 20. Thus did he make known at once his terrible power and his fierce anger, and made an end of a whole world at once. "The world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished." v. 6.

Is not here a change, and a most awful change? And then it is to be observed that all this was done by the word of God. It was by his powerful word that the world was made at first, and made in so commodious and beautiful a frame and order. Heb. 11: 3. He said, "Let there be a firmament," etc. Gen. 1: 6, 7. And, "Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place," etc. Vers. 9, 10. Thus "He spake, and it was done." Ps. 33: 9. Thus says our apostle—"By the word of God the heavens were of old [i. e., at the first creation], and the earth standing out of the water and in the water." Nor was it only the first frame and order of the world that is here said to be by the word of God; but the after confusion and ruin of the world, as well as the utter destruction of its inhabitants, was also by the same word. None but that God that stretched out the heavens and laid the foundation of the earth could destroy and overthrow such a vast fabric at once. This was done by the word of his power, and it was also done according to the word of his promise. God had said that he would destroy man, even all flesh, and that he would do it by bringing a flood of waters upon the earth. Gen. 6: 7, 13, 17. This was the change which God had before brought upon the world, and which these scoffers had overlooked; and now we are to consider, in the second place, what the apostle says of the destructive change which is yet to come upon it.

"The heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Pet. 3: 7. Here we have an awful account of the final dissolution of the world, and which we are yet more nearly concerned in. The ruin that came upon the world and its inhabitants by the flood, we read and hear and think of with concern; although those who were swept away by it were such as we never knew; but the judgment here spoken of is yet to come, and will surely come, though we know not when, nor upon what particular age or generation of men, and therefore we are not and can not be sure that it will not come or happen in our own times; and this makes a very great difference, though it should be admitted that we are equal in every other respect, which yet must not be allowed (for there were some, though very few, who escaped that deluge; but not one can escape this conflagration); besides that we were not in reach of the one, but we are not sure that we shall not be included in the other calamity. Now, therefore, to see the world to which we belong destroyed at once—not a single person only, not a particular family only, nor yet a nation (even that which we are most nearly interested in and concerned for), but the whole world,—I say, sinking at once, and no ark provided, no possible way left of escape for any one from the common ruin; this makes a difference between the desolation that has been, and what we yet are to expect. The one is already past, and never to return upon us any more; for God has said expressly that there shall never any more be a flood to destroy the earth. Gen. 9: 11-15. The other is still behind, and as certain to come as the truth and power of God can make it. The one came gradually upon the world, and was growing upon its inhabitants forty days before it made an utter end of them. Gen. 7: 12-17. The other will come upon them swiftly and all at once. 2 Pet. 2: 2. Besides that there was in that overthrow, as we have said, a few who did escape; but the ruin which does yet await this world, whenever it comes, will be absolutely a universal one; not any part but what the devouring flame will seize upon; not a sanctuary left any where for the inhabitants to flee to; not a single spot in all this world where any one of them can be safe. Thus whatever differences may be assigned between that destruction of the world and this here spoken of, do indeed represent the approaching as the most terrible judgment; yet that the world has once been destroyed by a universal deluge, does render it the more credible that it may again be ruined by a universal conflagration.

Let, therefore, the scoffers, who laugh at the coming of our Lord to judgment, at last consider that it may be. There is nothing said of it in the word of God but what is within reach of the power of God. And though they still should laugh, they shall not put us out of countenance; we are well assured that it will be so because he has said it, and we can depend upon his promise. They "do err, not knowing [at least not believing] the Scriptures, nor the power of God"; but we know, and we do or ought to depend upon both. Now that which he has said, and which he will certainly make good, is, that the heavens and the earth which are now, which we are now related to, and which still subsist in all the beauty and order in which we see them, and which are so agreeable and useful to us, as we find they are; they are kept in store, not to be what earthly minds would wish to have them, treasures for us; but to be what God will have them, in his treasury securely lodged and kept safe for his purposes, it follows they are reserved unto fire. Observe, God's following judgments are more terrible than those which went before. The old world was destroyed by water, but this is reserved unto fire, which shall burn up the wicked at the last day; and though this seems to be delayed, yet as this wicked world is upheld by the word of God, so it is only reserved for the vengeance of Him to whom vengeance belongs; who will at the day of judgment deal with an ungodly world according to their deserts; for the day of judgment is the day of the perdition of ungodly men. They who now scoff at a future judgment shall find it a day of vengeance and utter destruction. Beware, therefore, of being among those scoffers. Never question but what the day of the Lord will come. Give diligence, therefore, to be found in Christ, that it may be a time of refreshment and day of redemption to you, which will be a day of indignation and wrath to an ungodly world.

IS METHODISM BECOMING UN-METHODISTICAL?

The Chicago Pulpit, a periodical which combines pungent and timely editorials with the republication of the pulpit eloquence of Chicago, is inclined to the belief that Methodism is, to some extent, losing its characteristics. The Pulpit says:—

"Is there not a decline of Methodism in Chicago and in all our large cities? Where is the fervor and power that used to characterize the meetings of Methodists? One can hardly tell the difference now between a Methodist congregation and a Presbyterian or Congregational. We look in vain to see them bend the knee in prayer, and listen but do not hear the hearty 'Amen,' and 'Bless God!' of the deacons. Has power and popularity robbed them of their old time characteristics, and we may expect that within the the next half century there will be need for another Wesley in the very church which he founded? It seems to be the destiny of sects and denominations to outgrow and discard the individualities of their founders and finally lose themselves in the common religious sentiment of the age. New sects seem to have a mission—that of bringing to notice neglected truths and forgotten views of Christianity. That done, they sink back to the common level of the religious world, cherishing the memory of the old mission as a common bond."

The thought occurs to us whether the foregoing remarks may not have some application to us as a people. "Where is the fervor and power that used to characterize the meetings" held twenty-five and thirty years ago? What has become of those hearty "Amens," and other earnest expressions that indicated hearts warm with the love of God? Is there not occasion for a careful examination to see whether there is not a drifting away from the power of godliness into formalism? There is a special danger of this in these last days. Let us not be among the number who "sink back to the common level of the religious world." Our position, as a people, should be on the highest plane of Christian experience, enjoying the full power of the gospel, shining as a city upon a hill. Every one looking for the coming of Christ should be dead to the world, and entirely consecrated to the Lord. The people expect more of us than of any others and they ought not to be disappointed in their expectations. If we have more light and truth we ought to live better than those who are not so highly favored. Where much is given much will be required. We cannot deny but that we have received great light. We must let it shine in order to keep it; but sound doctrine without holiness will not save us. The Lord does not give light to be put under a bushel. If we do not let it shine, we must not expect any more.

Many receive rich and special blessings, but do not tell of it to the glory of the Lord; and hence fall back again into condemnation. Like nine of the ten lepers who were cleansed by the Savior, they do not return to give him glory. As a good Bro. said, when asked how to keep the blessing of perfect love; "you must give it away;" by which he meant, live it, and tell of it to the glory of God. If any one is enabled to rise to higher ground in divine life, it pleases the Savior to have us tell others of it, and try to persuade them to come up higher. If the young convert refuses to tell what the Lord has done for him, and endeavors to live a private religion, keeping it concealed from his friends and neighbors, he will soon wither like a branch severed from a tree; so it will be when we consecrate all to Christ, and receive in return perfect love, and full assurance of our acceptance; if we refuse to let it be known, lest some should speak of us reproachfully, and perhaps shun our society, sneering at the idea of "holiness," or entire "sanctification, condemnation and the loss of the perfect peace will follow. We believe there are no two doctrines so hostile to Satan's interests as holiness, and the unconscious state of man in death. Where these prevail, he is a defeated foe. Let us do all in our power to hold up these great truths, in connection with the evidence that Jesus is soon coming to set up his heavenly kingdom, and destroy all the wicked. These great truths should be published everywhere. Keep them before the people. They are becoming more and more important as we approach the end of this dispensation. By advocating these, we may make ourselves exceedingly unpopular among the mass of professors of a religion, that does not keep them from fretting and scolding in their families; backbiting their neighbors, and speaking evil one of another; pride, selfishness, hatred, variance, grudging, deceit, laciviousness, and other evil things; but if we would be free in Christ, we must overcome all these things, and be willing to suffer reproach for his sake, as we stand up in defense of a pure-hearted religion, that does not allow sin to reign in our mortal bodies. Rom. 6: 12. The time has fully come when all those who wish to be ready for the coming of Christ should sanctify themselves entirely to his service, and then they will enjoy the life and power of godliness. Nothing short will fit us for his appearing.

These are "perilous times." It is time to trim our lamps, and see that they are filled with oil, for soon we may expect to see our coming King. Let us not be found among the foolish virgins, destitute of the Holy Spirit, represented, as we believe, by the oil in the lamps. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9. No evil thing can come out of a clean heart.

MARBLEHEAD.—The tent-meetings on the Common at Marblehead, Mass., have been well attended by attentive and intelligent audiences. It is believed that much good has been accomplished by the faithful labors of Brn. Morrell, Boutell, and others. Several members of different churches have become deeply interested.

CONCORD.—We spent a pleasant day with the church in Concord, N. H., July 21st. The meeting was held in Eagle Hall. Large and attentive audiences were present. The Lord has done a glorious work in Concord through the labors of Brn. Hook, Lutz, and others, during the past few months.

CAMPMEETINGS.—Our readers will find some excellent thoughts and suggestions in this paper from Bro. Ross, concerning campmeetings. We are rejoiced to find the feeling expressed by our dear Bro. is taking possession of other minds. We believe it is from the Lord. Cherish it, cultivate it, and let it shine to the glory of God. Our expectations are high in favor of blessed meetings this year. We are looking for a new era to dawn. The time has come to make special preparation for the coming of Christ. Let holiness be our motto.

SANCTIFICATION.—Our readers will find an excellent article on "sanctification," from Bro. Geo. Thomson. Let all aim to occupy the highest position in Christian life that can be attained in this world. None should be satisfied with the "lukewarm" state, because it is not pleasing to the Lord. We fear but few are aware of what "great peace" they might enjoy, if they would consecrate all to Jesus.

A SPIRIT'S PROPHECY.

In a recent number of the Religio Philosophical Journal, we find the following editorial note:—

"It is doubtless a fact that a certain medium recently publicly announced that Chicago was to be submerged with water, and a portion of it would sink on or before the tenth day of July next. We are advised that certain persons, believing the tale, have left the city, to escape the calamity.

Fanatics are found among Spiritualists, as well as in other circles of religionists; and that will always be the case until they get rid of the nations of an angry God and a cunning Devil, who, severally, are watching opportunities to vex and harrass mortals. Good common sense is the only remedy necessary. Many who believe that Chicago is to be submerged and sunk before the tenth day of July next will, by virtue of the rule that extremes right themselves, be a little wiser by the next eleventh of July."

This is a sample of the prophecies which spirits give through their mediums. To day is the 19th of July, and we have not heard that Chicago has been covered with water. We have heard of many prophecies of the spirits, which are now past the time when they should be fulfilled, which have all been failures. They have given a multitude of similar false prophecies, clearly showing that they are no more reliable than the ever-changing wind. The head of such a system might well be called the "false prophet."

THEOLOGY APPLIED.

A little girl was rebuked by her mother for her fondness for killing flies. The little one had acquired great dexterity in this employment, and was so much occupied in it, that the parent found she was growing into a state of cruelty. Calling the child to her side one day, she said, in a sad tone, "Mary, dear, don't you know that God loves the little flies?" Mary seemed to bear the words as though they suggested a great many new ideas. She stood by her mother's side for some time in thoughtful sadness, and at length walked slowly up to the window, where a bewildered fly was humming and buzzing about on the pane. She watched it lovingly for some time, and then, almost too full of grief to speak plainly, she began to utter carressing words. "Duz ee know dat Dod luves oo? Doz oo luve Dod?" Here she extended her hand fondly toward the insect, as if to stroke away the terror that she felt she had inspired, "Doz oo want to see Dod? Well—in a tone of intense love and pity, at the same time putting her finger on the fly, and softly crushing it against the glass—"well, oo shall."

Perhaps all may not see the point. It is this: The little girl had been taught that when we die, we then go to live with God in heaven. When she learned that God loved "the little flies," she was anxious to know if they loved him; and having satisfied her mind on this point, see killed the fly so that it could go and see God.

THEOLOGY OF SPIRITUALISM.

It is so well known, we hardly need to say that the theology of Spiritualism is entirely opposed to the theology of the Bible. No two systems can be further separated from each other. Says the "Religio-Philosophical Journal," May 25th, 1872:

"Old Jewry succumbed to the followers of the medium who rode bare-backed into Jerusalem on a stolen ass! Old theology is now trembling and aghast at the stalwart growth of the intruder, born at Hydesville in that outcast family of Methodist sisters, young girls of the Fox family—not the Foxes that trouble A. A. W., of the American Spiritualist, so distressingly, but another family, of beautiful little witches—quite likely very much like the little Witch of Endor, whose behest the good old Samuel so readily and willingly obeyed."

This same editorial article admits that the editor does not believe in a "Personal God and Devil," nor that the word of God is "infallible," neither in the fall of man, or the flood, or the plan of salvation through Christ. It manifests a very bitter spirit towards sacred things; showing a real Satanic spirit towards what christians love best.

THE DESTINY OF MAN.

BY WM. ERWIN.

This is a valuable book of 312 octavo pp. The writer endeavors to bring forth all that he finds in the Bible relating to the destiny of the wicked. He shows beyond all controversy that man is mortal, and that the wicked will be utterly destroyed at the day of judgment. This work should have a wide circulation. Price $1.50; gilt, $2.00, postpaid.

MUSIC.—We have just received a sheet of new music from Bro. Geo. E. Lee, entitled, "Songs of Rejoicing," containing seven pieces of music, for 20 cts. For sale at the Crisis office. Bro. Lee has excellent musical taste and talent. Some of our best songs are from him.

BRO. WM. WILLCUTT, Plainfield, Mass., says there is a little company there of between twenty and thirty, and wishes some of the preaching brethren would find their way there, and give them the sincere milk of the word.

THE DEDICATION at Bath, Me., took place the 21st inst., instead of the 28th, as advertised.

WHAT WE MOST NEED.—We have a bountiful store of truth, and are ready to cope with the fables of the age. What we most need just now as a people, is not more light, so much as more consecration to God, by which we shall be made fully ready for the kingdom, and also be prepared to make the light we already have more effective. Our efforts will prove more efficient when our affections are fully given to Christ. It is duty to exalt truth over fables, but first be sure to exalt Christ high in our affections. Hold the truth high, but hold its sacred Author higher. We want a new baptism of perfect love to fit us for our special mission. Let us have it without delay. W. S.

SMUTTY-MOUTHED MINISTERS.—Who are they? Those who destroy much of the good they might otherwise do by indulging in obscene talk before members of the church and outsiders. Confidence is impaired in them, and the impression irresistibly fastens itself upon the minds of many, that if such a filthy stream flows from the mouth, there must be rottenness in the heart. "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth." "Let your speech be with grace,"—not with filthy words. As ministers of Christ, what we are in the desk, let us be in our private visits among the people. W. S.

"BE YE CLEAN."—Under the Levitical arrangement, the command of Jehovah to the priests was: "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." Is the Lord any less anxious to behold purity in the ministry now than formerly? And cannot ministers accomplish much more good by lifting the standard of holiness higher—higher in their own lives, as well as in their preaching? A "clean" ministry will help elevate the church in spirituality, while a ministry gloated with theological wrangling, though holding the truth, will rob the church of vital godliness. W. S.

BRO. BOWMAN'S MISSION.—I trust that Bro. Bowman's mission North will not be fruitless. I fear our people are not half awake to the necessities of the South, and opportunities of permanently planting the gospel of the kingdom there. An appreciation of these items seems wanting, and I hardly know how to obviate this difficulty so effectually as to have them visit the South as I have done, and see for themselves. Then they would feel and act. Who will act without this? W. S.

NOTE FROM A SOUTH. MINISTER.

This minister is to hold a public discussion on the kingdom, and another on immortality.

ELD. WM. SHELDON:—Dear Bro., I hope you will not become offended at my troubling you to ask your views on Matt. 23: 13. In what sense could those Pharisees shut up the kingdom of heaven, when it was not in existence as a whole? The following note will show you what I have to meet in debate. It is from an old brother, who has lately embraced the truth through my preaching. He says:—

"ELD. ——: Dear Sir:—This is to inform you that Mr. J. is going to school two months to a board of the best Campbellite preachers that they can produce, so he can succeed in the debate between you and him. They also intend to have the advantage in the judges. I want you to get a man well versed in Scripture, that will be a proper judge of the argument. Yours, etc., H."

Thus you see that I stand alone, so far as human instruction is concerned, but my opponent is using his utmost exertion. Do pray for me that God may give me light in his word. There has been a sermon preached against my preaching by every minister near here; but, thank God, they do not injure the truth; and people will come to hear me, and some are becoming settled in the conviction that "these things are so." While some believe my report, others of my own name (Baptist) say I must not preach in their church meetings, lest I cause dissension among their brotherhood. Some say that at the Association in August they will exclude me. If they do, I feel sure they will lose two as truly noble and faithful little churches as ever met in his name; so with Bro. Peyton G. Bowman, I can exultingly say—amid all the scorn, persecution, and false accusation—Glory to God in the highest, the truth is spreading in my place of preaching. I try to preach regularly at four different points, and it is my soul's desire to continue; but I fear the financial pressure will compel me to seek some employment as a hireling in order to support my family; but I am sure the Lord will do right, and I feel to trust him; and let me live easy, or work hard, all my spare moments shall be spent in his service. Pray that he may open the way before me which now seems so gloomy. Hoping to hear from you immediately through the Crisis, I am yours in Christ.

P. S. Received those books. May God bless you for your kindness to me.

REPLY.

1. The so-called "Campbellite" view of the kingdom, which claims that it was set up on the day of pentecost, meets the same difficulty which you here suggest; for how could the Pharisees prevent men from entering the church-kingdom before it came into existence? Nor could they prevent them from entering a sky-kingdom on any other principle than they could prevent them from entering a kingdom to come—by perverting the way to the kingdom; or misguiding men. They shut men out of the kingdom by shutting them out of the path that leads to the kingdom. A parallel passage reads—"Ye have taken away the key of knowledge; ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered." Luke 11: 52. Peter used the keys of knowledge to make known the way to the kingdom, first to the Jews, and then to the Gentiles, called the "keys of the kingdom." But there is no way of opening or shutting a door directly into the kingdom, by man; but men can help or hinder others in their efforts to enter the kingdom, by leading them into the way that leads to the kingdom, or keeping them out of the way.

2. May God help this Bro. in his discussions and preaching, and open the way for him to keep in the field, and not have to let the truth suffer for need of a defender. If my purse were as large as my heart, I would keep him there at my own expense. W. S.

QUESTIONS AND REPLIES.

Will Bro. Sheldon give some light on the following through the Crisis:—Harmonize Matt. 24: 14, where it is stated, "This gospel shall be preached to all nations, then shall the end come," with Col. 1: 23; also Rom. 10: 18. I was cited to the above by a Universalist brother, who said if Christ told the truth in Matt. 24: 14, he must have come at the destruction of Jerusalem. Waiting for light, I remain yours, V. HUNT.

REPLY.

If Paul's statement, "Their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world," proves that Christ must come as soon as all nations had heard the gospel, instead of proving that he came at Jerusalem's destruction, they would prove that he came before that time, for these words were uttered a long time before that event. But mark! Christ locates this spread of the gospel after certain events that had not occurred at the time Paul wrote, such as (1) the rise of many false Christ's, beginning about A. D. 130, then saying, "The end is not yet." (2) After the rise of nation against nation, as witnessed in the breaking up of the Roman empire. (3) After a subsequent persecution, as witnessed under the papal supremacy—then comes this spread of the gospel meant by Christ, and it must stand long enough for a "witness." Let us give things their right location, and thus save confusion. W. S.

A QUERY FOR IMMATERIALISTS.—Why should we weep and mourn departed friends whom we have never yet seen, nor can see outside of the ghost kingdom? We only see the house they live in. V. HUNT.

REPLY.

Probably the mourning is for the house, because left tenantless. But the greater wonder is that so much desire is expressed to meet this departed tenant, inasmuch as they have never seen it, and would not know it if they were to see it; and whenever a person thinks he has seen one of this kind of persons, he is frightened. W. S.

DEDICATION.

A neat and commodious church, located in a fine rural district, on a charming spot of slight elevation, surrounded by an interested, intelligent, and Bible-loving community in the main, is that at West Parsonfield, Me., which on the 22d inst. was duly set apart for the worship of God by a union service of the several denominations, whose united efforts had reared the house. There were six ministers present, five of whom took part in the exercises in harmony and apparently good feeling; the effect of such a course was good, and will not be fruitless on all the large congregation who witnessed it. Bro. H. L. Hastings remained over the Sabbath, and preached during the day to a large and attentive congregation, to good acceptance. At the close of the day's meeting, the interest was such that it was deemed best to continue the meetings, which was done with a good interest prevailing throughout the entire series to the close, Friday evening. The church have reason to thank God for the work he has done and is still doing in their midst. No place within our knowledge has so many young people who are interested as there are here.

Let us be faithful in all things, dear children, for the Judge standeth at the door, and we ought to pass the time of our sojourn here in fear, and be careful that we have the Spirit of Christ, for without it we are none of his. If we have that, we shall be kind and long-suffering toward all men; not willing that any should perish, not even the most hardened sinner; even if he is our enemy, Jesus says love him. O for more of the Spirit of our Master that will cause us to help each other, and not destroy one of these little ones, who believe in Christ. CHAS. H. HURD.

HELP THE NEEDY.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ, scattered through the land:—Allow me through the Crisis to call your attention to our Sister Himes. She is houseless, and has three small children to support, and is in poor health. No matter how many friends we have, or how kind they may be, there is no place like home. The greatest trouble Bro. Edwin had was the fear of dying and leaving his wife and little ones without a home. He spent his life in the cause of Christ, and died and left them homeless. Will each of you lend a helping hand, to enable her to build a house at Norwood Park, or any other place she may choose. Let each one respond to the promptings of his or her heart, and send whatever that may dictate to Bro. Wm. Himes, at Norwood Park, Ill. I am sure there are enough who love the Lord and his children, to raise, say from four to five hundred dollars, which will be sufficient to build her a small but snug house. Remember, the Lord loveth a cheerful giver; and he that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord. I hope Bro. Fassett will see this and call the attention of friends in California to it. Your sister in Christ, HANNAH PATTEN.

MISSIONARY FAITH AND HOPE.—The Prophetic Times, in a notice of the death of J. H. Myers, an able minister and devoted missionary, shows that "he looked with intense longing and love for the second coming of the Lord, and that this hope was the sunshine of his life."

To present the actual attitude of such men to the missionary work, it adds that "two thirds of the missionaries in India are millenarians." They have learned the second advent in connection with their mission study and work; and this should arrest the attention of all the mission boards of Christendom. "The Lord cometh." J. B. COOK.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

NEW YORK A. C. CONFERENCE.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

This conference held its seventh annual meeting with the church in Springwater, June 13th to 17th, 1872. There was a large gathering of brethren and sisters, ministers and delegates, from various sections of the State, Pennsylvania and Canada; probably two hundred outside the valley were present.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISES. In some respects, we thought this the best meeting we ever attended. The incense of prayer and of rapturous song rose continuously for three days, in mingled melody of praise, up from that romantic valley. It electrified all hearts, distanced the surrounding hills, scaled the overlying clouds, and reached the awful presence of Him whose eyes are over the righteous, and whose ears are ever open to their cry. And copious showers of divine grace, returning, refreshed and watered well the place. We heard the "golden bells," we ate of the party-colored "pomegranates," and had, indeed, the blest assurance that our High-Priest, once dead, is alive and liveth forevermore.

There were five prayer and social meetings during the session, in all of which the time was well improved, chiefly with short and earnest exhortations. The soon coming of Christ, although constantly recognized, was not made the burden of any, nor yet (and I record this with regret) was it made the subject of a special discourse. There were one hundred and seventy-five testimonies given during the morning and evening meetings on Sunday, and frequent songs that made the very valley ring. The preaching mostly was excellent and well timed, had the time of the advent received its due share of attention. There were eight sermons in all, respectively, by Brn. Cogswell, Smith, Low, Miles, Taylor, Sister Stoddard, and Brn. Whitmore and Fenn.

BUSINESS MEETINGS. Friday, ten A. M. The President in the chair. The Secretary's report was read and approved. The Treasurer handed in the following:—

Bro. Newell reported the new church at LeRoy, thirteen members, for admission. Their delegate was accordingly received. The election of officers was made the special order for nine A. M., and the Essays on the Ordination of Women, arranged for last session, for eleven o'clock A. M., tomorrow.

REPORTS.

Preachers. The following preachers reported their labors for the last quarter: Brn. H. H. Brown, Greenman, Miles, Fenn, Vreeland, and Low. Adjourned. Five o'clock afternoon. Report continued by Brn. Hobbs, Newell, Moore, Smith, Gove, Sr. Stoddard, Allen, Cogswell, and Stevens.

The Secretary presented two hundred copies of the "Manual," ordered to be published last session—the expense, $20. They were received, and the Treasurer directed to pay the bill. Letters were read from Brn. J. H. Lutteton and Carlton, and Sr. Sarah Rogers, of Syracuse. Communications were received from the Hoosac Valley, Southern N. Y., and and Northern Pennsylvania conferences, declining to assist in a general campmeeting this season. William E. Brown reported for the campmeeting committee, recommending the Oaks' Corners camp-ground. Adjourned.

Saturday, nine o'clock A. M. The election of officers the special order. The balloting developed the following ticket: President—M. R. Miles, Wolcott. Vice President—Wm. A. Fenn, Rochester. Secretary—Wm. E. Brown, So. Butler. Treasurer—R. C. Brown, So. Butler. The old Board of Trustees—D. Cogswell, Dansville; Aaron Riggs, Lockport; John F. Westcott, So. Butler; John S. Beeman, Honeoye; N. T. Withington, Springwater; B. C. Simonds, Darien; and N. McCulloch, Rochester, were unanimously re-elected. Bro. Cogswell, on account of his poor health, offered his resignation as director of the N. Y. State Mission Tent, which was accepted. It was then voted that Wm. E. Brown take the position, with full charge, the present season. All communications relating to meetings should therefore be directed to him, at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y.

SPIRIT OF BUSINESS MEETINGS.

There came with the delegation over the Livingston hills "a little cloud like a man's hand," or, with varying proportions as seen through varied lenses of individual hopes and fears. The cloud was not one "without water," but the rain fell gently, if it wet, and was unaccompanied by any of the characteristic phenomena of storms. Not an incendious word, not a rancorous sentence, escaped the lips (we know not the hearts, nor can interpret the thoughts; God is judge) of those that felt, some more and some less keenly, the issues of the occasion. Perhaps no deliberative body ever met and handled so delicate and important a question of differences, with less manifest feeling on the part of the whole, and with calmer countenances and surer signs of purity of purpose in rendering judgment, than was indicated by this assembly in handling the hydra-headed question called "Woman's Rights." Under discussion for two previous sessions, it had been referred to this meeting for final action. At eleven o'clock, the essays before mentioned being the special order, Sr. E. S. Jennings was introduced and announced her intention to support the affirmative of the following question:—"Do the Scriptures recognize women as eligible to all the positions in the church that they accord to men?" The essay was well written, and occupied three quarters of an hour in the reading. Bro. Whitmore followed in an exhaustive argument upon the negative. His essay was very elaborately prepared, and showed that much time and ability had been taxed in its production. The reading occupied an hour and some minutes. An intelligent audience of about three hundred people listened with intense interest and almost breathless attention to both papers. It had been agreed between the essayists that the affirmative should reply in a speech of ten minutes, but this was wholly unknown to the chairman and others, and no reply being offered, the vote was immediately taken—according to an understanding that there should be no general debate, squarely upon the issue—Is the question sustained, yea or nay? The vote was unanimously, Nay.

[It is quite improbable in the agitation of such a subject, involving the interests of personal ambition and aspiration, that human judgment will not err in one way or the other, or both, and thus grievances arise. But it is now earnestly hoped that should there exist, as the result of this action of conference, one single unkind feeling on the part of any single individual, in the conference or in the church, that it will be banished immediately and forever; that the position taken by conference, and its right to take such position, will be recognized and respected; and that we will continue to prosecute the work in which we have thus far so signally enjoyed the blessing of God, with a closer union, and with renewed zeal and love.]

Five o'clock P. M. Another session was held at this hour. There was some discussion on the question of campmeeting, which resulted in a resolution to have none this year—the vote standing 16 to 13. A vote of thanks was tendered the good citizens of Springwater for their kind entertainment. The hour for religious services having arrived, we were obliged to adjourn. But the President called another session at Six o'clock Sunday P. M. After some discussion relative to districting the conference, for want of time to perfect the arrangement, it was voted to remain together another quarter; and finally the reason for districting, viz: the large attendance at our quarterly meetings, making it difficult for the churches to entertain them, was urged in support of a general campmeeting in connection with our next quarterly. Bro. C. W. Low, then, having voted in the majority before, moved a reconsideration, which resulted in a strong vote for a campmeeting, and the appointment of an executive committee (before mentioned). Bro. Gove recommended to the committee the Fairport camp-ground. Bro. W. Vreeland was appointed to deliver the next quarterly address; Bro. J. E. Wells his alternate.

The following ministers were present during this conference and had their certificates renewed (no charges being preferred against any in the examination of standing), viz:—J. H. Whitmore, J. E. Wells, E. F. Sergisson, S. C. Gove, B. P. Stevens, M. R. Miles, W. A. Fenn, W. Vreeland, C. W. Low, A. C. Newell, W. J. Hobbs, P. A. Smith, D. Cogswell, C. P. Greenman, A. P. Moore, H. H. Brown, I. Allen, and J. W. Taylor.

The following ministers were absent, and neither, excepting the first, reported by letter as required. They however were voted renewed certificates (which are prepared and can be had on application to the Secretary), viz: J. H. Lutteton, C. H. Williams, Wm. Ingmire, C. F. Sweet, Wm. Morrell, and J. T. Oagley. Srs. L. M. Stoddard and E. S. Jennings were present and were also presented with certificates. Below is a copy, in which it will be noticed that it differs from the certificates of a "regularly ordained minister" only in the omission of those terms, and those qualifying "to administer the ordinances of the house of God, and solemnize marriages according to the laws of the State," etc.:—

"To all whom it may concern: This is to certify, that Sr. ——— is a licensed preacher in good standing in the A. C. Conference of New York; and she is hereby recommended to the church and to the world as a teacher of the word, worthy of their confidence and sympathy.

Done by order of conference, ———."

The celebration of the Lord's Supper Sunday afternoon was a very impressive occasion. It was good to be there. A large company united in commemorating the death upon Calvary, and anticipating the future glorious coming of the crucified but risen Jesus. After the social meeting Sunday evening, nine or ten rose to confess Christ, and as a first step in his service. The meeting had developed such an interest that the pastor, Bro. Hobbs, engaged Sr. Stoddard and Bro. Smith to tarry a few evenings and carry on the meetings. Good results are very promising. Few of us will soon forget the annual meeting at Springwater. Our prayers were answered. To God be all the glory.

WM. E. BROWN, Secretary.

BRO. S. PARKER writes from Wakefield, Mass.:—"I have been a reader of your paper for a number of years. It is as good as a sermon to me every week. It is cheap preaching. I have been a tobacco chewer for forty years, and have left it off a number of times, but I resolved by the help of God that I would not use it any more. It is two years and a half since I have used it."

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. R. Fassett.

BRO. GRANT:—By the urging of Brn. Wilson and Reed, we have come down into the Santa Clara Valley to see whether the climate will not better agree with our health. We find that we are here shut in from the daily coast winds and sand storms of San Francisco, and the fogs and winds further north, which have caused an inflammation of my eyes and otherwise affected the health of both myself and wife. The climatic changes we have been called to experience by a removal to this coast (the greatest we have ever experienced), together with our age, have been quite severe upon us; and my own health, which has always been vigorous, has suffered considerably, especially my eyes. We have concluded on a change of our location here, and a few months trial will determine as to our duty of staying on this coast, or a return home. The churches that paid the expenses of our journey here, and have contributed for our comfort so liberally since, wish us to remain on this coast, and we owe them an obligation; and Brn. Reed and Wilson, with other friends, wish us not to leave until further effort is made into other regions, where the truth has not been preached. If, therefore, our health and a restored vision are favored by a kind providence, we shall remain here for the present. Our P. O. address is O. R. Fassett, Santa Clara, Cal.

From Bro. T. Rines.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still striving to preach the coming and kingdom of our blessed Master, and by his help stand firm at my post, pressing the battle for eternal life. I have just returned from a four weeks tour in the northern part of this State, where I have been trying in my feeble way to get the people ready for the coming of the Lord. On my way I visited Readfield, where I have labored a part of the time for a year; and where I trust the Lord has blessed my labors to the good of the people. Some sinners have been converted, and some backsliders have been reclaimed, and a general interest is manifested to hear the truth. From R. I went to Farmington, and preached in the school-house near the Fairbanks' Mills, to an attentive audience.

Next to Salem, where I preached Wednesday evening in the Town-house, Friday evening in the school-house, and all day Sunday and in the evening at the Town-house. Although there are but few of our faith in the place, yet we had large and attentive audiences, and great interest was manifested by the people in hearing the word. Here is where Bro. Geo. Blackwell lives, a good and worthy brother, and preacher of the faith once committed to the saints. I preached also five times in Freeman, to interesting congregations.

My next place of labor was in Rangley, up by the Lakes. This is an entirely new field of labor, as regards the doctrine we preach. There had been but one sermon preached in the place by those looking for the speedy coming of Christ. The people are mostly Methodists and Free Will Baptists. My first call was on the Methodist deacon. I told him my object in coming to the place, also my faith; and asked him if he thought we could get out a meeting that evening? He seemed pleased, and said he would do all he could to get out the people, and then directed me to a good home at Bro. Haynes', who is also a Methodist. I found a hearty welcome, and was cared for in the best manner. At five in the evening, I went to the hall, found a large gathering to hear the new preacher, and I never preached to a more attentive audience. At the close of the meeting, I told them if it was the wish of the people that I should remain with them through the week, and over the Sabbath, they might make it known by rising. Every one in the house arose. Accordingly, I preached evenings in the different districts, and all day Sabbath in the hall. In the evening we had a social meeting, and truly the Lord was in the place. There were fourteen testimonies, and a number became convinced that we had the truth. I took leave of them, after promising to make them another visit in September. May the blessing of the Lord be with them.

A word about the hall. It was fitted up for a union hall, free for any preacher to occupy without regard to sect, by Mr. Burke; and though he is not a professor himself, he refuses to let it for dances, shows, etc., thus rebuking some of those who profess to be followers of Christ.

Augusta, Me.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. C. C. MARSTON writes from Elida, Ill.:—"Our meeting at this place over the fourth of July was a most precious one. The Lord was in our midst by his Spirit to cheer our hearts, and to convince the ungodly. The meeting continued over the Sabbath. Sunday at noon it was my privilege to bury with Christ by baptism two happy converts. They came out of the water rejoicing. How blessed it is to 'follow' Jesus! At night, four united with the church, after which we sat around the table of the Lord and partook of the emblems of his death and sufferings. It was a solemn and glorious scene. The truth is spreading in all this region. Many are interested and searching to see if these things are so. The church has a prosperous Sabbath school, which is characterized by much interest. The prayer-meetings are well attended and most blessed seasons of grace. Praise God for his great goodness."

BRO. E. H. CARMAN writes from Peru, Neb.:—"Please send me the Crisis. I have seen a few copies of it, and cannot do without it; although I am poor in this world's goods, yet I hope to 'inherit all things' through Christ. I got hold of some books and tracts which I began to read to find out what this new and unscriptural doctrine was; for I had often heard it spoken against by other denominations, and in the bitterest terms. I began to read your books and search the Scriptures and history to see for myself; and to my surprise and joy I found it to be both ancient and scriptural. I have given the tracts and books to others with good results. Sunday I went to hear an educated minister preach. He said the kingdom of Christ was already set up, that the church was the kingdom, and that every man that belonged to the church was in the kingdom; and then said that man would receive his rewards and punishments when the sleeping millions came forth, when the world would be on fire; and told the congregation to seek for glory, honor, immortality and eternal life beyond the grave, at the resurrection; and then told them to so live that when they were laid low by the cold hand of death, their justified spirits might soar in triumph to the spirit-land, and bask in the sun-light of glory forever; and that he believed that his father and mother and two sisters were then pressing against the battlements of heaven, and beckoning for him."

Bro. W. Whipple writes from Ithaca, N. Y.:—"Dear Brethren—Permit me to request that some one of the preaching brethren may feel it their duty to come into this part of the State, after the various conferences are over, if convenient; if not, any time will do. My wife and I are anxious to become members of your church. We feel it our duty to be baptized, but cannot join an Orthodox church, if we are not baptized at all, with our present belief. Bro. C. F. Sweet, of Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y., lives about one hundred and thirty miles from here; M. R. Miles, Wolcott, Wayne Co., about sixty miles; Wm. Ingmire, Chenango Co., about forty-five miles; and D. Cogswell, Dansville, about eighty miles. Will some one of the above ministers please to think of this, and if they think it their duty to lend us a helping hand, they can address me at Ithaca, Tompkins Co., N. Y."

HAVE FAITH IN GOD.

A. A. HOYT.

Men are inclined to make faith a matter of theory, instead of practical reality. There are two kinds of faith; one simply theoretical, and the other living or practical. Living, scriptural faith is not a mere visionary, vapory principle, but that which takes hold on enduring, tangible, terra-firma foundation. Says Paul, in Heb. 11: 1—"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Theoretical or dead faith is no more than devils may have, for devils "believe and tremble," and even acknowledge Jesus to be the Holy One, the Son of the most high God; having power to torment and destroy them. Can men confess more, or in stronger terms? And yet devils are not saved, because their rebellious natures have no disposition to repent, and without repentance no man can be saved. Faith must have works, and real faith is manifest by the good works it produces, "for by their fruits ye shall know them."

We are commanded to be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving ourselves. We must not say, "Be ye warmed and filled," when we possess the very means to warm and fill. "For if any man be a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass. For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word, this man shall be blessed in his deed." Says one, How shall I get faith? We answer, You have not to get it, but to have it. It is a matter of your own controlling. Just believe in God; banish your idols, break away from the world; yield self, and trust fully in the Lord, and he will guide you with his council, and afterward receive you to glory. God has made the way possible, and the evidences are beyond all question. It only remains for us to say, "I believe, Lord, help thou my unbelief."

When the Spirit sent Philip to preach to the man of Ethiopia, he believed, was willing to comply with God's way of saving men, and wanted to be baptized. Says Philip, "If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest; and he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." He was then baptized, blessed of God, and went on his way rejoicing. When earthquake shocks loosed fetter-bands, burst prison doors, causing the jailor to tremble with penitential fear, and cry out from the depths of his soul, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Paul simply replied, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shall be saved." Christ himself declared that the poor, burdened, wrestling Publican in the temple was more justified than the ceremonial, sacrificing Pharisee with all his self-righteousness. Thus we may learn, that we have not to pass a formal ceremony of moralization to get faith, but simply believe what God says, and then act accordingly. We are commanded to examine and prove ourselves, whether we be in the faith or not. If we find ourselves doubting as to our future prosperity or safety, and borrowing trouble that weighs us down with gloom or fear, we may know we are not in the faith. Faith in God makes us rejoice even in adversity. Paul and Silas could pray and sing praises to God in the lone prison-house, with feet fast in the excruciating stocks, and backs all lashed to a gore with the persecutors' stripes. St. Andrew, as saith the historian, could preach salvation to a gazing, mocking multitude, he being filled with the Spirit, rejoicing in Christ's reedming blood, and his own present physical sufferings, while tied upon the executioner's cross of martyrdom; at the same time exclaiming from the depths of a full soul, "This is the happiest moment of my life." Thank God, such is faith.

"Lord, give me such a faith as this,
And then what e'er may come,
I'll taste e'en here the hallowed bliss
Of an eternal home."

Obituaries.

Sibley. Died at Sandy Hill, N. Y., July 4th, 1872, with tetanus-lockjaw, Austin S. Sibley, son of Elder A. W. Sibley, aged five years, eight months, and four days.

The cause of his death was jumping upon an iron rake, two of the teeth protruding nearly through one of his feet. Austin was an active, promising child, and his loss is deeply felt by the afflicted parents, but their sorrow is not without hope, looking to the glorious resurrection morn for an eternal reunion with their little one. He was a very great sufferer at times for two weeks. Once and again he would call upon his dear mother to sing to soothe his pain; but at last his strength failed, and his eyes were closed, and he sweetly sleeps his last sleep. The funeral was attended by the writer in the A. C. Chapel, a large attendance of sympathizing friends being present.

S. G. Mathewson.

Ward. Died in Worcester, Mass., Aug. 14th, 1871, Climena G., wife of William Ward, aged sixty-two years, and four months.

She had been a faithful follower of Jesus ever since she was eleven years old, and in 1842 was among the first to embrace the faith of the soon coming of the Lord. She fell asleep with the bright prospect of soon coming forth on the "resurrection morn," clothed with immortality and eternal life. At the funeral Eld. J. Couch spoke words of comfort from Prov. 14: 32—"The righteous hath hope in his death."

Hildreth. Died of consumption, at Athol Depot, Mass., June 27th, my wife, Lydia A. Hildreth, aged thirty-six years, seven months, and seventeen days.

She died a christian, with a bright hope of eternal life in the resurrection through Jesus Christ.

Samuel W. Hildreth.

Seavey. In Charlestown, on the 2d inst., after a long and painful illness, my dear wife, Mercy H. Seavey, aged fifty-one years, one month, and two days. Levi J. Seavey.

Adams. Died in Barnard, Vt., April 22nd, 1872, Edwin I. Adams, aged sixteen years and eight months. Jonas Adams.

Shaw. Died at his residence in Campton, N. H., June 21st, 1872, Asa Shaw, aged seventy-four years, three months, and eleven days.

He leaves an aged widow, besides a large circle of children and grand-children to mourn his loss. May God's sustaining grace be ever with the mourning family and friends, and prepare them all for the rest that remains for the people of God. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Job 14: 10, assisted by Eld. Daniel Batchelder.

H. C. Willoughby.

Garland. Died of consumption, in Rye, N. H., Edward L. Garland, aged fifty years and six months.

Bro. Garland experienced religion in 1839, and was baptized by Eld. Philbrick, and united with the Christian church, of which he remained a worthy member until death. Eight years ago he embraced the Advent faith, in which he closed his mortal journey, falling asleep in the full assurance of hope. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and children, who share with him the same blessed hope. May the brief separation to which they are subject be sanctified to their good. A. Ross.

Orton. Died at Glens Falls, N. Y., July 14th, 1872, Berton R. Orton, aged two years, six months, and seventeen days.

This little bud was plucked by death's ruthless hand just as it began to bloom; thereby causing Bro. and Sr. Orton to mourn; yet they do not do so without hope. A discourse was preached by the writer on the occasion from 2 Kings 4: 26. "It is well with the child." A. W. Sibley.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, July 18th. The latest accounts from Cherson report cholera to continue with unabated vigor. The first instance occurred on the 25th of May. At Kieff 2134 persons had been taken ill and 964 had died up to the 18th of June.

A Berlin correspondent of the Times says: The cholera is fast making its way from the interior of Russia to the Prussian frontier.

Madrid, July 19. And attempt was made at midnight last night to assassinate the King and Queen of Spain. One of the assassins was shot and two captured. There is intense excitement.

RUSSIA.

CHOLERA.

St. Petersburg, July 21st. The cholera epidemic is gradually making its way from the eastern provinces, and gaining a foothold in the central portions of the empire. The city of Moscow is now suffering from its ravages, and the disease there has assumed its most malignant form. The proportion of deaths to recoveries of those attacked is placed at eight to one. This terrible fatality has created a panic among the inhabitants, and thousands of the better classes are fleeing to Western Europe. In this city a few sporadic cases have appeared, and the authorities have taken the most rigid precautions to cut off communication between the capital and the infected districts.

New York, July 22. A Paris letter says it may be reliably asserted that Marshal McMahon has consented to accept the Presidency of France if Thiers resigns or dies.

Trade is stagnant in Paris. Thousands of shops are closed for a rent, and monetary crisis reigns.

Many of Thier's old friends are deserting him.

Coal Strike in Prussia.—Prussia is just now experiencing a first-class coal strike, the workmen in three of the greatest coal producing districts to the number of 25,000 having refused to work except at an advance rate of wages and a reduction of the hours of labor. The miners in adjoining districts, though strongly sympathizing with the movement, keep at work, though they threaten to suspend work should their employers sell coal to the inhabitants of the striking districts. This will compel the stoppage of a large number of factories and other establishments, and will throw many thousands of people out of work who have nothing to do with the "strike," directly or indirectly. A season of general distress is predicted and will undoubtedly follow.

The Position of French Political Parties. —A correspondent writing upon the uncertain state of things political at this present time in France, says, it would simply be impossible for a Bonapartist General, or, in fact, for a leader of any party or faction, to effect a coup d' etat without immediately preparing for a long and terrible civil war. Party spirit is running high; its fury has reached the army; and I am convinced that if another revolution should follow upon the present order of things, the regular troops would immediately divide into Republican and Bonapartist camps. The officers who would form part of the latter camp are aware of the danger, and are among the first to call for a plebiscite and to declare that, whatever may be the will of the country indicated by that means, they are ready to bow to the decree. "Out of the popular suffrage I came, by the popular suffrage I will go back," Napoleon III. is said to have written lately to one of his oldest servants; and this cry is echoed by all the Imperialists here. All parties appear to be "mobilising" in view of three eventualities: M. Thiers next resignation; the discharge of the war indemnity, with the consequent termination of M. Thiers' influence; and death of M. Thiers. In each of these three eventualities a dissolution of the Assembly is considered certain; a strong effort will then be made to counteract the Gambettists; and if this effort is successful, it will result in the re-election of Napoleon—such, at least, is the opinion of many of the men who are most in favor of establishing the Republic."

The Closing of the Churches.—It is becoming a serious question, in the opinion of the Watchman and Reflector, whether it is wise that so many of the houses of worship in the city should be closed during the summer months. The closing, it says, is for those who leave the city on their vacations; for the clergymen who need rest, and for those remaining at home whose consciences would drive them to church it it were left open. But no provision is made for the multitude who remain in the city. Is it right to deprive them of religious privileges because some are able to go to the country or the seaside? The tendency is to close the churches on too small pretexts.

In Brief.

—— There appears to be a murderous epidemic sweeping over the entire continent at present. Cases are reported from all parts of the compass. The latest comes from Quebec, where Captain Pelletro, of the bark Rivoli, struck the head of James Dillon from his body with one blow of a broad axe. Pelletro was arrested.——Furious hurricanes have swept the Eastern coast of Madagascar of late, causing a great deal of destruction. In some cases whole towns have been levelled to the ground.——There are seventeen newspapers in Japan, the youngest one having been started in April.——Chicago is about to run another tunnel under Lake Michigan, in order to increase its water supply.——The sentence of Rochefort has been commuted to banishment from France for life.——Austria, following the example of the other great European Powers, is vigorously reorganizing her army and training her troops.——Cholera has broken out in India in a manner to excite alarm.——The North Carolina crops promise finely. In some parts of the State they will be larger than for twenty years past.——A church in Philadelphia, on a recent Sunday, was ornamented with canary birds, in cages, which sang during the services. Anything for a novelty.——They had a waterspout in the vicinity of Denver, Colorado, on Tuesday, which overturned a carriage and drowned two girls named Vireden.——Recent heavy rains have caused the overflowing of the Alabama river and its tributaries, tearing up the railroad track, and destroying cotton and corn crops to the value of $2,000,000 or more.——The Church of Rome, counting from Peter down to Pius IX., reckons two hundred and fifty-seven Popes. Eighty-three of these, since their demise, have passed into sainthood in the Calendar.

A Bonfire of Bibles.—A correspondent writing to the Independent from Rome over the signature of "A Catholic," gives an account of the recent burning of Bibles by priests in Frescati, a town near Rome. During the last year missionaries have given away or sold many hundreds of copies of Bibles to the people of the town. The priests, finding it out, made it their mission to hunt them up, and when a sufficient number were found to burn them in the cathedral yard. One singular episode connected with the burning was, that the boys and street ragamuffins who witnessed the act, appeared to appreciate its impiety and stoned the priests who lighted the fire. A portrait of Victor Emmanuel was thrown on the heap of burning Bibles. The Jesuits of Rome combine treason to their king with treason to their God.

Advent Christian Association.

The annual meeting of this Society will be held upon the Springfield camp-ground, commencing Monday, Aug. 19th, at 4 o'clock P. M. As business of the greatest importance to all the churches is to be transacted at this meeting, every church should be represented by delegate. Every church shall be allowed one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members.

H. F. Carpenter, Secretary.

The meetings at Marblehead having closed, the Massachusetts tent is now ready for other places where it is desired. L. Boutell.

I hope to attend the campmeeting at Amboy, Ill., arriving about Sept. 10th. H. L. Hastings.

New York State Campmeeting.—The undersigned committee, appointed at the recent annual conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But, on account of other meetings being held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided on by conference. It will therefore commence August 10th, the Lord willing, and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind, and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to this feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in this State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, one mile and a half north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (direct) R. R., ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens agree to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cts. will be charged.

A boarding tent will be on the ground furnishishing potatoes, meat, bread, etc., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at 85 cts. per day to those who do not. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground. Let all come well supplied with over-coats, over-shoes, thick shawls, coverlids, straw and pillow ticks, etc., etc. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents. Let all desiring tents, correspond immediately (enclosing a stamp for the answer) with Bro. D. T. Cooper, 72 Mt. Hope Avenue, Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season.

Wm. E. Brown.
Sam'l H. Withington.
Perry M. Grinnell.

Campmeeting.—The R. I. and East Conn. Conference have voted to hold their annual campmeeting at Coventry Centre, to commence Saturday, Sept. 7th, and hold over Sabbath, the 15th. The camp-ground is on the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. R., and about eighteen miles from Providence. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents are requested to do so. All the lovers of the Lord are requested to attend this feast of tabernacles. Come with one united heart. Come in all the fullness of the gospel, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of our fellow men in these last moments of time. Particulars hereafter. E. R. Wood, for the Com.

Tent-Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent-meeting held at Elida, Ill., eight miles south west of Rockford, commencing Aug. 16th, and continuing over the 25th. Eld. W. L. Himes is expected to assist. Let all in the region come up to this meeting in the spirit of the Master, to labor for the salvtion of the perishing.

For the church, C. C. Marston.

Grove Meeting.—There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, July 28th, by Eld. A. Ross. If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Refreshments will be furnished by Mr. Smith, the proprietor, to all who wish.

S. O. Welch.

Special Notice.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, Saturday, Sept. 7th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Particulars hereafter. Eld. J. G. Smith, of Farmington, N. H., has the superintendence of the tent department. All wishing to rent or sell, hire or purchase tents, can correspond with him at that place. Prices should be stated. To save confusion, all who purpose to build permanent tents this year, whether they have spoken for a lot or not, are requested to notify Bro. Smith of the size of tent and location of lot by the first of August.

J. Couch, for the Committee.

Vermont Campmeeting.—We have leased the beautiful grounds at Bethel, and our annual camp will be pitched about Aug. 31st. Particulars soon. The committee feel the need of funds for improving and lighting the ground, and building a preacher's stand large enough to store our lumber after the meeting. Who will help? Let those who have a mind send money or pledges to me, or J. H. Harding, Ely, Vt.; Geo. C. Arms, Waterbury, Vt.; Stephen French, Rutland, Vt.; or S. G. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt. Pray much for this meeting, for good order, power, and salvation.

H. F. Carpenter, for Committee.

☞ The Springfield American Life and Advent Campmeeting will be held in Springfield, in Carew's grove, commencing Aug. 4th, and continue to Aug. 15th. Ample accommodations will be provided for all that come with board and lodging on the ground. Board, 80 cents per day. Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad, Conn. R. R. and Hartford and N. H. R. R. will be reduced the same as last year, from July 25th to Aug. 27th inclusive. We cordially invite all to come who love the Lord and his coming, and desire a preparation for translation when Jesus comes. Thos. R. Weaver, Secretary of Campmeeting Committee.

To New York Adventists.—Dear Brn. and Srs., shall we not have a general rally at our next campmeeting? You now have an excellent opportunity to do good and get good. By your personal presence, prayers, and labors of love, much good may be done. We should be a consecrated people. Let not ease, love of money, or other selfish considerations, prevent us from throwing the whole weight of our moral and personal influence on the side of the cause we profess to love. What we do, rather than what we say, is the true test of our religious earnestness. Come, then, to this meeting armed with faith and winged by prayer. Its location is central, beautiful, and convenient. Let all remember, too, that at this meeting our first quarterly conference for the year is to be held. The New York State tent will be pitched in the grove, and smaller tents can be procured of James Field, Rochester, at the following prices:

Tents 24×30 feet per week,		$13.00
" 16×24 " " "		8.00
" 12×17 " " "		4.50
" 9×12 " " "		3.00
" 7×9 " " "		2.50

Parties desiring tents should send in their orders immediately. J. H. Whitmore.

Rochester, N. Y., July 12th, 1872.

The New York A. C. Conference will hold its next quarterly session, the Lord willing, in the large State Tent, on the Fairport camp-ground, during the forthcoming campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at nine o'clock Wednesday morning (Aug. 14th), when Bro. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which, the meeting will be held at such hours as shall least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected, and will be submitted, for districting the conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early. Milton R. Miles, Pres.

Wm. E. Brown, Sec.

Tent-Meetings.—The Lord willing, we will hold tent-meetings as follows:—

At Barford, P. Q., as A. B. Cushing may arrange, commencing Tuesday evening, Aug. 6th, to continue over the following Lord's day.

Hereford, P. Q., or Canaan, Vt., as C. D. Hibbard may arrange, commencing Aug. 13th, and continuing as may be thought best.

Jared Whitman.
J. Albert Libby.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves. Particulars hereafter.

Peter S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, } Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Riffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, Committee.

Hoosick Valley Tent.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. Sibley, S. G. Mathewson, H. K. Flagg, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

Kansas Tent.—Dear Brn., our subscription for "Tent for Kansas" is far advanced. We want now a few friends to promptly bring up the rear; that is, close the requisite amount, and we shall be able to get the tent into the field. Friends who have subscribed for the tent, should prepare themselves for prompt payment when notice is given, that there may be no delay. We also need a good supply of tracts. May the Lord continue to bless, and raise up a people here who shall "love his appearing," and be purified when the Master comes. Address H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co., Kansas, or Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co., Kansas.

H. J. Munson.

There will be Advent meetings held at Freemansburg, Pa., as arranged by Brn. Rathgeber and McSwain, at the public school-house, Saturday evening, Aug. 3d, and Sunday, Aug. 4th, in the grove near Bethleham, at ten o'clock A. M. and three o'clock P. M.; and in the evening at the school-house. Sunday, Aug. 11th, at Wilksbarre, Pa. Grove meeting all day, as arranged by Bro. Wetherel. All the friends are cordially invited to the above meeting. Preaching by Eld. Stetler.

NEW TRACT.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged,

OF

"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR," Or, The Commune.

BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

MY ALL.

"Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."—Heb. 13: 8.

I think of Jesus all the day,
And ponder as I pass along;
He is my soul's delightful stay,
And he the subject of my song.

I speak of Jesus when a friend
Doth call and chat awhile with me,
And never wish the time to end,
Thus humbly spent in pious glee.

I worship Jesus every morn,
And ask his favors on my knees;
And when the evening shades are drawn,
His smile alone my soul can please.

I honor Jesus as the chief
Among ten thousand millions told;
His promises afford relief,
His mercies cheer me more than gold.

I'll trust in Jesus till I stand
A sinner saved by grace alone;
And then in Canaan's happy land
Forever sing redeeming love.

—Selected by H. E. F. Stone.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER ELEVEN.

Other passages might be given which seem to have a reference to this mistake of the waiting church on time; as the account of the angel in Rev. 10, who "stood with one foot on the sea, and the other on the land" (showing the general spread of his message by land and sea), and "sware by him that liveth forever and ever that there should be time no longer." This declaration as to the character of his message, when considered in connection with the last verse of the chapter, "Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings," seems to fix the application of the prophecy to the Advent message and the disappointment on time; and also, the subsequent interest on the signs of the end, and particularly the last cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

But as the Advent movement is represented as bearing to the world "the everlasting gospel," we should take the message as covering broader ground than in proclaiming to all the distinctive proclamation, "The hour [or season] of his judgment is come." This may be taken as the most distinguishing feature in the movement, for so it is; but the message embraces an exhortation to "fear God and give glory to him," in view of the fact that "the hour of his judgment is come"; and concludes with an exhortation to "worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." This last sentence seems to contain an admonition against the prevailing disposition in these days to rob God of his personality, in making "God everything, and everything God"; and, also, against the tendency to rob him of his work as Creator, by rejecting the Bible account of creation for the speculations of geologists, Spiritualists, and infidels generally. When a man has given up the Bible account of creation, he has lost his chart and all his moorings on the subject, and is left to float among the mazes of geological speculation and infidel conjecture; and, vibrating sometimes to this theory, and sometimes to that, and often to several, he becomes the sport of every new whim and transient illusion in the fruitful field of geological fancy. But whatever may be his theory of the origin of things, it embraces no God but Nature, and hence assumes their existence without any creative act, but by natural development in some sense or other. Men may scout the "development theory" as absurd and ridiculous, for so it is; but so long as they reject the personality of God, and the Bible record of creation, they must believe either that, or something less plausible, or stand in doubt with the mass, not knowing what to believe.

Nearly all those who preach the coming of the Lord near, defend the Bible record of creation, and raise their warning voice against the growing disposition to turn from the Divine record to the skeptical and vacillating theories of geologists; and, if Advent preachers have not the wisdom of "men of science," they have the wisdom of "men of God," which is far better, and saves them from many "vacillations" and "vibrations." Hence it seems that the clause in this first angel's message, "Worship him that made," etc., is intended to give the churches faithful warning against the growing disposition to reject the Bible record of creation so prevalent in these days.

Thus it seems that this first angel's message, starting with the announcement of the judgment at hand, closes with a warning against the prevalence of skepticism and rise of Spiritualism. This angel is followed by two others, who give special warnings against the Spiritualist movement, as it advances with rapid strides in drawing all but the saints into its embrace. These three messages may be called the last-day warnings of the faithful church. Commencing with the Advent movement, somewhat before the rise of Spiritualism, they run parallel with it to the judgment, and seem intended, in the Divine purpose, to constitute a counter movement in the church to act against the Spiritualist movement, by warning all against its principles and doctrines at each step in its development. For if the church and world are to have the last-day perils, they ought also to have due warning of them from the faithful watchmen. And how great the responsibility of the watchmen who see these perils! I do not wonder that Christ, referring to these times, asks—"Who then is a faithful . . . servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household to give them meat in due season?"

I have said that the Advent movement was evidently intended in Divine providence to act as a counter movement against Spiritualism. This will appear more manifest by a comparison of the two positions. Thus while Adventists take the Bible as their only guide and authority in religion, the Spiritualists reject it with bitter animosity. While the Adventists teach that God is a personal being, the Creator, Preserver, and Judge of all, the Spiritualists teach that there is no God but nature, or a principle of vitality in nature; and hence there is no personal being to act as Creator, Preserver, and Judge. The Adventists teach that Christ is the Son of God, and man's only Savior; Spiritualists teach that he is "no more the Son of God than you are," and that "every man is his own Savior." Adventists teach that man is mortal, and must die; Spiritualists that he is immortal, and can't die. Adventists teach that the dead sleep in their graves till the resurrection, and cannot communicate. The Spiritualists claim that they are alive in the spirit-world, and do communicate. Adventists teach that "the same Jesus" is soon coming to earth again, to communicate his glorious reign; Spiritualists deny his coming, and look for another, who will prove to be "the false Christ." Thus Adventists and Spiritualists stand in direct opposition on all the various points of doctrine. So, we may say in conclusion, that while the Bible, as I have shown, calls the doctrine taught by the Adventists "the everlasting gospel," it must needs call Spiritualism the opposite, "the doctrine of devils," and so it has in 1 Tim. 4: 1.

Thus it appears, that while this last generation is coming up to judgment with the offer of a counterfeit for the gospel in Spiritualism, the Lord in his faithfulness intends that they shall also have the offer of the genuine, with faithful warnings in reference to the counterfeit, that their choice may be made from preference, and not from ignorance. God is giving these two opposite systems to the world, with ample time for examination before they are compelled to decide which they will have. But the preference of the mass, even of professors, is growing more manifestly towards Spiritualism every month. An intelligent lady, in high standing in the church, came to a friend of mine—not then an Adventist—saying, "Listen; I am in a strait." And after a moment's pause, she added, "I see that I have either got to be a Spiritualist, or take up with that dreadful annihilation doctrine; and that I can't do." No doubt thousands are in the same "strait" to-day, if they would acknowledge it; and God intends that they shall not much longer delay their choice between the counterfeit and the genuine; for he arranges that the false Christ shall come before the true one, and assuming all authority and power, he will proceed to set up his kingdom, and to destroy those who reject him, thus plausibly counterfeiting the work of the true Christ. Thus all will be compelled to decide, for none can be neutrals if they would. And none will reject him, at the peril of their lives, unless they do it from love to God and his truth; and these will flee for safety. But alas! for the mass of professors of religion, for when compelled to decide, they will feel about accepting the truth like the lady mentioned above—"That I can't do."

In England, the interest on the question of no immortality till the resurrection is rising with considerable promise. It found able advocates in former times in Milton the poet, Locke the philosopher, and Tyndale the early translator of the Bible into English, with many others of less note. In later times, it was taught by Robert Hall the noted Baptist, Archdeacon Blackburn, Samuel Bourne, and Mr. Taylor of Norwich. And still later by Moncrief, Dobney, White, Whately, Stephens, and others; and in the few years past it has been gaining ground among the masses, and bids fair to make practical progress in opposition to popular errors on the subject, and thus save many from the delusion of Spiritualism, which is there advancing with its usual success.

It is painful to observe how rapidly the popular churches have been conforming to the world, while opposing the Lord's coming and associated truths. This decline, though partially manifest before, has been especially marked since they have opposed the Advent people so bitterly. Before that time, there was much of the power of God and the simplicity of Christ with them. But they lost many of their best members, who came out and were turned out at that time; and they have been coming out ever since; while the mass are conforming more and more to the world, till they differ but little from them in spirit, principle, or policy. There are many honest hearts still among them, no doubt, groaning in spirit, and wishing for a better state of things. But as to the mass of them, their case is hopeless. The best that can be said of them is that they are "lukewarm." But this affords no ground of hope for them, for the Lord says—"I would thou wert either cold or hot; so, then, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, therefore I will spue thee out of my mouth." Rev. 3: 15, 16.

MASS. ADV. CHRIS. CONFERENCE.

At its annual session, held in Chelsea, in April, 1872, it was voted that J. Couch prepare an essay on the subject of pastoral labor among our churches, and publish the same in the World's Crisis. In harmony with that resolution and the gospel of Christ, I will now endeavor to approach you, dear brethren, in danger and trial, hoping by this counsel and prayer to assist you in escaping some of the snares the enemy is coiling for your feet.

Christ's church is always exposed to many dangers in the world, and he has anticipated them all, and kindly and wisely prepared for its safety in all emergencies. As safeguards amid these dangers, he has given his word, in which is a variety of instruction, suited to all cases of peril, by which the path of safety may be clearly seen. He has also given his Holy Spirit to quicken the understanding so that dangers can be seen and safety secured. But amid the whirl and confusion of ever-varying circumstances in this strife of evil to which the church is exposed, God has selected servants from the faithful flock, and set them as guards of an exposed army, to watch every movement of an enemy in ambush. As an army encamped before a sagacious and determined foe is in great danger, without keeping constantly on duty faithful sentinals, so in the church of Christ without the constant watch-care of the faithful servants of Jesus. The Head of the church, knowing her dangers and wants, to provide for her safety, and perfect preparation for his kingdom, has appointed watchmen and pastors for the accomplishment of these great objects.

A church cannot enjoy safety until she has employed all the means Christ has appointed and prepared for that purpose. We do not say that a church should be confined to one ministerial gift of necessity, but a proper variety is important for its growth and happiness. But to open its doors without guard or sentinel, and bid welcome to all that the changing winds may drift along, is unscriptural and unwise. It results in feeding the church with an indigestible compound, producing a morbid appetite for something new and wonderful; causing many to receive the last theory advanced, as so clear and sacred that all must recieve it on the peril of losing eternal life. These circumstances confuse many, and disgust others, driving away the most prudent and cautious hearers, producing anarchy and strife among those who remain. These things ought not so to be; for by them the standard of truth is trailed in the dust; order is turned into confusion; peace into war; unity into division; and holy communion into vain jangling.

As one means of security against these evils so common in these last days, we earnestly recommend that each church secure, if possible, the pastoral care of some faithful servant of Christ, to take the oversight of the flock, according to the gospel. We do not mean to employ some professed teacher to lord it over the church as arbiter of their faith, and dictator of their consciences, laboring for mastery and filthy lucre, but a true servant of God, who will care more for the salvation of the flock than for his own aggrandizement—more for holiness and purity than numbers and worldly prosperity. Who shall labor more earnestly to prepare a people for the coming of Christ, than to establish the tradition of Gentile elders.

If the church cannot secure the weekly watch-care of such an one, let it secure a monthly visit, or even quarterly, if it can do no better; when all of its interests should be inquired after, and proper council and instruction given, to secure it, as much as possible, against all the evils and snares of these perilous times. It should be his duty, also, to see that the gospel ordinances are administered according to the Scriptures, and its worship be conducted in harmony with the word of God and the divine Spirit. When personal differences arise between brethren, a gospel peace-maker should be on hand to hush the warring elements into the silence of heavenly peace.

More than half the beneficial results of preaching the gospel are doubtless lost, when that teaching is not followed by hedging about, and cultivating the seed sown until it come to maturity by a watchman's care and labor.

Dear brethren in the ministry, suffer a word of exhortation. Do not waste your precious time and strength to produce the frame of a house only, for an unsheltered family, neglecting to put on the boards and shingles. The frame is necessary, but it will not protect them from the cold and storm. So is christian teaching without gospel watch-care. Do not, upon your peril, refuse to answer the call of Christ's church as far as your ability extends in this department. In some cases one man can take the care of several churches by visiting them periodically. Press your labors upon no church, but when a church is harmonious in giving you a call to take its pastoral care, yield to its petition if possible.

Brethren of the churches of Christ, speak unto God by earnest prayer, that he may grant you faithful servants after his own heart, to care for all your spiritual interests in this howling wilderness of snares and dangers, and bring you to enjoy the eternal rest of his everlasting kingdom, where the great Shepherd of the sheep shall guard you in eternal peace. Yours, in the bonds of Christian Union,

J. Couch, for the Conference.

WILL OUR CAMPMEETINGS PROVE A BLESSING?

A. ROSS.

For this all should labor and pray. As campmeetings having come to be a settled institution in this country, but one of two results can be anticipated: either a deeper experience in things divine, and a consequent stronger unity in the body; or a religious demoralization, and profligacy, which cannot but be fearful in all their tendencies.

In order that we may escape the latter and secure the former, the hardest campmeeting work should be done before we go. I mean the work of consecrating your heart to Christ before hand that you may go with but one thought and avowed purpose, and that to honor God, and save men. If we wait till we get to camp before we put forth an effort to get nearer to Christ, the same disposition will lurk about us there, and we shall find ourselves still waiting the troubling of the waters; and then after the waters are troubled, waiting for some one to feel a deep interest for us, and help us into the pool; and while all this waiting goes on, perpetual losses are being felt. Remember, the fountain of cleansing is close by thy door, and the time for stepping in is now. This work should be done by Adventists as a preparation for campmeeting, and not as a result of going. All your labor at campmeeting should not be for yourself, while such multitudes are perishing out of Christ. How can we labor understandingly for others, unless we are entirely submitted ourselves.

Judicious financiering and table serving may be essential to the success of a campmeeting, but cannot take the place of consecration. Where this is lacking, you may speak of wiping out old debts, and the escape of contracting new ones; but the whole thing miscarries, without a deeper work of grace in our own hearts, and an interest awakened in the minds of the perishing. As "eternal vigilence is the price of political liberty," so consecration, constant watchfulness, and prayer is the price of all success in christian labor in every place. We should feel a personal responsibility, who contemplate attending campmeeting, however seemingly humble or obscure may be our position. The success of a camp-meeting does not depend altogether on the committe, nor the ministry; but alike on all who profess to be the disciples of our Lord. And it is for the want of acting on this principle of individual responsibility that some of our campmeetings have proven detrimental we fear, to the general interests of the cause of Christ.

What do you say, brethren and sisters in Christ? As the campmeeting season comes on, have you been gleefully contemplating going to the meetings, in view of whom you are to see when you get there, and the campmeeting promenading you are to enjoy? Should the hearts of any be thus moved, I would recommend to such to linger at home the first day of campmeeting and spend it in prayer for God to create in them a clean heart, and renew a right frame of spirit; and if victory did not turn for entire submission to God, and against the old man the first day, try the second day, and so on to the end of the week; and unless your motives are such as you know God can approve, take up thy cross, stay at home, and have a week of prayer; and I will warrant you a richer experience in things of God at the end of the week, and a more sacred nearness to Christ, than if you should go to gratify the vanity of your own mind.

It can but be obvious to every mind that campmeetings are like all other meetings of a religious nature, where the leading thought is divine worship and religious improvement. That being the case, what would be improper for a meeting of worship in the sanctuary, in the thronged city, would be equally improper for an assemblage of a like purpose in the forest, or tented grove. What would be thought of an assembly of professed worshipers in New York, or Boston, if, in time of divine service, two-thirds of them should be promenading the street in front, or around the house, paying no attention to what was passing within? Would they not be looked upon as guilty of sacrilege? And why not the same things apply at campmeeting? The time was in the days of primitive Methodism, when the presiding minister at campmeeting would not allow the service to commence until the congregation was seated, and all the ministers gathered at the stand; and if there were victualling stands, all were closed in hours of worship. And then the reading of the Scriptures in so clear and worshipful a tone of voice—"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of God," etc. And then the hymn—

"Where'er thy saints assembled are,
There is a house for God."

Led by a score or two of veteran ministers (some of which, like John Nelson, could preach, without complaining, three sermons a day, and do a day's work at stone cutting besides) joined by the whole assembly of the saints, singing with grace in the heart, making melody unto the Lord, praying in the Holy Ghost, preaching the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from above. What mighty results followed. Sinners bowed under the majesty of divine grace, calling on God for mercy, and rejoicing in the consciousness of free pardon. We will not say, O Methodism, nor O Adventism, but O campmeetings, how ye have fallen!

IN COMMEMORATION.

S. S. BREWER.

Alas! a dear brother and friend in Christ has gathered up his feet and fallen asleep. When I read the notice of the death of Bro. H. Hawkins, my heart was made sorrowful. He was among those in the earliest days of the proclamation of the glad tidings of the coming One, that embraced the doctrine that has distinguished us as a distinct people. With the possession of ample means, his was a generous heart; and neither few, small, nor far between, have been the instances to which many can testify of his adding to his faith "brotherly kindness," and also of his being "a lover of hospitality." The weary pilgrim found a home, and felt at home, beneath his roof. But, alas! the place, the loved ones and kinsmen in the flesh, will know him there no more. The kindly beaming eye is dimmed; the voice that uttered the gushing welcome to the standard bearer of the coming One is hushed, and the hand that gave the warm and friendly grasp is cold in death.

Alas! the golden bowl is broken,
And loosed is now the silver cord;
Broke the pitcher at the fountain,
Still'd that voice, and no more heard.
Hearts are big with grief and sadness,
The husband, father, friend, now sleeps;
He that once caused joy and gladness,
"Is not," and loved ones for him weep.
Now in Jesus sweetly sleeping,
That kind and tender-hearted friend;
Till this dismal night of weeping,
And death's gloomy reign shall end.
All o'er earth his darts are flying,
Causing sorrow, grief, and dread;
Lamentation, bitter crying,
Sickness, anguish, and the dead.
Hail the resurrection morning,
Long foretold by holy seers;
When our living Head appearing,
Will change to gladness sighs and tears.
Hearts that yearned with keenest sorrow,
Shall their ransom'd powers employ,
In the bright prophetic morrow
Swell their song of sounding joy.
O! the peace and joy o'erflowing,
That will thrill the pure in heart,
With immortal nations glowing,
They shall meet no more to part.
Sky, and earth, and rill, and fountain,
Every atom then will be
Echoing through God's holy mountain
Faith's triumphant melody.

Farewell, farewell, beloved brother, friend, we shall not long be parted. I rejoice amid sorrow, although mine eyes are moist with tears as I strive to trace this fragment, and think of the loved death-severed sleepers in Jesus. But few of those who lived in the days that tried our faith remain. Names that were often seen and heard seldom fall on our ears; if they do, it is "in memoriam." Their homes that stood by the pathway in the early hour of the morning call, are passing away from our midst. They were then far and wide apart; but distances are now vastly extended. Few now dot our pathway, and the footfall of truth-telling time hath left his imprint upon them. Fond links in the bond of holy brotherhood that became more and more cemented by the trials and bitter disappointments by the way, are fast being sundered. Ties interwoven by an experience, such as no others ever passed through, are severing, and the hearts of the few that remain pulsate with a sympathetic, deep, affectionate sorrow, when the friends of many years and trials are borne to the silent home of the gathered and gathering.

Often, when I greet an old pioneer, I think of the strain of Scotia's sweetest bard—

"John Anderson, my Jo John, we've clim'd the hill togither,
And many a canty day, John, we've had 'I oneanither;
Now we maun totter down, John, and hand in hand
we'll go,
And sleep togither at the foot, John Anderson my Jo."

There is at this precise moment a plaintive emphasis in the words of Hilkeah's weeping son—"The day goeth away, for the shadows of the evening are stretched out." In a manifold sense there is a befitting application in the above words of inspired Hebrew eloquence, especially as I view surroundings, both in the light of historic and inspired truth, also in an experimental sense. The twilight of eventide is giving place to the sombre mantling of a darker and more fearful shade of gloom. The outlines of the prophetic landscape are foreboding; and jots and tittles all around our pathway bespeak the sinking of time's last sands, and earth's approaching doom. The reign of transgression, that hath swept down from the womb of time through the slowly rolling ages of the past, scattering the chilling mists of death, and draping the nuptial hour, and the birth of innocence with bitter wailing and anguish, is near its close. Evangels of eternal day, in all their gladly solemn portents, are now pregnant amid all our surroundings. Death will soon be conquered. The ear of faith is now intent to catch the first rumble of the Conqueror's chariot, and gaze upon the outbeamings that shall herald the approach of his dazzling retinue, when from the portals of light the everlasting gates shall be lifted up to let the King of glory come down, and receive his long-waiting and once despised and weeping bride. O happy, happy hour!

I pause, and ponder, as faith grasps the extreme of that moment in which perpetual destiny centres. Eternal union, eternal separation. Till then, all this side will resemble the past; and all beyond the consummation of hope will be the perfected new creation, where the white-robed, palm-bearing victors, in the beauty of immortal youth shall perpetually glow in the full-orbed splendor of the "far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." To faith's weepers amid the departing hours of this night of sorrow, let me say, we shall soon greet our loved ones, where tears nor sighs shall mingle with the rejoicing of those redeemed by the blood of the Lamb. "Thy kingdom come," and let the whole earth be filled with thy glory. Amen!

PASSING AWAY.

N. R. SMITH.

[Composed and read as a composition at Washburn College.]

The innocent child stands beside the sparkling and merry murmuring brook, whose waters are passing away to mingle with its great attraction, the mighty ocean; and as the child stands, it innocently throws one by one the little branches and leaves into the brook, and claps its hands with joy to see them sailing, chasing each other, and passing away. This brings to my mind the thought that all the forests of the world, bud by bud, leaf by leaf, twig by twig, branch by branch, limb by limb, root by root, tree by tree, are passing away. Why is this? Let us go back and consider the inspiration of the past. Nearly six thousand years ago this earth was spoken into existence by Him who alone hath immortality. The omnipotent one will never pass away. Of him the poet writes—

"Passing away, all but God's bright throne,
And his servants' home above,
And his will divine,
And the boundless mine
Of God's eternal love;
Even earth to its frame work doth all decay,
But God in his love shall ne'er pass away."

The same hand that created the earth formed our first parents, and placed them in Eden, the garden of delight, and gave the man a command, which, if he disobeyed, the penalty was, "Thou shalt surely die," or "dying thou shalt die." Man disobeyed God, and this is the reason and origin of the passing away. Not only does it apply to man, but to all animate and inanimate creation; for after man had broken God's command, the ground was cursed for his sake; its productiveness and the perfectness of vegetation began to pass away. If we enter the shady forests, we shall find decay and blemishes plainly impressed upon them all, for they are passing away. If we follow the first man to the close of his career, we shall find that before a day came to its close he had passed away, according to God's word, for "one day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

Let us follow down the stream of time about the space of two thousand years, and we shall witness the greatest passing away that ever occurred since the earth was created. Men, as a race, had become very wicked, and the earth was filled with violence; but God would not destroy them without first warning them; therefore, he sent forth Noah to warn them of the great passing away; and he not only warned them by words, but by actions, for the space of one hundred and twenty years; yet they heeded not. The time drew near, and the Lord was heard to speak—"Yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights, and every living substance that I have made will I destroy from off the face of the earth." The seven days passed away. Two of each kind of beasts, creeping things of the earth, and fowls of the air, as if by instinct, entered the ark of safety with Noah and his family. God shut them in. The fountains of the great deep were broken up, and the flood-gates of heaven were withdrawn, the waters prevailed, the earth passed out of sight, and the rising waters carried the ark above the highest hills, while the unsheltered wicked, with every living substance, were caught in the whirlpool of destruction, and passed away. The waters tarried on the earth for a year, and passed away, leaving the earth renewed and pure.

We might follow down the stream of time, and see how one language and speech was confounded; how that Sodom and Gomorrah, the cities of the plain, passed away; how Lot's wife disobeyed God by looking back, and passed into a pillar of salt; how the first born of the Egyptians and cattle were smitten, and passed away at the solemn hour of midnight; how the children of Israel passed through the Red Sea, and the Egyptians in attempting to follow were destroyed by the uniting of the waters and passed away; and as the mighty stream of time widened and rushed on toward the great sea of eternity, nation after nation came into notice and passed away to rise no more.

And is there no hope that this passing away will come to an end? O yes, there is hope; for eighteen hundred and seventy-two years ago the wise men of the east saw a star whose glorious effulgence hastened their steps to where lay Bethlehem's mangered babe, "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world"; and Jesus says—"Whosoever believeth in me shall not perish, but have eternal life." Paul says—"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away." John the beloved disciple says—"The world passeth away and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever"; and John also says—"I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and first earth were passed away, and there was no more sea, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." O let us improve the moments rightly as they come, then, to use the language of Job, "we can lift up our faces without a spot; yea, we shall be steadfast, and shall not fear, because we shall have forgotten our miseries, and remembered them as waters that pass away."

"It is written on the rose,
In its glory's full array;
Read what those buds disclose—
Passing away.
It is written on the heart,
Alas! that there decay
Should claim from love a part—
Passing away.
Friends, friends, O shall we meet,
In a land of purer day,
Where lovely things and sweet
Pass not away?
O, if this may be so,
Speed, speed, thou closing day,
How blest from earth's vain show,
To pass away."

John Wesley used to say—"Oh, how hard it is to be shallow enough for a genteel congregation." But ministers have no difficulties of that kind now."

—Love to Christ smooths the path of duty, and wings the feet to travel it; it is the bow which impels the arrow of obedience; it is the main-spring moving the wheels of duty; it is the strong arm tugging the oar of diligence.

THE SINFULNESS OF SIN.

A. S. BURNHAM.

But few have, or seem to have, any proper conception of the exceeding sinfulness of sin. It is first to be considered, in its greatest magnitude, in disobedience to God. There is every reason why we should obey him. First, he is every way worthy of our love and obedience. Second, he has every right and claim. Third, it is for our highest good and happiness. We need to realize the exceeding sinfulness of sin in order to appreciate the riches of grace in Christ.

There is also another view of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and that is its effects in this life. We can all see this. Go with me through the wards of a large hospital, and see the diseased, wounded and deformed. Look over the earth, and see it as one vast hospital, and besides all this, the more terrible disease within. Could we see the process by which one after another the supports of the soul are swept away by sin, the sight would be terrible beyond description. Could we see the consequences of sin in the light of eternity, yet more terrible, we could come to a deeper sense of the exceeding sinfulness of sin.

THE BABY'S COUNSEL.

One day last summer I sat at my table writing a letter. My little boy was fixing the tail of his kite and playing about the room, and did not appear to be paying the slightest attention to me. In a few minutes my letter was finished, and I read it over aloud before sealing it. To my great astonishment my baby son, as I considered him—for he was only six years old—sidled up to me and said very earnestly, "I wouldn't send that letter if I was you."

"Why not?" I asked.

"I don't know," he answered, evidently feeling timid about saying all he thought.

I was very anxious to see what impression had been produced by my letter on my boy's mind, so I urged him a bit, and said, "Well, why wouldn't you send it, Charlie?"

The child looked a trifle confused, and, at last, dropping his pretty brown eyes, said, "I don't think it's very polite."

The truth was, I was vexed with my brother because he had neglected to inform me concerning something about which I was quite anxious. A single line from him would have prevented my writing to him the letter I had just finished.

As I read aloud what I had written, the little boy understood its spirit, he felt the vexed tones of the letter, though I believe it was not very severe, and certainly it was not undeserved. While he was playing with his kite string, that young man was being impressed by my words and temper. He did not know why I was annoyed at my brother, but he really felt bad about his mother writing a letter that did not sound "polite." He scarcely knew the meaning of the words I had put upon the paper, but his sensitive young heart felt their character.

When the little fellow saw me throw the sheet into the drawer, he looked troubled to think he had interferred, and said:

"Why, aren't you going to send it mamma?"

I replied to the darling, "No, my boy, I shall take your advice and not send the letter."

Does not this incident show how constantly we are exerting an influence upon our children? Books are read in their hearing, which possibly we would not give them to read alone; and while our babies, as we call them, sit in our laps, we converse freely upon subjects unfit for their ears, and give expresion to feelings which in after days these little ones will surely imitate. Don't imagine that young children are as dull as your conversations and manners in their presence show you think they are. They "take in" a vast deal more of the moral influences around them than is generally supposed.—Advocate and Guardian.

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door for the children,
Tenderly gather them in,
In from the highways and hedges,
In from the places of sin.
Some are so young and so helpless,
Some are so hungry and cold;
Open the door for the children,
Gather them into the fold.

Open the door for the children,
See! they are coming in throngs;
Bid them sit down to the banquet,
Teach them your beautiful songs;
Pray you the Father to bless them,
Pray you that grace may be given;
Open the door for the children,
"Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Open the door for the children,
Take the dear lambs by the hand;
Point them to truth and to goodness,
Send them to Canaan's land.
Some are so young and so helpless,
Some are so hungry and cold;
Open the door for the children,
Gather them into the fold.

JUST ONE.

While I was walking in the garden one brigth morning, a breeze came through and set all the leaves and flowers fluttering. Now that is the way flowers talk; so I listened.

Presently an elderly tree said, "Flowers, shake off your caterpillars!"

"Why," said a dozen altogether, for they were like some children who always say, "Why?" when they are told to do anything—bad children those!

The elder said, "If you don't they'll eat you up alive."

So the flowers went to shaking till the caterpillars were shaken off.

In one of the middle beds there was a beautiful rose who shook off all but one, and said to herself, "Oh! that's a beauty; I'll keep that one."

The elder overheard her, and called out, "One caterpillar is enough to spoil you."

"But," said the rose, "look at his brown and crimson fur, and his beautiful black eyes, and scores of little feet; I want to keep him; surely one won't hurt me."

A few mornings after I passed the rose again; there was not a whole leaf on her; her beauty was gone; she was almost killed, and had only life enough to weep over her folly, while the tears stood like dewdrops on her scattered leaves. "Alas! I didn't think one caterpillar would ruin me."

One sin will destroy a noble boy or beautiful girl as sure as the worm the rose.—Selected.

Didn't like the Wages.—An honest boy once went to work in a store, but left in a few days. His mother, in surprise, asked him if he was treated unkindly, or if he did not like the work.

"Mother," said he, "my emlpoyer was very kind to me, and the work suited me exactly; but I didn't like the wages. He wanted me to tell lies about his goods and thus cheat his customers. I knew this would be a sin, and the wages of sin is death."

"Johnny, ain't you going with us up to the lake?"

"No," answered Johnny, "I am not going to be absent from school one day this term, if I can help it."

Bravo, Johnny! We are glad to find a boy who can deny himself a pleasant trip for the sake of school. That is a strong boy.

OVERCOMING MORBID APPETITES.

A majority of invalids who resort to health institutions, after having been under treatment a few weeks, become satisfied with the simple regimen, and feel no desire to eat anything but the plainest food, nor to drink anything but the purest water. Their morbid cravings for flesh-meats, nervine drinks, and stimulating condiments, seem to have been conquered, or at least subdued; and so long as they remain under similar influences and surroundings, their appetences will be their servants and not their masters. But yet they are not safe to go into the world. They are improved, but not renovated. Habit is a second nature, and not easily eradicated. Let them now go among their old associations, with temptation on all sides, and the inclination to "live as other folks do," will revive, perhaps overwhelmingly. In vain will the strong will be opposed to the stronger appetite. The depraved instincts had become apparently normal, because the influences were all in the right direction. But weeks or months longer were required to so establish and confirm the organism in the better way that temptation would not overcome good intentions.

Some persons are so fortunately organized, or so little depraved, that a sojourn at a health institution for a few weeks, or even a few days, will rid them of all disposition to indulge morbid appetites. And some few will experience no inconvenience whatever in abandoning all accustomed luxuries and adopting the hygienic regimen in full at once. But with the majority it is quite otherwise. In the transitional state from bad habits to good, they must expect to suffer more or less. The rule is, the more necessary it is for them to change their habits, the more they will suffer in so doing; because, the more they have been perverted or depraved, the severer the struggle to recover the normal condition. The confirmed opium-eater, the drunken sot, and the tobacco-toper, are seldom safe until they have been at least one year without indulgence. Persons who have lived ten, twenty, or thirty years in the use of flesh, fish, and fowl, tea and coffee, butter, sugar, salt, vinegar, pepper, and hog's lard, can hardly expect to emancipate themselves from all desire for them, under all circumstances, in a few weeks, or even months. One, two, or three years is not too long a time to calculate upon; and on these terms, the result is worth all it costs. One, two, or three years devoted to re-organizing the body, and reconstructing the instincts, may add ten, twenty, or thirty years to their earthly pilgrimage.

A majority of invalids, however, who need a thorough reconstruction of themselves, cannot afford to be on expense at a health institution for a long time; and if they go among their friends, or into society as now constituted; instead of sympathy and encouragement, they will find little else than ridicule and oposition. Among the wants of the age, and the needs of the health reform, therefore, are farms and workshops, connected with health institutions, where patients, after recovering health, can remain a year or two, and find employment sufficient at least to pay expenses. Then they could go abroad proclaiming the glad tidings of the gospel of health effectually, and without danger of relapsing into "living as other folks do." Perhaps in the good time coming some philanthropic millionaire, some humanitarian society, or some intelligent government, will endow an institution of this kind. A million or two dollars expended in this manner would be of more advantage to our country and to the human race than a hundred millions of millions expended in bringing us teas from China, coffee from Brazil, liquors from Europe, trinkets from Japan, and fashions from Paris—Dr. Trall, in Health Reformer.

Over-Work.—The complaint is quite universal, and in our American life we quite over-strain the muscle, over-wear the brain, and over-burden the heart. Men at the hottest point of enterprise give out, and consumption takes the body, lunacy the mind, avarice the affections. Prominent men drop suddenly here and there, when they are all aglow with perspiration, and dilated eye, and absorption of success. The epitaph is, "died of overwork." It should be, "died of mis-managed work." That wheel on the car is not hot because it rolls faster than the other wheels, nor because it is weaker or stronger, but because its journal was not packed as well—because some unusual friction has heated it. Here is a sewing-machine with which a woman has flung thread enough to baste the two hemispheres together at the equator and to reach to the north-pole, and make a spool of it. And yet it has needed little repair, as it has sung the dollars together with its monotonous buzz. Here is another that is returned, broen in pieces, and radically injured. Lack of lubrication, mis-feeding, or guiding, caused an injury, and then it has been up-hill work ever since, till it has become absolutely worthless.

Men are worked in precisely the same way. A man cannot run his mind behind without harm, nor his mind, and leave his body in the lurch. False work, mis-judged and misguided work, is the crime of the day. No mechanic shall fail in muscle nor in skill if he will fertilize his mind as he goes along, and keep a window in his soul open to God. No business or professional man shall waste in body or waver in mind if he will proportion his intellectual and physical toil and not forget his religious obligations.—Wm. Alvin Bartlett.

FINISH THY WORK.

Finish thy work—the time is short,
The sun is in the west,
The night is coming on—till then,
Think not of rest.

Yes, finish all thy work, then rest;
Till then, rest never;
The rest prepared for thee by God,
Is rest forever.

Finish thy work, then rest in peace,
Life's battle fought and won;
And so to thee thy Master's voice

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER TWELVE.

We come now to consider the second angel's message, found in Rev. 14: 8. It is the second in the series of warnings given by the faithful church, during the perils of the last days, while the apostasy is developing itself into a counterfeit for the second coming and kingdom of Christ. It reads, "And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication." We have the same cry evidently, but more fully expressed, in the first three or four verses of the eighteenth chapter. It there reads, "I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightened with his glory; and he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird; for all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication; and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies."

If we remember that "Babylon" here means the Catholic church; that "habitation" means dwelling-place, and that "foul spirit" means unclean spirit, both terms coming from the same word in the original, we find the substance of this message is, that the Catholic church has become the dwelling-place of demons, and the hold of every unclean spirit,—a plain announcement that she has embraced Spiritualism, the religion of demons, with all its licentiousness and blasphemy, and presents all the phenomena of spirit-wonders. I have shown, when treating of the two-horned beast, that the Catholics and Spiritualists were destined to affiliate and unite by accepting him as their champion, who would lead them on to victory, supported also by Internationals and revolutionists generally, and working miracles as he goes.

I am looking for the two-horned beast to arise just here. I think it will be developed in Europe, and very likely by the next revolution in France. It may possibly be developed in this country, but I expect rather to see it in Europe. When the church sees him on his career, as marked in the prophecy, this alarm will be sounded, and more especially when the Catholics have embraced the religion of Spiritualism. The alarm will be an earnest, faithful one, since the angel bearing it is represented as "having great power, and the earth was lightened with his glory." We remember the great stir that was made by the Advent movement in 1843 and '44, and so on since. But while that was said to be "with a loud voice," this angel, it is said, "cried mightily with a strong voice." We may therefore expect a more earnest effort on the part of those who make this warning, than was made by the servants of God then. I do not expect, however, that the same, or an equal, impression will be made on the mass of society for their good. I do expect, rather, that opposition to the truth will constantly increase in bitterness, till it ripens into open persecution.

This cry is followed by another, which seems closely connected with it, and in some sense resulting from it. It reads, "Come out of her, my people." The reason given for coming out is, "that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Whether this scripture should have a particular application to all parties and classes, where the honest inquirer after truth can be found, is a question. The connection in which we find it would afford some reasons for a particular application to Babylon; but so far as the language itself is concerned—"Come out of her"—it might apply to any church. For if the time should come, as I expect it will ere long, that we see the churches around us degenerated even beyond their present state, and fearfully drifting into Spiritualism, with no hope for the honest-hearted among them except they break away from their influence, we could not better express the alarm we would give, in faithfulness, than in the language—"Come out of her, my people."

Hence, I would say that the language must have a general application in principle, whatever seeming evidence it may have for a particular application to Babylon. This general application in principle is supported, too, by the reason given for coming out—"that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." For all who enter into Spiritualism and receive the mark of the beast will be partakers of the same shameful excesses in licentiousness, blasphemy and presumption, by approval and countenance, at least. So, also, all who receive the mark of the beast will partake of the "seven last plagues." Hence, in view of the tendency of all the popular churches toward Spiritualism, the time will come when the faithful watchman will feel constrained to warn all who have an ear to hear, to escape from them, lest they drift into Spiritualism with them, and perish with those filthy blasphemers. We will now consider the third angel's message, as found in Rev. 17: 3–11. It reads—"And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark, in his forehead or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone, in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb; and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up forever and ever; and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name."

The message contains a warning not to worship the beast, nor receive the mark, and also calls attention to the judgments to be poured out on those who do, in the "seven last plagues," or "vials of God's wrath." Six of the vials are poured out before the Lord comes, on the worshipers of the beast andhis image; hence it is said in this warning, "they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name." The seventh vial is poured out after the Lord comes, in the battle of the great day; hence when it is said, "they shall be tormented in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb," it refers to their sufferings under the seventh vial, in the battle where Christ and the angels are present. There is no need of any uncertainty as to the time when this cry shall be made. It cannot be most any time, nor all the time, nor in past time, but is fixed by various considerations to a period a little in the future. It must come in order after the Advent message; for this is said to be by "the third angel," reckoning that as the first. It is also after the cry "Babylon is fallen," etc., or the announcement that the Catholics, having embraced Spiritualism, all others must soon do likewise; for that "followed" the Advent message, as the second. We should therefore keep in memory that it is the "third" and last in the order of these three warnings, and hence future, as we are now in the first. But the language of the warning—"If any man worship the beast," etc., shows definitely that it is the time when they are requiring, or about requiring, all to worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark. In other words, it will be when the Catholics, Spiritualists, Internationals, etc., having combined, are about to assume all authority and power, and require all to take the oath of allegiance and mark of loyalty to their confederacy, as the millennial order of things.

The rise of this antichristian confederacy, enforcing its false worship and the mark of the beast, under penalty of death, will be the most fearful crisis in the interests of religion that the world has ever known. It will evidently be "the hour of temptation that shall come on all the world to try them that dwell on the earth." Rev. 3: 10. They cannot receive the mark without thereby rejecting God and the Bible. And they cannot refuse it, only at the peril of their lives, with no hope of escape but the uncertain chance of fleeing from society to the wilderness with the few despised ones of the Lord. Thus all are brought to a decision of the solemn question, whether they will be for God or against him. Those who receive the mark, thereby make their choice against God and fix their doom forever. They will hear no more warnings from the faithful servants of God, for they are sealed for wrath, which will soon after commence in "the seven last plagues," which are poured out on all who have "the mark of the beast."

The Lord says of the faithful few—"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation which shall come on all the world to try them." Rev. 3: 10. Their love for God's truth leads them into it, and hence keeps them from the delusion of Spiritualism; while those who have not the love of the truth shall have the strong delusion in support of the errors to which they cling. The faithful few, being kept by divine care, refuse the mark, and are sealed for God and his glory. John saw them in vision as "them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, standing on the sea of glass, having the harps of God." Rev. 15: 2. This sealing of the servants of God is referred to in Rev. 7: 3, where the angels, to whom it is given to hurt the earth, the sea, etc., are told to "hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads." This hurting the earth and the sea, etc., must refer, I think, to the judgment of the "seven last plagues."

I find that many, who look for a time of persecution to come on the church, flatter themselves with the idea that none of the saints will be put to death. I do not know any scripture to justify such a conclusion. We are no better than the martyrs of past ages, that we should hope that a persecution on us will not be allowed to be unto death. I dare not encourage such a hope. It might encourage some to delay or decline to flee till the storm of persecution awaits them. I fear that most of those who suffer death in the coming trial will fall by such neglect. In view of the persecution, we read—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." Rev. 14: 13. This can but imply martyrs, I think, in this time of trouble. Then in the account of the first resurrection (Rev. 20: 4), we read—"I saw the souls [or persons, as Whiting gives it] of them . . . which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." There must be a considerable number die of those who refuse the mark, or they would not be so prominently mentioned here; hence there must be a considerable many martyrs in this time of trial. This appears also from the third vial poured out as a plague on the worshipers of the beast; for it is said of those who suffer from the plague—"They have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink, for they are worthy." Rev. 16: 6. The passage in Luke 18: 7, 8—"Shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily," shows that their treatment in this time is so severe as to call for vengeance on their persecutors. And finally, a passage addressed to the souls under the altar (Rev. 6: 11), who represent those slain under the 1260 years' persecution, tells them to wait for a little season for a redress of their wrongs, "until their fellow servants also, and their brethren who should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled."

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTS.

Bro. Grant:—I send you the comments of Matthew Henry on a verse or two of 2nd Peter, from an edition printed in London, 1721. T. Foote.

[By mistake, the second part of this comment was printed first.—Ed.]

"Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. For this they are willingly ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water, and in the water; whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished. But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Pet. 3: 3–7.

To quicken and excite us to a serious minding, and firm adhering to what God has revealed to us by the prophets and apostles, we are told that there will be scoffers; men who will both make a mock of sin, and of salvation from it. God's way of saving sinners by Jesus Christ is what men will scoff at, and that in the last days, under the gospel. This indeed may seem very strange, that the New Testament dispensation of the covenant of grace, which is spiritual, and therefore more agreeable to the nature of God than the old, should be ridiculed and reproached; but the spirituality of New Testament worship is directly contrary to the carnal mind of man; and this accounts for what the apostle seems here to hint at; namely, that scoffers shall be more numerous and more bold in the last days than ever before; though in all ages, those who were born and walked after the flesh did persecute, revile and reproach them who were born and walked after the Spirit; yet in the last days there will be a great improvement in the art and impudence of bantering serious godliness, and those who firmly adhere to the circumspection and self-denial which the gospel prescribes. This is what is mentioned as a thing well known to all christians, and therefore they ought to reckon upon it, that they may not be surprised and shaken, as if some strange thing happened unto them.

Now to prevent the true christian's being overcome when attacked by these scoffers, we are told (1) what sort of persons they are. They walk after their own lusts; they follow the devices and desires of their own hearts and carnal corrupt affections, and not the dictates and directions of right reason, and an enlightened, well-informed judgment. This they do in the course of their conversation. They live as they list, and they speak as they list. 'Tis not only their inward minds that are evil and opposite to God, as the mind of every unrenewed sinner is (Rom. 8: 7) alienated from God, ignorant of him and averse to him; but they are grown to such an height of wickedness that they proclaim openly what is in the hearts of others who are yet carnal; they say their tongues are their own, and their strength, and time, and all, is their own, and who is Lord over them? who shall contradict or control them, or ever call to account for what they say or do? And as they scorn to be confined to any laws of God in their conversation, so neither will they bear that the revelations of God should dictate and prescribe to them what they are to believe. As they walk in their own way, and talk their own language, so will they also think their own thoughts and form principles which are altogether their own; here also shall their own lusts be consulted by them. None but such accomplished libertines as are here described can take a seat; at least they cannot sit in the seat of the scornful. By this ye shall know them, that ye may be better on your guard against them.

(2) We also are foretold how far they will proceed. They will attempt to shake and unsettle us, even as to our belief of Christ's second coming. They will scoffingly say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Without this, all the other articles of the christian faith will signify very little. This is that which fills up and gives the finishing stroke to all the rest. The promised Messiah is come; he was made flesh and dwelt among us; he is altogether such an one as is said before; and has done all that for us which has been before taken notice of. These principles the enemies of christianity have all along endeavored to overturn. But as these do all rest upon facts which are already past, and of which this and the other apostles have given us the most sure and satisfying evidence, it is probable they will at last grow weary of their opposition to them; and while yet one principal article of our faith does refer to what is still behind, and only has a promise to rest upon, here they will still attack us, even to the end of time. Till our Lord is come, they will not themselves believe that he will come; nay, they will laugh at the very mention of his second coming, and do what in them lies to put all out of countenance who do seriously believe and wait for it.

Now, therefore, let us see how this point stands, both on the believer's part and on the part of their seducers. The believer does not only desire that he may come, but having a promise that he will come, a promise that he himself has made and oft repeated, a promise received and reported by faithful witnesses, and left upon sure record, he is also firmly and fully persuaded that he will come. On the other hand, these seducers, because they wish he never may, therefore do all that in them lies to cheat themselves and others into a persuasion that he never will come. If they cannot deny that there is a promise, yet they will laugh at that very promise, which argues much higher degrees of infidelity and contempt. "Where is the promise of his coming?" say they. We are also forewarned of their method of reasoning; for while they laugh, they will pretend to argue too. To this purpose they add that "since the fathers fell asleep, all things remain as they were from the beginning of creation." This is a subtle, though not a solid way of reasoning. It is apt to make impressions upon weak minds, and especially upon wicked hearts. Because sentence against them is not speedily executed, therefore they flatter themselves that it never will; whereupon their hearts are fully set in them to do evil. Eccl. 8: 11. Thus they act themselves, and thus they persuade others to act. So here, say they, the fathers have fallen asleep; they are all dead to whom the promises were made, and they were never made good in their time, and there is no likelihood that they will ever be at any time. Why should we trouble ourselves about them? If there had been any truth or certainty in the promises you speak of, we should surely have seen somewhat of them before this time; some signs of his coming; some preparatory steps in order to it; whereas we find to this very day all things continue as they were, even from the beginning of the creation. Since the world has undergone no changes in the course of so many thousand years, why should we affright ourselves as if it were to have an end? Thus do these scoffers argue. Because they see no changes, therefore they fear not God. Ps. 4: 19. They neither fear him, nor his judgments; what he never has done, they would conclude that he never can, or never will do.

THE INVITATION.

GEO. E. LEE.

According to the blessed plan of God, as revealed in his Word, the way to eternal life is not one of compulsion, but of invitation. Yet how very many there are who have never yet tasted of the joy and peace there is in trusting in God, who seem to feel and act as though for them to "come to Jesus," would be to confer a great favor upon some one else; while on the other hand, they think no benefit is to befall them, but they are to lose all their enjoyment. But this is not so. "For "if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things have passed away; behold, all things are become new." Now it is very natural for all to like new things, and the old things are laid aside. Hence, on the same principle, why should we not make haste to put off the "old man," with his deeds, and put on the "new man," and be a "new creature" in Christ? The old man is disrobed of all anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, evil-speaking, and everything which is unlike Christ, and at once becomes a "new man," filled with love, joy, and peace. And in this condition, the happy child of God feels like sounding out anew the invitation, which now is, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Matt. 11: 28. "Oh taste and see that the Lord is good." Ps. 34: 8. "And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And let him that heareth, say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." Rev. 22: 17. And in the great gathering day, when the jewels are made up, to the faithful the invitation will be, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 34. Then why should we not desire to be called the children of God, since he has promised such great things unto them?

Christ has said, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." What more comforting words could we ask than these? Why linger, and refuse to accept the invitation to the grand jubilee that is so soon to take place, where all its attendants can join in singing the song of Moses and the Lamb? There the voices never tire, and the music will be sweeter far than all the stringed and wind instruments of man's invention combined. Come to the feast. The door is open now, and all who will are welcome to enter. The Master of the house does not compel you to enter, but still says, "Come." Come to the marriage supper of the Lamb! Come, and enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God. Let us abide in Christ, and then we are safe. Let us be patient, and endure unto the end, and then a glorious reward is ours.

LAST DAYS.

E. M. RIPLEY.

In the history of man's life, last days are full of thrilling interest. The man who has exhausted his talent and energy in the pursuit of earth's riches and follies, finding himself at last on the threshold of death, starts back in horror. The terrors of an evil life take hold on him; cruel remorse gnaws at his guilty conscience, and he pleads for a few more days that he may atone for the past. But no, man's time is not God's time, and nature's debt must be paid. O that we may ever feel the necessity of every-day religion, that the satisfaction of having our peace made with God when the shades of death gather around us may be ours. Last days are days full of interest always; especially is it the case when the actor in life's drama draws near his end with careless steps and manner. But matters of this kind—though of life and death—are of consequence only to the few concerned at the time. And though all feel the agony of such times in the course of life, yet it does not fill up the measure; the grand finale does not appear.

But, reader, the last days of all days have dawned upon us. Already do we see and hear the fulfillment of prophetic notes, uttered two thousand years ago. The whole world proclaims to us in tones of unmistakable import, that "time shall be no longer." The prophetical watchmen on their watch-towers descry in the the misty future, undefined forms of trouble. The burden of their cry is, "Some great change." Their places of trust are no longer in the hands of honest men. "They that work wickedness are set up." The whole political world is one vast pool of moral rottenness, and law, in the main, is a farce. Society, where is it? The links that hold it together are being rudely severed. Free love and thought have been incorporated into its domain; and lust and pride are made to shine on an equality with those purer qualities that God approves. And woman, inspired by a mad ambition, seeks to right her wrongs, real and fancied, by the right of suffrage, lowering her womanhood and bringing on herself disgrace thereby. Crimes, the most revolting, are too common for comment with our neighbor. Virtue is not a robe of safety for our wives and daughters. The plotting villain stands at every door, eager for his prey; and the more innocent his victim, the more earnest his efforts to complete his work. Life is a positive fact no longer. We cannot tell but the next man we meet may demand it of us, with glittering blade, or pistol to our breast.

The religious elements partake, also, of the same damning spirit. The church is given over to formality and show. It mimics all that is bad to keep the bad ones in the fold. It sounds the cry of "peace and safety," when every man's hand is against his neighbor, and the political, moral, and religious elements are in a constant uproar, and the cry has sounded, "Come out of her, my people." Creation groans to be delivered. The fiery element has seemingly taken upon itself to burn up the people and the fruit of their labors, while the floods of waters are carring devastation, ruin, and death, to other parts. If these things were but the record of a day, they would present a different aspect; but each day adds to the damning list of infamy, till it seems to the prophetic student as if it would roll over the earth in one vast, revolting flood of evil.

What does it all mean? Search the Scriptures if you would know. There is no necessity for ignorance in this matter. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, ... without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, dispisers of those that are good, traitors, ... lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. . . . . Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." 2 Tim. 3: 1–13. This is only one sample of the many that the word of God affords as an index to our times.

"Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse." While the tide of iniquity seems to be at the full, we hear the apostle affirm it shall be "worse," and the past justifies the claim. But we are not in the dark as to the time of its culmination. The prophetic books are no longer closed with a seal. The symbolized kingdoms are in the past. The different measurements of time point clearly to the end. Just prior to the resurrection Daniel says—"There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book." Dan. 12: 1.

O, these are truly last days. The sum of evil is nearly completed. Owing to the prosperity of wicked ones, some are fallen from the faith; and truly the times are full of peril for the Lord's children; but weak ones and strong, hide yourselves in the strength and wisdom of the Almighty. Do not let go your hold on the truth, when victory is about to crown the host. Be firm; be firm, the song of triumph soon shall echo from the "rivers unto the ends of the earth," and bursting from earth's confines, shall mount up to the throne of God in one long, loud, harmonious symphony of praise. Who does not want to swell the host of the redeemed ones by his presence? Come then to the fountain and be cleansed from sin; come without delay, and be saved even in the last days with an everlasting salvation.

HADES.

THE SOUL OF MAN; OR, THE "PSYCHE" OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

I. We now proceed to see what the New Testament says of the soul of man. Its term for soul is psyche. There is no doubt that the nephesh or soul of the Old Testament, is identical with the psyche of the New Testament; i. e., that both terms are put for one and the same idea when they refer to the soul as a constituent part of man. The invariable translation of nephesh in the Septuagint version is psyche; and wherever in the New Testament a passage from the Old Testament is quoted, or referred to, in which the word nephesh occurs, it is translated by psyche. We therefore assume that the psyche or soul of the New Testament is equivalent to the nephesh or soul of the Old.

II. It is at once apparent of what advantage this is to us in the prosecution of our inquiry. It enables us, even before we have examined into the meaning of a single passage in which the word psyche occurs, to affirm of everything that we have already established of the Old Testament Scriptures. As, for examples, that it is distinct from the spirit, that it means that animal life which man shares in common with the brute, that it is mortal and dies, when man dies, that during the entire state of death, i. e., the period of time ending at the resurrection, it is in hades, i. e., within the heart of the earth. All these things, established of the nephesh or soul of the Old Testament, are also established of the psyche or soul of the New Testament for the simple reason that nephesh and psyche mean one and the same thing.

III. An objection may perhaps be raised to this which, though it has no real foundation, may yet operate with some minds against the reception of truth. It is that the Greek psyche or soul had in the Greek language one uniform and established sense, which sense therefore must be supposed to be carried into the Septuagint and New Testament Greek; and that consequently this uniform Greek sense of the term is to be our absolute law in the interpretation of the Greek phrase, and may even be taken as determining the sense of its synonym nephesh in Hebrew instead of being determined by it. The supposed uniform sense of the Greek psyche or soul is by such objections supposed to be an immortal principle or person within the body, whose existence is not at all affected by the destruction of the body.

IV. Now if the Greek had any such uniform and established sense, we freely admit the tremendous power of the argument. It is one which we have ourselves used to determine the sense of the terms of the New Testament relative to future punishment, and to which no serious attempt at reply has ever been made. But to suppose that the same uniform sense is given to the term psyche or soul in the Greek language that is given in it to its terms for destruction, corruption perish, dying, is only to exhibit an utter ignorance of the variety of sense attributed in the Greek language to the term psyche according to the philosophical or theological sentiments of the speaker. Psyche, in the mouth of a Platonist, a Stoic, or an Epicurean, schools which represent the universal sentiments of Greek speakers and Greek thinkers, meant a totally different idea. It will be sufficient for this purpose to quote a passage from Arnobius, a Christian father of the third century, who was thoroughly conversant with Grecian sentiment. "This one," he says,—speaking of the condition of souls,—"thinks that they are both immortal, and survive the end of our earthly life; that one believes that they do not survive, but perish with the bodies themselves; the opinion of another, however, is that they suffer nothing immediately; but that, after the form of man has been laid aside, they are allowed to live a little longer, and then come under the power of death."

Such was the widely different ideas entertained of the soul by Grecian speakers. In the mouth of a Platonist it meant a never-dying principle, more properly, person; in the mouth of an Epicurean it did not mean a person at all, but simply animal life which perished with the body; in the mouth of the Stoic it meant a principle or person of greater vitality than the body, and which would therefore survive the body; but which was, after all, but mortal, and must therefore, after a period of survival, itself yield to death. It is quite evident, therefore, that we come to consider the meaning of the Greek psyche or soul wholly unfettered by any uniformity of sense attached to it in the Greek language. It had no such uniform sense. Grecian thinkers were wholly at variance with one another as to its meaning. Grecian speakers used it in senses wholly opposite to each other. In the mouth of one speaker it meant a person or individual; in the mouth of another it meant what was immortal, and could never die; in the mouth of another it meant what was mortal and must die. We are free, then, to examine the New Testament to see what is its view of the soul; we are free to assume that the sense attached to the nephesh or soul of the Old Testament is that attached to the psyche or soul of the New. The Grecian thinker was at fault upon the nature of the soul; we may examine wholly independently of him what God is pleased to tell us about it in his word.

V. We observed in our last chapter that the Old Testament attributed the possession of souls to the lower creatures as well as to man. We have now to remark that the New Testament does the same. In Revelation we are told that "the third part of the creatures that were in the sea and had life," literally, "and had souls," "died." It does not matter at all for our argument whether the creatures here spoken of be literally creatures living in the sea, i. e., fishes, or men symbolized by such creatures. In either case the possession of souls is attributed to the creatures themselves. Our translators have to some extent disguised this by their translation of "life;" but the Greek scholar will at once see the force of the original Greek, stronger by being put in the plural than if it was put in the singular.

VI. This possession by the lower creatures of soul naturally leads us to see, what we now will proceed to show, that the New Testament means by soul that which the Old Testament signified by nephesh; namely, animal life, that life which is possessed by every creature that has existence, and which perishes when that creature dies.

VII. Such was the primary meaning of the Greek psyche or soul in the Greek language. Thus, Liddell and Scott's Dictionary gives us as the primary sense, "the breath, life, spirit, of man and animals." It came also, with the spread of the Platonic theory, to convey the idea which this philosophy entertained of the psyche, viz., as an immortal principle within the body. That animal life is its true sense in the New Testament appears in our authorized version in spite of those strong Platonic prejudices which forced our translators to suppress this fact as much as possible. Let it be remembered that the English word "soul" is that which Platonic theorists prefer to "life" as the translation of psyche, as conveying from usage better that idea which they attach to the Greek psyche. Yet in spite of this strong prejudice, which led them as frequently as possible to translate psyche by soul, out of ninety-eight places in which the Greek psyche occurs, and is translated either by soul or life, they have been compelled to translate it "life" in no less than forty-one places, because "soul"—meaning by soul their sense of it—would be in those places wholly inadmissible. Nor will it be thought out of place in this inquiry that in the gospels, where our Lord's words are recorded, our translators have been compelled to translate psyche by "life" in twenty-four places, while they have translated it by "soul" in only twenty places.

VIII. Now what is the force of this fact? A certain Greek word, psyche, occurs in the New Testament a certain number of times. The translators of that New Testament had two different meanings in their minds for this word; one of those meanings was "animal life," such as all living creatures have; another was "an immortal principle," which they supposed to exist within man, and which they called by the word "soul." Their strong prejudice led them as frequently as possible to suppose that psyche was put for the supposed immortal principle; and yet with all their prejudices they are compelled to acknowledge by their translation of it, that in very nearly half the places where it occurs in the New Testament, it cannot by any possibility be supposed to mean the immortal principle; while, as used by Christ himself, they are forced to confess that in the majority of instances he cannot be supposed to have intended by the psyche an immortal principle in man. Surely such a confession, coming from such a source, is argument of no weak nature that "animal life," and not an "immortal principle," is the true and proper sense for psyche in the New Testament.—Henry Constable, in Rainbow.

(To be concluded.)

WILL CHRIST COME AGAIN?

V. HUNT.

Yes, he will, without sin unto salvation, to his waiting children. It will be a glorious event to all who are prepared to meet him in peace. To those who have been working for Jesus it will be a glorious day, because it will be pay day. It will be then that the penny of eternal life will be given to such as obeyed the voice of Jesus; for he says—"Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." But, says one, is Jesus coming to reward every man according to his works? I supposed man went to his reward at death; if good, into eternal happiness; if bad, into eternal misery. But, my friend, I would ask where you obtained your authority for such a supposition? Always be ready to give an answer for the hope formed within. Is there one text between the lids of the Bible, when taken in its full connection, that authorizes you so to believe and teach?

Again, I would ask, has God ever promised happiness and misery as the reward of well and evil doers? I answer most emphatically, No. I might bring up many texts to support my answer, but do not wish to be lengthy. Please turn to Rom. 6: 22, 23, and read—"But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death [not eternal life in misery, but death]; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." "The soul that sinneth it shall die" (Ezk. 18: 4), not live eternally in misery.

Candid reader and thinker, I would ask you what God meant when he said, "This day I set before you life and death," if both are to live throughout the boundless, endless ages of eternity, irrespective of character? In all sincerity, would it not be nonsense? Who can dodge the conclusion? Oh, that man would harmonize their opinions with the word of God, instead of trying to make the word of God agree with preconceived opinions of their own.

A king and some noblemen were once going out for an early morning's ride. Waiting a few moments for Lord Dartmouth, one of the party rebuked him for his tardiness. "I have learned to wait upon the King of kings before I wait upon any earthly sovereign," was his calm reply.

DELEGATES.—It should be remembered by all churches interested in the business to be transacted by the Advent Christian Association, at the National Campmeeting in Springfield (see notice), that it is necessary for them to appoint delegates to represent and express their wishes in relation to all matters connected with the Association. It is important that every church should send delegates. They should be appointed at once, so that they can make due preparation to be present.

After the appointment, a certificate should be given them, something like the following:

This is to certify that ——— was duly appointed by the ——— church as a delegate to the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, to be held at the National Campmeeting, in Springfield, Mass., Aug. 19th, 1872.

The certificate should be signed by some official members of the church, or by the one who presided in the meeting at the time of the choice.

Every church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every fifty members above twenty-five.

All ministers, in good standing, who are willing to co-operate with the Association, are considered as members without any further appointment.

ANONYMOUS—We frequently receive communications for the Crisis without any name. Those who wish to have their articles published should send their names with their communications. Please remember this.

THE commencement of the R. I. and Eastern Ct. Campmeeting is changed from Sept. 7th to Sunday, Sept. 1st, so as not to conflict with the Alton Bay meeting.

INQUIRING FOR OLD PATHS.

BRO. GRANT:—You are personally a stranger to me, and I am in all respects, probably, a stranger to you; but I have for many years read the Crisis, and know what your course is, especially on the doctrine of "holiness." I always look the first thing when the paper is received to see if you have an article on that subject, you or any one else. If I do not intrude on your time too much, will you please help me by answering one or two questions. I think I understand fully that in order to become holy in heart, there must be a full consecration of all to the service of the Lord. Now, every one that writes on this subject—you especially—speak of the deep and abiding peace that follows such a consecration. You say in the paper now before me, July 10th—"At our National Campmeeting we hope to see a host who will give up all to Jesus, make an entire consecration, and receive perfect peace and love." Now what I would ask you is this: Does this "perfect peace and love" always follow an entire consecration? and if immediately, or within a short time of such consecration this "peace" is not received, is it sufficient evidence that the consecration is not complete, and that there is something reserved or kept back?

I have been for several years very much interested in this subject of holiness, and have sought earnestly to learn the will of the Lord, for I am satisfied that without pure hearts we shall never enter the kingdom. I have a number of times tried to give up all; but after a time, on not receiving peace, would think that there must be something wrong in myself, though I could not tell what. I would then become discouraged for a time, but I cannot rest in that way. The command, "Be ye holy," is always before me; and I cannot live to the glory of God unless I belong wholly to him. For the last few days I have been sick, part of the time suffering severe pain, and I have had time to go over this subject once more, and I have made an entire consecration of all I have, and all I am, to the Lord, and I mean to keep my gift on the altar. I have asked the Lord that if there is any thing that I have not given up, that he would make it known to me, and I know that there is a perfect willingness—more than that—an intense desire that I may never again have a will of my own; that I may not live, but Jesus Christ live in me.

Well, now you will say, "you must believe that Jesus accepts this offering." I do believe it, just as firmly as I believe that I am now writing this letter. I believe that Jesus has accepted me two days ago. I am perfectly willing to confess this in the prayer-meeting, or anywhere the Lord says confess it; but there is no more peace than I have known for months before. I feel as though I was at sea without an anchor, and that I shall not be safe until I am anchored to the ROCK. Now understand me, Bro. Grant, I am not seeking selfishly for a blessing merely that I may be happy, but that I may do more work in the Master's vineyard here, and be fitted for his kingdom. If Jesus says to me, "I want you to work in the shadow until I want you in the sunshine," then the shadow is the place for me. My trouble does not lie there. You say in this paper, "What is called the blessing of sanctification is the result of this entire consecration. The sanctification precedes the "great peace and perfect love; but the change is as marked, as definite, as great, as the one at conversion. None but those who have experienced it are aware of the blessed results of entire consecration to the Lord." Now, can there be entire consecration without this great change? or is there a lack in my consecration because I have not found this blessing of perfect peace and love? MRS. H. M. BUTTERS.

Kasota, Le Sueur Co., Minn., July 17th.

SR. B., we take pleasure in answering your inquiries, and are rejoiced to find you in possession of "an intense desire" that your will may be lost in the Lord's will, and that henceforth Christ may live in you, as an as abiding guest. Until such is the prevailing feeling, one may not expect to be kept in "perfect peace," and enjoy the full assurance that "all is well."

We have taken some pains to inquire of those who have had long and deep experience in Christian life, and who have had extensive opportunities for observation; and they inform us that persons who consecrate all to Christ do not always receive the perfect love and peace at once; but, instead, are called to pass through a very severe and thorough discipline for the purpose of subduing and crucifying the "old man." After their entire consecration, it is frequently the case that they see themselves in a worse light than before they surrendered themselves entirely to Christ; because the Spirit of God illuminates the heart so that its true condition is seen. It is quite like one who mistrusts his lungs and heart are diseased, and consults an eminent physician, who applies his stethoscope, and surprises his patient by informing him that those organs are in a very bad condition. Before the man was examined he did not apprehend any danger. His next step was to submit entirely to the physician to apply remedies for his cure. During the early part of the treatment, he may not feel as well as he did before he had the examination.

The person under conviction for sin does not feel as well as he did before he was convicted. It may be some days after he feels willing to submit to Christ, before he gets the clear evidence that his sins are pardoned. This may be owing to a lack of faith, or some other cause; so, when one makes an entire and perpetual consecration of themselves, and their all to Christ; the perfect love and peace may not be felt at once. The first lesson may be to learn to live by faith. The only point to settle is, have we given our all to Jesus? If so, then to whom do we belong? Why, of course to the Lord. "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey?" Rom. 6: 16. Does the Savior want us? Yes. Concerning this point there is no doubt. When will he take us? Now. Do we now submit all to him, to be used as he considers best? If so, then we are all his. Can he keep us? Yes. Then trust him, and acknowledge him in all your ways, and in due time he will surely fill you with his Spirit, the fruit of which is love, joy and peace. Perfect love and peace are not obtained short of perfect submission to Christ. So long as our wills are in opposition to the Lord, we are not in full harmony with him; and until there is a complete union between us and him, He cannot express full approbation; therefore while in such a state, our peace and love will not be perfect.

Entire consecration to the Lord must precede the cleansing. He forces no one to be clean. It must be their earnest choice. Until one truly loves purity, he will not "hunger and thirst after righteousness." The Lord does not cleanse one till he submits to have it done. He must confess and forsake all his sins, before he obtains pardon. That which is necessary to secure pardon at the first is necessary to keep him free from condemnation.

It may be asked is there any difference between a person's condition at conversion, and when entirely consecrated? In other words, is not what is called sanctification only being reclaimed from a backslidden state? We think not. All testify, so far as we know, who have had experience, that when they received perfect love they were in advance of where they were at conversion. No new law or principle is introduced at the time of entire sanctification to the Lord, differing from the one at conversion; but a new object is presented to the mind, which is not often seen at conversion. The thing most desired by the person under conviction is to obtain pardon for his past sins.

When the evidence is received that his sins are forgiven, he feels much joy. From this starting point, he may grow in grace, and learn from the Scriptures that he may be filled with the Spirit continually, and be kept free from impatience, pride, selfishness, love of the world, evil imaginations, hatred, variance, and all other impure things, which he finds springing up in his heart from time to time, disturbing his peace.

When he arrives at this point in christian experience, he must do one of two things: either follow the teaching of the word and Spirit and consecrate every faculty and his all to Christ by a definite, special, everlasting covenant, or else lose his "first love," and bring himself into a condition where at times he feels condemnation. This test and decision is sometimes made within a few days after conversion, and the person enters at once into the "higher life." It is to be feared that the majority resist the first promptings of the Spirit that would lead them to entire consecration. One great reason for this is because so few take "The way of holiness," and so little is said about it, that but little interest is felt in the subject, and it has even become unpopular among professors of religion.

After persons have refused to consecrate their all to Christ, and have fallen into condemnation, they often become discouraged and go back to the world; while others continue the warfare between foes within and foes without; sometimes conquering, and some times conquered; sometimes free, and sometimes in bondage; till they feel a burning desire for purity, and the restoration of their "first love. At this point, they break off from all bad habits of thinking, talking and acting, so far as they know, which brings them back again to the spot where they first felt impressed that it was duty to sanctify themselves wholly to the Lord, but refused; and like the children of Israel, afterwards wandered in the wilderness. There have been but few Calebs and Joshuas, who have obeyed the Lord perfectly. Many have fallen in the wilderness, and will never reach the promised land.

It may be inquired, why press the subject now? Because we are almost to the promised heavenly Canaan; and our glorious Joshua—Jesus—is about to lead his children into the everlasting kingdom. On this point we are most fully settled. Christ is coming soon. Tell it everywhere, and to everybody. Proclaim it upon the house-tops, by the wayside, in the shops, stores, streets and lanes of the city, highways and hedges. Signs in heaven and earth proclaim Messiah near; hence it becomes of the first and highest importance that all, who wish to be ready to meet him, should be "pure in heart," and "holy in all manner of conversation." Thank the Lord, the bride is getting "ready." The glorious marriage day is at hand. Cheer up, dear pilgrims, your redemption is near.

WE are saddened to learn that Bro. P. G. Bowman is sick in Lansingburgh, N. Y. He is at Bro. Thos. W. Brooks'. Pray for him.

CHRIST'S MISSION.

It is often thoughtfully affirmed that if Christ had not come into the world and died for man, the race would have eternally remained dead, we do not believe this assumption, for this makes the first death the penalty for sin, instead of the "second death;" besides involving the ludicrous conclusion that the penalty is executed before the arrival of the judgment. But as truly as there is hereafter to be a judgment against sinners, so truly sinners must be there to experience its execution; and this requires their release from death's prison; and this doom would have been just as certain if Christ had never died, and on a larger scale, too; for Christ's death was not to make certain the damnation of sinners; that was already determined, but to exempt them from that damnation, by dying for them, on condition that they would enter his service. If the race would have remained eternally dead if Christ had not come, then either there would have been no future punishment for sin, contrary to Paul's statement—"It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." So the execution of judgment cannot be experienced in the first death, for the judgment itself comes after this.

The whole matter is settled by correct answers to the following questions: Did Christ die to liberate us from the punishment for our sins after the infliction of that punishment? Or did he die to exempt us from the infliction of the punishment? If his death was not to exempt us from the penalty which our sins have merited, but simply to redeem us from that penalty after its infliction, then it follows that those who are not thus redeemed will eternally remain dead; thus arguing that the wicked dead will never rise. And this claim that Christ's mission was to redeem men from a penalty-death, is the chief cornerstone of this theory of the non-resurrection of the wicked dead. It is true that Christ will redeem us from a penalty-death—he will exempt us from the penalty-death; but the death which Christ will release us from precedes the judgment, while the penalty or punishment for sin, must come after the judgment; and as before seen, the judgment itself comes after ordinary death.

The foundation of this error lies in the supposition that God threatened to punish Adam with death for eating of the forbidden tree. This is not so; God simply told Adam what the result would be if he should eat of that tree, namely, death; and in view of this fact, he forbade his partaking: "Thou shalt not eat of it; for [because] in the day that thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt die," (margin) or become a dying man. This was to be the result of eating of a tree prolific with a death element, and not a punishment. God forbade the act in view of the result man would thereby incur, and man's transgression thus brought death, for if man had not disobeyed, this death element would not have been infused into his nature; so "sin entered into the world, and death by sin," it being a sin to eat after God had forbidden it. Adam, as well as his posterity must appear at the judgment to answer for every sin of his life, unless pardoned. God never threatened to punish Adam with temporal death for eating of the forbidden tree, but simply told him that it would cause him to die. The same act has caused his race to die. This is a calamity, not a punishment. When the judgment arrives, Adam and his posterity will be summoned by divine power to give account. This would have occurred, even if Christ had not died. Christ's death exempts the saint from the death due his sin—not from temporal death. W. S.

WHAT IS INVOLVED IN PREACHING CHRIST.

If we preach Christ fully, as the apostles did, we must preach several important features of truth which have been thrown into the shade by theologians of the present generation. To merely preach the crucifixion is not to preach Christ fully; nor is it enough to connect this with his resurrection and intercession. We here call attention to a few items involved in preaching Christ, in addition to those already referred to:

1. "Christ" signifies "the Anointed," or a Prince, which is an heir to a throne; for Gabriel calls him "Messiah the Prince," and Messiah being interpreted is Christ,—or the Anointed. So Christ signifies an Anointed one, who is a "Prince" or an heir to some throne; and to place the matter beyond cavil or speculation, Gabriel tells us just what throne he is heir to: "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David" (Luke 1: 32); nor has he yet been elevated to that throne, but has an honorary seat upon another throne for a limited time, as a "Prince" (not as King); for Peter affirmed—"The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior" (Acts 5: 31). Hence, Christ is still the anointed Prince—still heir to David's throne; and we cannot fully preach Christ without preaching him as coming King.

This "Messiah the Prince" was to enter the world sixty-nine weeks from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, and was to be "cut off" in sixty-two weeks from the time the walls thereof should be rebuilt. Jesus came into the world at the right time to prove himself the true "Messiah, the Prince." As David was anointed a long time before he was crowned, so Jesus is the Christ, or the Anointed, a long time previous to beginning his reign. Jesus is not merely an anointed one, but pre-eminently the Anointed—the only heir to the throne.

Paul, in preaching Christ, asserts that Jesus, while "before Pontius Pilate, witnessed a good confession" (1 Tim. 6: 13); and upon examination we find that the "confession" referred to was drawn forth by a charge of aspiring to the Kingship:—"And the whole multitude arose and led him to Pilate. And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying that he himself is Christ a King; [Kriston Basilea einai—literally, Anointed to be King.] And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou King of Jews? And he answered and said, Thou sayest it" (Luke 23: 1–3). What did Jesus mean by that singular reply, "Thou sayest it"? Did he mean to confess that part of the charge arrayed against him, concerning which Pilate was then interrogating him, namely, that he was "anointed to be a King"? Or did he mean it as a denial? We can learn his meaning by comparing two reports of his conversation before the high priest, where he used similar language, and where that language cannot be misunderstood—"And the high priest answered and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God. And Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said, [or, Thou sayest it.]." Matt. 26: 63, 64. Luke gives the following report of the same conversation—"Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the son of the Blessed? And Jesus said, I am." Mark 14: 61, 62. From these two records of one conversation, we learn that Jesus used the saying, "Thou hast said," or "Thou sayest it," to signify, "I am." Then this was his meaning in his reply to Pilate. Thus Christ, before Pontius Pilate, confessed himself a prospective King—"King of the Jews"; not to reign as a mortal King over mortal Jews, but as an immortal King over immortal Jews, "who are of faith," and also "reign over the Gentiles" who become "fellow heirs, and of the same body," on the principle of faith. John gives a fuller record of Christ's confession before Pilate—"Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a King then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a King, [or, 'I am' to be a King]. To this end was I born." John 18: 37.

Then to preach Christ fully, we must preach him as a coming King; and finding it necessary to be born "to this end," it is evident that he will be King over physical beings, but not till the seventh trump shall sound, when the resurrection shall come, and "the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever." Rev. 11: 15.

3. To preach Christ fully, we must preach him, as Paul did, as Abraham's great "seed," who is to possess the promised "land" jointly with Abraham. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3: 16. This involves the preaching of Christ as the future possessor of the "land" once promised to Abraham; for when he possesses it, Abraham will also possess it with him. As Abraham is now dead, and cannot possess it till made alive, and as Christ is now in heaven, and consequently cannot possess it till his return, the resurrection and the coming of Christ are made prerequisites to the fulfillment of God's great promise of "land" to Abraham and Christ. As we cannot preach Christ fully without preaching him as the possessor of the very land which Paul says is the "world" (Rom. 4: 13), and that, too, after the resurrection, we are happy to hear Paul say, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. 3: 29. Through Christ, the great heir, God has multiplied Abraham's seed on the principle of faith, so that in addition to Abraham's special "seed," to whom the promise ran, Abraham has now a multitudinous seed, who are "heirs" to the same earth-wide homestead; for "they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. . . . So, then, they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham." Gal. 3: 7, 8. Thus in preaching Christ as the seed of Abraham, hereafter to occupy the "land" promised to Abraham, we must also preach the saints as "heirs according to the promise"—heirs to the same land, to be possessed when the reign of sin and death is over. Christ immortal, Abraham then immortal, the saints all immortal, shall come from the east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham in the kingdom of heaven.

4. In order to preach Christ fully, we must preach him as the "seed" referred to in God's oath to David,—an heir of David to occupy David's throne "as the days of heaven"; for David "being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne" (Acts 2: 30); that this oath-promised heir to David's throne is Christ; and to preach Christ fully we must preach him as the future ruler on David's throne, in the land promised jointly to Abraham and Christ—not a present ruler on some other throne, in some other locality, where neither David nor his throne ever had an existence. This great gospel proclamation is one grand chain of several links inseparably coupled together; and we cannot claim one link of the chain without being compelled to accept every link—the chain entire. Let us observe (1), the starting point is "Christ," and that signifies "the Anointed." (2) Christ confessed that he was "anointed to be King." (3) He is heir to a certain "land," which Paul interprets to signify the "world," situated "northward, southward, eastward, and westward"; and (4) he is to occupy David's throne in the very land that he shall possess; and where he shall reign, there all the saints will dwell, for he will receive them unto himself. W. S.

WHY DO IT?—Are you not the Lord's stewards? And does not the Lord wish his money, which you are holding, used for the spread of his truth, instead of being used for the support of a system of fables, opposed to the truth of heaven? Then why see the cause of truth languish for the want of funds to make it prosper, while you lavish your means to support those who are wedded to error? Some are doing this very thing on the plea that they have no meetings at home; and so pay those who preach error. Rather send your money to help spread the truth in other localities. Why spend the Lord's money to build up what your brethren are laboring to demolish? If you do it to get the good will of neighbors, better look after the good will of God. W. S.

WHY NOT REPLY?—As a general rule, we do not reply to the false reports which our enemies may give of our labors, through their papers, because (1) our replies, coming through another paper, would not reach one in a thousand who had read the report. (2) It would be too low a stoop to reply to some who have such a relish for falsification, and who would love to be even kicked into notoriety. We cannot accommodate them. Our mind has been called to this matter by several recent items, one of which is a boastful allusion to a discussion held with myself a dozen years ago (reported a dozen years after it ended). It made several converts from that church to the truth, and turned none away from it; also a house of worship is erected where I then lived. But the boaster conceals these items, and after twelve years silence, cries victory. "Better late than never." W. S.

IS GOD THE AUTHOR OF EVIL?—We are sometimes inquired of whether the following texts do not teach that God is the author of evil: "Shall there be evil in a city, and the Lord hath not done it?" (Amos 3: 6.) "I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these things." (Isa. 45: 7.) Evil is sometimes used to signify a calamity or chastizement from the hand of the Lord, in which sense only is the Lord ever represented as the author of evil—never in the sense of being the author of sin. Evil does not always signify sinful, but sometimes brings to view something calamitous, which not being regarded good is called "evil." W. S.

"STRENGTH OF CHARACTER."

The following remarks, clipped from a secular paper, are worthy of consideration:—

"Strength of character consists of two things—power of will and power of self restraint. It requires two things therefore, for its existence—strong feelings and strong command over them.

Now it is here we make a great mistake; we mistake strong feelings for strong character. A man who bears all before him, before whose frown domestics tremble, and bursts of fury make the children of the household quake—because he has his will obeyed, and his own way in all things, we call him a strong man. The truth is, that he is a weak man; it is his passions that are strong; he that is mastered by them is weak.

You must measure the strength of a man by the power of the feeling he subdues; not by the power of the feeling which subdues him. And hence composure is very often the highest result of strength.

Did you ever see a man receive a flagrant insult, and only grow a little pale, and then reply quietly? That is a man spiritually strong. Or did we ever see a man in anguish stand as if carved out of solid rock, mastering himself? That is strength. He who, with strong passions, remains chaste; he who, keenly sensitive, with many powers of indignation in him, can be provoked and yet restrain himself and forgives—these are the strong men, the spiritual heroes."

But characters not naturally thus strong, can be made so by strict gospel training. We must conquer carnality by grace. W. S.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

CAMPMEETING, ORDER, ETC.

We should contemplate and make suitable arrangements for all work before we commence. Preparation for campmeeting should begin some time before the time. As fast as we think of something to carry, put it down in a book. If we leave it until we get ready to start, and get in a hurry, we forget some things we feel the need of all the week. But if we put them down in a book, we can look and see it. Always take extra clothing, if you can. Some one will need it, if you don't, and you will feel better for accommodating them, for some come that cannot bring a blanket.

TENT ROOM. The committee generally get large tents engaged to accommodate those that come without tents. It is getting to be difficult to engage those tents from this fact: they have come year after year, paid the freight on the tent both ways, hired help to pitch it and take it down, and spent a week as tent-master, and have had the bills to pay themselves, when those that had a shelter found and prepared for them, went off not paying anything for their privileges received. Some are heedless in this respect. These facts are to stir you up to your duty. Now we have engaged two or three large tents for the Springfield meeting, and propose to the tent-masters to tax ten cents a night for tent-room. That is very low, much less than you can provide for yourself. All reasonable people will say this is right. The really poor are not included in this. H. MUNGER.

OUR THIRD TENT-MEETING.

The third tent-meeting for this season was held at Marblehead, and has just closed. The selectmen liberally welcomed Bro. Clothey to the use of the Common, on which to pitch the tent. It was a delightful spot, also very convenient for all the citizens that might be interested to come and hear; and many in the immediate vicinity could hear without leaving their houses. The tent was erected July 6th, and the meeting commenced by preaching in the evening. The smiles of heaven were upon us. The people on Sunday (7th) ventured to come to the tent; when, by the help of the Lord and the brethren, the meeting went on briskly. Many in and about the tent listened with attention. Thus the meeting progressed day after day, preaching afternoon and evening, prayer-meetings and children's meetings being continually interspersed.

As we began to make prominent the Bible doctrine that we feel is so important to get before the people, they began to be more interested. Our afternoon social, prayer and conference, with children's meetings, were profitable for the spiritual benefit of those who enjoyed them. The tent was crowded evenings with attentive hearers. The meeting continued its daily onward course till July 22nd, including three Sundays. That dispensational message, due this present generation, was freely and faithfully presented to the people; viz., the signs of our Lord's soon coming, with the certainty of a literal resurrection of the dead, the restitution of the earth, and that it will be the home of the saints. Experimental and practical truth, with holiness to the Lord, and holy living in this world, were not left out. Many different gifts we brought in to preach during the meeting, and the interest increased to the last. Brn. Barnes, Potter, Finney, and Mooney, were with us during the meeting. Bro. M. Grant came the last week with his chart, preaching four evenings, carrying us over that unmistakable pathway in prophecy, the four universal empires, bringing us to the end somewhere about here, when the God of heaven will set up a kingdom that shall stand forever. This created an interest, and many of the people of Marblehead heard what they never heard before, and what they never would have heard had the tent never been pitched upon their Common.

The citizens of Marblehead used us very courteously, and we tried to make it reciprocal. A deep interest was created in the truths we preached, and the seed sown will yield fruit. I pray it may be abundant. The Methodist minister visited us often in a friendly manner, preaching one afternoon under the tent. The Young Men's Christian Association accepted an invitaiion, and held two Sunday evening sessions with us under the tent. Thus the meeting closed up under the most favorable auspices, specially to the cause of Christ and truth among them. We offer many kind wishes and fervent prayers for the people of Marblehead, specially for those who opened their doors to receive us, and those who labored with us in the gospel. Your solicitude and care for us, at the tent and at your homes, was appreciated. The Lord reward you at the resurrection of the just. L. BOUTELL.

PUNCTUATE.—Were it possible, the most fearful consequences might hinge upon imperfect punctuation. Not only have lawsuits turned upon the story of a witness, but upon the tail of a comma. Even one's salvation seems in the case below to be suspended upon the slender thread of an omitted pause. Elder ——— wrote: "I will preach at ——— church next Sabbath. Subject: All who do not believe will be damned at eight o'clock precisely." As the Elder held his hearers long after "eight o'clock," and both orthodox and skeptics passed unharmed from the house, it is likely that a comma was intended after the word "damned," in the notice.

MEETINGS AND PARTINGS.

For the past eight days, the dear ones have gathered under the Mission tent, that was pitched near us to worship the dear Savior, and try and get others to go with them to the better land; and although I was not privileged to meet with the dear ones to worship there, yet my heart and voice went up to Him whom my soul loveth in earnest cries that the word spoken to them would take deep root in the heart, and bring forth fruit unto eternal life. Praise the holy name of Jesus, I had the sweet and cheering pleasure of seeing and conversing with the dear ones of like precious faith, which was to me a season of refreshing, among whom was our Editor, dear Bro. Grant, whom I had so earnestly longed to see, and had for years past prayed earnestly that I might have the blessed privilege of seeing and conversing with him, and of hearing one sermon preached here at the house by him; and I do truly feel that it has been one of the most blessed and encouraging scenes of my life. I felt, as I listened to his earnest words of instruction and admonition, that if I listened to them and was not benefited by them, I must give an account for it in the last day. O, it was heart-searching, soul-cheering, and hope-inspiring; and my heart has been filled anew with love and hope; and I feel more than ever that I must gain that heavenly shore, where all will meet no more to separate; and I am searching my own heart, examining my own self, to see if there are any spots on my garments; for truly, as our dear brother said, I know we must be spotless and pure to be permitted to go to the marriage supper of the Lamb." I feel that it is our duty, as well as privilege, to enjoy present salvation from all sin; and am trying with all my heart to live there. I can say—

"Humbly at thy cross I bow,
Jesus saves, he saves me now."

Blessed be the name of the Lord, I feel blest while I lie here and pen these few lines. I know the privileges I have had for the past few days have done me good. I am cheered, and encouraged to double my diligence, to walk prayerfully and watchfully all the way.

The sad hour for parting, of course, must come; and while I bade the dear ones good-bye, and they hastened to the depot to take the cars, with tear-dimmed eyes I offered up fervent, heart-felt petitions for each, that we might all meet again—

"Meet again when life is o'er,
Meet again to part no more;
How it cheers the drooping heart,
When from friends we're called to part.

Meet again, how passing sweet,
Friends long lost again to meet;
Care-worn souls, by tempests driven,
O how sweet to meet in Eden."

Yes, thrice blessed to meet in Eden. O how it does cheer my weary, sad heart to-day. It is far more blessed than I can ever express in words, to know, when we clasp the hand of those we love so dearly, and say "Good-bye," that one day, if faithful, we shall all meet again. O my Father, hasten that blessed day. I can truly say, Let it fly swiftly. Let the moments haste; let the blessed morning dawn. O Jesus, Jesus, blessed Redeemer, let the kingdom come. Let us see thee, and meet the dear ones we love so well.

As I bade the dear ones good-bye, and sadness filled my heart to have them leave me, I thought that no wonder the disciples felt to mourn and weep when the dear Master told them he was going away. How sad their hearts must have been; yet the thought of meeting him again cheered them; and so it is with me, as I lie here suffering excruciating pains constantly, unable to see only those that take the pains to come and see me, I am cheered as they part from me by the blessed hope of meeting (if faithful) with them again in a far better and brighter land than this, where adieus and farewells are never spoken. I sigh for that home, and I feel that I have caught a glimpse of that better shore, and I know that if I once gain that land I shall never suffer more,—praise Jesus. My heart is filled up full with love and praise to God. O how good he is. Jesus is so precious. Glory to God for what I feel in my heart this afternoon. Why truly, with this blessed peace and rest in Jesus, I can bear anything. All for Jesus.

"O, the prospect, it is so transporting,
Savior, hasten thy coming, we pray."

God bless every dear saint that came to see me during the meeting for all their words of cheer, help and kindness. God bless and reward you all. Dear ones, pray for me. God bless you all, is the earnest prayer of my heart. Praise Jesus forever. I have been abundantly blest. Glory to God forever.

Yours in hope of speedy redemption,

THERIA B. WEAVER.

Correspondence.

From Sr. Lydia M. Collins.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to the dear saints scattered abroad; I mean those who are looking for the speedy return of the Master. Dearly beloved brethren and sisters, I appeal to you in behalf of Sr. Bruce. She has lectured in this place to the satisfaction of the friends here. She stopped with me one week. I do believe her to be a humble child of God. You need not be afraid of her because she has been a Spiritualist, but send for her all the quicker, and bid her Godspeed. She is capable of doing much good. It was the power of God that took her from the devil's ranks, and placed her in the vineyard of the Lord. She is in needy circumstances. Put your hands in your pockets, you that have a portion of the Lord's money, and send a free-will offering to Sr. Bruce; it will make her heart glad. O, how I did want to be rich when she was here, that I might have supplied her needs. Then again I thought, perhaps if I were rich I might be covetous, and if that would be the case, Lord, keep me poor. I know there are those who would esteem it a privilege to help her, that she may enter into her field of labor more fully. I trust that a word to those who are expecting Jesus soon will be sufficient.

[Sr. A. H. Bruce's P. O. address is now Oswego, N. Y. ED.]

From Bro. Thomas Green.

BRO. GRANT:—Some time since, as I was traveling around, preaching the glorious gospel, I stopped at a new church, where I was to preach two days. The first day (Saturday) we opened with a general prayer-meeting, all the brethren present taking part in turn, after which five minutes recess. Before preaching, one of the brethren, who had a very sick child, requested me to publish that we would meet next morning, and spend one hour in especial prayer to Almighty God for the recovery of his little son. I did so, and requested that during the evening the brethren should examine themselves, and prepare their hearts, so that we could come boldly to the throne of grace, in full assurance of faith in behalf of the little sufferer. Agreeable to appointment, we met next morning; but before the meeting was opened, the brother sent a message to us not to pray for his child's recovery, as he found him mending when he returned home the day before; that the fever was entirely abated; and that we could spend the time in thanksgiving to God for having answered our prayers before a word was uttered. The child continued to amend, and in a short time was as well as ever.

This is written to encourage those in affliction, when all earthly hope fails, to look to Him who heareth the young ravens when they cry, and who hath said, Whatsoever you ask in my name, I will give it. "The prayer of faith shall save the sick." "Whosoever cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." O how great a privilege is this, that we are permitted to know that the God we serve is a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God; always ready to hear and answer our most feeble prayers. All for Jesus. All for Jesus. My all is on the altar.

GREAT BRITAIN.

THE JESUITS.

LONDON, July 23. In the Commons, this afternoon, there was some discussion upon the subject of the arrival of French Communists in England, during which a significant question was put to the government by Sir Robert Peel, member for Tamworth. After alluding to the fact that Germany had expelled the Jesuits Peel asked the Premier whether the government intended to enforce the section of the Roman Catholic relief act of 1829, which provides for the banishment from England of all members of the Society of Jesus? Mr. Gladstone, in reply, said that the subject was an important one and must be taken into serious consideration by the government. He added that, though the law in question was now nearly a half century old, no steps had yet been taken for its enforcement.

GENEVA, July 22. The claims for damages caused by the vessels Boston, Sallie, Jeff Davis, Joy and Music have been dismissed by the arbitrators. The demurrer of Great Britain concerning the other vessels is overruled. The decision, it is believed, awards $2,600,000 damages for the depredations. The Board took up the case of the Alabama to-day.

RATHER STRANGE.—An extraordinary letter has been addressed from the Athenæum Club, London, to Prof. Tyndall, and has been published in the current Contemporary Review. The writer essays to measure the efficacy of prayers for the sick, and asks to have a test made, which is minutely described. Prof. Tyndall puts before the letter an opinion of his own, to the effect that it is "desirable to have clearer notions than we now possess of the action of Divine Providence in physical affairs." His correspondent proposes: "That one single ward or hospital, under the care of first-rate physicians and surgeons, containing certain numbers of patients afflicted with those diseases which have been best studied, and of which the mortality rates are best known, whether the diseases are those which are treated by medical or by surgical remedies, should be, during a period of not less, say, than three or five years, made the object of special prayer by the whole body of the faithful, and that, at the end of that time the mortality rates should be compared with the past rates, and also with that of other leading hospitals, similarly well managed, during the same period. Granting that time is given, and numbers are sufficiently large, so as to insure a minimum of error from accidental disturbing causes, the experiment will be exhaustive and complete."

No information is at hand as yet, stating whether or not the experiment is likely to be tried.

DOMESTIC.

Williamsport, Penn., July 22. The strike of the mill workmen here has assumed a serious phase. The strikers assembled about 10 o'clock this morning and marched to the upper mill yards. At the mill of Filbert & Otto the police were drawn up in line to guard the place. The crowd assailed them with brickbats, broke through the line, and went into the mills, the men who were at work fleeing through the lumber piles for their lives.

Several fights occurred, and many men were wounded. One boy was struck with a handspike by the foreman of a mill and seriously wounded. The Chief of Police came near having his arm broken by a blow from a club. A special policeman was severely wounded, he being struck on the head by an iron bar. Policeman Foresman was hit in the face with a brick and badly wounded. Policeman Strycker was struck by two clubs which were thrown at him, and officer Pratt had his clothes badly torn. The strikers then moved to the mills below the city, closing those at work. The military was called out, and is now parading the streets. The greatest excitement prevails. The strikers meet to-morrow morning. Some shooting occurred this evening, but not of a serious character.

☞ A large and brilliant meteor, similar to that which passed over San Francisco last month, descended near Winnemucca, Nevada, Saturday evening. It was in sight for several seconds, and after it disappeared a loud report was heard and a shock was felt, which was mistaken for that of an earthquake by the inhabitants, who rushed from their houses.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association are members of the A. A. M. Society. A. W. S.

THE LORD willing, there will be a campmeeting at Salisbury, Conn., commencing Monday, Sept. 16th, to continue one week. The grove is commodiously located about one-fourth of a mile from the depot, at Salisbury Centre. Brn. H. Pratt, H. K. Flagg, and O. D. Woodruff, with other preaching brethren, who can make it convenient to attend this feast of tabernacles, are earnestly invited to come in the fulness of the divine blessing, and help to proclaim the truth in the name of the Lord. Committee: S. C. Hancock, Joshua Burton, Silas Hart.

The following named gentlemen of Salisbury, though not in the faith with us, have kindly volunteered to serve with the committee in arranging for and promoting the interests of the meeting:—Wm. Conklin, H. Whitbeck, E. J. Hicks, A. C. Silvernail, Wm. Parsons. The Lord grant so to manifest his grace and power that these, with many others, may be truly converted ere the meeting shall close. Mr. Hicks keeps a public house within about fifty rods of the ground, and promises to entertain such as wish for the hospitalities of his house, at as reasonable a rate as possible; and this promise we feel the fullest assurance he will redeem. The interest he manifested in our late meeting, and the kindness with which we were welcomed by himself and family to the hospitalities of his house, will be to us a lasting source of gratitude and pleasure.

As the meeting will be easy of access to brethren and sisters from Western Conn. and Eastern New York, we hope to see as general a gathering as possible. Come, brethren, filled with the Holy Ghost, bringing your tents with bedding, and provisions for yourselves, and as far as possible for those who have none, and let us have a real free, old-fashioned, primitive campmeeting, in the name of the Lord. S. C. HANCOCK.

TENT MEETING.—The Lord willing, the Conn. tent will be pitched at Woodbridge, Conn., Saturday, August 10th, to hold over Sunday the 18th. It is hoped that there will be a general gathering to the meeting of all the lovers of Jesus and his truth. Brethren and sisters in adjoining towns, come and assist us. Those not wishing to bring provisions with them can procure board reasonably at the Hotel near by. Elders H. K. Flagg, Ripley, Steele, Woodruff, and others, are expected to be present. Z. D. BAIRD.

GROVE MEETING.—There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, Sept. 1st, by Eld. J. G. Smith. If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Refreshments will be furnished by Mr. Smith, the proprietor, to all who wish. S. O. WELCH.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to come to Haverhill, Mass., should correspond with Eld. D. M. Leavitt, or W. H. Keay.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, Saturday, Sept. 7th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Particulars hereafter. Eld. J. G. Smith, of Farmington, N. H., has the superintendence of the tent department. All wishing to rent or sell, hire or purchase tents, can correspond with him at that place. Prices should be stated. To save confusion, all who purpose to build permanent tents this year, whether they have spoken for a lot or not, are requested to notify Bro. Smith of the size of tent and location of lot by the first of August.

J. COUCH, for the Committee.

VERMONT CAMPMEETING.—We have leased the beautiful grounds at Bethel, and our annual camp will be pitched about Aug. 31st. Particulars soon. The committee feel the need of funds for improving and lighting the ground, and building a preacher's stand large enough to store our lumber after the meeting. Who will help? Let those who have a mind send money or pledges to me, or J. H. Harding, Ely, Vt.; Geo. C. Arms, Waterbury, Vt.; Stephen French, Rutland, Vt.; or S. G. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt. Pray much for this meeting, for good order, power, and salvation.

H. F. CARPENTER, for Committee.

☞ THE Springfield American Life and Advent Campmeeting will be held in Springfield, in Carew's grove, commencing Aug. 4th, and continue to Aug. 15th. Ample accommodations will be provided for all that come with board and lodging on the ground. Board, 80 cents per day. Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad, Conn. R. R. and Hartford and N. H. R. R. will be reduced the same as last year, from July 25th to Aug. 27th inclusive. We cordially invite all to come who love the Lord and his coming, and desire a preparation for translation when Jesus comes. THOS. R. WEAVER, Secretary of Campmeeting Committee.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPMEETING.—The undersigned committee, appointed at the recent annual conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But, on account of other meetings being held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided on by conference. It will therefore commence August 10th, the Lord willing, and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind, and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to this feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in this State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, one mile and a half north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (direct) R. R., ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens agree to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cts. will be charged.

A boarding tent will be on the ground furnishing potatoes, meat, bread, etc., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at 85 cts. per day to those who do not. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground. Let all come well supplied with over-coats, over-shoes, thick shawls, coverlids, straw and pillow ticks, etc., etc. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents. Let all desiring tents, correspond immediately (enclosing a stamp for the answer) with Bro. D. T. COOPER, 72 Mt. Hope Avenue, Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season.

WM. E. BROWN.
SAM'L H. WITHINGTON.
PERRY M. GRINNELL.

THE NEW YORK A. C. CONFERENCE will hold its next quarterly session, the Lord willing, in the large State Tent, on the Fairport camp-ground, during the forthcoming campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at nine o'clock Wednesday morning (Aug. 14th), when Bro. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which, the meeting will be held at such hours as shall least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected, and will be submitted, for districting the conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early. MILTON R. MILES, Pres. WM. E. BROWN, Sec.

TO NEW YORK ADVENTISTS.—Dear Brn. and Srs., shall we not have a general rally at our next campmeeting? You now have an excellent opportunity to do good and get good. By your personal presence, prayers, and labors of love, much good may be done. We should be a consecrated people. Let not ease, love of money, or other selfish considerations, prevent us from throwing the whole weight of our moral and personal influence on the side of the cause we profess to love. What we do, rather than what we say, is the true test of our religious earnestness. Come, then, to this meeting armed with faith and winged by prayer. Its location is central, beautiful, and convenient. Let all remember, too, that at this meeting our first quarterly conference for the year is to be held. The New York State tent will be pitched in the grove, and smaller tents can be procured of James Field, Rochester, at the following prices:

Tents 24×30 feet	per week,	$13.00
" 16×24 "	" "	8.00
" 12×17 "	" "	4.50
" 9×12 "	" "	3.00
" 7×9 "	" "	2.50

Parties desiring tents should send in their orders immediately. J. H. WHITMORE.
Rochester, N. Y., July 12th, 1872.

TENT-MEETINGS.—The Lord willing, we will hold tent-meetings as follows:—

At Barford, P. Q., as A. B. Cushing may arrange, commencing Tuesday evening, Aug. 6th, to continue over the following Lord's day.

Hereford, P. Q., or Canaan, Vt., as C. D. Hibbard may arrange, commencing Aug. 13th, and continuing as may be thought best.

JARED WHITMAN.
J. ALBERT LIBBY.

THE CHRISTIAN Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves. Particulars hereafter.

PETER S. W. DEYO, C. C. RAMSEY, } Presidents.

F. Denton, J. Riffsnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, Committee.

HOOSICK VALLEY TENT.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—JOHN B. WHITE, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

A. W. SIBLEY, S. G. MATHEWSON, H. K. FLAGG, } Tent Committee.

P. S. Those who want tent-meetings held with them, should write the committee immediately.

KANSAS TENT.—Dear Brn., our subscription for "Tent for Kansas" is far advanced. We want now a few friends to promptly bring up the rear; that is, close the requisite amount, and we shall be able to get the tent into the field. Friends who have subscribed for the tent, should prepare themselves for prompt payment when notice is given, that there may be no delay. We also need a good supply of tracts. May the Lord continue to bless, and raise up a people here who shall "love his appearing," and be purified when the Master comes. Address H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co., Kansas, or Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co., Kansas. H. J. MUNSON.

THERE will be Advent meetings held at Freemansburg, Pa., as arranged by Brn. Rathgeber and McSwain, at the public school-house, Saturday evening, Aug. 3d, and Sunday, Aug. 4th, in the grove near Bethlehem, at ten o'clock A. M. and three o'clock P. M.; and in the evening at the school-house. Sunday, Aug. 11th, at Wilksbarre, Pa. Grove meeting all day, as arranged by Bro. Wetherel. All the friends are cordially invited to the above meeting. Preaching by Eld. Stetler.

A REQUEST.—As we find the names of the following persons among the list of the members of the church in Rutland, Vt., it is requested that they inform the church in some way of their present residence; Charles W. Smith, Sarah A. Johnson, George W. Rix, Adna Ballard, Albert Freeman, G. Nelson Pitts, Eliza Pitts, Minnie V. Cady, O. H. Parkhurst, Nelson Mellon, Rosetta Mellon, Rhoda Mellon, Olive Farr, William Bates, S. Pelkey, Betsy Pelkey, Adeline Hatborn.

By vote of the church, ROBERT CANDLISH, Clerk.

CAMPMEETING.—The R. I. and East Conn. Conference have voted to hold their annual campmeeting at Coventry Centre, to commence Sabbath, Sept. 1st, and hold over Sabbath, the 8th. The camp-ground is on the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. R., and about eighteen miles from Providence. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents are requested to do so. All the lovers of the Lord are requested to attend this feast of tabernacles. Come with one united heart. Come in all the fullness of the gospel, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of our fellow men in these last moments of time. Particulars hereafter. E. R. WOOD, for the Com.

CAMPMEETING AT BELFAST, ME.—The campmeeting at Belfast will commence on the 18th of August, and continue over the 25th. It is desired to have the tents erected on the 19th. We shall be on the ground the week previous to fit up, so that if any wish to erect on the 17th they can do so. The fare will be reduced on the Maine Central R. R. from Portland on both routes. Tickets can be obtained at the following named places:—Portland, Lewiston, Monmouth, Winthrop, Kendall's Mills, Richmond, Gardiner, Hallowell, Augusta, Burnham, Pittsfield, Newport, Corinna, Dexter, Carmel, and Harmon. Reduced tickets on the steamboats Cambridge and Katahdin, leaving Bangor for Boston every Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at 11 A. M. Will leave Boston for Bangor every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday, at five o'clock P. M.

Inside steamboat, City of Richmond, will leave Portland every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, at ten o'clock. Leaves Bangor every Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, at six o'clock, for Portland. Call for Campmeeting tickets for Belfast Advent Campmeeting.

Passengers going east on the Maine Central R. R. will change cars at Burnham for Belfast. Tickets will be good from Aug. 16th to Aug. 27th.

Come, all who can, and worship in the beautiful grove in sight of Belfast bay, and enjoy another feast of brotherly love, laying aside all vain ambition and speculation, and seek the good of all. Bring your tents, and provide for yourselves and others as much as possible, remembering that love is the fulfilling of the law, and that God blesses the cheerful giver. Shall we all seek to get nearer to Him who died for us, and to save others from death? Our work is almost done. Shall we have it said to us, "Well done"?

In behalf of the committee, ISRAEL DAMMAN.

MECHANIC FALLS, ME., CAMPMEETING.—If the Lord will, this meeting will be held in the beautiful grove where it was held last year, commencing August 26th, to continue one week. This ground is easy of access, pleasantly located, about one mile from the depot, and is a most desirable spot for campmeeting. This year the ground has been much improved, a commodious boarding-tent erected, the stable enlarged, and both put into competent hands for good management. Good board, horse keeping, and pasturage, will be afforded at the lowest possible rates, so that none can justly complain. "The Mission Tent" will be ready for use on the ground, Aug. 24th. This tent affords excellent shelter for meetings in stormy weather, and makes a comfortable lodging place by night for several hundreds, if necessary. Straw will be provided for bedding, and all things done that can be for the comfort and well-being of all who attend. All who wish to erect wooden or cloth tents will find the most desirable lots for that purpose.

The fare on all parts of the Maine Central and Buckfield railroads will be one half the usual rates; and on the Grand Trunk about the same. Those coming from Bangor, and intermediate places, should stop at Danville Junction; and those coming from Augusta and other places on the Kennebec, should stop at Yarmouth Junction. At both Junctions, take the Grand Trunk R. R. for Mechanic Falls.

Come to the meeting from east, west, north and south. Come to do and get good. Let there be a general gathering of the watching, waiting ones, and of all who wish to be ready for the coming of "our King." Bro. J. Couch is expected to be with us a part of the time.

JOHN STEVENS,

NEW TRACT.
Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged,
OF
"THE COMING REIGN OF TERROR,"
Or, The Commune.
BY WM. N. PILE.

The first edition of five thousand copies of this work being exhausted, a second edition is now published. It contains about twelve pages of entirely new matter, besides retaining all the more important matter of the first edition. The past working of Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, and the Commune, are shown to have produced the "reign of terror" of 1792 in France, and then the analogies between that period and the present are drawn, to show that we are on the verge of another "reign of terror." Special attention is given to the "International Society," and its latest developments shown. This tract is well calculated to awaken an interest in the speedy coming of the Lord. Notwithstanding the increased size, the price is unchanged.

For sale at this office. Price, by mail, single copy, 7 cts.; five copies, 30 cts.; ten copies, 50 cts.; fifty copies, $2.00; one hundred copies, by express, $3.50. AG'T.

THE VINE AND BRANCHES.

E. M. FREEMAN.

"I am the vine, ye are the branches."

The church of Christ is one
 Throughout earth's wide domain;
All who the Christian's course doth run,
 Shall life eternal gain.

Christ is the living vine,
 His saints the branches are;
And sure as they abide in him,
 His glory they will share.

His Spirit in their hearts
 Doth witness they are his;
The inward peace his love imparts,
 Their sure salvation is.

Their names may not be found
 On any earthly scroll;
The Lord well knoweth who are his,
 E'en to the weakest soul.

In the Lamb's book of life
 Their names engraven are,
And they shall walk with him in white
 Who bore his image bear.

And though in death they fall,
 And rest beneath the sod,
When the archangel's voice shall call,
 They shall behold their God.

They'll see his lovely face,
 Who all their sorrows bore;
Through triumphs of his boundless grace,
 They live forevermore.

O that forevermore
 I may his glory see,
And praise and worship and adore
 The Lamb who died for me.

A FEW STRICTURES UPON IMMORTALITY vs. ANNIHILATION.

[By Rev. W. Jackson (Methodist) Melbourne, P. Q.]

J. PORTER.

DEAR SIR:—You will patiently bear with me in making a few comments upon your late issue. And after looking it over, I turned back to the title page and thought that a misnomer. To have been in harmony with the contents of the book, ought it not to have been, Platonism vs. Christianity? A christian minister in the nineteenth century, with such a flood of light lying before him as the scholarly and unanswerable arguments of a C. F. Hudson, "Bible vs. Tradition," etc., etc., putting forth a book of two hundred and fifty-two pages, without one solitary text of a "thus saith the Lord" upon which to plant the first argument, is to me one among the many anomalies of these last days.

Sir, your book would have been worth millions, had it not been for the absence of one word at the fountain head of creation; had it read immortal, instead of "living soul"; but for lack of that one word of eight letters, to an enlightened mind, instead of sixty cts., it is not worth a row of pins.

You ought to be fully aware that in the divine oracle is not once found "immortal, never-dying soul," or "the death that never dies"—as well say, the life that never lives—"deathless soul," "disembodied spirit," "reunion of soul and body." O no; not found! But if these Grecian and Roman props are gone, you will fall, and "Platonism" will come to the ground with you. But you go to work to make up for the oversight of the Creator, and make "a compound," complex Adam, and by some means put an immortal soul into him, a man after your own heart, much superior to the first, who was of the "dust of the ground," and four thousand years after, in Paul's day, of no higher origin ("of the earth earthy); not even spiritual. 1 Cor. 15: 46, 47. This is fatal to "Platonism vs. Christianity."

Paul writes nearly one-third of the New Testament in his fourteen epistles. When he called for the elders of the church at Ephesus, what a pity that one of our modern theologians had not been present to refresh his memory; for he declares that he had not shunned to declare unto them all the counsel of God; and that he had kept back nothing that was profitable to them; and yet hell is not named in all his epistles, nor an immortal soul, neither a "disembodied spirit," nor yet a reunion of soul and body, nor one syllable about souls going to heaven at death. Not so of the second coming of Christ, the resurrection, and the kingdom. "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? for ye are our glory and joy." "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe."

O glory! Hallelujah! This has a somewhat different ring from the Platonic consolation administered by you on p. 142—"Our union [with the saints in heaven] is not to be postponed until the morning of the resurrection." Alas! alas! Christ the resurrection and the life robbed of the brightest gem in his crown. Is not this equivalent to saying, "Step aside, stay away, Lord; you are not needed here"?

Your campmeeting here last fall was conducted by men whom I believed to be both good and talented; whom I could not help loving. I attended several sessions; but in my hearing, not one syllable crossed the lips of any in reference to the Lord's coming, or the resurrection. O Platonism! what hast thou not done? Be astonished, O ye heavens! and hear it, O earth! that, for many long ages, only half a gospel has been preached, even by those who professed an earnest desire for the truth—"the sufferings of Christ," without his return in glory to subdue and rule this world; and this—this half gospel—has been obscured by the preposterous belief that man by nature is immortal; and terribly burdened down by the infamous falsehood of an eternal life in hell for the unsaved. It is absolutely astonishing that, with only this half wielded, it should have had so much success. Nothing but the grace of God, and the power of his blessed Spirit, can account for this fact.

I see, among your many misrepresentations, we are charged with "robbing Christ of his Deity." Is not this an infringement of the ninth commandment? Yes, sir, and terribly so. This accusation comes with an exceedingly bad grace from such a quarter. No, sir; I and my brethren, with the living grasp of faith, and latest breath, hold to a divine sacrifice. Now, dear sir, I respectfully invite you, as an honest man, without mental reserve, to follow me through this grand test, putting both our creeds into the crucible, and that which comes up dross, in the name of the Lord, let it go for just what it is worth. Ten or twelve times Paul says Christ "died." I believe it. The Son of God was crucified. What do you say? Divine blood was shed. Acts 20: 28. I believe it. Do you? "He poured out his soul [not immortal soul] unto death." What do you think? "I am he that liveth and was dead." Ah! have I now lost sight of you? I fear I have, for on page 167 you ignore the death of Christ, and pronounce it "blasphemy" on the part of any who should say so. I would not ask but four minutes to prove in the presence of an unspoiled audience, that your Platonic figment leaves you with naught but a human sacrifice—the son of Mary; for you dare not say "the Son of God died," or Christ died. "The God of peace, that brought alive from the dead our Lord Jesus [the Christ], the great Shepherd of the sheep." Your creed, with your weight in gold, would not tempt me.

Now, sir, upon the twin doctrine of eternal torment I need make no remark, for it stands or falls with this other heathen dogma. For if a wicked man has not a conscious, undying entity within him (and he has not), he cannot live in hell forever. This is plain Bible logic and common sense. Hear it, O ye nations! Immortal-soulism, what hast thou done? Thou hast corrupted the word of the living God; thou hast subverted the very foundations of the gospel of Jesus Christ, concealing the fact that he gave himself, his life, to redeem us from the dominion of death. Thou hast arrogated continued conscious existence, which belongs to the only wise God, and hast claimed his immortality as being already thine in virtue of thy relation to the first Adam. Thou hast plucked the brightest diadem from the head of Him who is "the resurrection and the life," and declared virtually that the serpent spoke the truth when he said, "Ye shall not surely die." We shall have no fear, then, that the advocates of the immateriality and the natural immortality of the soul will be able to overturn the word of God.

It is assumed that the soul is immaterial, and hence indestructible, and therefore immortal. We concede that that which is immaterial is nothing, and cannot be destroyed. Immortal nothingness is about as bad as annihilation. Mr. Jackson asserts that man has an immaterial soul, that can live, think, and praise God, and be happy independent of his organization. On the contrary, we affirm that man has a living soul, so dependent on the organization of the body that, when that is destroyed, the soul is unconscious.

I will compare the two terms, immateriality and annihilation. The one is nothing, and continues nothing forever; the other was something, but if annihilated, it is reduced to nothing; that is, it is made immaterial, and continues immaterial forever. So that the annihilated soul and the immaterial soul have embraced each other, but have alike become immaterial and immortal nothings. So much for "Platonism vs. Christianity."

On p. 40, at the close of a list of grievous charges, he says: "Follow their theory to its logical consequences, and you have a "material God." Bless the Lord! Here we plead guilty. We are materialists to the core; for if we are pure in heart, we "shall see God," but not with immaterial eyes. Gibbon says that "Plato's God resembled an idea rather than a substance." Materialism believes in the being and personality of a God, and not the god of the heathen. We leave an immaterial God to our author. Let him conceive how Jesus ascended up and sat on the right hand of an immaterial spirit, which hath neither body nor parts; and if his philanthropy defines the true nature of God, his Son must also be a partaker of the same nature with the Father; so Christ became reduced to the same condition of immateriality; and as the promise to christians is, they shall be like Christ (1 John 3: 2), of course they all become immaterial together, and there is nothing left. Disembodied spirits, it is said, sing songs of praise; but how do they sing? they have no vocal organs. They play upon golden harps; but how do they play? they have no body or parts, and the whole is dissolved into a mere philosophical fancy.

Immateriality is only another name for nonentity. It is the negative of all things and being—of all existence. It has no way to manifest itself to any intelligence in heaven, earth, or hell. Neither God, angels nor men could possibly conceive of such a being or thing. It possesses no property or power by which to make itself manifest to any intelligent being in the universe. It possesses no one desirable property or faculty, and is of no use; yet, strange to say, immateriality is our esteemed author's God, his anticipated heaven, his immortal self—his all. O sectarianism! O atheism!! O annihilationism!!! Who can perceive the nice shades of difference between the one and the other? They seem alike in all but in name. The atheist has no God; our friend has a God, but without body or parts. Who can define the difference? They both claim the negative of all things that exist, and both are equally powerless and unknown. The atheist has no after life, or conscious existence beyond the grave; our spiritized friend has one, but it is immaterial like his God, and without body or parts. Here, again, both are negative, and both arrive at the same point. Their faith and hope amount to the same, only expressed by different terms. Again, the atheist has no heaven in eternity; our defender of a faith has one, but it is immaterial in all its properties, and is therefore negative of all riches and substance. Here, again, they are equal, and arrive at the same point.

Danville, P. Q.

A SHORT SERMON.

E. B. SEVEY.

"'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

These lines were forced on my mind while in conversation with Bro. C. about a meeting held in his place by a preaching brother. I asked—

"Did many attend?"

"Yes, quite a gathering, all things considered."

"How did Bro. —— preach?"

"First rate."

"Did they like him?"

"Yes, much. The Methodist minister liked him, too."

"What was his subject?"

"The twenty-third Psalm. He dwelt much on the valley of death."

"Where did he say it was?"

"Why, when David was dead, of course."

"Did you ever know a dead man to walk, Bro. C.?"

"Why, no; but was not that what David meant?"

"I think not."

"Well, tell me where the valley and shadow of death is, if it is not after death."

"Let us read the text—'Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me. Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.' Can there be a shadow without a substance?"

"No."

"Well, then, it could not be death. And, again, it is where people walk. David says, 'Though I walk.' Did David teach that dead men walk? If so, he is in harmony with Spiritualism. He says, 'Thou preparest a table before me, in the presence of my enemies.' That could not be in death, Bro. C."

"Please tell me where it is, Bro. S."

"Turn with me to Ps. 107: 10. We read, 'Such as sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death, being bound in affliction.' David is speaking of the deliverance of his people from bondage. Isa. 9: 2—'The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.' Jer. 2: 6—'Neither said they, Where is the Lord that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, that led us through the wilderness, through a land of deserts and of pits; through a land of drought, and of the shadow of death; through a land that no man passed through, and where no man dwelt?' Once more. Matt. 4: 16—'The people that sat in darkness saw a great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up.'"

"I must confess I never saw that before. I see now how tradition has held me. Bro. S., when I see Bro. ——, I will tell him about his sermon."

"Well, Bro. C., do you think the people would have liked it as well if Bro. —— had told them that David's walking was here, and the valley and shadow of death was here?"

"No, I think not, Bro. S. How true are those words, 'Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined.' Let us study to show ourselves workmen that need not be ashamed."

LIVING TO JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"For me to live is Christ."—PHIL. 12: 1.

Living to Jesus. Then you are not living to self. There are only too many professed Christians who live to please and gratify self. They seek their own comfort, their own interest, their own aggrandizement and exaltation. They have never learned the first great lesson in the school of Christian experience. "He that will be my disciple, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me." The apostle Paul had learned this lesson. When the voice of mercy fell upon his ear, and checked him in his rebellious course, immediately he left all to follow Jesus.

The amazing love of God had so melted his heart and captivated his mind, that he could no longer live to himself. Wherever he went, and under whatever circumstances he was placed, his theme was Jesus. No love of gain, or fame, or worldly consideration had any effect upon him. He had given all to Christ, his talent, time, and voice, himself, his reputation; the lone way was his choice. He feared not persecution, death, nor the devil. Whether he lived or died he was the Lord's. The Holy Ghost testified that into whatever city he entered bonds and afflictions awaited him. "But," said he, "none of these things move me; neither count I my life dear unto myself so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." How could such a man fail to do good? He had laid all on the altar, and consecrated himself to God for time and eternity. He could rejoice in tribulation, and praise God in an old prison. Jesus was with him, and he was happy in his love.

Living to Jesus. Then you are not living to the world. No individual can be a true minister of the gospel while his affections are placed upon the things of this world. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." How many there are who profess to be ministers of Christ, whose hearts are not really in the work. They are proud and worldly-minded. They dress in fine clothes, read flowery essays, visit rich parishoners, and eat and drink at fairs and festivals with the drunken; but they know little about living to Christ. How can a man preach Jesus who does not live to him? In vain do we try to reccommend religion to others if we know nothing about it by experience ourselves. The best way to convince the world that Jesus lives, is to live Jesus. Talk does not amount to much, but a godly life is a continual sermon. If a man talks what he knows, and lives what he talks, then he will have a power for good among men. Away with shams and shadows; give us reality. Life and power and earnestness is what the times demand.

Living to Jesus. Then you are not living to a party. Christ's religion is not bound by creeds, sects, nor sectarian walls. How many there are who think they are living to Jesus, when in fact they are all wrapped up in some pet theory or party. Paul was a sectarian previous to his conversion; but when the grace of God had renewed his heart, his sectarianism was thrown to the winds. His language then was—"Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye are Christ's then are ye Abraham's, seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Reader, are you living to Jesus? Then you are serving him with all your heart, doing good to all men as you have opportunity; and especially to the household of faith. Soon Jesus will say—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of one of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

"THE TIME IS SHORT."

While riding in the car of a railway train a short time since, a gentleman came to a seat near me, and taking a package of tickets and a bundle of little hand-bills from his traveling-bag, went to the rear of the car and scattered them along the way. Curious to know what he was throwing out I watched him very closely. At length, unable to ascertain in any other way what he was doing, I approached him as he took his seat, and asked if he had any objection to my knowing what he was scattering.

"No," said he, "I am glad to let you know."

He then gave me a few of the tickets, which had on one side the question,

"DO I LOVE JESUS?"

and on the other side the question in this form:—

"Should I not love him, serve him, look to him, stand up for him, trust in him, believe on him, pray to him, asking him daily to watch over me, because Jesus died for me?"

The hand-bills, of which he gave me a few, were headed,

"WHY NOT NOW?"

urging sinners to accept of Christ at once. In this way this christian man was doing good. Said he as we parted—"I have but a little time in which to do good in this world." Brethren, "the time is short." Shall we not work for Jesus while the day lasts?—Sunday School Times.

KIND WORDS.

N. J. LUCAS.

Dear brethren and sisters, it seems to me that very few of us comparatively are fully awake to the importance of kind words. The influence of one single kind word may save one from utter ruin, if it is timely. We as a people differ in sentiment. Sometimes, in our social gatherings, most all of the different elements are present; and then how important it is that we be gentle and kind one toward the other. How much patience and forbearance is needed. Suppose a brother or a sister advances something that we cannot endorse, which we believe to be an error, does it help it any to treat them with coldness and indifference? Nowhere has God called upon us in the whole inspired volume to endorse error; but he has called upon us to believe his word, trust his grace, and live the principles of christianity. We are informed, if we have not the Spirit of Christ we are none of his. If we have not already learned it, it is important that we should, that in the past some of the most devoted christians have been in the greatest errors, even some of our most learned men. Why, pray tell me, may we not look for it now? I am more confident than ever that it is more than useless to push our peculiar views where the people's hearts and ears are not open to listen; but when we do, let us be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves, having as much of the spirit of meekness as possible.

During the last three months of my experience I have learned much. I have learned more fully the uncertainty of everything of a worldly nature, and that it is unsafe to put our trust in anything save Jesus Christ. Trusting in the Lord, we need not fear.

Though rough be our pathway,
 And tears in our weariness fall,
We shall rest in the home of the ransomed,
 Where joy and peace are for all.

By the grace of God, I will try to live near the Lord I will be gentle, kind, and forgiving. I will try to speak words of cheer to the afflicted, sorrowful ones. I will try to lift up the wayward, erring ones. I will strive to have more of the meekness of my blessed Master I will be careful to say nothing that shall wound the feelings of any one, especially those who differ from me in sentiment. I will do good unto all, especially unto those who are of the household of faith.

Finally, my brethren and sisters, let us be kind and gentle to all, not rendering evil for evil, but rather strive to imitate Him who, when he was reviled, reviled not again. Though he was alike tempted in all points as we are, yet he was without sin. Oh, what an example was Jesus for us. Then let us put on the breastplate of love, and for our helmet, the hope of salvation. If we follow Jesus, we shall walk in love, faith and hope, and be meek and submissive; and though hard things may sometimes be said of us, we shall have no disposition to quarrel, or speak evil of any one; but kindly reprove sin and unrighteousness wherever we see it. Kind words cost nothing, and are worth much. Oh, how much unhappiness is sometimes caused by unguarded words. By the help of the Lord, we will put a double bridle on our tongues. If we lack wisdom, we will ask of him who giveth liberally and upbraideth not. If I have one desire above another, it is to live a devoted life till Jesus comes to give life to his people.

"Jesus, refuge of my soul, let me to thy bosom fly,
While the raging billows roll, while the tempest still is high;
Hide me, O my Savior, hide, till the storm of life is past,
Safe into the haven guide, O receive my soul at last."

Lewiston, Me.

THE COMING OF THE MESSIAH FROM A JEWISH STAND-POINT.—Under the above heading, I find the following in the N. Y. Herald, from a correspondent, who signs himself Jew, D.S.:—

"The Jews await the coming of the Messiah. And from a Jewish stand-point, I will define what we understand by the Messiah. When that period arrives, yet hidden in the womb of time, and to which all nations turn an anxious eye, when the continents and islands of the earth are united in one bond of brotherly affection; in short, when one vast law governs all nations, tongues and kindreds of the earth, and that is the law of love; then will the prophecy of the coming of a Messiah be fulfilled. We expect no man, no Holy Ghost, but a time of universal peace, when the society for the conversion of Jews can lay down their armor, and hoard up their money for a more profitable object."

Thus the cry of peace is being sounded from all quarters, and "when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction shall come upon them . . . . and they shall not escape." J. RIDLEY.

[It will be observed that this Messiah is the same as the one held up by the demons—a mere principle.—ED.]

Gems.

— A lion in God's cause must be a lamb in his own.

— All blood stains but the blood of Christ; that purifies and makes white.

— God knows our hearts better than any man knows our faces.

— Some people write, and others talk themselves out of their reputation.

— Bubbles look well while they last, but they cannot stand pressure.

— Speak of thyself seldom, and always with great caution and modesty.

— If one throw salt at thee, thou wilt receive no harm, unless thou hast sore places.

— As the word of God is a great prophecy of the world to come, so he who preaches it truly prophesies.

— Where Christ reigns, he commands peace; for he is the Prince of peace.

— Stars shine brightest in the darkest night.

— Grapes come not to the proof till they come to the press.

— Heavy afflictions are the best benefactors to heavenly affections.

— Pure truth, like pure gold, has been found unfit for circulation, because men have discovered that is more convenient to adulterate the truth than to refine themselves.

— The noblest thing on earth is the man who rises to the dignity of self-mastery.

— Strange we do not realize how, day by day, we are crystalizing! Every thought, every act, every emotion, whether good or bad, tending to the one point—crystalization of character!

— All truths, unless productive of holiness and love, are of no avail. They may float upon the surface of the understanding; but this is to no purpose unless they transform the heart.

— Error cannot be expelled from either head or heart by blows or abuse.

A MAN once asked Diogenes what course he should take to be revenged on his enemy? "Become a good man," answered the philosopher.

A SAD LETTER.

FROM SR. A. W. SIBLEY.

MY DEAR BRN. AND SRS:—I have long intended speaking with you again through the columns of this paper, but much care, poor health, and lastly affliction, have prevented. Now my letter must be a sad one. You have doubtless noticed in the Crisis the death of our little son, and are anxious to hear in what form the grim messenger came to take one so young and interesting from us, and change our happy home, which was made cheerful by our two little ones, to a place of sorrow and loneliness. As I do not feel able at present to address many private letters, I will, through Bro Grant's permission, give a few particulars of his sickness and death.

On Thursday, June 20th, while at play, he jumped from the piazza on to a garden rake. Two of the iron teeth pierced the hollow of his foot. One entered over an inch. He suffered much pain, but in a few days the wounds healed, and he seemed doing well, and commenced creeping about and playing. Then it pained him more, and as it was swollen on the instep, we called a physician. He lanced it, relieved it of some matter, and freed him from pain for that day. His jaws, which had been lame two days, remained stiff, but he could open them sufficiently to eat. Next morning spasms came on, which were somewhat abated by wringing out hot flannels to put on his stomach. When he felt the spasms coming on, he would say, "Sing, mama, sing quick!" Singing had a wonderful effect in quieting him. The Dr. said music had a charm for the lock-jaw, and we knew that disease was fastening on him. For eight hours tears, prayers, and singing were blended together, till he fell asleep under the influence of morphine. When he awoke, there was a change,—we hoped for the better. He did not suffer much. The Dr. expressed hopes of his recovery. I told him the Dr. was going to cure him. He shook his head, and said, "Nobody can cure me but the Lord." I asked him if he should die if we should take him to grandpa Sibley's, in Wakefield, to bury him? He said no, but expressed a wish to be buried here, so we could visit his grave, and then not move away and leave him, but take him to grandpa's and bury him there.

His spasms came on again. I rocked him and sung to him frequently during the day. He rested better that night, and was prevented from biting his tongue during the spasms, by holding the corner of a handkerchief in his mouth. He called for something to eat, and was rational most of the time. About seven o'clock, he called for his little playmate, Willie Sherrill, to come and sing the little verse they were to sing in the Sabbath School Concert soon—

"Never be afraid to speak for Jesus;
Think how much a word can do;
Never be afraid to own your Savior,
He who loves and cares for you."

When he stopped singing, Austin spoke the following little verse, which he had committed to speak in the concert with his little three-year old brother Willie, standing by him:

"We love to go to Sunday school—Willie and I;
And, be the weather foul or fair,
We purpose to be always there,
And listen to the opening prayer,—Willie and I."

He then began to grow worse; severe spasms following in quick succession, and calling me to sing again. The Dr. said music had a wonderful effect on the nerves in quieting him. He would call me when unconscious of my presence, and the last time very loud. I commenced singing, but he did not notice it. I took him up with his little arms extended towards me. He went into a violent spasm. I held him. They followed rapidly. The Dr. came and administered chloroform, which relaxed his cords, but they continued about half an hour, while I held him and prayed earnestly for him to be restored to me a little longer; but Father thought it not best. It was a hard struggle in my mind to say, "Thy will be done," but when I did, the blessing of God seemed to rest upon me, and Autie fell asleep easily, to awake no more till Jesus comes.

Just two weeks from the day he was hurt, he died, on the fourth of July evening, at half-past eleven o'clock. A memorable day. His age was five years, eight months, and four days. We were obliged to bury him here, he changed so fast, but intend to remove him according to his request. The funeral was attended by Bro. Mathewson, of Castleton, Vt. Although we had not a relative here to follow him to the grave, we had a very long procession of friends. The people here showed great kindness to us during our affliction, by words and deeds. May the Lord bless them, and sanctify this affliction both to our and their good. I am resolved to live nearer to the Lord than ever, and stand ready to improve every opportunity of working in my Father's vineyard, as it seems duty. Brethren and sisters, give us your prayers. My health is not very good. Both mind and body are much affected. A part of the time, I have been nearly wild with grief, but am trying to believe that all things work together for good to those who love God. Will any, who can, write words of comfort? Do so through the Crisis, or otherwise.

SECRET OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

As I learn more and more of the christian life, I see more and more plainly how simple it is. Trust in God and obedience to an indwelling Christ is its whole secret. "We must be empty vessels, that God may fill us with himself, and being so filled, "temples of the Holy Ghost." We must be careful to listen to the inward teaching, and obey its slightest whisper. The more carefully we attend, the more easily shall we hear the voice that says to us, "This is the way, walk ye in it," when we turn to the right hand and when we turn to the left. The life of faith is not a life of doubt and uncertainty. It is not a life of walking in darkness, but of walking in light.

If we commit ourselves to God in faith, he will do everything for us we need. His promises cover all our wants, all our desires, and they are just as truly and fully ours as if there were no other person on earth to receive them. How strange that we need to be urged to believe the word of God. We should consider ourselves insulted if our word was doubted, and especially if our own children doubted it, and yet even christians, most of them, scarcely begin to believe that these exceeding great and precious promises are for them, and that by them they may become partakers of the divine nature, and escape the corruption that is in the world.

We are weak, but the Christ abiding in us is strong. He overcame for us on Calvary, and he will not leave us in doubt and perplexity if we will yield to his guidance. We need such an indwelling Savior, that our will may be in perfect harmony with his will, that our thoughts may be the promptings of the Holy Spirit, and that all our acts may be under the divine guidance.

Study the promises. See how great they are. Believe them in all their fullness, and be obedient to all the known will of God; so shall he increase you more and more.—Reaper.

HOW TO WASH SUMMER SUITS.—Summer suits are nearly all made of white or buff linen, pique, cambric, or muslin, and the art of preserving the new appearance after wasing is a matter of the greatest importance. Washerwomen frequently spoil everything with soda, and nothing is more common than to see the delicate tints of lawns and percales turned into dark blotches and muddy streaks by the ignorance and vandalism of a laundress. The water should be tepid, the soap should not be allowed to touch the fabric; it should be washed and rinsed quick, turned upon the wrong side, and hung in the shade to dry, and when starched (in thin-boiled, but not boiling starch), should be folded in sheets or towels, and ironed upon the wrong side, as soon as possible. But linen should be washed in water in which hay has been boiled, or a quart-bag of bran. This last will be found to answer for starch as well, and is excellent for print dresses of all kinds, but a handful of salt is very useful also to set the colors of light cambrics and dotted lawns; and a little beef's gall will not only set, but brighten yellow and purple tints, and has a good effect upon green.—Ex.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

BRAIN WORK.—In "Good Health" for August may be found an interesting article, headed "The unconscious action of the brain," by Dr. Carpenter, F. R. S., from which we extract the following:—

"Now this cerebrum [the highest portion of the brain] we regard as furnishing, so to speak, the mechanism of our thoughts. I do not say that the Cerebrum is that which does the whole work of thinking, but it furnishes the mechanism of our thought. It is not the steam engine that does the work, the steam engine is the mere mechanism. The work is done by the heat supplied. The steam engine furnishes the mechanism, the work is done by the force. Now in the same manner, the brain serves as the mechanism of our thought, and it is only in that sense that I speak of the work of the brain. But there can be no question at all that it works of itself, as it were,—that it has an automatic power, just in the same manner as the sensory centres had the the spinal cord have automatic power of their own. And that a very large part of our mental activity consists of this automatic action of the brain, according to the mode in which we have trained it to action, I think there can be no doubt whatever."

CAUTION TO BATHERS.—There seems to be little avail in cautioning bathers. Every day adds to the list of those who pay for their neglect and carelessness with their lives. The Royal Humane Society of England have issued the following directions, which all bathers would do well to commit to memory:
